Margaret Jane Halonen and Jane Visalli won riding and softball awards, respectively.

Fencing emblems were awarded to Marie Richardson, Betty Teter, Barbara Smith.

Fifteen ice skating emblems were awarded to the largest WAA club as follows: Berta Reid, Jean Arnold, Nancy Jane Leaman, Marie Stanich, Marcene Cable, Rita Elissanburi, Mildred Gingg, Ingeborg Lubahn, Barbara Riffe, Joan Shafsky, Leona Shaefer, Ramona Vincent, Mary Surtees, Peggy Egan, and Marge Dwyer.

Rifle emblem winners are as follows: Alice Danner, Jeanne Arnold, Rosemary Townsend, Bernice Strube, Mary Beth Danlles, and Dorothy Ann Kraul.

Low Freshmen Elected Ice Skating Club Members

Ice skating club officers for fall '41 season were elected last Friday during the regular session at the Winterland Rink, Aileen Kinkel, women's athletic coach, announced this week.

Cabinet members are all low freshmen and active in the club, Miss Kinkel said. Election results stand as follows: Ingeborg Lubahn, president; Betty Masiel, vice-president; Virginia Allin, secretary; Paula Hershey, treasurer.

Miss Lubahn, newly-elected president, was starred in the Ice Carnival last semester. Miss Masiel will also serve as the club representative at the Women's Athletic Association council meetings. Berta Reid has served in the capacity of ice skating manager this semester.

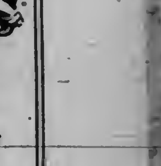
16 WAA Badminton Players Participate

Sixteen college badminton players representing the Women's Athletic Association participated last Tuesday afternoon in a progressive badminton playday.

Sponsored by the George Washington High School badminton players, Balboa and Lowell players also took part in the four-school event. Sixteen players from the three high schools came to the women's gymnasium to play against the following doubles teams:

Jeanne O'Donnell-Helen Jones; Ruth Olmo-Gertrude Simmons; Beverly George-Shirley Petrocelli; Ethel Vidmar-Rule Melvin; Mary Kiddie-Winifred Shone; Joy Powell-Lois McClure; Lucille Scammon-Ruth Gustafsson; Ruth Adamson-Sylvia Fisher.



According to Coach Bertha Mae Keller, the following badminton teams were delegated to Balboa High School:

Audrey Turner-Pat Greenley; Edith Wilson-Kay Kriefels; LaVerne Lubetich-Lillian Martini.

Washington High School invaders were Fern Romaine-Ruth Esmond; and Bette Haggans-Virginia Bopp.

Fall Semester

Registration Begins September 3 To Continue Through September 5; Sign-Up Directions Released

Registration for entrance into the college for the fall semester will begin Wednesday, September 3, and continue through to Friday, September 5, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced last week. Returning students will register on one day, Wednesday, at the time specified by the registrar in the schedule given below.

The registration directions for fall, 1941, as released by the registrar are as follows:

SEPTEMBER 3

8:30—A to C inclusive
9:30—D to G inclusive
10:30—H to K inclusive
12:30—L to N inclusive
1:30—O to S inclusive
2:30—T to Z inclusive

New students who will have taken the aptitude examinations in May, 1941, are requested to register as follows:

SEPTEMBER 4, 1941

8:30—A to C inclusive
9:30—D to G inclusive
10:30—H to K inclusive
12:30—L to N inclusive
1:30—O to S inclusive
2:30—T to Z inclusive

Those who will have taken the aptitude examinations in September:

SEPTEMBER 5, 1941

San Francisco residents:
8:30—A to G inclusive
9:30—H to N inclusive
10:30—O to Z inclusive
Out-of-town residents:
12:30—A to G inclusive
1:30—H to N inclusive
2:30—O to Z inclusive

Registering students must come on their specified days and hours, Miss Learnard said, or they will not be admitted. Should a student have a reason for missing the date specified, he will only be allowed to register with the new students on the last day, Friday, September 5. She warned, however, that many of the classes will be closed by then, and early registrants will have first choice. Enrollment for the coming semester cannot exceed 3,000, she said.

Cafe Open During Finals

The cafeteria will be open from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m. from May 19 to May 27 for those who wish to have lunch during finals. Only a quick lunch will be served instead of the regular meals and blue-plates, Cynthia Richardson, cafe manager, said.

Action On Photos For Student Cards Postponed

Next semester's Executive Council will discuss the possibility of having pictures placed on student body cards, according to Mary Frances Malone, Associated Students' president.

Harry Haesloop, judiciary chairman, has been unable to present a report to the Executive Council concerning the photostatic cards, because the necessary statistics have not been received.

During a convention at the Santa Rosa Junior College, Thursday and Friday, May 1 and May 2, the possibility of having photostatic cards was discussed by Miss Malone, Gene Powell, AMS president, and Bill Lohsen, vice-president of the Associated Students. Powell has declared that Haesloop will report before the Executive Council as soon as the needed information is obtained.

When students are selling their books at the college book store or the college book exchange, operated by the Women's Service Society, they should identify themselves by their student body card of by other means.

Aviation

Courses Given During Vacation

Summer courses in primary and advanced flying will be held at the college during the summer vacation, Captain George D. Richards, civil pilot training instructor, announced recently.

The flying work of the course will be done at San Francisco Airport and will start sometime about July 1, Captain Richards said.

This summer course will be the same as those given during the spring and fall semesters.

Requirements for the course are sophomore standing at the time the course begins. All applicants must be not less than 19 years of age and not more than 27. They must secure the consent of their parents if they are under 21 years of age, and must pass a physical examination, including eye, balance, and other tests.

All students interested in taking the course are urged by Captain Richards to get in touch with him immediately.

Floriculture Jobs Open; Nobody To Fill Positions

There is a lack of students to fill the numerous offers for positions in the floriculture field, Harry Nelson, floriculture instructor, revealed this week.

All graduating students in this division are being placed, he said, and various other advanced students are being placed in summer positions. Even at that, he added, there are not enough people to fill all the jobs which have been offered.

The floriculture division of the college is the only training school of this type in the Bay Area, and one of the few of its kind in California.

"We need more students in the course in order to supply the demand of employers in this field," Nelson said, "and we would like to invite any interested students to visit our classes or greenhouses."

Club Bills Settlement Deadline Friday, May 23

Friday, May 23, is the deadline for the settlement of all bills of college organizations, according to Ward Nichols, college comptroller.

After that date no bills will be received, deposits must be in the comptroller's office not later than 1 p. m. on Friday, May 23, Nichols said.

Self-supporting clubs as well as organizations supported with student funds, must abide by this rule.

All college organizations have received notices warning them about the deadline for the settlement of all invoices, said Nichols.

Any organization in doubt as to the balance of its accounts may inquire of the comptroller, Room 187, he declared.

Final Exam Schedule—Spring, 1941

Final examinations will be given the last two weeks of the semester, beginning Monday May 19, and ending Friday, May 30, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced last Tuesday. The schedule has been compiled and examinations will be given on days and hours as presented below:

O Week Leads Off With Low Frosh Dance

Slants on the Headlines

By FRANCIS CHRISMAN

DURING times of war and like calamities there are always certain beliefs manifest in the opinions of different peoples. Throughout the length of World War one tales of German atrocities ran rampant in the minds of Americans at home; many and most of them were proved to have been pure products of the imagination. But the proof came much too late, the damage in propaganda had already been done.

Now as far as regards World War two, these beliefs mentioned above are spreading once again. It is obvious who is doing the spreading. England spread faster and better in 1914-18.

TRUTH WILL OUT

The thing to note is that some of the facts offered to the public have to be true. One can't speak forever and not tell the truth once in a while. But it must be remembered that the great majority are probably on the border line at least. Therefore it behooves the intelligent reader and listener to sift through the gruesome details of proffered tidbits and read and listen with a slightly skeptical eye and ear.

Rumors, quotations of so-called well informed sources, apparent facts, evident conclusions, probable results, and a host of other meaningless trivia, should not be taken at face value. After all, it's not the cover of a book that contains the gist of the novel.

The fall of France was a shock to many, but not to those who knew the true state of affairs in that unfortunate country. Not rumors but facts, not apparent-evident-probable but definite-present-certain, these are the important words of revelation. The messages bearing these words (unless they come from the Nazi foreign office) present more than their wordly weightiness and should be accepted more readily.

TAKE YOUR CHOICE

As to the rumors, etc., now going the rounds, they are many—and oh how they vary. Some are so contradictory as to be amusing. They come from both sides, but one side is far out in front.

Let is be understood that some of these are, no doubt true; take your choice.

A CERTAIN structural worker, owning his own company here in the Bay Region, has numerous orders piled up on his desk. But he is not able to fill them (i. e. to start construction work) because he can get no material; steel, concrete and iron. Recently he received a fairly large shipment and was overjoyed at the prospect of getting to work once more. But before the cargo was even unloaded the government handed him a check and carted it away.

Now that isn't so bad. If the material is needed for national defense, or for England's struggle all well and good. What bothers this gentleman is his understanding that the stuff was sent to England and then resold to South American nations. Of course, it's only a belief on his part—he doesn't have any actual proof.

SOME people think that the United States is buying from Canada, giving to England, and having the English sell back to Canada. This would make America the Empire's best colony. Only a rumor, though.

WE heard one fellow say that housewives would soon be buying back all that aluminum, they recently gave free-for-nothing, from various stores in the forms of new pots, pans, and what have you. Not veritable.

YOU can still buy British goods in the stores here in S. F., but in Canada the price of tobacco has risen sky high, according to a letter received from an American now training with the Royal Canadian Air Force. Maybe the goods can only get through to countries where a larger profit is to be made. This latter is only a rumor.

Women's Tea, AMS Bonfire, Mixer Dance Add To Form Action Packed Schedule

Festivities for an action filled Orientation Week will begin tomorrow night, with the traditional semi-formal low freshman class dance in the Colonial Room of the Hotel St. Francis, according to Pat Neimeyer, Associated Students' vice-president.

Music for the occasion will be supplied by Eddie Murphy and his orchestra.

Admission to the dance will be one Associated Students' card per couple. Miss Neimeyer warned against the lending of cards for the affair.

Corsages Banned

In keeping with the policy of past low freshman semi-formal dances, Miss Neimeyer requested that no corsages be worn.

Complete cooperation is asked in this request by Miss Neimeyer. She noted that a large portion of the students and student leaders favor the plan. This practice is not new to other colleges where full cooperation is received from the Associated Students, she said.

Pat Neimeyer, Associated Student vice-president

Next on the list of activities for O Week will be the semi-annual tea honoring new women at the college, put on by the Associated Women students, on Tuesday, September 16, at 3 o'clock in the cafeteria, Betty Fox, AWS president, announced last week.

Women Urged To Help

"All returning women students who are interested in helping at the tea should sign up with Miss Dougherty as soon as possible. Hostesses will be at each table and will help to acquaint the freshmen women with the college," Miss Fox said.

Miss Fox also added, "the program planned for the tea will be both interesting and informal, and will be of interest to all in attendance".

The Associated Men Students, headed by Don Jensen, president, have planned a bon-fire rally for Friday, September 19, at 7:30 p.m., to correspond with the AWS tea.

AMS Pep For State Game

"This bon-fire rally is for men only with faculty members especially invited," Jensen announced. "The bon-fire will serve a two-fold purpose to acquaint new students with the AMS, and to act as a pep rally for the San Francisco State game the following night."

Refreshments will be served to those in attendance at the affair by members of the Hotel and Restaurant division, Jensen stated.

In the form of entertainment, coaches will be introduced to the new students, and it is expected that Lee Ehsam, football coach, will discuss the chances of the Ram team for the coming season," Jensen added.

As a climax to Orientation Week, the AMS and the AWS will sponsor a mixer dance in honor of the entering freshmen.

The dance will take place in the women's gymnasium, but as yet neither time nor date is definite, Jensen stated.

Employment

Bureau Available To All Students

Service of the college placement bureau is available to every registered student, according to Joseph A. Amori, faculty member in charge of placement.

The location of the office has been changed and it is now located in Room 155, the former student body office, Amori remarked.

"For the first time, an occupational survey of the students was taken at registration," he added.

At the present time there are jobs available in service stations, soda fountains, and offices. There are also several room and board jobs in private homes open, he announced.

There is no charge for the placement service, Amori emphasized, and any faculty members or students who have knowledge of jobs open or students who need jobs should contact him in the placement office.

King's English Slips Annually

STATE COLLEGE, PA. (ACP)

College freshmen know less and less about the "King's English" with each successive year, according to a diagnosis made by Theodore J. Gates, head of the department of English composition at Pennsylvania State College.

Gates bases his observations on a study of results obtained from diagnostic tests given each entering freshman at Penn State.

The tests cover spelling, vocabulary, punctuation, grammatical usage and diction. Gates said only about 25 per cent are denied admission to college English and are required to take a subfreshman course.

"The scores are considerably lower than they were four years ago," he said.

Much of the difficulty, he declared results from increased high school and college enrollment, with its lack of attention to individual instruction.

To help correct the situation, Gates suggested that high school teachers concentrate on developing ability of their pupils to read well and write clearly, that college teachers pay more attention to individual instruction and that requirements for certifying English teachers be tightened.

Assembly

Officials Tell New Students College Rules

To clarify various college issues and current problems, the first general college meeting of the Fall semester was held last Wednesday morning in the men's gymnasium.

Archibald J. Cloud, president of the college, presided. After welcoming the new students, he explained the absence of top-ranking associated officers. New officers were also introduced.

Dean Edwin C. Browne spoke next and directed his talk to anticipated student problems and questions that might puzzle new students. The dean suggested a ban on musical auto horns around the college that play How Dry I Am.

The traffic problem was discussed. Because of governmental defense priorities, the construction of a parking lot in the site of Balboa Lake must be delayed for a time, the Dean said, but hopes for the parking lot are still alive.

No parking will be allowed in the curved drive leading up to the college, he warned, in order to keep a clear right-of-way for the Municipal buses. Also no parking will be permitted at the rear of the building or on the hillsides in view of the danger of runaway cars.

An effort must be made to gain the respect of the community, added the Dean, as reports of crowded buses and lack of courtesy have reached the college. Everyone must cooperate in preventing such occurrences from re-asserting themselves.

The main hall should be kept free of tiny groups of conversing students who consider the hall a rendezvous in which to exchange gossip. The college building must be cleared also at 5:30 by all students unless exceptions have been made by Edward H. Redford, the dean said.

A final word of warning was administrated by Dean Browne when he told all students they must not eat their lunches on the front lawn, although they may sit out on the lawn at other times.

As an aid to recovering lost text books the Dean requested that a student's name and address be placed in the book immediately upon purchase.

Harry Haesloop, appointed Associated Student president for the fall semester by the Executive Council when Gene Powell was forced to leave the college, presents a brief message to the college.

"The absence of Gene Powell, who was called to service is deeply regretted by all of us. We are calling upon your full support and cooperation of this semester's student body activities, in an endeavor to make this semester one which Gene would have been proud.

"If any of you have any suggestions which would benefit the student body, they will be heartily accepted at either The Guardsman or student body office.

"It is our hope that you will take advantage of the numerous privileges afforded you through your student body card. It is through your participation in student activities that we can and will make the fall semester of 1941 a memorable one."

NYA Fund Reduction Cuts Student Time

Because of a reduction of funds allotted for NYA, Claude T. Silva, in charge of NYA placements, revealed this week that student working hours will also be reduced.

In explanation of this statement, Silva said that this reduction of hours will probably refer to the students who were on NYA last semester. "If these students wish to continue with this work," he said, "they will probably be unable to maintain the same hour schedule which was held last semester."

Silva continued that there are approximately 100 jobs yet to be filled, and any interested students may fill in applications. Typing jobs are in great demand, he added.

Silva pointed out, so there would be no confusion in the minds of the applying students, that the pay days for NYA jobs will be from the third of one month until the second of the next.

"The idea of mentioning the shortage of working hours was not expressed with the idea of discouraging any students who might be interested in obtaining work with NYA," he added "but to avoid any misunderstanding on the part of students."

Naval Work Forces Powell Resignation; Pat Neimeyer Named To Vice-Presidency

Harry Haesloop was named president of the Associated Students at a special meeting of the Executive Council, Monday evening, September 1, to replace Gene Powell, elected to the office last semester but was forced to resign to take training in the naval aviation school at Pensacola, Florida.

Powell's resignation was one of five involving top student offices confronting the council at the pre-semester meeting.

Beverly Brown, Associated Student vice-president, unable to assume her office because of ill health, was superseded by Pat Neimeyer who was voted Associated Student secretary in the last student election. To fill the position left by Miss Neimeyer's appointment, the council chose Aspasia Vasilatos. Miss Vasilatos is a former Associated Women's Student secretary. Her ability and efficiency has been attested to by administration and faculty members.

Yell Leaders Needed

Position of yell leader and at least two assistants are now open. Tryouts will be held this Friday at 11 a.m. by Steve Mohorovich.

In the Associated Men Students, Don Jensen, AMS vice-president, automatically rose to the presidency when Dick Callaghan announced that work in Los Angeles prevented him from returning to the college and taking up his office as AMS president. AMS secretary Merle MacFarland was elevated to the vice-presidency. Who might be selected as secretary was not decided as late as Wednesday of this week.

The Club Advisory Board found itself in the same dilemma as the Associated Students with Jim Hilgeson, president, and Helen Hamilton, vice-president, unabel to assume their offices. Pat Ruf is the CAB secretary. Yesterday's meeting of the Executive Council was to attempt to straighten out the CAB's difficulties.

Situation Unprecedented

Faced with this unprecedented situation in college politics and aware of the immediate need for a full corps of student leaders, Dean Edwin C. Browne summoned the active remainder of the Executive Council to his home for the conference, members of the council explained. All students known by the council to have proper qualifications for the offices under

Previously scheduled for this morning, the college meeting will be postponed until next Friday, September 19, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Committees

Major Appointments Still To Be Named

Heads of three student committees—the welfare, publicity, and judiciary—have yet to be filled by Associated Student President Harry Haesloop.

Haesloop will interview applicants for these three positions Friday morning in the Associated Student office, Room 169.

Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, is also interviewing aspirants for head yell leader and assistants this morning in the student office. He is especially anxious to secure someone combining the talents of a yell leader and a tumbler.

Pat Neimeyer, Associated Student vice-president, automatically heads the social committee. Assisting her are Bill Postel, Beverly Brown, Mohorovich, and Shirley Staton.

Appointed earlier by Gene Powell before he left the college, Bill Postel leads the finance committee.

Block Society President Jack Medrano has been named to head the Men's Athletic Council. One representative from the major and minor award winners and the chairman of the intramural board make up the MAC.

It is believed that Powell made a previous appointment for the head of the scholarship council. The person's name is not known yet, but the appointment is expected to be confirmed by Haesloop.

Len Gross, M. F. Malone Get President's Award Plaque

Mary Frances Malone, last semester's student body president, and Len Gross, Guardsman editor for spring and fall 1940, received the annual President's Award Plaque for 1941, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

The award plaque is given once a year to one man and one woman student of the college who displays superior qualities in leadership, service and character. Names of the winners are engraved on the plaque which is found in the display case in the main entrance. The custom of rewarding recognition to the leading man and woman student of the college was initiated in 1940 when Dorothy Trood and Harold Hoffman were so honored.

An award committee composed of faculty members, Dean Edwin C. Brown, Dean Margaret Dougherty, Lloyd D. Luckmann, Annamarie Delfs, and Alfred P. Agosti was formed through Executive Council action early in 1940 to choose the plaque winners.

Mary Frances Malone became the first woman president of the college last semester when she entered the position vacated by George Meyers when he left the college. Miss Malone was also active on The Guardsman as assistant managing editor.

Len Gross piloted the spring 1940 Guardsman to All-American Honors and was active in college affairs.

The names of the two students will be placed on the plaque as soon as the Executive Council has an opportunity to convene, Dean Browne said.

It was pointed out that the award refers to the president of the college, Archibald J. Cloud, not the Associated Student president.

Observe The Time . . . Pres. A. J. Cloud

Cognizance Of Time Shall Lead To The Wisest Conduct

Inscribed on the wall of a stately building in San Francisco, beneath a clock that strikes the passing hours, a passer-by may note an impressive verse. It is taken from a work written long ago, and reads:

"Son, observe the time and fly from evil."

Without comment here and now upon the second half of that verse, I am accepting the hospitality of this column to draw attention, at the outset of the new college year, to the first part of the inscription.

The ancient author employs the verb "observe," which carries with it the idea of care or heed in taking notice of a situation. The word implies that appropriate conduct shall flow from the act as an essential product of the total process.

The early writer states that time is a necessary element to be heeded in ways that lead to appropriate conduct. No "ifs" or "buts" occur to his mind. The imperative mood of the verb is used.

Does this bit of wisdom transmitted through the ages have revelance today? If it does, what are some of the applications, some of the meanings, to be found in the verse?

Time is specifically mentioned, is it not? At junior college, the semesters are short—no sooner begun than ended. Attendance on classes, scholarship record, mere details of living, seem to depend, somehow, on time. Today fades imperceptibly into yesterday, and tomorrow is today at stroke of the midnight bell. Should we not, then, "Observe the time"?

President A. J. Cloud

It is true, too, that a larger degree of freedom is discoverable in the College environment than has been customary in schools of another ranking. Rules and regulations of the college with respect to a student's conduct are few and simple. The general belief exists and persists that the young men and women enrolled are now arrived at an age when they recognize and appreciate the privileges and opportunities afforded by the College, and that they are capable of practising good citizenship in all their academic and social undertakings. The burden of maintaining good conduct becomes, then, a matter chiefly of self-determination by each student by and for himself in his capacity as a responsible member of a social organization larger than himself. The inference should not be drawn, however, that the faculty does not stand ready at all times to offer reliable advice and sound counsel to students who come under its supervision. On the contrary, it may be set down as an established fact that students will always find friendly, helpful, and generous service, of genuine character, put at their disposal by instructors and administrative staff alike whenever and wherever sought.

We are all working together—big or little, long or short—toward a common end. So it is that, representing the faculty, I have sincere pleasure in welcoming to their college home our friends who are resuming their work at San Francisco Junior College, and if greeting and conveying best wishes for a happy and successful collegiate career to all incoming students.

Cafeteria Hours Remain Same—10 To 2 O'Clock

Service in the college cafeteria began last Wednesday. Established hours are from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel division, has announced.

Counter service will be available to students and faculty with the special "student plate" priced at 25 cents. The faculty room is also ready for operation, but instructors and administration members have been asked to avail themselves of counter service rather than personal service until students in the Hotel division have been selected and prepared to serve the faculty room.

Cynthia Richardson is directing management of the cafeteria for the semester.

Political Tangle

Crisis Adjusted

IT was neither a happy nor an easy job which the Executive Council had to tackle the first of this month. Both the president and vice-president of the Associated Students were unable to assume the offices voted them at the close of last semester. Several other positions were likewise vacant to complicate the problem.

There were two alternatives for the Executive Council: it could employ its constitutionally granted powers of administration and legislation and appoint new officers, so risking possible student censure; or it could declare that another election be held.

The second course, the council pointed out, would have meant a delay of about three weeks from today before the new government could function smoothly. By Article IV, Section 1, of the constitution, an Associated Student election must be advertised in The Guardsman at least two weeks in advance. Another week following might easily be consumed in organizing the various committees and with preliminary work. In addition an almost complete revision of the fall calendar involving college meetings would be required.

Considering these circumstances, the council embarked on the first line of action, and duly appointed the necessary officers. Sincere attempts were made to select the best possible leaders under the usual conditions. No one received an appointment who had not previously demonstrated an ability to work hard and well. That these people will strive to justify the trust conferred on them seems assured.

If, however, a sufficiently large number of interested students feels that it has been imposed upon or that a possible candidate did not receive fair consideration, it may seek redress through referendum. Article II of the by-laws of the constitution makes the following provisions for such an action:

"Section 1. A petition to review an official act of the Executive Council shall be submitted by the president of the Associated Students to the members of the association at a meeting to be called within two weeks after such a petition (signed by at least 10 per cent of the active members of the association) has been presented to the president.

"Section 2. A two-thirds majority of votes cast at a general meeting of the association shall be needed to rescind an act of the Executive Council."

At the present time a move for referendum seems both inadvisable and unnecessary. The Guardsman believes that the president, vice-president, and secretary of the Associated Students will carry through creditable terms of office with the support of the college.

A Hollow Victory

LAST semester, just before commencement, two graduating students of the college were informed that they were the second pair to be honored with the presentation of the President's Award, a distinction conferred annually on one man and woman. In tangible recognition their names are engraved on a bronze plaque.

The night of graduation came. Friends and relatives of the two students awaited with natural pride the official announcement and bestowal of the awards. The two students waited . . . through the preliminary speeches, the conferment of diplomas . . . through the entire ceremony. No word was ever uttered in mention of the winners of the President's Award.

Why, seems a simple and fair question. Why these people, acknowledgedly having contributed most to the college throughout the year, were not recognized is incomprehensible. Surely there was time during the evening for even the briefest notice. Speeches would not have been necessary, just a few words of announcement and simple words of thanks would have been quite sufficient—if time was really at a premium.

The next commencement is some months off. In that space, the Executive Council or some body appointed by it should take upon itself the task of inquiring why the serious oversight occurred and of achieving reasonable assurances that the blunder will not be repeated to the embarrassment of future recipients of the award.

Shots At ...RAMdom

THAT fantastic little gentleman with the dangling lock of hair, a pair of shiny boots, and an upraised hand, must chuckle quietly over all the theories offered by our "expert" commentators.

And chuckle he may, for it doesn't take brains to figure out that if generals did the expected they'd never win a major battle.

So we'll leave the heavy ordinance and the fine points of strategy to the deep-voiced swamis and the bitter-penned prophets, and we'll never, never mention the international situation again, except to sneer at it. Hitler's not going to laugh at us.

MANY A YOUNG

dream was shattered and many an illusion about our men in khaki was cast to the dust when 300 San Francisco girls went to Camp Roberts last Sunday for a visit.

It seems that every meal on the menu contained onions. Spaghetti with onions, potatoes with onions, soup with onions, etc., etc.

The cook was really out for national offense.

SOMEWHERE IN

this gay and rakish city there's a man with three ancient stoves. This in itself is not very far from the realms of possibility. What stumps us is: How could he steal them from a Chinatown rooming house without anyone seeing him.

Difficult, you say? Nevertheless he did it during the heat spell last week. Mr. Yee Kee of Chinatown, San Francisco sauntered down from his bedroom to the kitchen to cook his morning rice, and lo, no stoves. Just three plugged chimney holes.

Citizen Kee takes it all very philosophically, but it's easy to see that the incident is fraught with sinister intentions of a gang of foreign spies. These blokes will probably go around stealing stoves from people until we all starve to death and at the same time collect enough scrap iron to finish us.

What we must do is apparent. Washington must order the Dies committee to steal stoves faster than the foreign agents. Then we'll take all these stoves and bury them in a big hole, probably in Kentucky.

WALT DISNEY'S

Fantasia besides bringing the works of the great masters to the people, has brought confusion to at least one small boy. We sat in front of him in a movie. After the newsreel that bright yellow circle encircling the beaming countenance of Mickey Mouse flashed on the screen.

"Look, ma, Stokowski," he chortled in childish glee.

The kid's going to be disappointed when he goes to his first ballet. No ostriches.

FROM MONTANA

we got a communication from one Culbert Gleep, who is employed as a guide for hunting parties.

He informs us that there is no need for us to be afraid of Hitler ever defeating the British.

It seems Gleep was in a milk bar

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Wherein We Anticipate A Few Questions

Editor's note: Since there has been no opportunity for students to enter letters in the Ram's Horn for this first issue of The Guardsman, we have taken this chance to answer a few of the questions that will possibly stump the new students.

● Where are the study halls?

Students may use the library, located on the third floor south, or Room 46, ground floor south, for study halls during college hours.

● Where can The Guardsman be secured? How? When?

The Guardsman is NOT to be secured in The Guardsman office. A vantage point on the main floor will be the point of distribution for the paper, but a permanent place hasn't been decided upon.

Membership in the Associated Students entitles a student to receive free a copy of The Guardsman. The paper is distributed every Tuesday and Friday.

● What clubs can one join?

The handbook which was given to all entering students at registration supplies a complete list of all college clubs and organizations, and explains how each may be joined by the students.

● Where are the main offices located?

Upon entering the building from the main entrance the offices can be seen to the right, starting with the Registrar's office and followed by the offices of President Archibald J. Cloud, Dean Edwin C. Browne, and Dean Margaret Dougherty. The Associated Students' office is temporarily located in Room 174, which is directly opposite the switchboard.

● When and where can one see his instructors outside of class hours?

Each member of the faculty is assigned to an office, the office number can be secured either from the instructor or the Registrar's office.

The office hours of the instructors are on the outside of the faculty doors.

● Where are assemblies held?

College assemblies are held in the center court. A stage is erected in front of the flagpole for the speakers and entertainers.

● What is the charge for the dances given by the Associated Students and the various classes?

The charge for all college dances (except the Soph Formal) is one Associated Students' card per couple. Members of the Judiciary Committee are present at all dances to check cards for misuse. Cards not belonging to persons presenting them at the door will be confiscated.

● Is there any coaching service?

There was a coaching staff last semester composed of students in the college honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma.

FEM FADS . . .

by Nancy

VACATION has rolled by and now we're all back at the old grind — assignments, bells, fire drills, deadlines to meet and so forth. But variety is the spice of life so the change from vacation to college work will hurt no one.

Everyone from the five year old to the sedate senior in college is off to school laden down with supplies varying from multi-colored crayons to the calculus answer book.

Remember when you the five year old, gulped hard and went off among strangers to a prison where you were locked up from 8 to 12 with only a 15 minute rest period in between? Remember how frightened you were of the big eighth grader, and when one hello from an upperclassman brightened your whole day. Well, in college it's much the same—only different!

THE STEP FATALE

Different in the sense that the college is not a prison—you can come and go when you please—with only a discount in grades stopping you, and all the students are not strangers. Yet, coming to college from high school is bewildering to most freshmen.

They come to Balboa Park and are asked to fill out blank after blank, giving their age, date of birth, parents' names, graduation—when, where (and they wonder why). Then after exams and more blanks they go down the registration receiving line. Finally they are piled up with pamphlets, college bulletins, time schedules, and activity notices, until they are ready to drop the whole thing. However, this they find is kid stuff, compared with making out their programs. Naturally, the classes they want are all filled up, so everything seems hopeless. But, the mysteries soon clear, and a gleam of hope replaces that look of despair. They know that someday—they too, will be upperclassmen.

MIXERS AND MORE MIXERS

After the first week of registration, college isn't so hard on the freshman. Orientation week begins, new friendships are formed, dances, mixers, and rallies are held and the newer folk become acquainted with the oldsters, and the future seems a little brighter.

So this, being a column for feminine readers, its aim will be to help especially the newer members of the junior college family plan their outfits for games, dances, and even classes—sort of make them feel at home. When a new fad comes in you'll hear of it here, (we hope)—if not, well, it probably wasn't worth much anyway.

KEYNOTE INFORMALITY

Informality is generally the theme of most of the campus events, unless previously cited as formal. Around the campus skirts, sweaters, and tailored shirts are almost an accepted uniform. Tailored suits—glen plaid, solid color, tweed, and mix-'em-up's, however, run a close second. And ankle sox are still being worn.

The Male Animal
recommended for male and female

Spectator . . .

MODERN man is a dormant, passive instrument that seeks the comfort of a council table in pursuit of answers to his various problems. So reasoned Professor Tommy Turner, English instructor at Midwestern University. Instead of calm, collected reasoning, man should re-assert the male animal within him and throwing all caution to the winds, should hurl masculine ferocity at his adversaries and as the sea-lion protects his cave from invaders, so should man guard the sanctity of his home with bared fangs instead of honeyed words.

On such a premise is The Male Animal based and many a moon has passed since such a hilarious concoction of wit and comedy graced a San Francisco theater. A collaboration effort of James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, The Male Animal has been a perennial Broadway hit for the last year and now comes to San Francisco, newly cast but as bright and scintillating as ever.

With so many comics reverting to tiresome slap-stick on the screen, it is a refreshing experience to find spontaneous humor generated by smooth, slick dialogue and clever situations instead of the nauseating sight of some over-stuffed comedian falling flat on his face.

An all-star cast injects punch and vitality into the play, and truly it is remarkable to find a large cast without even one weak-link in its length. Such is the aggregation of troupers Henry Duffy has assembled, and each clicks perfectly in his role even down to the small one of the maid.

AH, BEWILDERMENT!

As for the plot, it springs from simple, innocent action on the part of Thurber, unassuming English teacher, Tommy Turner (Otto Kruger); evolving on an inevitable course gradually encompassing other events and characters until finally a confused ball of whirling intrigue and consternation has evolved from the original act.

It all started when quiet Mr. Turner decided to read a letter to his English class, a letter that proved his theory that many fine literary masterpieces are composed by non-literary men. So far so good, except the writer of the letter happened to be a famous radical reactionary, Bartolomeo Vanzetti, lately executed for murder.

Fiery college editor, Michael Barnes, writes an editorial praising Turner's courage in reading the letter to his class and then like a growing snow-ball hurling down a slope, everything and more descends on the head of poor Prof. Turner. He tries to explain his interest in the letter as purely literary, not political. No one listens.

His feeble efforts to escape the growing net of suspicion and distrust involve his wife, her sister, his wife's former beau, the star half-back of the college, the dean and his wife, the school editor, a rock-bound college trustee and his wife, reporters, and goddesses, Truly a hilarious mix-up. And when the Prof., in growing disgust, takes one too many and gets quiet—et—intoxicated, his ideas about life are drastically altered and the Male Animal within him takes precedence over his intellectual submissiveness.

SCRIPT, DIRECTION, ACTING SUPER

Thurber and Nugent provided a laugh-saturated script, and Director Russell Fillmore keeps things moving at a swift, peppy pace. The principals cooperated splendidly so that perfect teamwork was achieved in all respects.

That grand actor, Otto Kruger, another of the league of Hollywood neglects, plays the stumbling, lovable Tommy Turner, who sees his home turned into a mad shambles because of a letter. The performance is a gem. Kruger starts slowly and builds the character bit by bit, incident by incident, until a full-dimensional portrait is achieved. Kruger's bell-ringing job is closely followed by that of Ruth Matteson as his lovely wife and John Archer as the former football great and constant swain to Mrs. Turner. Miss Matteson in particular did wonders with a difficult part.

Cabbages & Kings

ONE of the more confusing things about registration this semester was the sign above the exit of the class signup room. As is probably known, all courses were represented by a cardboard sign above the place of enrollment. Above the exit was a sign reading "Checkers." Some of the more credulous were led to believe that this was a course offered in Physical Education.

Fred Olmsted, artist, now working on the murals at the main entrance of the building, is the personification of the friendly artist. When visited by a friend he leaves the wheels of art to turn for themselves by descending from his scaffold to extend a personal greeting. The other day when posing for a photograph he explained that he needed a haircut. But he was persuaded to pose in the best bohemian style.

Herman Volz, creator of the two mosaics at the north and south ends of the building, turns out, according to Olmsted, to be an old friend from way back, which seems to substantiate the old saying that an artist knows all other artists.

It seems that the integrity of the students of the college is on the upswing. This semester's Associated Student dues were collected and placed in an open box stuffed full with five, ten, and twenties. Last semester's were collected in the presence of an officer of the law and were kept under the table, out of sight and temptation.

One of the sights of registration was the line of students waiting for photostatic transcripts. At its apex the line extended from the entrance of the second floor, down one flight of stairs all along the main floor, and halfway down the flight of stairs leading to the cafeteria.

The Guardsman came to the rescue last Monday when one of its reporters climbed through Dean Browne's office transom to admit Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, to her office. She had come with a will to work, but had forgotten her keys.

Alfred Ornas, former student of the college, has written, with a friend, a ballad entitled, You'll Be Sorry. It has been getting a good plug over the airlanes, and seems to be taking hold.

Your College Presents . . . A Higher Plane Of Learning

By Iwanna Hayworth

YOUR COLLEGE presents today the embryo eagles of our institutions of learning. These eaglets are training for a future in aviation, and as is the case of approximately 50 per cent of the students who are or have been in the CAA training course, this future lies in the service of the Army, Navy, or Marine Air Corps.

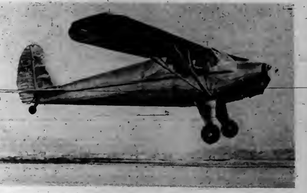
Quite a number of the students who completed the course here in the spring have been stationed at various points in the United States.

Among the flying cadets are Harold G. Lund, and Stanley W. Tobiason of the West Point of the Air at Randolph Field, Texas. Tobiason was presented with his coveted silver wings and gold bars of a lieutenant at his graduation from the Air Corps Advanced Flying School, on August 15.

Noteworthy mention may also be made of Aviation Cadet E. B. Bower, Aviation Cadet R. L. Engeman, Aviation Cadet L. H. Grau, and Aviation Cadet R. H. Benson, all of the U. S. Naval Air Station, Jacksonville, Florida.

These fall-fledged pilots - to - be are looking forward to winning their "wings" and the commission which will follow.

Two years ago the Civil Aeronautics Administration authorized a course in aeronautics to be instituted into the college curriculum. The course was made possible by a Federal Government grant after the college had been selected as one of the institutions where this program was to be enrolled on.



After students who are majoring in this program have received their fundamental training, they may look forward to further training which will, in all probability, lead to employment in commercial fields, or, as is the big issue at the present time, service in the U. S. Army, Navy, or Marine Corps, as was the case of the students already cited.

Further information concerning the course in civil aeronautics is more fully explained in the catalogue for this semester. One point, however, which is very important to students between ages of 18 and 26 who are transferring from another college, or have completed two years of college work anywhere, is the fact that they may be enrolled as special students and do not need to enrry any other college units.

Aviation, it seems, is a type of training which fascinates everyone, whether he is especially intent on making a career of it or not.

There is a certain philosophy of life and of their fellowman which these men who make aviation a life's work develop. It seems to be almost inexplicable, and perhaps there aren't many of these men who can make it clear, however, sometimes it seems that they have a certain something which the rest of the world is unable to attain.

As a tribute to all the men who are especially interested in this type of work, may we say, KEEP 'EM FLYING!

Smoothly clearing the ground at the San Francisco Airport is this Luscombe 8-A training ship, powered with a Continental 65 horsepower engine. At the controls in the cabin may be seen Henry Swerstedt of the college.

Contact! and Martin Tarpey, CAA trainee, applies a hefty pull to the prop of his ship. Eyeing him with a critical glance is Capt. George D. Richards, flight instructor at the college.

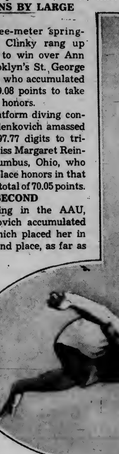
Clinky True Champion; Here Today—Gone Tomorrow

ALTHOUGH she is not a member of any college team, Helen Crlenkovich, during the summer vacation proved herself the finest athlete in the college enrollment.

"Clinky," as Miss Crlenkovich is known in most of her press notices, scored a clean sweep of the national women's American Athletic Union's diving events.

Already holding the championship for the indoor ten-foot board, Miss Crlenkovich journeyed back to High Point, North Carolina, this summer, and on Friday, August 15, annexed the outdoor three-meter springboard title. On Sunday, August 17, she also took over the platform (30-foot) title.



CLINKY WINS BY LARGE MARGINS

In the three-meter springboard event, Clinky rang up 138.68 points to win over Ann Ross, of Brooklyn's St. George Dragon Club, who accumulated a total of 129.08 points to take second place honors.

For the platform diving contest, Miss Crlenkovich amassed the sum of 97.77 digits to triumph over Miss Margaret Reinhold, of Columbus, Ohio, who took second place honors in that event with a total of 70.05 points.

TIED FOR SECOND

While diving in the AAU, Miss Crlenkovich accumulated 10 points, which placed her in a tie for second place, as far as individual scoring honors for the meet were concerned. Her same ten points placed the Fairmont Plunge team, of which she is a member, in fourth place for the team title. Incidentally, the only points scored by the Fairmont Plunge team were those gained by its diving ace.

"Clinky" now holds three national women's diving titles, the indoor 10-foot board, the outdoor three-meter springboard, and the outdoor platform titles. Although other women have held all three titles in the past, no woman has ever before held all three titles at once. Miss Crlenkovich smoothed her diving form to near perfection with constant practice—practice under her coach, Phil Patterson, of the Fairmont Plunge.

TEMPTATION RUNS RAMPANT

If coach Lee Eisan of the football squad could sign up and utilize all of the players that have worked out with the Ram squad he would certainly have a stellar crew. Last spring Johnny Schichel, All-American center from Santa Clara worked out with the squad during spring training.

Last week, when the varsity trotted out onto the practice field for its first organized practice of the fall season, three above-average players from other colleges were on hand to begin their conditioning. Jimmy Honnert, who played for the Red and White last year and is now enrolled at Santa Clara, was on hand, as were Vic Ramus and Bill Moore of the University of San Francisco. All three boys formerly played for San Francisco high schools; Honnert and Moore at Lowell and Ramus at Polytechnic. Honnert and Ramus both play in the backfield and Moore at end. Eisan might welcome the addition of three such players to this year's edition of the Ram.

Women's Athletics

Association To Sponsor Futurist Party For Week

Highlighting orientation week for the college women will be the futuristic party sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association on Wednesday, September 17, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced last week.

"This futuristic social," Miss Kraul said, "will be the only event open to all the women of the college as the remaining functions will be for WAA members only.

Women attending the futuristic social should be dressed in costume that they imagine any man, woman or child will be wearing in the year 1951, ten years from now.

Additional Events Planned

Additional events planned by the officers of the WAA are a barbeque at Sigmund Stern Grove on Wednesday, October 8, a vice versa dance, where the women ask the men; a wiener roast, the regular tourney week and banquet generally held toward the end of the school semester, and possibly a horse show.

"WAA, as the name may imply, is not intended only for the outstanding women athletes of the college," Miss Kraul emphasized, "but for all those mildly interested in sports. Our purpose is to give to the new students an opportunity to meet other college students, both new or old, and to enable those interested in sports to take part in them. Beginners' classes are held and an opportunity is given to all to learn games they have always wanted to play."

Sports Activities Named

Activities provided by the WAA are riding, golf, rifle, archery, dancing, swimming, volleyball, horseshoes, fencing, bowling, tennis, riding, hockey, badminton, and ice skating. Bertha Keller, faculty adviser of the WAA, revealed.

Jim Jensen Becomes New Soccer Coach

Jim Jensen, the college soccer team's new coach, presided over the first Soccer Club meeting held last Wednesday in the men's gymnasium.

At the meeting were stressed the importance of team work, and the need for each player to really dig in and fight in order to have the team make as good a showing as they did last year.

In Review

New Semester Finds College Ripe For Sports Inflation

With the turn of a new semester, the college is looking forward to bigger things than ever before on the athletic field.

Football, of course, is in the limelight now and every student is looking forward to the conference championship, and the prospects of that championship loom to be very good.

With the return of many players from last year's team, a team which tied for the championship with Sacramento, and the addition of new stars from the Bay Area high schools, the picture is promising.

Soccer Squad Looks Promising

Last year the Ram soccer squad enjoyed only a fair season, winning some games and losing a few. Win or lose, however, they played good ball throughout the season and those they lost were by one and two points. Experience is with the Rams this year because most of the men are returning, and a season which was only fair to them last year might very well turn into an exceptional one this semester.

Boxing Team Promising

Jim Jensen will take over boxing this semester and will meet a likely bunch of two-fisted fellows. From flyweight to heavyweight the glove-throwers should be every bit as good under Jensen's watchful eye as ever before.

Thomas O'Neil will be with the Rifle squad this semester and the sharp-shooters are looking forward to as successful a season as last. Gaddy took over at mid-season last semester and closed with a "bang."

Playing an important part in the college athletic setup is the Women's Athletic Association. The WAA is the same thing for women as the intramural program is for men, and is growing just as fast. Such sports as archery, badminton, basketball, riding, softball, fencing, ice skating, and swimming are part of the program and the participants this semester are expected to excel those of the past.

Jim Jensen, who also took over swimming last semester when Coach Hurley was called for the Army, will be back with the swimming team again. Last semester the team was one of the best ever to represent the college, winning five meets and losing only one to the University of California.

Intramural

Program Released Early; Twelve Sports To Be Sponsored By Brady

Working with a definite purpose in mind, Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser, last Friday released the intramural program for this semester.

Never before has the intramural program been released so early in the semester. Brady has done so in the realization that last semester's program was cut short by a series of set-backs suffered at the hands of the elements.

The full intramural program will be found following.

Third Semester Intramural Program:

1. Athletic period

(a) During the athletic period from 2 p. m. to 4:45 p. m. Monday through Thursday, there will be an intramural program consisting of 12 sports.

(b) All college organizations are urged to appoint a member to handle intramural activities, and are requested to enter teams and individuals in the various sports.

2. Organization of intramurals

(a) Intramural faculty director.

(b) Student intramural manager.

(c) Assistant student intramural manager.

(d) Sports managers.

(e) Director is charged with planning and supervising program.

(f) Student manager will administer the program. He will be in charge of publicity and records.

(g) Duties will be delegated to the assistant manager.

(h) Sports managers will supervise the sport that they manage.

(i) The manager is eligible for a block award and the assistant manager for a circle award. Sports managers will be given first preference for promotion to assistant manager-ship.

3. Sports

(a) Round robin or elimination sports will be softball, volleyball, and touch tackle. Other sports will be basketball, free throwing, swimming, tennis, horseshoes, rifle, boxing, table tennis, and cross-country.

(b) Playing areas and schedules will be announced in The Guardsman and on the intramural bulletin board.

(c) Officials will be appointed by the athletic department and announced at the time of the contest by the managers.

(d) Softball.

1. Games will consist of seven innings. Scores of games not completed by 4:30 p. m. will revert to the last complete inning.

(e) Volleyball.

1. Teams will be composed of nine men each:

2. Teams will play two out of three fifteen-point games.

3. Teams may play with less than nine men.

(f) Touch tackle.

1. Rules will be published in The Guardsman. Teams will consist of at least six men.

(g) Tennis.

1. One singles and one doubles tournament will be played.

(h) Swimming.

1. One swimming meet, events to be selected by the swimming instructor.

(i) Horseshoes.

1. One singles tournament.

(j) Rifle.

1. Five shots in each of four positions. Firing time will be 25 minutes maximum.

(k) Boxing.

1. Eliminations to be held in classes. One boxing show will be held in connection with the Associated Men Students.

(l) Cross-country.

1. A cross-country run will be held. The course will be laid out by the track coach.

(m) Table tennis.

1. One singles tournament, the rules of which will be published in The Guardsman.

4. Point System

(a) In round robin sports winning teams will receive 100 points, second place 80, third place 60, fourth place 40, and fifth place 20.

(b) Track and swimming to count five, three, two, and one points.

(c) Team elimination tournaments to score first 50, second 40, third 30, and fourth 20 points.

(d) Horseshoes, table tennis, tennis to count 25, 20, 15, and 10. Rifle to count 12, 9, 6, and 3.

(e) Boxing to count 12 and 6 in all classes.

(f) When a team or individual enters an activity he will indicate for what organization he wishes to compete.

(g) Points will be compiled at the completion of all activities. The organization having the greatest point score will be awarded the intramural sports trophy.

5. Awards

(a) Suitable awards will be given to all individual winners and members of winning teams.

6. Eligibility

(a) All members of the student body and faculty are eligible, with the exception that men who have won an award may not compete in that sport and coaches may not compete in the sport which they coach.

(b) To receive an award a student must own a student body card.

7. Protests

(a) The decision of the official will not be disputed. In case of any dispute that cannot be settled on the field of play, the captain will state that he protests and play will be resumed. The protest will be filed after the contest and director, manager, and assistant manager will make the final decision.

8. Schedules

(a) Schedules and results will be posted on the bulletin board and published in The Guardsman.

(b) Teams that are not on the field ready to play within fifteen minutes of the scheduled playing time will be considered to have forfeited.

9. General

(a) Watch the intramural bulletin board and read the intramural news in The Guardsman. Notices that have been posted or published for 24 hours will not be altered.

(b) Entry blanks may be secured at the intramural office.

Track To Emphasize Techniques Of Form

As fall track comes into light again this semester an entirely new procedure has been worked out by Coach Russ Sweet.

"This semester we are stressing the technical side of track," Sweet said, "but theory will be put into practice this fall as the squad works out." The proper way to stride, carry the arms, and breathing, all will be taken under supervision. As Sweet put it, "form" is the main idea.

The squad will also practice on cross-country runs, as some of the squad will be running in the intramural cross-country meet to be held this semester.

Football

Problems Face Eisan As New Season Nears

In an endeavor to take up where they left off last fall, the Ram football squad, working under coach Lee Eisan, began practice on Labor Day holiday. As Eisan opened sessions for this season he found problems confronting him.

Eisan's first worries came when he learned that only two of the original six backfield aces who were to make up the first string will return to school. Marshall Leong, Luke Lowell, "Slats" Slattery, and Izzy Urbano, all of whom were counted upon heavily have dropped out of college. Leong is with the Coast Guard, Lowell has acquired a good job, and both Slattery and Urbano are at Mare Island.

"Turk" Terzian and Art Ekdall are the two returning from the sextet, according to Eisan, looking very good in practice.

Also Bright Side To Picture

There is also a bright side to the picture, however. Returning from last year's squad, which lost but one game to Sacramento and who tied the Sacs for the championship in the final standings, are many sturdy linemen.

Two guards, Merle McFarland and Bill Brown, who alternated on the first team last year, are back for another season and should add strength to the center of the Ram line. "Tiger" Danielson will return at center and, according to the Ram coach, will additionally bolster the center of the line.

Danielson, called "Dutch" by his intimates, was not the starting center last year, although he saw a great deal of action. He alternated on the first string throughout the entire season, and his experience last year rates him high on the present roster.

Starters Unknown As Yet

As yet, Eisan has not named the first eleven, claiming that it is too early to decide, and that competition for positions is so keen that many of the returning men must step to remain on top.

The round robin conference schedule, as is used in the Pacific Coast Conference and most other conferences throughout the nation, will go into effect for the first time this year. Every junior college in the conference must play against each other in order to be recognized for the championship.

The college will open the season against its arch-rivals from San Francisco State on September 20. The game, although not a conference contest means very much to the men and, according to the Ram coach, promises to be very hard fought.

Basketball Sign-Ups Begin Monday In Gym

Sign-ups will be held in the men's gymnasium for fall basketball next Monday, according to Tom Wilson, college basketball coach. Actual work outs will begin about a week after sign-ups.

For the first month and a half of the semester practice will be only two days each week, Monday and Wednesday, for the purpose of limbering the men up and to enable Wilson to select members for the varsity.

Beginning with the month of November, intense practice will begin on three or four days out of each week up until the practice season opens.

The squad next season, besides the overnight trip to the Junior College Tournament held at Modesto, will have a two- or three-day trip to Yuba City and Placer, and will also journey to Los Angeles for a week during the Christmas holidays to play the leading junior college teams in Southern California.

According to Wilson, only two veterans of last spring's first team, Mel Dropo and Tom Cunningham, are returning for the forthcoming season, and chances are bright for new men to make the varsity.

Rifle Placed Under Police Training Unit

Because of National Defense, rifle activities for this semester have been placed under the Peace Officer Training course, Tom O'Neil, the college's new rifle instructor, revealed last Friday.

O'Neil said that at the first Rifle Club meeting this semester, Major MacFarland of the San Francisco R.O.T.C. will be guest speaker, and will outline the club's competition for the five-month period.

Jensen Replaces Joe Lantagne In Boxing

With boxing becoming increasingly popular each new semester, the college men students will again take up the manly art of self-defense as the fall season rolls around.

Jim Jensen will be the new coach this year, taking over the position vacated by Joe Lantagne, who has accepted a position at Santa Barbara State College. Lantagne coached the leather-tossers to new heights in past semesters and built boxing up to the high position it now holds in the college's athletic set-up.

"Quite a few boys will be turning out this semester and I am sure they will make a good showing," Jensen said during registration.

"As far as the schedule is concerned," continued Jensen, "we have only two meets set. These are with Modesto and Salinas, with intramural matches in between. The regular bouts will start after soccer is concluded, and following Thanksgiving."

Enrollment Suffers Slight Loss From 3000 High; Book Filing Days Postponed To Sept. 17, 18

Falling slightly below the record 3000 high of last semester, registration at the college was closed Friday, September 5, with a total of approximately 2,500 registered students while about 300 more are expected to enter within the next few days, according to Paul Mohr, registrar.

"This is the first time," he said, "that we have failed to grow. Previously our enrollment had increased with each semester."

Registration books are to be filed next week in the library on the third floor between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. Announcement of a change in filing dates has been made by the registrar's office. All books should be filed on Wednesday and Thursday, September 17 and 18.

Special mention has been made by the registrar's office of the fact that all programs must bear the adviser's signature before they will be accepted for filing. (A list of advisers and their office hours will follow.)

Following the filing of registration books all changes in programs must be made by use of an official change in program slip, which is available at the registrar's office.

All details of filing, registering, and program changing, may be found on page four of the Schedule and Directory of Courses.

Among new additions to the faculty of the college are the following: Luther Lyon, accounting; Wilbur Russell, engineering; William Eckert, advertising art.

There are also several substitutes and alternate instructors conducting classes. Karl Venter, physics instructor, who has received a year's leave of absence so that he may take part in defense work, has been replaced by Arthur B. Austin; Louise Dorr will be a typing instructor; Alan Eisan, brother of Lee Eisan, is instructing in place of John Hurley in physical education and Hygiene; Harold Harlan will have classes in paint technology.

Certain classes have been discontinued by the registrar's office. In these cases the classes were to small or the course changed. Students have been directed to similar classes falling at different hours of the day.

Tentative office hours for faculty advisers to consult with advisees before registration books are filed, September 17 and 18, are listed by the registrar's office.

Lockers Available Through Application To Deans

Students, wishing lockers should apply to either Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, or Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, in the afternoons only, between 2 and 4 p. m., Edward H. Redford, instructor, revealed this week.

"Applications may be filled out with them," Redford added, "then if approved by the dean, the student will be sent to me, and a locker number will be assigned and combination given."

Students requesting use of the lockers must agree to permit no other students to have the combination or use the locker unless their names have been filed in my office, Redford stated.

"Ordinarily," he said, "two or three students go together in one locker, as there is not a sufficient number for each student to have a separate locker."

Book Exchange Again Aids Text Buyers

Second-hand books may be purchased at the Women's Service Society book exchange located at the end of the main floor corridor in Room 103. The exchange, operated without profit by the society, will be open from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m. daily, according to Violet Butler, WSS president.

The book exchange, founded in December, 1938, upon recommendation of the Executive Council, has for its main purpose the reduction of the book expenses of the average student.

More than $1,000 in books were handled by the exchange last semester under the direction of Mildred Buer. Miss Buer said that this semester the exchange could expect a larger turnover than ever before as the students were becoming aware that the exchange is operated on a non-profit basis. The books are sold according to the price asked for by the student.

The book exchange was at first located in Room 728 of the Pacific Gas and Electric Building. It was formed after a semester-long investigation by the Executive Council among other junior colleges throughout the state as to methods of distribution of textbooks. The best and most plausible ideas derived from various junior colleges were used in the organization of the exchange.

Bound Periodicals Added To Library

Several hundred new bound volumes will augment the 14,000 books in the college library, for the fall semester, Marcus Skarstedt, librarian, announced. Emphasis will be placed on the series of U. S. Geological Survey Reports and Publication Bulletins included among the new volumes which were obtained for the library by George L. Green, geology instructor. The library has been trying to acquire these Geological Reports for some time, added Skarstedt and have been able to do so now through Green's co-operation. All students will be permitted to use these books.

Library hours will continue as usual from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. The library will not be open on Saturday, emphasized Skarstedt.

A prominent display of leading newspapers and magazines will also be available for students in the library, said Skarstedt. Papers such as the New York Times and periodicals covering practically every field of activity will be represented. There are some 200 such periodicals ready for students.

Also being prepared is a bound file of old Guardsman issues which is to be placed in the library for student convenience. Several issues are required to complete the files and the submission of any of these old copies to the library or Guardsman office will be greatly appreciated, added Skarstedt; the issues missing are Volume 1, No. 4, 7, 8, 10, 11.

Volume 3, No. 12.

Volume 10, No. 27 (first edition).

discussion were considered, and their capabilities and past records were carefully evaluated.

The council's choice of Haesloop was mainly based on his work as chairman of the judiciary committee last semester and his popularity shown by the narrow margin with which he lost the vice-presidential race to Miss Brown.

Dean Browne expressed the keynote sentiment of the Executive Council when he voiced the belief that the appointed officers would, by actual work, readily justify their new positions. Unanimous votes confirmed all of the council appointments.

The advisability of a second general election was rejected by the council with the reasons that too much wasted time and confusion would be attendant to such a move. The constitution requires that the date of an Associated Student election must be published in The Guardsman at least two weeks previous to the election.

Power for these acts by the Executive Council is gained from Article III, Section 2 of the constitution, which reads:

"The Executive Council is the administrative and legislative body of this association and it shall be responsible for, and shall have final authority in, the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the association."

Campus Landscaping Gets Student Approval

Returning students have noted the green grass in place of dirt which occupied the quads in the rear of the science building last semester.

Edward Redford, instructor in charge of building maintenance, announced that the work had been done during the summer months.

"The welfare committee previously chose the north court as Freshman court, and the southern one as Sophomore court," Redford said.

"Running in front of the two class courts is Hello Walk," he added, "which besides establishing a new tradition will create a spirit of friendliness, as students are expected to greet one another while walking here."

Additional landscaping was done in the rear of the college but a broken pipe line has caused a delay, Redford reported.

"Besides improving the appearance of the outside of the building, we have worked on the interior of the building," Redford pointed out." The two large lecture rooms have been ventilated, and now the heat may be regulated from the interior of the room. The radio laboratory also has been ventilated. Several thousands of dollars were spent for these improvements which were considered necessary for improved facilities."

THE NAZIS TOO

THE Germans, while not wishing to get into a war with the U. S., admit that that submarine was theirs. Certainly a heck of a time to become truthful. Then they say that the destroyer fired on them. They want the public to believe that American battle wagons are going around trying to get us into a war. Definitely unverifiable.

THE Germans say that the small countries were sold down the river. How silly, the RAF has many foreign pilots fighting for them; to help defeat the Nazis and regain the freedom of their little nations.

THE Russians are now shooting down as many as 300 enemy planes a day (on good days) and soon there won't be any more enemy planes. The former statement from the USSR war offices—the latter hypothetical.

GERMANY boasts a larger butter ration than London. People in conquered countries are probably spreading sawdust on their bread so that this boast may have some truth. The Germans are going to hold out to the last Frenchman, Italian, Spaniard, Pole, Bulgarian, Yugoslavian, Swiss, Norwegian, Dane, Belgian, Dutchman, Hungarian, Roumanian, and Greek. Then, if still unbeaten, they might quit. But not before.

Talent Bureau Ready To Accept Musicians

Musically inclined students interested in vocal or instrumental music are provided with an opportunity to gain practical experience either inside or outside the college, and are reminded of the Talent Bureau, which has provided entertainment for rallies in the past.

Also open to all students interested in music is the Music Club, which has prepared many for Talent Bureau activities.

Blanks containing information as to time and place of auditions, will be distributed, so that those interested may sign up.

Women's Physical Ed Classes Start Now

Physical education classes will begin immediately, Bertha Keller, chairman of women's physical education department, announced last week, and all students are asked to report to the place designated in the time schedule.

Riding classes report to the stables on Stanyan and Haight streets, swimming classes to the Y.W.C.A. pool, and bowling to the Lincoln bowling alley.

The only change is in the ice skating classes, which will meet in the women's gym until Winterland opens.

There will be a change in the physical education department policy regarding absences this year, Miss Keller revealed. The department will follow the college regulations regarding cuts, and make-ups will not be allowed this year, as formerly. However, if there is a condition of health involved the student should report to the instructor and an excuse will be given.

Hyman Heads Guardsman Staff As New Positions Named; Experience Offered In Business, Advertising

New Guardsman staff appointments for this fall semester list Borrie Hyman and George Cowie to head the editorial force as editor and executive editor respectively.

Francis Chrisman, former news editor, has been promoted to managing editor. He is continuing his front-page column, Slants on the Headlines.

Other appointments include Art Cohen as news editor, Iwanna Hayworth as feature editor, and Bill Cothran as sports editor.

Ted Green, last semester's student intramural manager, has accepted a third semester as The Guardsman business manager. "We are quite fortunate," Hyman noted, "to have again Green's efficient services."

"We are happy to have for the third semester Dolores Sullivan as staff artist," Hyman said. "Her cuts have been one of The Guardsman features. It is expected that two additions will be made to The Guardsman art staff, one to aid Miss Sullivan with linoleum cuts, and the other, Les Craemer, to do general cartooning."

Students are asked to co-operate with The Guardsman staff in facilitating publication of the paper. Those desiring current or past issues should not call at The Guardsman office but at the designated distributing point, which will be announced soon.

Editor Hyman has stressed the point that well-meaning students often hold up work on the paper and cause delay in getting it to press in time. "It would be better," he said, "if those wishing certain issues would ask for them in the student office—it would save trouble all the way around."

Opportunity for actual experience in the business and advertising management of a newspaper is offered beginning this semester by the curriculum in journalism and publication of The Guardsman.

Assignment of training in the business field was made recently to Llewellyn Snyder, college business instructor, who will conduct the business and advertising in The Guardsman, under the course number of English 17.

Reason for the development of the business direction of The Guardsman was explained because of the decided increase last year in advertising interest and support and business responsibility. Until last fall, advertising was necessarily limited because of the scattered location of the college.

According to the curriculum established this semester, the specific course responsible for The Guardsman business management is listed to meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Room 142 at 11 o'clock.

Snyder indicated this week that it is possible that certain business courses dealing theoretically with a study of advertising but lacking in opportunity for practical experience may be combined with the advertising staff.

Further development of the staff organization in the future was also suggested to allow ultimate assumption by student staffs of complete advertising and business management of The Guardsman.

Any student who may wish to join active participation in actual newspaper practice is advised to see Snyder immediately in Room 349.

Tea Today, Bonfire Friday Climax O Week

AMS

Continuing the precedent of holding a bonfire at the beginning of each fall semester the Associated Men Students will conduct their annual get-together at 7:30, next Friday evening, on the archery field, according to Don Jensen, Associated Men Students president.

As in the past the bonfire will be exclusively for men students. This bonfire will be combined into a social affair and rally.

New Yell Leaders

The new yell leaders will be introduced to the students present and they will lead some of the standard college yells and also a few of their own innovations, Jensen said. Raising interest in the game with San Francisco State College on the following Saturday evening will be the main purpose of the newly appointed cheer leaders.

The game with State College will be played in Seals Stadium, the college playing host to the Staters.

Guest Stars Featured

Don Jensen and his assistant Don Lindemann have outlined a promising tentative program. Possible notable guests of honor will be Art Cohn, sports editor of the Oakland Tribune; Herb Caen, columnist of the San Francisco Chronicle and Paul Speegel, drama critic of the San Francisco Chronicle.

"We are also trying to obtain a local big name football coach to speak for the occasion," Jensen said. "Letters have also been sent to Ernie Smith and Dean Maddox, local radio announcers," Jensen continued.

Coach Lee Eisan and several members of the college football squad will be introduced to the men in attendance.

Refreshments will be served by the members of the catering committee of the Hotel Division, of which Bud Laurenson is the head.

The committee under Jensen has experienced difficulty in preparations for the rally. Because of national defense railroad ties are not easily available for the bonfire. However, Jensen has promised that all will be in readiness and that every student is welcome.

AWS

Women of this college will hold a tea from 3:30 to 5 p.m. this afternoon in the smaller room of the cafeteria, according to Betty Fox, president of the Associated Women Students.

Gloria Olivi has been appointed by Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, as general chairman, and has appointed the following women to assist her: Aspasia Vasilatos, Geraldine McGee, Nancy Nagle, Betty MacKillop, Genevieve McGinnis, Beverly Brown, Dorothy Ann Kraul, Pat Niemeyer, Shirley Statton, Marge Wagner, Jean Harrold, Jane Joynson, June Zakarin, Shirley Wood, Betty Rost, Nadine Hand, Virginia Casey, Bettylee Zahn, and Dolores Sullivan.

Refreshments Served

Miss Dougherty has asked that any women who wish to help make the tea a success and act as hostesses, report in her office, or give their names to the women at the desk in the outer office. There will be two or three older students acting as hostesses at each table, she added.

Entertainment for the day is indefinite, Miss Olivi said, but officers from the WAA and AWS will be introduced to the new students, and will tell what their various groups do for the women of the college. Refreshments, she added, will be served.

"Renew Acquaintances"

"This is the first opportunity the women of the college have had to get together to renew old acquaintances and make new ones," Miss Olivi stated, "and we hope that as many students as possible will attend. We would like, especially, the freshmen to come, so that they may meet other new students."

Mixer Dance 3:30 Friday

Orientation Week will be climaxed this Friday afternoon in the women's gym from 3:30 to 5 p.m. with a dance sponsored by the Associated Mens and Associated Womens students, Don Jensen, president of the Associated Mens Students, said.

The dance will be very informal, Jensen said.

"Dancing to music furnished by the college record supply," he added, "will consist of the main entertainment for the afternoon."

Last semester prize dances were held, but it is uncertain whether this will be done this semester or not. However, a good time is promised by both Betty Fox, president of the AWS and Jensen.

Officers of the AWS and AMS will be present to introduce new and old students, and who will see that all become acquainted, Jensen added.

Orientation week is featured each semester by the carrying on of various activities for the benefit of incoming freshmen. These events usually culminate, as do those of the present semester, in a dance or social affair of some sort. Under the leadership of newly elected and appointed officers of the Associated Students, orientation week is the first big task of these new officers. Members of the college student administration are looking forward to bringing to a successful conclusion the opening week of classes.

Social Committee Ready To Plan Semester Dances

Social committee plans so far this semester have been limited and confined to orientation week, Pat Niemeyer, chairman of the committee, said last week.

"We are, however, planning several dances in the near future, but as yet, no dates, or definite information has been decided upon," Miss Niemeyer said. "The first social committee meeting will be held this afternoon, and something definite may be decided then."

Members of the social committee are Beverly Brown, who was elected vice-president and automatically social committee chairman last semester, but because of ill health could not assume her office, Shirley Stayton, Steve Mohorovich, Bill Postel, and Pat Niemeyer, present vice-president of the ASSFJC. Miss Niemeyer was elected vice-president at a special meeting of the Executive Council held September 1, when a vacancy was

Materials Undergo Tests Of Stress, Pressure

EVANSTON, ILL.—(ACP)—A materials testing laboratory for studying behavior of metals, concrete, wood, plastics and other materials under stress and pressure will be established in the new technological institute of Northwestern University.

Equipment for the laboratory represents a part of the $900,000 worth of new machinery and equipment to be installed in the institute before it is completed next fall.

One piece of equipment is a transverse-universal testing machine nearly two and one-half stories high and capable of exerting a pressure of 1,000,000 pounds at the middle of a beam or truss 55 feet long.

Students Rate Smug Pat On Back; Library Reports Minimum Book Loss

By Francis Chrisman

Students of the college had reason for pride today following the statement of librarian Marcus Skarstedt that fewer volumes are lost, strayed, or misplaced at this college than at probably any other college or university in the Bay region.

A smug pat on the back is certainly not out of place for such readers, and they may even brag of their aesthetic sense of responsibility concerning libraries.

For considering the fact that access is allowed to all shelves and that students are not subjected to a questioning glance when they leave the reading room (as may be the case at some institutions), this reveals a confidence of the librarian and his staff in the Associated Student group—a confidence that is not to be taken lightly.

During last semester and the summer just passed a great many books have been added to the shelves. As is customary there will be no restrictions or rules enforced other than those requiring that a book be signed out and in, and that reference copies remain in the library.

Librarian Skarstedt has taken a great deal of pride in his avocation. He has devoted time and effort to its betterment and has secured rare volumes and papers for use in studies of various nature.

It must be appreciated that because of student actions and records in past years this college may offer each semester a larger, better, collection of volumes; to be freely used by all with suspicion and detective-like regulations a thing of the far, far past.

HOW long will Russia last? Answers to this question have been many and varied. Some give her only a short while following the melting of the coming snows. Others feel that there is a much better chance.

The ghost of Napoleon has risen once again as a comparative of the present Nazi invasion. But he has really been here ever since Hitler first started. Of course any comparison with Napoleon's fiasco is ridiculous because of the vast change that has come to war and warring methods.

Russia may last only into the summer of the next year; she may carry on for a year or longer. But more important than the consideration regarding Communistic staying power is the consideration of Allied staying—and winning power. This is where the question of Nazi-Communist war length is truly vital.

NOW IS THE TIME!

It is reasonably possible for England to increase the length of the present Nazi invasion, and perhaps to thwart it and defeat it, and to gain a foothold upon the continent. Certainly it will be necessary to defeat Hitler and his group in military combat before that regime is completely crushed. Bombing planes may ultimately do the trick, but long months and even years will be consumed, entailing the destruction of lives and property—destruction that will be totally unnecessary.

When the war finally comes to its conclusion, no matter who the winner may be, a great deal of work will be called for to rehabilitate the scarred countries. If Hitler wins this work will be needed and no one will have much heart in it—but it will have to be done.

"Give us the arms and we'll finish the job," has been a favorite British chant ever since the war started. They don't want men, they don't need men—only assistance. Well, England has had many months to prepare; surely they could make some sort of a showing against the German legions, against depleted German legions. The answer to Dunkirk and the other retreats was that the Germans were outfought but commanded the use of more mechanical devices.

England must have an awful lot of devices on hand at the moment. What is she waiting for? Why doesn't she give more than spiritual and mechanized aid to her sister in arms? This is the one great chance to gain a foothold upon Europe proper. American supplies are beginning to pour in, the creek is turning into a river, man power is more than sufficient. What's wrong—is Churchill day-dreaming? Does he imagine that we're going to fight this war for England too?

It begins to seem that the British leaders are, for the moment, contenting themselves with talking a good fight. The chances were never better and the prestige they are now losing does them no good at home and in the Dominions. It is unfavorable here in the United States as well.

England has won wars in the past by starving out her adversary. She has won wars not with her army, but with the armies of other countries—and with her navy. Now comes the opportunity to prove to the world that the Briton can hold his own in equal combat. Initiative is called for, it is imperative.

No navy will win this contest. And it begins to appear as though no foreign army will win it either. Germany is not going to starved into submission, she is not going to be bombed into submission, she is not going to be tricked into submission—she must be beaten into submission. And it is in the cards that she be beaten by England.

PRESERVE HUMAN LIFE

In a "share the wealth" nation the less people the more wealth per capita. If the war keeps on England and Germany, and France and Norway, and Belgium and Russia, and all the others are going to have very wealthy citizens indeed—there will be so few of them.

But this is not a war to reduce the populations. It is a struggle to open the trading lanes and to put down a tyranny. The only importance attached to killing and bombing and destroying is that the less killing that is done the better. Therefore the sooner Churchill and Hitler can get their armies together—the better. Russia presents the battle ground—for the first time in a long while war has come to the countrysides and cities of Britain—but the great struggle can be on the continent proper.

There is one more angle to this many sided picture. The sooner England can get into the battle (and the sooner she can get Russia out of the

Registration

Tomorrow, Thursday New Filing Dates For Program Books

Wednesday and Thursday, September 17 and 18 will be the only days on which registration books may be filed, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced Friday.

Students having the date September 15 stamped on their books will file them on September 17, while other students with September 16 on their books will file them September 18. The time to file the books will be from 9 a.m. to 12 M and 1 to 4 p.m. in the library, which is on the third floor on the south side of the building. It will be absolutely necessary for an adviser to approve the official study list before one may file his registration book on the required date.

Office Hours Named

Students wishing to see their adviser must do so only during the adviser's office hours, a list of which has been posted on the bulletin board, and not try to see him or her during class time. Failure to file the registration book will mean the student will be excluded from all classes until it is filed.

The same list was published in the last issue of The Guardsman and is again published on page 4 of this issue. These office hours, Miss Learnard emphasized, are tentative for this week only, and permanent hours will be available after registration books are filed.

Total Enrollment Unavailable

The actual number of students registered in the college this semester is unavailable, but will be released some time during the semester. Registrations are still being taken.

The problem of cutting classes will be equally dealt with this semester as it has been in the past. Regular attendance and promptness in the fulfilment of obligations are required in all courses.

Absences Will Disqualify

Students will be disqualified from courses whenever the number of absences from that course equals the number of times the course meets per week. These absences need not be consecutive. Disqualified students may be readmitted to class by the instructor. Students who are so readmitted will be on probation in that class for the remainder of the semester. They will be dropped from the class rolls and will receive a final grade of "F" whenever the number of additional absences equals the number of times the course meets per week. Any student who is so dropped from a class and wishes to get back into class must submit a petition to the attendance committee, which will pass on it to determine whether he will be admitted or dropped.

Those students who appeal to the attendance committee for re-admittance must have a suitable excuse, such as serious illness, or a death in the family. Such a student will, however, still be on probation, and will be allowed no further absences.

DON'T INTERRUPT CLASSES!

Students in need of advice from their advisers or of their signatures on their registration books are requested by the registrar's office not to interrupt advisers during their class hours. All students are reminded to see their advisers only during the office hours which are listed on page 4.

Constitution Day

P.A. System Program Tomorrow At 11:15

Commemorating the signing of the Constitution of the United States 154 years ago, a short program will be presented over the college public address system tomorrow morning at 11:15 o'clock until 11:30, President Archibald J. Cloud announced.

The Honorable John O'Toole, City Attorney will open the program with a brief address for a period of five minutes on the values of the Constitution.

Don Thompson, formerly affiliated with the National Broadcasting Company, will read a script, prepared for the occasion by members of the college radio broadcasting classes. Alden W. Smith, college speech instructor in charge of extra-curricular activities is handling the details of the program.

Smith said that it is planned to hold such programs when the occasion warrants so as to remind students of some of the important dates in history which might otherwise be neglected or forgotten.

The program is expected to last three or four minutes and will be heard in all classrooms. Instruction will be suspended so that the program may be heard. According to unofficial reports, several political science and history instructors will use the signing of the constitution as the subject for their lectures of the day.

"Tomorrow will mark the 154th anniversary of an important day in American history. It is wise that for a few moments we pause to think of what this event means to the nation in these troubled times. It is not enough to be casually aware of the date. We should all, students and faculty alike, realize that our Constitution is more than a document, it is a way of life unlike any other now in existence in the world," President Cloud commented.

For many years a prominent figure in Pacific Coast radio circles, Thompson is well qualified to handle tomorrow's commentary, Smith remarked.

Thompson was an announcer and special events man in the San Francisco offices of NBC and was recently transferred to Hollywood and promoted to director of special events for the western division of the company.

The college observance of the Constitution Day ceremonies is part of a city-wide program which will honor the signing of the Constitution. Ceremonies will be held at night during which Mr. O'Toole will again speak.

Repack Them Until 1943?

Jubilant upon receiving their instruments from the Board of Education at the beginning of last semester, members of the college band were photographed unwrapping their respective pieces at that time.

Mystery at the college this semester prevails concerning the existence of a band, a course, or even instruments. The instruments were purchased for the college to be used for a course. To date no course has been specifically announced. (For editorial comment, see page 2.)

Associated Students

Assembly Friday Precedes Class Officer Elections

To acquaint newcomers with faculty officials and Associated Student officers an assembly will be held Friday at 12 o'clock in the center quad. Immediately following this assembly, class elections will be held, Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, announced.

President A. J. Cloud will open the meeting with an address to the students, and will then introduce the different officers to the students. Each officer will give a short talk following which the class elections will be held.

The low freshman class election which will be held in the library, will be conducted by the Associated Student president, Haesloop.

In charge of the other class meetings will be Marshall Hyde, high freshman class; Stan Seagren, low sophomore class; and Bob Lindemann, high sophomore class. The high frosh will meet in Room 46, the high sophs in Room 136, and the low sophs in Room 100.

As yet the counsellors for the low freshman class have not been announced, but the other counsellors are Phyllis Haley and Edward Sandys, high freshman class; Frank Parry and Nelson Wells, low sophomore class, and Cecil Aggler and Yvonne Stoupe, high sophomore class.

All students are expected to be at the assembly, Haesloop said, as "this is one of the really big assemblies of the semester."

Executive Council Membership Complete

A roster of all student officers was completed at the last meeting of the Executive Council, Thursday, September 12. Only new addition to the council was Francis Goetz, newly elected Club Advisory Board president.

The complete roster is as follows:

President .... Harry Haesloop
Vice-president .... Pat Niemeyer
Secretary .... Aspasia Vasilatos
AMS President .... Don Jensen
AWS President .... Betty Fox
WAA President ... Dorothy Ann Kraul
Men's Athletic Council .... Jack Medrano
Rally Commissioner .... Steve Mohorovich
Publications Board ...... Borrie Hyman
CAB President .... Francis Goetz

Bob Lindeman, runner-up for Associated Men Students vice-president, was elected to that office by the council at the meeting, because of the failure of Dick Callaghan, elected vice-president, to return to college this semester.

In a letter to the Executive Council it was learned that a group of former students of the college have been trying, at the suggestion of the administration, to form an Alumni Association.

Gerald R. Flynn, president of the San Francisco Junior College Alumni Association, and writer of the letter, pointed out, "Since the building up of an organization such as ours demands a certain amount of money, we must ask that, along with your moral support, you consider the question of giving us financial aid . . . "

Flynn asked that this money be used for a dance at the end of the football season for publicity purposes. Flynn hoped that such an affair might prove beneficial in bringing old students back to the college and in joining this association.

Foreign Students Flock To Univ. Of California

BERKELEY, CALIF.—(ACP)—More foreign students are enrolled at the University of California than in any other college or university in the United States.

This fact is shown in the twenty-first annual report of Dr. Stephen Duggan, director of the Institute of International Education.

According to the report there are 559 foreign students enrolled at California. Columbia University is second, with 403; others are: Michigan 301, Massachusetts Institute of Technology 253, Harvard 241, Chicago 210.

There are 6,630 foreign students enrolled at colleges and universities in the United States, according to the report.

Francis Goetz Named Club Board President

Francis Goetz, runner-up in last semester's election, was appointed president of the Club Advisory Board at last Thursday's meeting of the Executive Council.

The Executive Council was called in to appoint the president of the board because Jim Hilgeson and Helen Hamilton who were elected president and vice-president last semester were unable to assume their new offices.

Other officers of the board will be elected at the regular meeting of the group which will be held in the near future, Cecil Aggeler, faculty adviser of the board, announced last week.

The CAB is composed of one representative from each club in the college. It recommends to the Executive Council the chartering of new clubs as well as the withdrawal of charters of any club that fails to meet the qualifications for chartering. Although the board was designed originally to serve as a coordinating unit between the clubs in the college and the Associated Student organization, it has become an organization within itself that sponsors new and small clubs, plans activities of its own, and offers programs of interest to student leaders in its regular meetings.

Honor Society Eligibles Urged To Sign Membership

Students who have failed to sign up for the Alpha Gamma Sigma, honor society, and are qualified, may still do so, either with Alice Cooper, head of the society, or with the registrar.

Those eligible for membership must be Associated Student members, must have 30 honor points, and will be eliminated upon receiving a "D" in any subject.

Points for grades in physical education courses will not be counted. All eligibles must have been members of the California Scholarship Federation, or the equivalent upon leaving high school.

A list of the members will be compiled next week.

New Instruments

But No Band?

FROM all current indications not one fanfare is to be heard from the college's band until 1943. A full line of new band instruments specially purchased for the college last semester is apparently to lie dormant until that time, a year and a half hence.

Last semester, when a band was sporadically working, the discouraging turnout of players was laid to the lack of credit for considerable time spent in practice. This feeling was seconded by Madison Devlin, the band instructor.

Now a course has been technically created allowing one unit for two hours' work. The rub lies in a note appended to the course listing which records the subject as not offered in 1941-42.

Football season is now in progress. Everyone knows that a band can "make" a rooting section. An effective rooting section demands not only a spirited group of cheer leaders but a band, at least loud if not musical.

Whether or not the fact is appreciated, no small proportion of the spectators at an athletic contest is there to observe merely the fine points of the game. Part of the incidental thrills of a football game are the bright blare of the music section, the colorful gleam of the brass instruments, and the lift in spirit that naturally swells from the spectacle.

Too many empty bleachers have yawned at the football squad in past seasons. Isn't it possible that these games have been lop-sided? The players do their parts—fighting to the best of their ability. But the spectators, the rooters, have they been able to create the fellowship in the stands that an enthusiastic crowd engenders, has the infectious excitement of rivalry been allowed sufficient impetus?

The yell leaders cannot effectively accomplish these ends alone. Quite obviously, a band is needed to complement their efforts.

Is it not possible that the course be opened this semester—not in 1943? Between now and then, as matters now stand, two football seasons will pass minus a band. One basketball season will be faced with that problem.

Cruising around for a capable and proper lap in which to drop this predicament, we immediately descry the welfare committee. This topic is of some importance and deserves careful and early investigation. Compared with some previous soap-bubble ideas that the committee has been burdened with, this one offers a real chance for the group to prove its worth.

Time-Worn Issue

IT is generally and quickly agreed among student leaders that the owner's picture on an Associated Student card is the only certain method to curtail lending or borrowing of the cards. The present identification system is not sufficient and requires too long for verification.

How and by what manner to apply the pictures are difficulties not easily lent to solution.

After dragging through committees and what have you for about three semesters, the question seemed about to be solved at the close of last semester by Harry Haesloop, then chairman of the investigating judiciary committee. A plan for photostatic reproduction was then considered, and it was mentioned that the plan might be in operation for this semester's cards.

What happened to this latest solution to prevent its use this semester we don't know. We do know that other schools and colleges do use pictures on their student body cards. It can be done. Perhaps the cost is a deterrent. If it is excessive the project might as well be abandoned; if not, this semester should see a definite conclusion for the time-worn issue.

THIS NEW BATCH

of Freshman is away ahead of the last group of new students that brightened our hallways last semester. We heard a happy combination discussing the vagaries of their college life in the cafe one p. m.

"Hello, Dot, all signed up?"

"Sure, pretty soon I'll know what time I'm supposed to go to them and then I'll know which ones I'm cutting.

ON MARKET STREET

during the rainy season a young man was escorting a gorgeous young thing dubiously down the crowded street. She was carrying one of those transparent umbrellas and the poor fellow was trying vainly to keep up with her. He caught her, put his hands on her shoulders and looked fervently into her eyes.

"Darling," he said, "would you like to marry a man with one eye?"

"Why of course not," she exclaimed.

"Then let me carry that . . . umbrella."

VACATION IS

over (we feature the latest news), and has left in its wake the straggled ends of "great loves," resort memories and some swell suntans.

In the rear squad, right between Edison and Da Vinci, we heard this little conversation.

"Why, darling, where did you get that suntan?"

"Oh, just about all over."

Some day we'll ask her to go sun-bathing.

WHILE ABSORBING

a newsreel a few evenings ago, we were startled by an anguished groan from the gentleman next to us. The picture and a deep, foreboding voice were describing Gibraltar.

The anguished gentlemen turned to us with tears in his eyes.

"Just look at that rock," he wept, "Drilled with cannon, and almost hollow, weighted down with guns 'til it's ready to cave in; I can't sleep nights thinking about it."

"Come, come," we soothed. "Be calm."

"Calm!" he groaned. "Calm? Young man, I just bought $5,000 worth of Prudential Life Insurance and on the bottom of every sheet it says "Firm as the Rock of Gibraltar."

The war touches all of us, we suppose.

And—speaking of the war, we might quote the baby who pointed to his high chair and said, "I'm fed up on that."

AT LAST

we've met him. Rudyard Coombs, recently arrived from Upper Sandusky where he spent his vacation, proved to be the most unusual traveler we've ever interviewed. He caught a big fish. No big one got away from him. He admits being afraid of horses. He hates long hikes in the woods.

He spent his entire vacation in bed. Hay fever.

● Names And Numbers

Editor, The Guardsman:

To avoid wasting time and space, I shall come right to the point. I have been wondering why last season, we, the students of the college had no opportunity to learn the names and numbers of the football players until the second or third game. Couldn't there be some solution to this problem, say, for instance, the issuance of the names of these players in the college paper?

This is an appeal. If it is at all possible, please issue 'em out early enough for us to become acquainted at least from a distance, with them.

J.M.

Editor's Note:

The issuance of the names of the football squad 'depends entirely upon the coach's release of them in time for publication in The Guardsman. If it is at all possible, we will be glad to help remedy this situation.

● Guardsman Melee

Editor, The Guardsman:

May I say that, as an entering freshman, I was looking forward with some enthusiasm to the first issue of The Guardsman. And so may I describe to you the scene which met my bewildered eyes when finally this said paper was distributed to the eager students of our college. Lines of students crowded into the main hall making the whole scene one of mere congested matter.

To cut a long, uninteresting story short, I sincerely hope that The Guardsman can be distributed to all of us with more system.

Thank you very much,

Bewildered Frosh

● May We Sit Down?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Could something be done about the people who insist upon staying at their tables in the cafeteria after they have finished their lunch, or whatever it is they bring there? Some of them seem to come to college mostly for the purpose of being seen by friends. When someone wants a seat at the peak hour he finds a table with one person sitting at it and saving seats for about five or six friends, who have gone to dig up a deck of cards.

The greatest trouble seems to come from the women who sit at the table half expecting to see a floor show or something.

Signed,

Tired of Eating Standing Up

Editor's Note:

This problem has long confronted the college authorities. It would seem now that it should no longer be an administrative responsibility but a student one. We are the ones who complain. We could be the ones to do something about it. Mainly through consideration of others. There are many spots throughout the building during the noon hours where one may relax and chat. There are also some very nice courts with benches in back of the building.

INFORMALITY comes to the front again, this orientation week with the tea being held by the AWS. Very sporty was the answer given by Betty Fox, president of the AWS, when asked just how Miss Junior College would dress for the tea.

Betty, when asked just what she would be wearing, said unfalteringly, "A yellow sweater and skirt." This, perhaps, will give the women students an answer to that question foremost in the minds of a woman awaiting a coming event—"What shall I wear?" and "What will the others wear?"

A sweater and skirt, especially those of delicate pastel colors, so popular now, would be most favorable. The nice part about an outfit such as this is that it can be varied. Pearls always look nice with a sweater. Costume jewelry is still as good as it was a year or so ago—and new ideas are still popping forth from new and old designers. South sea island shells, Hawaiian wood chips, and corals when strung on colored ribbon or cord can just make that old sweater look grand—or make a new one even grander.

WELL-SUITED

From the looks of the women in the halls, suits are being worn more and more for school. One reason may be that they are good for this changeable San Francisco weather. Also, by wearing a suit, the ordeal of checking and unchecking a coat may be eliminated.

If you've looked through any of the "back to school" editions of fashions magazines you'll see pictures on nearly every other page of suits, dresses, skirts, and so forth, all made of corduroy. One good-looking two-piece (or is it three?) dress had a full skirt, and jerkin with large, patch pockets made of corduroy, and a draw string blouse of a contrasting color. Sporty? Yes, but dressy enough to wear to an informal affair.

FEMININELY BOYISH

While we're on the subject of two-piecers, skirt and sweater, skirt and jerkin, or skirt and jacket, have you seen the new flannel jackets made exactly like the boy friend's with a man-tailored, immense patch pockets, and drop sleeves? They are being shown in New York and since San Francisco is second to New York as a fashion center, they should be shown here very soon.

You may have gotten the idea from the above paragraphs that if you don't have a skirt and some sort of top you'll be excluded from affairs that ask for sport clothes. Definitely not! There are many wools, plaids, and other fabrics which when made into tailored dresses are stunning. Again, costume jewelry, novelty belts, and collars can add to your dress as well as vary it.

Major Barbara . . .
Shaw's Philosophy
Good Entertainment

A COMBINATION of youth and age has done the seemingly impossible and struck pay-dirt with its second cinematic venture. The team? George Bernard Shaw with his sharp, undiluted philosophy and wit; Gabriel Pascal with his theatric virtuosity and keen sense of directional values. The effort . . . Major Barbara.

Mr. Shaw's opinions on man and his nature are varied and forceful. His usual procedure is to set up a series of moving portraits filled with characters of standard sorts. Characters walk, sit, lounge, play, work and TALK. Through their lips pour the endless thoughts and abstract principles of Mr. Shaw, phrased in cutting epigram and stinging sarcasm.

Major Barbara in film form is no exception. Dialogue zips and crackles with alacrity and force. You may not agree with Mr. Shaw's notions, but you must admit that the man phrases his arguments with consummate skill. Here, he protests against the vice of poverty, which to his aged eyes conveys the ultimate in dismal putrescence.

TYPICAL SHAVIAN

—His background against which his pleas are subject to complete examination . . . a Salvation Army unit in England and a munition factory. His subjects . . . vague and unreal in many instances but typical Shavian . . . are a courageous, fighting Salvation Army Major (Wendy Hiller); a discerning Professor of the Classics (Rex Harrison); the munition maker, proud, unconcerned father of the girl Barbara (Robert Morley); a bitter, rebellious dock rat (Robert Newton), and a complementing cast of assorted English types.

We'll have to give Producer-Director Pascal credit for avoiding a static, lusterless succession of conversational interludes; some deft manipulation of camera, characters, and pace provide Major Barbara with enough emphasis to move ahead and evade the pitfalls of "talkativeness." Shaw's script (it was his own, based on the original play) does the rest. Naturally there are inevitable portions that seem endlessly boring, wordy beyond endurance. However, these spots are few and far between; the picture holds attention through its greater length.

FAR FROM A BUCK PRIVATE

A cast comparable to the recent Citizen Kane in general excellence carries the production superbly. Fortunate indeed were Shaw and company to gather together such a polished group of splendid actors and actresses for one picture; with acting of any less degree of perfection, Major Barbara would, no doubt, have emerged deep in the ranks as a buck private even with Shaw's contribution.

Wendy Hiller, remembered for her work in Shaw's Pygmalion, comes close to approaching her work in that first well-remembered role. Miss Hiller in the part of Major Barbara, torn between love for her munition king father and her inner faith in her Salvation Army work, paints a vivid characterization. Her work, particularly in the latter scenes in which her soul-disturbing problem begins to torture her, is beautifully executed. Miss Hiller CAN act.

Rex Harrison as the Major's analytical lover is capable. There's a taut, searing performance by Robert Newton as the Cockney bully, sneering and bullying his way through life. But the real thespian achievement of Major Barbara is garnered by one Robert Morley as the munition millionaire. Tall, majestic with his silken hand-tailored suits, he stalks through scene after scene like some aroused god from Mount Olympus. His diction is arresting; his every move smooth and calm. You'll remember Mr. Morley long after Major Barbara has become just a memory.

SHAW—AND FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Shaw's theme revolves about the proposition that money is the greatest good; poverty the greatest evil of man. Money to Shaw represents good, intelligence, the best in life.

The munition king has the money, the Cockney bully has none. But it is not Major Barbara with her prayers and pleas for supplication that lift the bully from the depths; it is the munition king and his money. When even the Salvation Army is forced to sell out to money, Barbara resigns and joins her father in his war factory, determined to bring good through his wealth.

Cabbages & Kings

ONE of the more nostalgic mementos of the past thrust itself upon college attention last week. Afternoon classes, a difficult getaway when the weather is pleasant, meet, according to time schedules, at 10 minutes after the hour.

New students, doubtless impressed with frequent admonitions during registration to "read and act according," studied the practice sheets depicting their programs—and acted accordingly. They gathered for classes at 30 minutes after the hour.

Old-timers took it philosophically. The practice sheets were but a hangover from the days B. 1940, the days when the college trekked of an afternoon to Galileo High School for afternoon classes, which did begin 30 minutes past the hour. What price, they said, economy when sentiment is at stake.

Making a gallant comeback for the third semester, the Hello Walk will gamely try to become a tangible thing. Last semester it got to the point where the plaque was nearly purchased, but the closing of college for the summer relief put an end to it. The main idea of the plaque is to try to promote esprit de corps among the poor unfortunates who labor breathlessly up and down from the building to the gymnasium twice a week or more.

For instance, it is a rainy day. Most people are feeling fit to kill. But the Hello Plaque comes to the rescue. Walking down to the gymnasium in the downpour we espy a brunette who looks intriguing, in the good spirit of things we say "hello" and in reply are given the cold shoulder in the good spirit of decorum. Undaunted, we reverse our course to encourage the hello idea. She thinks there are mashers about, until she arrives at the top of the grade and we show her the Hello Plaque with its cheery theme. Then all is forgiven. She enters the spirit of things by saying "hello" very pleasantly. We say "hello." Then she says "goodbye" more pleasantly and in a relieved tone of voice. At any rate, the spirit of Hello Walk turns a rout into a moral victory.

A Glimpse At The Corsage Designers

By Ivanna Hayworth

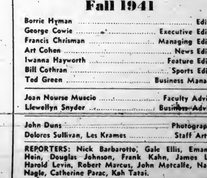
FATHER TIME touches his wheel starting the fourth consecutive year in the college floriculture classes.

Flower-minded students fall each class to learn the fine art of commercial flower arranging, what makes the little colored blossoms grow, when they should begin their advent into this world of ours, and why.

This terminal course in floriculture was instituted into the college curriculum three years ago. The two main divisions in the course are training and practice in the occupational field of nursery and gardening, and special training in the field of commercial florists.

The latter group is under the direction of a man who has a shop of his own in the downtown area. Those who enter his classes are instructed in that type of work as it is organized on a commercial basis. The general program which they follow is mostly according to seasons, it seems; however, since at the present time there are no appropriate holidays to start the class with, work is being done on various types of wreaths.

Multicolored corsages denote next that football season is really in full swing. From time to time the display that has been built and down by the cafeteria are used by students for different flower arrangements.



Thanksgiving, Hallowe'en and Christmas spark a large share of work displays of the floriculture classes. Various and different types of corsages and wreaths are intermittently the aim of the class.

Possibly by spring, the nursery and gardening division of this department will be able to supply the floriculture students with the necessary flowers for their floral arrangements, at least, this is the present plan of the instructors.

This floriculture program is one of the terminal courses which students may enter either with or without special training beforehand. When the course is finished, the students may be assured of jobs. Many in the trade outside the college have been interested in the course, and consequently, there are not enough students ready as yet to fill the positions which are open.

Students in the division are divided into different groups in order to take care of different parts of the nursery and greenhouse.

The social side of things is not neglected by hard-working students in the flower curriculum. Late last semester the Horticulture Club was organized and chartered by the Club Advisory Board. Under the sponsorship of John Hermann, instructor in the courses, its purpose is to promote interest in floriculture through the medium of out-of-class meetings.

First step leading ultimately to corsages that grace a formal gown or to arrangements that distinguish an artistic table or window, is working in the shallow troughs with small plants. Shown above are the first group of college students for whom was instituted the college floriculture curriculum.

An Easter theme, the above display gained approving comment last semester for the class in flower arrangement.

College Men And Chivalry; Eisan Faces Difficulties

For the past two semesters, ever since the Tenth Avenue bus line has been utilized as a means of transportation to the campus, letters from irate citizen-riders-of-the-bus-line have poured in almost daily.

Most of these letters have lamented the lack of chivalry in the students, particularly the men students, of the college. Nothing, however, has been said about any acts of kindness performed by inmates of the Ram-fold. Perhaps there were none in past semesters.

Last Thursday morning a prominent member of last spring's Ram basketball squad, already counting minutes before his next class, took a few minutes to prove himself both a scholar and a gentleman.

ATHLETE A NICE FELLOW

As this basketballer, who will remain nameless, stepped off the elevator at the Forest Hill Station, an elderly blind woman also alighted. In this particular load college students were at a minimum. The Good Samaritan, however, who immediately diagnosed the situation, and stepped to the side of the woman, was the same basketballer.

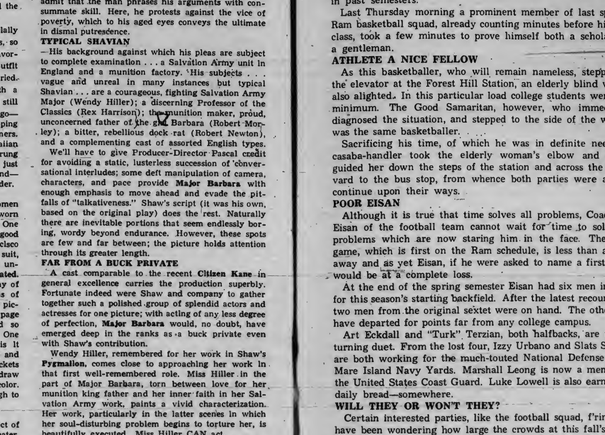
Sacrificing his time, of which he was in definite need, the casaba-handler took the elderly woman's elbow and gently guided her down the steps of the station and across the boulevard to the bus stop, from whence both parties were able to continue upon their ways.

POOR EISAN

Although it is true that time solves all problems, Coach Lee Eisan of the football team cannot wait for time to solve the problems which are now staring him in the face. The State game, which is first on the Ram schedule, is less than a week away and as yet Eisan, if he were asked to name a first string would be at a complete loss.

At the end of the spring semester Eisan had six men in mind for this season's starting backfield. After the latest recount only two men from the original sextet were on hand. The other four have departed for points far from any college campus.

Art Eckdall and "Turk" Terzian, both halfbacks, are the returning duet. From the lost four, Izzy Urbano and Slats Slattery are both working for the much-touted National Defense at the Mare Island Navy Yards. Marshall Leong is now a member of the United States Coast Guard. Luke Lowell is also earning his daily bread—somewhere.



WILL THEY OR WON'T THEY?

Certain interested parties, like the football squad, f'instance, have been wondering how large the crowds at this fall's games will be—if.

JOKE

It seems that there was once a very interested and ambitious fullback. For six straight games he played each minute of every game. As he walked off the field at the end of the first half of the eighth game the coach sidled alongside and asked whether he happened to be a contortionist. The fullback answered in the negative and the coach then solemnly informed him that his arm was broken.

LAUGH NOW!

Husky lads—the college gridders? Of course they are, because it's vitamin time for the brawny footballers. How to get all their vitamins at once is no problem at all! After much persuading, a few of the men let the big secret out and told us to keep it quiet. Those who promise to keep it under their hats can be let in on the secret. Milk is the answer and muscles is the reason.

Harvard Stressing Posture Training For Students

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — (ACP) — Harvard is conducting a campaign to have future graduates with "heads up, chins in, chests out," according to Norman W. Fradd, assistant physical education director.

Students undergo posture training to prevent the bulging curves common to many middle-aged men. Fradd says simple corrective exercises while young will insure better posture in later years since most body unbalance is fairly fixed at 25.

Rounded shoulders pull the chest in and throw the abdomen out, Fradd points out. This causes a "sway back" curve in the lower spine, a forward off balance tipping of the pelvis and a consequent sag of internal organs.

It is this sag of internal organs, eminent medical authorities agree, that oftentimes causes physical difficulties in later life, and in some cases even lead to the death of some individuals deaths. Authorities also agree that good posture is, in most cases, a sign of good health.

College Rifle Matches To Begin In November

With matches to begin about November 1, the college rifle team will begin to practice in earnest Monday in order to try and equal the fine record set by last years team, Tom O'Neil the new rifle coach, disclosed yesterday.

There will be two teams with eight men on each, and with the six veterans, who last year won the State Gallery Championships, we should be able to turn out another fine rifle team, O'Neil said.

The six returning veterans who hope to win the championship again this year are Myron Pierce, Homer Pack, Bob Reichart, Jim Juri, William Bartholemu, and Bob Ervin.

The seven matches to be played this semester are against:

1. San Francisco Surf Club
2. San Francisco Rod and Gun Club
3. Independent Rifle
4. American Trust
5. P. G. & E.
6. Post 429
7. 159th Infantry

This Year's Spark Plug?

"Turk" Terzian is his name, and for the first time this year or any year he will wear a Ram uniform on the gridiron. The first game in which the college students will be able to see Terzian, together with the rest of the Red and White squad, perform, will be this Saturday evening at Seals Stadium, when Coach Lee Eisan's stalwarts collide with the San Francisco State eleven, which is coached by Dick Boyle.

Women's Athletics

Association Activities To Begin; Futurist Plans Near Completion

Women's Athletic Association activities will commence next week, Bertha Keller, faculty adviser to the group, announced last week. Women who have neglected to sign-up may do so at the Women's Athletic Association Futuristic Party this afternoon.

"Women who wish to join such activities as badminton, tennis, or golf and who have not the necessary equipment may use equipment provided by the WAA," Miss Keller pointed out.

Although there are WAA elementary classes which give the student the fundamentals of the game, she added, it is advisable for the student to learn a new game in one of the regular college courses offered.

"Since one of the functions of WAA is to provide competition along with good fun for its members, play days are held with colleges such as San Mateo Junior College, San Jose Junior College, Marin Junior College, and San Francisco State. These play days give the student an opportunity to make new friends and to play with the other colleges are doing," Miss Keller said.

Although most of the WAA activities are for members only, there are several events to which all women are invited. One of these is the Futuristic Mixer to be held this afternoon in the Women's gym, and a barbecue Wednesday, October 8, at Sigmund Stern Grove.

Bowling has been added as one of the sports offered by WAA, Miss Keller revealed, and classes will meet at the Lincoln Bowl at 6th and Geary Streets at 5 p.m. beginning next Monday, September 22.

Plans for the WAA Futuristic Mixer are nearing completion, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced last week.

The mixer which is open to all women students of the college is held from 7 to 9 p.m. in the women's gym, Miss Kraul said.

"Entertainment for the evening will include monologues by Dolores Sullivan, presentation of some puppets by Teddy Ruegg, also dancing and games," she added.

Committees appointed by Miss Kraul are Marie Richardson, general chairman; Berta Reid, publicity manager, and Janice Berch, in charge of refreshments.

"The idea of a futuristic mixer," Miss Kraul said, "is for the women to dress as they think any man, woman, child or refugee will be dressing in the year 1950. There is no need to rent costumes, as originality, and ingenuity on the part of the students will be much more acceptable."

Election of managers for the various sports will take place from September 22 to 26, Bertha Keller, faculty adviser of the WAA announced.

The first event sponsored by the WAA will be a barbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove, Wednesday, October 8, Miss Kraul announced.

New College Coaches In Three Activities

Three sports this semester will be found under the jurisdiction of new coaches. In boxing and soccer Jim Jensen is replacing Joe Lantagne, who is now at Santa Barbara State College. Roscoe Rifle is placed under Peace Training. Thomas O'Neil replaces Jack Gaddy in that sport.

Lantagne is remembered particularly for last semester's intramural boxing show, presented under the auspices of the Associated Men Students at the Coliseum Bowl.

Intramural

Newman Club May Retain Trophy

Not to be outdone by fall's chief attraction, king football, intramural activities will have an array of staunch followers this semester, because of the intense rivalry displayed among the various clubs, fraternities, and organizations throughout the college last semester, according to John Brady, faculty adviser.

All activities will once again be handled by Brady who managed and directed the program last spring.

In this, its third semester, intramural sports have become so bitterly contested that no newcomer to the college possessing any trace of athletic prowess, whatsoever, is safe from the outstretched and welcoming hands of managers wishing talent for their respective teams.

Although not quite capable of competing in intercollegiate sports, but successful enough to be on a winning intramural team, a student may receive a gold medal for first place, silver for second, or bronze for third. A trophy is also given to the team compiling the greatest amount of points in each sport, and is kept in their possession until the following intramural program is completed.

Regarded as hot favorites to retain their trophy and intramural championship honors, the Newman Club may find trouble coming from the Goats, Rabbits, and All-Americans. Winners of the volleyball tournament and track meet, as well as finishing third in the basketball league, the Newman Club has added new strength to its forces in hopes of winning, as easily as last semester.

Ted Green, who acted in the position of student manager last semester, was expected to be back in the same position this fall. Green has not yet been heard from, although, Brady said, his post has not been filled while hopes of his return are extant. Green is expected to arrive at any time.

Paul Postler opened last semester as student manager, with Green holding down the job of assistant. Postler, however, was forced to leave school in the middle of the semester, whereupon Green took over.

Fundamentals Is Main Object Of Fall Track

Fall track is in full swing, and, according to Coach Russ Sweet, some 40 or 50 men are conditioning themselves every Tuesday and Thursday at 10 and 11 o'clock.

The main objective of fall track, contends the Ram coach, is to teach the trackmen the real fundamentals of their respective events.

Sweet said that although many of the men have the natural ability to run, jump, and throw, there are still many things that they have to learn in order to better themselves, and fall track affords them that opportunity.

Because many tracksters who showed promise at one time were forced to remain out of competition for a year or so, this semester of track gives them a chance to loosen up and get back into the condition that is so necessary to a trackman.

Sweet plans to give a few lectures during the course of the semester in order to teach the men the more important things about the events.

"There is more to running than the name implies," said the coach. "A trackman has to know how to run his event and that's something that requires much practice."

Workouts will continue throughout the semester and the Ram coach believes that by the time the regular season rolls around the veterans, new comers, and transfers will be in top shape for a season that he thinks will be very good.

Colorado To Form Own Ski Patrol

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—(ACP)—A voluntary ski patrol is being formed at Colorado College and leaders of the campus movement have chosen as a testing ground the snow-covered slopes of 14,100-foot Pikes Peak.

Capt. Thomas H. Rawles of the field artillery reserve is in charge.

The ski run, half-way up the lofty peak, will be used for practice work and tactical and camping problems will be worked out in the surrounding foothills.

"The ski patrol, as far as we know, will be the only one of its kind among military units in colleges and universities in the U. S.," Capt. Rawles said.

Football

Five Lettermen Return; Success Of Team Depends Largely On Newcomers

Looking at the situation as not being any too good, Coach Lee Eisan is sending the college gridmen through hard workouts daily from 2 to 5 o'clock, endeavoring to be well prepared for the opening fray on Saturday, September 20.

With only five lettermen returning, none of whom played on the first string last year, Eisan must build up an entirely new team. News that neither of the expected first string backfield men would return to college didn't help matters, and the Ram head mentor is scrimmaging the men hard in order to find a well-rounded combination.

Those returning who won their letters on last year's varsity are Bob Hufnagle, Bill Brown, Merle McFarland, Elmo Danielson, and Jack Madrano. Of the quintet, Madrano is the only backfield man.

According to Coach Eisan, very few, besides some transfers and those already mentioned, have shown any promise as yet. He was very much pleased, however, with three transfers, "Turk" Terzian, who prepped at Galileo and played as a freshman at the University of San Francisco; Art Eckdall, former Poly High star, and Augie Kalnen, 240 pound end from the St. Mary's frosh. At the time of this writing Eisan refused to name a first team, claiming it was too early to choose among the 60 members of the squad.

As to how the team will develop, Eisan said, "It depends on how the new fellows do because it doesn't look so well as yet."

The field is cluttered with many new men, some of whom never played at high school, and, as yet, Eisan hasn't had the chance to get acquainted with all of them. The team boasts some fairly heavy men, however, and the coach hopes they will develop into very useful material.

In regards to the San Francisco State contest next Saturday, Eisan had only to say, "State has 13 lettermen returning, one in each position."

A complete schedule of the Ram's games will be found elsewhere on the sport page.

Boxing Schedule Not Yet Released By Coach Jensen

Because of the change in the boxing coaches, Jim Jensen taking over the spot vacated by Joe Lantagne, the actual boxing schedule is unknown and will be in the dark for a few weeks anyway. It is too early in the semester for Jensen to have definite plans.

The only bouts coming up are the intramurals, the finals of which are to be held in the Coliseum.

"I haven't had much time to get acquainted with the boys, or to know who are the returning veterans as yet, but we're getting down to training at present," said Jensen.

The following is a list of the men out for boxing:

Signups are still being taken for those interested in boxing this semester.

Sign Ups Over, Basketball Roster Not Yet Released

Although a list of the fall basketball squad has not yet been released by Tom Wilson, coach of the college squad, sign ups were held Monday afternoon.

Practices will be held on only two days out of each week for the first month and a half. Beginning with the month of November, however, intense practice sessions will fall on three or four days a week up until the practice season opens, Wilson said last Thursday.

"The underlying purpose behind fall basketball practice," said Wilson, "is to enable the men to stretch stiff muscles and get into top-top condition for the season lying ahead. It also enables me to see which men are competent players and which men are potential varsity men, in short it makes possible a pre-season selection of the squad."

Work outs will begin next week, Wilson said, and at first will include merely individual practice. The men will be allowed freedom in playing in "hunch" and practicing shots together with "set-ups". During the first few weeks Wilson will be concerned with only the conditioning of the men, he said, and also with letting them regain a sharpness of eye which is needed.

Wilson has released a list of three trips that the squad will take in addition to regular journeys for conference games. One trip will see the team going to Los Angeles for a week during the Christmas holidays. Overnight trips will also be taken to Modesto and Placer.

University Of Texas To Count Old Coins

AUSTIN, TEXAS.—(ACP)—Counting 34,000 plain old American pennies would be some job—but imagine the headache currently borne by University of Texas jiveentory checkers, faced with a like number of ancient coins, ranging from early Greek to the Byzantine period.

The University's Swenson coin collection, housed in a six-foot high safe in the Texas Memorial Museum, must be checked each year along with all other State property. Kept in 50 trays, approximately 1,000 coins are Greek, the rest Roman and Byzantine.

The collection was given the University in 1891 by S. M. Swenson, who bought it in Sweden. Although only six trays remain on museum display at one time, the coins have been catalogued and are arranged according to the country issuing them.

Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, Texas — The Dies Committee has often pointed a finger at colleges and universities in various parts of the nation, sometimes accusing faculty members for the spread of un-American "ism." Just how much such propaganda is being spread through pedagogical methods will perhaps never be accurately known.

But it is possible to measure at least how many students think attempts are being made to influence them. Student Opinion Surveys of America has taken the question directly to the collegians who some defenders of Americanism claim are being taught to believe in the "wrong" doctrines:

"Have you ever felt that a faculty member while teaching in a class was attempting to influence you in favor of nazism, fascism, communism, or socialism?" The answers of a representative sample of students taken the country-over were these:

No	79%
Yes	18
Yes, but apparently not purposely	3

The above figures must be interpreted with reservations: The students who answered were typical American collegians, and all classes of students were represented, but each student's own definition of the "isms" and of what constitutes propaganda in favor of those doctrines no doubt conditioned each answer. Just the same, these are the answers they gave to the question, asked everywhere exactly as worded.

Perhaps even more significant than the mere figures above is the fact that the poll makers possible the location of the sections of the country where students believe this "teaching" of isms is more prevalent. The Eastern schools represented in the survey show a much larger proportion answering in the affirmative, while in the South and especially the West only a few students say they have detected any attempts to influence them.

Again this year in February, Student Opinion Surveys found the loudest cry in that same section of the country for continued study and definition of the "isms" in their college classes as a need for safeguarding democracy—with the provision that in such courses there should be "teaching, not preaching."

Science, Mechanisms Theme Of Building Mosaics

Last year a sculptor working on the heads of Leonardo da Vinci and Thomas Edison which occupy the pedestals back of the college, this year Fred Olmsted moves inside. His work now is painting the murals inside the main entrance to the college building. Like Herman Volz his theme—Theory and Science—lies with the future of the college. As he did last year, he again attracts daily a student audience.

On Art Projects
Volz, Olmsted Carry

By John Metcalfe

Interaction of Science and the interaction of Mechanisms are the themes of two murals to be seen at the north and south ends of the building.

The mosaics are made with specially imported marbles from the four corners of the earth. They are the work of Hermann Volz, WPA artist, who also did the mural on the California Building at the World's Fair on Treasure Island.

Because of the fact that the building now being used for housing the college will some day be the science building only, most of the art work done here will be pertaining to technology, and to branches thereunto pertaining.

The mosaic now under construction at the north end of the building will be completed in two months, according to latest information. The dimensions of the projects are approximately 42 by 55 feet.

On the north side of the science building, the effort will portray the interaction of science; that on the south side will have as its theme, the interaction of Mechanical Devices. Volz said that the characters in the mosaics dealt with no definite person or persons in the field of science or invention, but dealt chiefly with the influence of youth and education on the whole, and its relation to the two subjects.

Each piece of marble used in the project is separately cut and sandpapered by workmen well skilled in the art marble work. After the work has been completed, the marble chips will again be sandpapered giving the stone a highly polished finish.

Volz has had extensive training in the field of art education. He has attended commercial art school at Zurich, Switzerland. As well as having travelled the world, he has studied at some of the most famous art academies in Europe.

Aiding at work within the college is another artist who is painting the murals to be seen at the main entrance of the college. He is Fred Olmsted who last semester chiseled the busts to be seen at the rear of the college.

Olmsted has chosen as the theme for his creation the name of Theory and Science. It depicts youth at work in the various branches of technology such as the study of the atom, the study of space, study of animals and organisms, geology, and the study of the earth and evolution.

Mosaics by Hermann Volz will grace the north and south ends of the college building. Shown at work above are Volz and his assistant. Their themes center about Science and Mechanisms in their influence upon youth. Typically these fields of technology symbolize the future college wherein the present main building will be used as a center for study and research in science.

Service Society
Book Exchange Turns Over 2000 Books In Week

More than 2,000 books have been sold already by the Women's Service Society, Violet Butler, president of the WSS has revealed, and sales will continue during the next week.

"One day last week," Miss Butler said, "we took in $195. This money will be given back to the students through the bank at a date to be announced later.

"Books are still being sold," Miss Butler added, "so if you need any books or have any to sell bring them to the WSS book exchange at the north end of the hall."

The exchange was begun as a non-profit organization in December, 1938 upon recommendation of the Executive Council, with its main purpose being to reduce the cost of books for the students.

The first exchange office was located in Room 728 of the Pacific Gas and Electric Building, when the college was located on Powell Street. However, since the school has been in this building, the WSS has been in varied spots. Last semester it was located in the room now occupied by the Associated Students and this semester is in Room 103 at the far end of the main hall.

Office hours of the exchange are from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m. daily, Miss Butler said.

Any students having books to sell should bring them to the exchange as soon as possible, Miss Butler added, so that they may be resold to incoming students. Cards are filled out with the name and address of the student bringing in the book, and the price asked. This price is asked, and if the book is not sold it is returned to the owner.

Employment
Vocational Preparation Gets Added Stress In Job Filling

Vocational preparation is being stressed more than ever in student employment, according to Joseph A. Amori, bureau director.

To further this aim, more time is being spent on personal interviews of all students applying for jobs. Aptitude tests are also a new feature in this drive. When applying for jobs, no tests are compulsory but are available for those interested.

Numerous positions have been filled and are on file in sales, secretarial, medical, dental, hospital, hotel and even shipyard fields, Amori said, and many more, too numerous to mention, are available now and are being received daily.

Shortages prevail in fountain help and applicants for board and room. Men more than 21, to fill full time jobs are also in demand.

Those wishing interviews with a reliable businessman in the field most interesting to them were advised to see Amori at their convenience. These men will be glad to discuss employment possibilities in their particular fields, Amori said.

More than 75 positions have been filled out of the employment office in the last 10 days.

LET'S GO ENGLAND

Many people are concerned not with whether or not Russia can win but with the hope that both parties will kill themselves off. Stalin is none too popular a person even now. And until England becomes more than a silent partner, until she becomes a senior member of the corporation, she must take the consequences in apathetic public opinion the free world over.

The door is open, a huge door—England needs only step in to prove that she is willing to sacrifice for her democracy—with the promise of future victory, and the saving of millions of dollars and millions of lives.

Hotel Division
College To Participate This Week In Western Hotel Show

As representatives of the training program at the college, students of the hotel division are participating in the annual Western Hotel show at the Civic Auditorium September 15 to 18.

Selected students are on duty during all hours of the show, explaining to visiting hotel men, the purposes and content of the vocational work offered at the college.

Sanford Cohen, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Society, and Bert Pound were in charge of assembling the presentation in the booth assigned to the college.

In addition to the booth, students will be assigned to both the secretary of the Hotel Show and the exhibit manager.

Conventionalists will be invited to visit the college, division heads said, in order to see just what instruction is offered to students in the Hotel Division.

Now in front office jobs in the bay district are John Kay, Eugene Tanquary, and Ray Hutchins, from the college division.

Jack Verner is now in Panama, Karl Munson on the high seas in the steward's department of one of the Matson liners, Lloyd Tilton in hotel work in Merced and Bill Lewis, who expects to go on to Cornell next season, is now working in his father's resort hotel at Los Gatos.

Faxon Bishop on 15 day leave from Camp Ord lent a hand with the rush of opening the cafeteria on Wednesday. Bishop and Walter Lind were hotel graduates who went immediately into military service.

Faculty advisers are Dean Edwin C. Browne, and Dean Margaret Dougherty. Two other appointments will be announced later, it was announced.

Last year several mixer dances were held in the women's gym and several others at hotels down town. It was customary to have one dance for each class and introduce the officers of the class.

Merchants Named Below Showed Interest In College

Last semester the Ocean Avenue Merchants Association showed great interest in the college on its arrival at Balboa Park. The firms presented below expressed particular support, and the college therefore presents them this semester to new students of the college.

By Francis Chrisman

TO the present time almost every country in Europe, in Asia, Africa and the Americas, has been "double-crossed." This good old American term, which is merely a revision in the stating of an age old custom, has quite a few definitions; but its most popular definition is that of "having broken faith."

The long list of crosses and crossers includes, naturally Germany, France, England, and all the rest. In the Orient it consists of China and Japan, among others. In the Americas should appear the names of many of our neighbors—and also the name of our own country.

Now, to the reader, it matters little whether or not any of these foreign nations have received a knife between the shoulder blades. But it is of great importance to him, and perhaps a great surprise, to find the name of the United States appearing on the list.

WHAT'S YOUR TYPE?

He may be the type who is startled easily; "What, have they done that to us so soon?"

Or the excited type: "Why, look here; heavens, what shall we do?"

Or the casual type: "Well, it had to come sometime."

Or the indignant type, of which there are two classifications:

A says, "The idea! Let's go to war."

B says, "Who's the imbecile that concocts such trash?"

Regardless of the readers' nervous constitution, the fact remains that someone has broken faith with America. It is for the people to decide upon the identity of the crossers, but the facts remain to show that a moral injustice has been committed.

When the war first broke out, and Germany was overrunning the low countries, and mowing up on her continental opponents, feeling in the United States was as strong as it is today.

That feeling was a popular opinion expressed in the belief that Hitler and the Nazi tyranny should be defeated. That popular feeling is just as prevalent today. The important point to note is that the public still feels the same.

SOME FOR ALL?

However, in the case of those who contend the affairs of mankind, the destinies of us Americans, there has been a decided change. At the outset they, too, felt as did the rest of the nation. England should win; not because of the virtue of England, but because of the vice of Germany. That idea has been erased from the books of America officialdom.

It is now England must win for morality, and freedom, and for all that is noble in the human race—England must win for England. England must win; not because Germany has made slaves of the conquered—has made them poor and insignificant, but because England is rich and has done all this before when it did not—because England must remain rich.

Of course, it is not in the above words that the "double cross" has been slyly slipped past the sentinels of public mental watchfulness, and into the laps of 130,000,000 people. The proved formula of patriotism has been played upon until it has neared the bursting point. When that point is reached the "cross" will then resemble the finest work of any crosser who ever lived.

Just what is the nature of this misguided X? The course of things is a bit unusual, different, but where has the knife been plunged?

NOT WHO BUT WHY?

Let's begin at the beginning, a

$2000 Cut Made As Ex Council Passes Budget

Approving the budget for the fall '41 semester, the Executive Council revealed last Wednesday that the total will fall $242 short of last semester's expenditures.

Some $2000 had to be cut from the tentative budget which was submitted at the start of this semester. "All budgets have been passed and there won't be any more! All requisitions have to be in at least four days before they are signed by the finance committee," Bill Postel, finance committee, said.

Members of the three-man committee which finally approved the budget before sending it to the Executive Council were Postel, Harry Haesloop and Steve Mohorovich. The largest allotment will go to football, followed by appropriations for The Guardsman, commencement, the Executive Council, and various sports, including baseball, basketball, tennis, rifle and track.

The Alumni Association appropriation of $125 has been tilted for the time being and has been placed under a one-man committee of Bill Postel to be investigated before being passed by the finance committee.

Following is a complete list of budget appropriations as announced by the finance committee:

Item	Amount
Associated Men Students	$255.00
Club Advisory Board	60.00
Associated Women Students	280.00
Alpha Gamma Sigma	40.83
Registrar	125.00
Guardsman	3,200.00
Rifle Team	200.00
A Cappella Choir	245.00
Intramural	130.97
Basketball	525.50
Women's Athletic Association	300.00
Tennis	34.00
Social Council	56.00
Scholarship Council	7.00
Debate	50.00
Comptroller	147.00

NYA Students Operate Check Room Full Time

Managed exclusively by NYA students, the check room is now operating on a full time basis. Hats, coats and tied bundles will be the only articles accepted. No books will be handled, attendants said.

Stressing that these are "NYA rules and not the college's," Claude T. Silva, NYA director, requests that the following in regard to time cards be obeyed implicitly:

1. All cards should be handed in by Wednesday, October 1 or not later than Thursday, October 2.

2. Any cards received later than Thursday, October 2, will not be honored, and the student will not be paid for the hours listed.

3. Working hours must be made out in decimals, not fractions. The only decimals recognized are: .25, .50 and .75. No fraction will be accepted.

There are still jobs available for those interested said Silva, as the cut in NYA funds has not yet affected the amount of jobs on hand.

A Haven Sadly Drifts To Limbo

Well may many a college old-timer let sag the corners of his mouth and emit a sigh telling all pathos at this current turn of events.

As the local boy made good returns to the ole swimmin' hole to recapture past gaiety, so these standbys of the college anticipated soon to return to their site of happy days, dog days under the palms where the strains of twice-weekly band concerts rising above the clatter of traffic proclaimed that all was not hustle and bustle.

Legion must have been the couples that vowed to meet there again at the turn of the year.

And the winged folk who gave romance to these coteries, what of them?

And whereby these dolorous dilemmas? Well, in a word, Percival F. Priority. This hydra-headed impersonality has decreed that Union Square's sentence as a hole in the ground be increased for two or three years or until the defense emergency passes and shipbuilders need less steel.

For five years the greensward of Union Square was a second home to peregrinating students whose campus equalled about 25 different locations in the city. No sooner had they left it than the sod was stripped and excavated, later to be replaced when a subterranean garage was constructed.

Indeed, readers, it was a haven to these students. There they could sleep while their classes progressed in orderly fashion a block and a half away at the University of California Extension building; it was a place where they could eat lunch and share it with the pigeons, if the pigeons didn't get it all first; the Salvation Army was there too with a kindly word.

Do you wonder at the saddened faces of the 'old guard," denied, possibly for years, a revisit to that memory-fraught scene.

Time was when the above scene occurred daily, when, in short, the college spent leisure (and often class) hours in Union Square. Now it dangles in the balance of national defense demands. Steel makes all the difference between a return to its former state of haven or its present threatened limbo.

City officials, stockholders, and businessmen may shudder at the financial and physical aspects of the predicament, but the pioneer collegians see the whole not as an empty excuse for a parking lot but as a gruesome, refutation of sentiment.

Too late for page one adjustment came word from Washington that the necessary steel for the Union Square garage has now been released by Donald M. Nelson, defense priorities director. Civic officials and past-conscious collegians alike are rejoicing.

Center Quad Assembly
President Cloud To Introduce New Officers At College Meeting Today At 12M; Class Elections To Follow

Faculty officials and Associated Student officers will be introduced to the new students at an assembly at the center quad at 12 o'clock today, Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, announced. Immediately following, class elections will be held in the rooms listed below.

Opening the meeting with a short address will be President A. J. Cloud, who will then introduce the different officers to the students. Each officer will give a short talk, following which the class elections will be held.

At the class elections nominations for the different offices will be taken and the class officers will then be chosen by popular vote. Nominations should be thought of now instead of at the meeting, Haesloop disclosed, and in this way valuable time will not be wasted.

Haesloop Presides Over Group

Haesloop will preside over the low freshman class election, which will be held in the library, and he will explain to them the different services and benefits which the college provides.

Taking charge of the other class meetings will be Marshall Hyde, high freshman class, which will meet in Room 46; Stan Seagren, low sophomore class, which will meet in Room 100, and Bob Lindemann, high sophomore class, which will meet in Room 136.

Councilors Not Announced Yet

The councilors for the low freshman class have not been announced as yet, but the councilors for the other classes are Phylis Haley and Edward Sandys, high freshman class; Mary Perry and Nelson Wells, low sophomore class, and Cecil Agnew and Yvonne Stoupe, high sophomore class.

WSS
Textbook Sales Close Today

Students having used text books to sell are advised to bring them to the Women's Service Society book exchange in Room 103 immediately, as no more text books will be accepted for sale after today, it was announced this week by Violet Butler, president.

"We have handled more than 2,000 books during the first week and a half of the present semester," Miss Butler said. "This nearly equals the number turned over last semester. Perhaps the fact that registration has decreased since last semester, and that several texts have been changed, explains why we did not surpass last semester's figure."

"However, so far we have taken in nearly $600 this semester," she added.

Texts no longer in use, will not be handled, as the call for them is not great enough," Miss Butler said.

The exchange was begun four years ago as a non-profit organization to help reduce the book expense of the average student.

Students who left books to be sold at the exchange should call for their money at the book some time next week, Miss Butler explained.

Draft Boards Jerk Men From Vital Jobs

AUSTIN, Texas. — (ACP) —Local boards drafting men trained for vital industries are throwing a wrench into the nation's defense machinery, says W. R. Woodrich, University of Texas engineering dean.

While praising the "patriotic objectives" of board members, Woodrich warned that too many are forgetting that "if it takes 12 men in the shop and laboratory to keep one man in the trenches."

While demand for engineers at the university has jumped 300 per cent in the last two years, technicians virtually "needed on the production line are being allowed to sift into the armed forces at a rate "probably as high as five out of ever 12," the Texas dean warned.

"And all the time we allow our production lines to be weakened, we are seeing daily proof that army equipment is secondary in importance to the equipment and machines with which it fights," Woodrich charged.

"Every time we draft or allow an engineer to volunteer we have weakened by just that much the very engineering defense program set up to train 30,000 college technicians by next year."

AWS
Women To Hold Barbecue At Sigmund Stern Grove October 11; Initiates To Be Feted

A program of games, some songs, and a few vocal solos will constitute the entertainment, Miss Keller said.

"The AWS tea, which was held last Tuesday, was just what we wanted it to be. I think that it accomplished its purpose—that of making friendships," Miss Keller said in commenting on the recent AWS Mixer Tea held in the cafeteria.

"The lessening of the traffic hazard along Phelan Avenue might be effected by the installation of traffic signals along that street," Miss Fox said. She expressed hope that the AWS could do something about it in the future.

O Week Roars To Finale With Mixer Dance This Afternoon And Crackle Of The AMS Bonfire Rally On Archery Range Tonight

In keeping with the theme of O Week, the Associated Women Students and Associated Men Students will hold a mixer dance this afternoon from 3 to 5:30 p. m. in the Women's gymnasium, according to Pat Niemeyer, Associated Students vice-president.

Informality will be the keynote of the affair, Miss Niemeyer explained. Music will be furnished by records played from the college's own supply and also from outside sources.

Latest Records Promised

"We promise to have the latest records and quite sure that everybody's favorite will be played at least once," Miss Niemeyer said.

"All music will be broadcast over loud speakers, enabling each student to hear clearly the music he or she is dancing to." Miss Niemeyer was finished.

Identification Tabs Distributed

To help blend the students into a congenial circle of friendship identification tabs are being handed out this morning by Associated Student officers. Each student is asked to write his name on the tab and wear this affair on his person.

Members of the Social Committee have asked that students attending the mixer wear these tabs to the dance.

"If a girl sees some handsome man she would like to dance with or vice-versa, don't be bashful about asking the person in question to dance," Miss Niemeyer said. "Mixers can be a lot of fun," she continued, "and if everyone seems to be having a lot of fun this afternoon we will arrange for more of these dances in the future."

Future social events which already have the approval of the social committee are a Hotel Night, following the A. M. S. boxing matches, the date being indefinite; a Hi-Frosh dance Friday, October 24; a barn dance Saturday, November 7, and a Low-Sophomore dance Monday, November 17. The traditional Hi-Sophomore formal, which is held at the end of every semester in some country club, has not received a definite date as yet, Miss Niemeyer said.

Don Jensen, Associated Men Students president, has plans well in hand for a sparkling bonfire celebration tonight. The event is definitely an AMS tradition, and "tradition also dictates—men only.

State Game
10 Minute Pep Rally Today On Front Steps

Rally Commissioner Steve Mohorovich announced Wednesday, that a special "step" rally will be held this afternoon from 2 p. m. until 2:10 p. m., to introduce the new yell leaders and to get up pre-State Game spirit.

An important feature of the rally will be the presentation by Coach Lee Eisan of two of his players in full uniform, including the team's new jerseys. Eisan will then rehearse his material and let the Associated Students know just what they have to look forward to on the gridiron this season.

Steele New Yell King

Mel Steele, the new yell leader, and his two assistants, Don Cole and Don Taylor, will lead the student body in a few yells. Steele urged the students to brush up on the words of the yells before rally time.

Mohorovich said that he is looking for one or two women who are interested in leading yells and want to get on the new yell team. The women will lead certain sections of the stands during games and will combine with the men from time to time for mass demonstrations.

Lower Stands For Rooters

Steele requested that all who attend the game Saturday night muster in the lower stands of Seal Stadium, so that the leaders will have better cooperation during the cheering.

The new leaders will also put in an appearance at the bonfire Friday night, according to Steele.

CAB
Vice Presidential Election At Meeting Today Will Complete Line-up Of Officers

A new vice-president will be elected at the Club Advisory Board meeting to be held in Room 113 at 2:30 today, Francis Goetz, CAB president, announced this week.

Election of a vice-president at this date resulted when Helen Hamilton, who was elected vice-president last semester, was unable to assume office.

Jim Hilgeson, who was elected president last semester, was also unable to take office, and the Executive Council last week appointed Goetz, runner-up in last semester's election, president.

The CAB is composed of one representative from each club in the college. All members are requested to attend this meeting, Goetz said.

The business of the CAB is to recommend to the Executive Council the chartering of new clubs.

Goetz asked all members to attend as that in addition to electing officers, a program for the year may be planned.

The original purpose of the CAB was to serve as a coordinating unit between the clubs in the college and the Associated Student organization, it has become an organization within itself that sponsors new and small clubs, plans activities of its own, and offers programs of interest to student leaders in its regular meetings.

It is composed of one representative from each club in the college. It recommends to the Executive Council the chartering of new clubs as well as the withdrawal of charters of any club that fails to meet the qualifications for chartering. The faculty adviser is Cecil Aggeler.

Zipper Bag Lost; Reward Offered

Loss of a five dollar bill and currency and silver amounting to $10 in a green leather zipper bag was reported Wednesday, September 17, by Elvira Wizzan, college student.

Also in the purse was an Oakland commute book, which Miss Wizzan needs to commute from Oakland to the college.

"I will reward the honesty of any one who returns the purse to the registrar's office," Miss Wizzan said.

"No questions will be asked," she added.

She Was In Time For The Holdup

Some people have all the luck.

Jean Smith, third semester hotel student of the college, relief clerk at the Hotel Claremont, was on night duty early Thursday morning, September 11, when the hotel was held up.

Miss Smith was serving as relief for Ray Hutchins, hotel division graduate and regular night clerk at the East Bay hostelry.

Amori Has Ten Jobs To The Applicant

Available jobs outnumber this semester's applicants 10 to 1, now, according to Joe Amori, in charge of the college placement bureau.

Amori said that it has been necessary for him to fill certain vacancies with students from other colleges.

An outstanding example is seen in board and room jobs for women. Approximately 65 of these positions are open; all varying in salary, hours, and extra advantages.

Full time, part time, and even hourly work is available, ranging from $30 a week inventory positions, to short shifts for meals in the college cafeteria.

Special delivery men with their own cars are also being sought. Wages consist of nine cents per letter delivered.

Chauffeurs, gas station attendants, and golf caddies are a few of the opportunities offered men, while counter jobs exist for both men and women.

These positions are only a few of the many existing, Amori said, with new ones being received daily.

National Emergency

Learn To Lead

INDICATIVE of a national trend begun by the call for manpower, industrial and military, a substantial drop in enrollment was seen at the beginning of this semester at the college.

This current need for technicians, mechanics, and armed defenders is obviously exigent. Another equally vital need exists, though. Whereas welders or shipfitters may be trained over a space of months, those who must rally to this second need cannot be trained in three months or six months; their apprenticeship is often a matter of years, obtained not in the trade school, but in the college classroom.

That the successful conclusion of this war will not mean a solution of the world's problems is patent. From the termination of violence, a new future of the world must stem. Then will those with the college apprenticeships rise to play their cards.

Keenly aware of the incumbencies of that future time, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, supplementing the appeals for men to swell production lines and the armed forces, recently delivered an urgent request that youths of college age clutch at the opportunity for education. To this thought in a statement to the American College Publicity Association, he added:

"America will always need men and women with college training. Government and industry alike need skilled technicians today. Later we shall need men and women of broad understanding and special aptitudes to serve as leaders of the generation which must manage the post-war world."

It was with the view of managing the post-war world that the President and Winston S. Churchill conjoined in their historic mid-ocean meeting. The resulting eight peace aims must some day be translated to actions by leaders of tempered intellects, and at the same time, their actions must be confirmed by a populace that can cry out against fatal social stereotypes and debilitating economic fallacies.

Those leaders and that populace cannot begin training when war ceases; training in societal, economic, and political problems must be initiated now, at least.

At the opening of next semester the number dropping college work will assuredly be greater. The student now in college should ponder before joining that group; let him remember that later need for leaders. If he has an aptitude for learning, his continuance in college may be as beneficial to his country as working in a job better suited to a person of non-academic leanings.

To realize free economic movement for all nations, freedom from fear and want, voluntary choice of government, improved labor standards and social security, and the abandonment of force, minds of catholic comprehension and the ability to think and interpret fairly must be developed.

The value of mind and hand must not be neglected, one for the other. Recognition of their interdependency is strength.

Credit Due WSS

YES, the Women's Service Society is doing it again, performing, unqualifiedly, one of the best student service jobs in the college.

Without profit or any recompense, but with service as the sole motive, the WSS each semester aids students in buying and selling at fair prices within the often limited range of the student pocketbook.

To date this semester, $600 have filed to WSS coffers, later to be paid out to owners who have deposited books for sale. More than 2,000 books have already been sold.

Since 1938, the inception of the book exchange, the volume of business has steadily grown as students have realized the value of the project to them.

Let credit be given where it is really due.

Shots At ...RAMdom

A SILENCE

had blanketed the struggling conversation at the little group of lunching clubwomen. From our position behind a large hamburger we could listen to the efforts of the small talk to keep alive.

Starting briskly on the weather, it nurtured on the sad state of Mrs. Guildersnide's bridge game, lingered on clothes, returned to the weather, and quietly died.

"And what," desperately beamed the hostess, "did you think of 'Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde'?"

One well-furred and painted dowager who had been brooding over a ham and rye lifted her head and said,

"Spencer Tracy was very good as Dr. Jekyl, but that ham who played Mr. Hyde was awful."

At least we had a good hamburger to choke on.

takes a long time to root. We found this out by means of a strictly academic experiment last week, when we sought to test the tradition of "Hello Walk."

We lurked in the shadows for about two hours, waiting for someone actually to walk down "Hello Walk." Then we saw a very smooth blonde taking the air in a very encouraging manner as far as our experiment was concerned, which, we remind you, was strictly academic.

So, we jumped out at this little guinea pig and gave her a great big "hello" in our most charming manner. She became rigid, jumped 19 and a half inches in the air and walked stiffly away, giving us one of those sir-how-dare-you looks.

When we have enough credits to get into Cal. perhaps this tradition will be deeply rooted enough to be practical, but who'll say hello to an old man with a beard and crutches?

STEAM SHOVEL FANS

are given real consideration down at Union Square excavation. Railings have been put up for them to lean on, and holes cut in the wall for them to look through.

We hear a local printing company is considering the sale of programs enumerating names and numbers of all shovels and operators.

When Butch MacSpike quit at 6 o'clock last night he stepped from his painting steam shovel to take six bows before a wildly cheering crowd.

The Chronicle, it's rumored, is contemplating a critical column on steam shovels, entitled, Dig, Dig, Dig, Well all right.

A WOMAN OF RARE UNDERSTANDING

showed up at the Sophomore Dance at the St. Francis Hotel last Saturday evening. Her partner, a bit carried away by the rhythm of Eddie Murphy, essayed a neat hop and found himself on the back of his lap in the middle of the floor.

"I'm so sorry," apologized the lady in voice loud enough for the grinning couples around the flustered terpsichorean. "The train of this gown IS a bit long for dancing."

Letters Protest Traffic, Band, Lawn Showers

• Hall Traffic Dangerous

Editor, The Guardsman:

It seems to me that this institution has a definite problem concerning traffic in the halls.

At the noon hour, one must buck a steady stream of cascading down the stairs when you want to go up or, streaming up the stairs when you want to go down.

It seems that this problem might very easily be remedied with a little paint and a brush. Arrows pointing up on the right hand side of the main stair well, and another little arrow pointing down on the left hand side of the stare well.

I hope you will do something soon, as I am suffering from a cracked rib and contusions.

Yours,

• Band Lack Angers

Editor, The Guardsman:

Your editorial, But No Band? aggravated an already angry condition. I lived through last semester with those pro-and-con arguments about the band and hoped that the cessation of the semester would end the dispute about band credits.

Thus I was really disappointed to learn from the editorial that the band problem is no nearer a solution than it ever was. Evidently another semester faces us with more protests and retorts, more confusion and downright inefficiency. Certainly a band is an integral part of a football season; music will make a rooting section as your writer intimated. We all know how poor our rooting section has been, how uninspired our yells. A good rooting band would improve the scene more than words could tell. Now I learn there is to be no band until 1943 as far as credits go. I certainly anticipated a good band this football season; boy, am I angry.

• Impromptu Bathing

Editor, The Guardsman:

How long are those sprinklers going to spout on the front lawn? Every day for the past week emerging from the college to wend my way down-hill, I have been subjected to a series of impromptu baths from flying spray and wind. I don't mind bathing but only in its proper place. When the wind blows over the hill-top, let there be a lull in watering procedure.

Please.
Tall, Dark and Soaked

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

SEVERAL years ago at a meeting in Washington, D. C. one of the group was annoyed considerably at a clicking noise behind her. Finally she turned around and saw Mrs. Roosevelt—knitting. Mrs. Roosevelt said she never lets a minute go to waste and so sat knitting while listening to the various speeches.

Knit two, purl two has almost become a by-word for civic-minded women who knit stockings and sweaters for war relief, and also by college women, with perhaps a more selfish end, who knit for themselves.

Hand-made clothes have a higher value than factory made, which are turned out by the hundreds, and if made by your own lily white hands—worth much more to you.

WHAT A VARIETY

Looking through a knitting book is just like looking through a cook book, you want to try everything. And no wonder! For pictured are jiffy-knits made on large wooden needles, with heavy yarn. Some with long sleeves, some with short. The long sleeved ones are often made below waist length, to wear as a jacket over your light weight dresses.

Cable stitch is very intriguing, and not so hard once you get on to it. It requires only two hands, three needles, and a little self control.

Cardigans, hand knitted and with grosgrain ribbon running down the front are very good looking. These are made with smaller needles, however, and as no lacy open work is done, they seem like an awful amount of work. An ambitious person who undertook such a job, though, would really have something to show for herself.

Sox, knitted to match such a sweater would be just the thing, especially with a monogram or the hole name embroidered on the top.

Both knitted ankle and knee sox (although the latter have not the appeal here that they have throughout the rest of the U.S.) are being shown in new fashion magazines, with some sort of replaceable heel. This may be to revolutionize darning. But, not having ventured to hand knitted sox, we're still in the dark.

START SHOPPING EARLY

Christmas is only 97 days away, so why not start shopping by buying some yarn and knitting something for that person who has just everything.

Any ski enthusiast would love some hand knitted mittens, a scarf, or sox.

Remember those cute slipper sox with felt feet that you were told to put on after coming in out of the cold? They are darling (and warm) when made in bright colors, red or green, and with peasant embroidery on the sides.

With love in every stitch, you'll certainly be applauded for your choice of gifts.

Lady Be Good . . . lacks strength and vitality

IT isn't very difficult to locate the main weakness with Lady Be Good, the latest revue to be built around Gershwin's time-resisting ditty.

Evidently the M-G-M producers and director Norman McLeod could not quite agree as to the picture's basic theme. Was it to be musical with glorified stage numbers? Or was Lady Be Good to emerge as a drama of sorts.

Drama or musical? Generally the two themes do not combine to form satisfactory entertainment. In fact, only one musical we can recall surmounted this difficulty by sheer magnetic power and entered the ranks of the superlative. The picture . . . The Great Ziegfeld.

Lady Be Good hasn't the strength or vitality to survive the rather hap-hazard combination of pallid drama and musical interlude. With director emphasizing both substances, a general lassitude was bound to develop. Thus the picture emerges as generally spotty entertainment.

MUSICAL NUMBERS IMAGINATIVE

True there are highlights; they do lift the film from a sub-par average. All the high points spring from a truly imaginative series of musical numbers, cleverly contrived and executed to such an extent that the interlocking sequences examining the love affair of a pair of Tin Pan Alley songsmiths seem to pall in comparison.

Best contribution of the picture and tops in our cinematic memory-book was the beautiful presentation of The Last Time I Saw Paris by Ann Sothern. Miss Sothern also walks off with the entire picture as far as skill and versatility are concerned.

LYRICS SPEEDY BUT SPRIGHTLY

Another musical highlight involving Miss Sothern again is the clever sequence in which she and Bob Young whip up the lyrics to the song, Lady Be Good. Although the speed with which the job is completed would probably stagger an authentic lyrist it still remains a sprightly bit of action.

Then there is a novel dance number by Eleanor Powell executed with a dancing dog, Buttons. And Miss Powell is back for a spectacular grand finale featuring boogie-woogie set to tap-steps. Dancing honors, however, are usurped from Miss Powell by a trio of sepia tappers dubbed The Berry Brothers. With their flying gyrations and leaping splits, the lads just about stop the show.

That concludes the credit side of the production. Perhaps it would be more merciful all around to ignore the debit side which is quite large. We can safely do this by simply forgetting to mention the plot and what occurs on the screen in between far-flung scenes when music reigns supreme.

ANN SOTHERN'S JOB TERRIFIC

Ann Sothern does a terrific job as one of the romantically inclined tunesmiths; Robert Young as her partner is pleasant and charming as ever but does little to add to the real entertainment values of the piece. Eleanor Powell, who receives starring credit on the marquee, is completely subordinated to Miss Sothern. She is entirely wasted in what amounts to little more than a supporting role. Lionel Barrymore is also wasted in two brief scenes as a divorce judge. Red Skelton, a growing young comedian, and John Carroll are good in other supporting roles.

Any entertainment derived from Lady Be Good will come from Gershwin and Jerome Kern's pleasant tunes, good singing by Miss Sothern and some spirited tap routines. Other than that, Lady Be Good is bad.

THAT cloud of dust and energy seen last Monday half way down the walk to the gymnasium was not a psychology experiment or a physical tryout for energy, but rather tryouts for the positions of assistants to the yell leader. After nearly half a dozen applicants had given their all for alma mater, a vote was suggested. But after the counting of noses, it was found out that there were not enough members of the executive council to do business. Tired and dusty yellers had to retire to the main building much the worse for wear than those who stood placidly by and watched them perform.

In the cafeteria the other day was a student who would have put Henry the Eighth to shame in regard to social grace. He insulted the cuisine of the cafe by insisting upon taking some fillet of sole into his hands and biting it off and chewing it as if it were jerkee. He then violated all the polite rules of dunking, by soaking his sandwich in his soup. After he had terminated his more or less epicurean repast he gave out with the Arabian equivalent of "What a lovely dinner!"

It looks as if the Major prefers his own opinion of the weather to that of the Chamber of Commerce.

Driver of Municipal bus No. 052 is a man with the light of education and knowledge burning brightly in his heart. All afternoon other bus drivers were driving over the tape measures of the surveying classes, but not he; when confronted by the potential engineers trying to survey and measure the lower part of the drive he stuck his head out of the window and shouted politely, "Go ahead, I have plenty of time."

Your College Presents . . . The Art of Cooking With Modern Equipment

By Iwanna Hayworth

INSTRUCTION in the field of Home Economics is intended to encourage an intelligent interest in the problems of the home and of family life, and also to train students for home or institutional management, or for industrial and professional work. Students may concentrate in one of three fields: food and nutrition, clothing and textiles, and household administration. (Excerpt from this semester's catalogue).

In the first field, the work itself is planned so that students, both men and women, may enroll for the introductory food preparation classes. This course also takes in meal planning, serving, baking, general cooking e.g. all meats and vegetables. Lectures are given this work which helps the student to learn food values, how the food itself is grown, the planning of meals and other items. This course may be taken without any prerequisites by either beginning or advanced students. Students plan and give quite a number of teas to which their parents, and friends are invited.

Another interesting course which is offered in this field is one in nutrition for pre-nursing students. In this program the girls learn about the principals of nutrition, adequate diets, and also gain practical experience. This semester in addition to the students at the college, two classes of girls from one of the hospitals in the city come over two afternoons a week.

The university parallel course is especially designed for the students who wish to become dieticians or teachers in this field. In addition to two years in junior college, two more years of upper division work is required or in the case of dietician majors, an extra year is required. In this major, chemistry along with other laboratory sciences is required in order to get full university, however, any student who takes the beginning course receives credit for university work.

It seems that most of the women who are in the introductory classes either plan to be married soon, or they are taking this as an elective subject. Some, however, take it and plan to go on with catering, etc., or in private homes. Vocational opportunities as far as the food department is concerned, a student with training in home economics can become either teachers or dieticians, or there are possibilities for jobs as demonstrators or in bakeries. There are a number of these jobs, however, which require four years of training. In this field, as well as in the clothing and textile department of home economics, placements depend entirely upon the initiative of the student.

There is future in the latter field in clothing designing and in interior decoration. Students are trained in the making, buying and altering of clothing and household articles. Frequent demonstrations and field trips to various stores, manufacturing and cleaning establishments are made for the express purpose of observation and study of business practices and standards. For the interior decoration majors, there is a general study of home and furnishings, including influences on modern buildings and interior decorations. Floor plans, sites, elevations, selection and arrangements of home furnishings are a part of the training which these students receive. Visits are made also to furniture stores, studios, museums, and model homes.

The Home Economics Club, which is an outside organization, is made up of students enrolled in this course. A week from today, a tea has been planned by this group and will be attended by members of the class and others who are interested in joining. In a sense this is a "rush" for new members. This club plans various functions among which are dinner, teas, and barbecues—hmm, sounds like fun, huh?

Rams Set For State Game Saturday

RAMblings
By Bill Cothran

Jittery Gators Seek Ram Under Every Red Sweater

PRE-GAME jitters have taken over at the Buchanan Street nest of the State Gators. Writhing in the throes of a gripping nervous tension, the State campus has been looking upon every wearer of a red sweater, pair of slacks, and even sport jacket, as a probable undercover agent of the Ram.

All spectators have been barred at Coach Dick Boyle's scrimmages for the past week. Displaying a colossal leniency, however, Boyle made an exception of all spectators who could prove that they were deaf and dumb, as well as illiterate. As the handful of daily qualifiers-to-be-present-at-State-drills entered the gates, Boyle himself threw a few quick Indian signs at them; those who responded with smoke signals were barred.

COUNTER ESPIONAGE HINGES ON NECKWEAR

The Purple and Gold department of counter espionage has let it leak out that its sure-fire method of determining just which shady individuals are campus landmarks and which ones are fifth columnists (or fourth, as far as that goes) all hinges upon men's neckwear.

Any shady individual who does not wear a tie is a campus landmark. Any shady individual who DOES wear a necktie is definitely branded as a spy, scout, or what have you, from the precinct of the Ram. All Ram spies are hereby counseled not to wear neckties when carrying on their undercover work against the Gator.

SPEED PREDOMINATING FACTOR

Tomorrow evening's clash between the Ram varsity and the State varsiteers will be on an even basis as far as weights of the rival squads are concerned. Starting backfields for both teams will total 708 pounds for an average of 177 for each man. Speed, as is indicated by weight computations, will be the predominating factor in both the Ram and Gator backfields.

Both forward walls bulk large, larger than the walls of some top-ranking universities have been in past years. The State line checks in at a total of 1,340 pounds, or an average of 191 per man. The forward wall, which will represent the Red and White, will average 189 per man and have a total of 1,322 pounds.

RAMS HAVE EDGE ON ABILITY

Rated even on weight, the two rosters also present approximately the same number of experienced men. An edge, however, must go to the boys of the Red and White when natural ability is reckoned with. Other factors which should effect the outcome of tomorrow night's contest are the conditions under which the opponents practice.

The college team has been working out on the practice field below and to the south of the science hall. The turf is in top condition and football facilities for this season are proving ideal. State, on the other hand, has been forced by adverse circumstances to utilize for practice purposes, a rocky and sandy saw-dust reinforced field. Due to this discrepancy in conditions afforded for practice, the Ram must be given another edge over State.

Basing my opinion on statistics and figures, not on the human element, I'll take a little flier on predicting the outcome of Saturday night's debacle. The Rams to defeat State by AT LEAST six points. Breaks could conceivably change the complexion of the entire game. If the gods ride alongside the Rams the score will be swelled. If alongside State, the contest will be mighty, mighty close—perhaps ending in a deadlock.

Women's Athletics

Association Activities Begin Monday With Manager Meeting

All Women's Athletic Association activities will commence Monday, September 22, Bertha Keller, faculty adviser of the group, announced recently.

At the first meeting of the association, managers will be elected. These managers will be responsible for the members of their respective clubs, for the club itself, and will be members of the WAA council, Miss Keller said.

Several changes have been made in the WAA activities, Miss Keller reported. Basketball, usually played during the spring semester, will be moved up and will begin this semester. Clubs will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 3 p. m. with Verrel Weber supervising. All women who are working toward official ratings should report, as they will be given an opportunity to officiate at these games.

Hockey May Be Dropped

"Although we are trying to work up some enthusiasm over hockey we haven't been very successful this fall," Miss Keller pointed out. "Hockey is the sport for women that football is for men, and is played extensively in colleges throughout the country. The high schools here don't teach it, but they do in the bay area. So, from these students come requests for field hockey classes. However, unless more students sign up for this sport, it is possible that it may be dropped until next spring."

Aileen Kinkel will be the adviser for the hockey club, if there is one. She is attempting to have a demonstration game played here in the near future.

Since there are not enough sign-ups for the horseshoe, volleyball, or dancing clubs, these will also be dropped for the semester, Miss Keller said.

If, however, there are more women interested, perhaps a better time could be arranged, and consequently that more women would sign up, she added.

No Tournament Dates Set As Yet

No tournament or play day dates have been set as yet, Miss Keller said, but will be announced very soon.

Times for the various clubs to meet are: tennis, Thursday at 3; archery, Monday and Wednesday at 3; bowling, Friday from 9-11; ice skating, Friday at 2; fencing, Tuesday and Friday at 4; rifle, Friday at 10; riding, Thursday at 2, 3, and 4; swimming, Tuesday and Thursday at 3; badminton, Monday and Wednesday at 4.

Winterland will open next Friday, September 26, for both WAA and regular ice skating classes, it was announced.

Signups In Rifle Open; Practice Begins Monday

Because matches do not begin until November 1, signups for the rifle team are still being taken, Jim Juri, president of the rifle club, announced this week.

Practice will begin Monday, Juri said, and will be every Monday and Wednesday from 9 to 10:30 a. m.

The team is chosen as a direct result of this practice, Juri explained. At each practice meeting the scores of the group are kept, and one week before the first meet they are checked over and the eight with the highest scores go on the first team, while the next eight with the next highest scores go on the second team.

This method has worked well in the past and should continue to do so, Juri believes.

Dumb Doras Learn Football—Terms

By Nancy Nagle

"Bill, why is he running off with the ball?"

"Oh, look, aren't all those toughies hurting that little fellow on the bottom?"

These or similar questions are always asked by Dumb Doras of their escorts when the football season first opens—and when it closes they are still at it—none the wiser. For poor Bill wants to watch the game to see how his buddies play.

After all, at the fraternity meeting he can't say he didn't see "Champ" make that touchdown because he was explaining the T formation to Dora.

As a result, the Women's Athletic Association has stepped in this semester as it did last year, and is planning an all-women rally for the single purpose of teaching some of the fundamentals of football to the women students.

Coach Lee Eisan will be present and will describe the hows, whys, and wherefores of the game.

"Since many women know very little about football—only that the object is to make touchdowns, somehow, and by someone, the rally should prove ideal," Miss Kraul, president of the WAA, said.

The rally is being planned for next Friday noon, but the time, and place are still indefinite, Miss Kraul added.

Jensen Issues Plea For Additional Shinkickers

Jim Jensen, coach of the soccer team, has made it known that although prospects of the squad appear to be brighter than usual, men who have signed up so far have fallen far below this season's sign-up expectancy.

Last fall's shinkickers proved themselves one of the college's outstanding groups. Although they did not "march through an undefeated season," they played top-notch soccer in all of their games and pulled no small number of upsets during the season. When conference play came to its close, they were not lodged in first place, but their breath was hot upon the neck of the champions.

Four first-string veterans from last year's squad have returned to college for another season of competition to boost Jensen's hopes for his first unit. Although several of last fall's stalwarts have dropped from school, they have not weakened the group enough to push it out of definite contention for the conference crown. Any men who now heed Jensen's call, and turn out for soccer, will have a chance at earning blocks and possibly championship sweaters.

Jensen has asked all men interested in joining the squad to see him personally in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Intramural

Basketball Free Throw Contest Starts Sept. 24

First intramural sport to swing into action for this semester will be basketball free-throwing, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, announced this week.

Competition will commence in the men's gymnasium next Wednesday, September 24, and will continue through Thursday, September 25, and Monday, September 29. Any student wishing to compete should report to the gym at 3:00 p. m. on any one of the days specified, as no signup will be required such as practiced last semester, Brady said.

Reason of the long delay in starting the intramural program is accountable for the fact that Ted Green, student manager, who capably handled the position last semester, has left college, and Bob Hall, his assistant, has also left college to join the Army. Until a capable manager has been selected, the intramural program will be under the supervision of Brady.

Basketball Starts October 1

The first major sport, basketball, will start on Wednesday, October 1, Brady said. Entry blanks will be published in The Guardsman, and all teams entering are requested to hand their entries in to Brady as soon as possible, for a smaller amount of teams will be accepted this semester.

The list of players must be written on the application slip and handed in with the entry blank. Anyone whose name does not appear on the blank will not be eligible to compete. It is stressed that students with block letters are not eligible to compete. Students with circle awards are eligible, Brady said.

Compete For One Entry

Warning was given by Brady to the effect that no student will be allowed to compete for more than one team in any sport. Violation of this rule will be the disqualification of the violator and the forfeit of the game.

By next Tuesday, Brady hopes to have the order of events and dates of the intramural program in complete order.

To Bear Brunt Of Gator Wrath

Kickoff At Eight Tomorrow Night Opens Season At Seals; Squad Cut To 30

In a contest which is expected to be packed with thrills and chills, the college gridders take the field for their first game of the new season tomorrow night at Seals Stadium against the Gators from San Francisco State College. Kickoff is set promptly for 8 o'clock and both coaches are anxious to see their relatively new teams in action.

After two and a half weeks of tough practice and hard scrimmaging, Coach Lee Eisan reduced the squad to some 30 men for the coming fray. In hopes of emerging with a victory and possibly going on to a championship, Eisan chose only the players whom he thought could best represent the college on the field of battle. Those who were not so fortunate were turned over to the junior varsity, where their chances for playing is much greater.

Davies, Hufnagle May Star

Included in the 30 are such standouts as Bob Hufnagle and Temple Davies, both of whom stayed out of competition last year but were members of the 1939 Ram varsity. Davies, an exceptional punter, will start at left halfback, and Hufnagle will open at left guard.

Others whom Coach Eisan relies upon and on whose shoulders rest the responsibilities of a successful season are lettermen "Dutch" Danielson, Bill Brown, Merle McFarland, and Jack Madrano. Along with these are transfers Turk Terzian, Art Ekdall, and Augie Kalnen, all of whom starred in the recent practice sessions and with whom much of the season's burden rests.

Ekdall To Start At Half

Ekdall will start at the right halfback position tomorrow night and, should he play as great a game as he did while performing for Poly High in 1939, State will be in for a tough time. Terzian will be the starting quarterback, and Kalnen, an end for most of the practice season, will do his duties as starting right tackle.

Ed Cassidy and Dick Souza closed fast enough to catch Coach Eisan's eye and got the call as starting left end and right end, respectively. Coupled with Kalnen at the left tackle will be Bob Hoffman, who boasts a 197-pound frame and who is said to be hard to move. "Dutch" Danielson will start at the center spot, Bill Brown's services will be at right guard, and starting in the all important fullback role is Bob Christen.

Difference In Weight Little

The Rams will enter the game with a fairly heavy lot, as will the State eleven. There is very little weight advantage either way, both teams sizing up practically the same. The college will have a line averaging 189 pounds to State's 191, and both backfields will square off at an even 177 pounds.

State Line Heavy

The line boasts two fairly husky tackles in Pete Mirande and Ken Gomes, both whom weigh 215 pounds. Dick Mueller at center, Ray Lang and George Lorbeer at ends, and Izzy Pivnic and Pete Perry at guards make up the starting eleven.

Most of the Gators' plays are run from a short punt formation with an unbalanced line and a man in motion to either the right or left. This makes for an offense that can go either way with equal power.

Both coaches expect the game to be close and very hard fought. The college gridmen are keyed to a pitch and are determined to bring home a victory from their arch-rivals, which all goes to make the contest a tough and interesting one.

Color—And Plenty Spark Ram Team

Color will portray the theme of the Ram varsity tomorrow night when the men will glisten under the arc lights of Seals' Stadium, for the squad has acquired new red, satin jerseys with white numbers, the customary brown moleskins, with red, satin socks, and black helmets.

Fat Castellano, rugged blocker and Ram fullback of last season, has joined Dick Boyle's State squad, and will face his old alma mater tomorrow night, opening at quarterback, the blocking position in the Gator offense.

Glenn Smith, recently married member of the college varsity, who sustained a broken wrist in early season of last year, is showing signs of the wear and tear of scrimmage already, having dislocated his shoulder in the first contact work ordered by Coach Lee Eisan last week. Smith is expected to be fit for action within three weeks.

Able managers last year, players this year. Such is the case of Louis Vasquez and Donald Tobin. Vasquez, a speedy 150-pounder, will undoubtedly spell Armand Terzian at the tailback or quarterback post tomorrow night, and Tobin, a hefty 200-pounder will see plenty of action at tackle for the Rams.

Managers for two years, both decided to go out for the team and succeeded in making the squad, and for their efforts will be the distinction of carrying the colors of the Red and White against our arch rivals.

Merle MacFarlane, diminutive guard, is carrying around a beautiful black eye as a result of a peaceful scrimmage session last week in preparation for the State game.

U. S. Medical Schools Decrease 50 Per Cent

Montgomery, Ala. (ACP).—Medical schools in the United States have decreased by 50 per cent since 1905, and medical students by 18 per cent, according to a survey by the Federation of State Medical Boards as reported by the Alhambra health department.

It lists 77 schools in 1940 as against [illegible] present student body at 21,271, compared with a total of 26,147 in 1905.

Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, Texas—(ACP)—Today the far-flung social policies of the New Deal administration to relieve unemployment and create a brighter future are the battlefront for many a long and bitter discussion. Often debated is the question whether government project workers earn their compensation. The National Youth Administration, including the plan to aid college students, has received its share of the criticism.

A majority of the college men and women, recently quizzed by Student Opinion Surveys of America in a national poll, believe that N.Y.A. work is the best college aid plan yet advanced. Smaller percentages believe that as an alternative the government should grant loans to students instead of paying money for what some have termed "clock winding" jobs. Still less would like to see government scholarships instead of jobs.

The complete poll, which includes only a proportionate number of the 120,000 students who hold N.Y.A. positions, was taken in scores of colleges and universities by means of the Student Opinion Surveys sampling machinery operated in co-operation with campus newspapers.

Here are the results, by percentages:

"Which college aid plan do you think would be best—

"Continuing N.Y.A. jobs in colleges. (62 per cent).

"Awarding government scholarships to worthy students. (18 per cent).

"Making government loans to needy students. (20 per cent)."

There is only a very slight difference of opinion between men and women, as these cross-examinations show:

	Men	Wom.
Continue N. Y.A. jobs	61%	64%
Award scholarships	18%	19%
Make government loans	21%	17%

City Atty. O'Toole Speaks At College On Constitution Day

San Francisco's City Attorney, the Honorable John O'Toole, spoke over the college public address system last Wednesday, September 17, commemorating the 154th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

O'Toole, an authority on the Constitution, gave a brief history of the difficulties of the early colonies to unify under a constitution.

O'Toole has been City Attorney for the past 16 years, his term ending on January 7, 1942. When the college was only a dream he sought to solidify it.

Land grants for the college passed through his office and he did everything he could to have them passed as rapidly as possible.

The present civil service and pre-nursing courses were created from the ideas of O'Toole.

He studied law in a law office in San Jose, passed the bar examination in 1894 and has been practicing ever since. All the civil work contracts go through O'Toole's office.

"Students aspiring to the bar should include the study of English, Latin, History. Psychology, though we didn't have that particular course in my day, is now a very important course for a student interested in law," O'Toole said.

"I am very much impressed with the amount of work that's been accomplished here in the short time that's been allowed to do it," O'Toole said after being conducted on a tour of the college by President Cloud.

Don Thompson, formerly affiliated with N.B.C. as announcer and special events man, read a script specially written by the college radio class.

He was asked to speak by Alden W. Smith, college speech instructor. The program lasted approximately 5 minutes and was heard in all class rooms while instruction was suspended.

Smith, head of extra curricular affairs, announced the intention of holding these public address programs when ever an important date in history warrants the occasion.

Admission Still Open To Choir, Chorus

Many opportunities for admission to the A Cappella Choir this semester were announced by Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

This is the first semester in many years that presents so many openings in the choir, Miss Badger said, and this is only because several of the men singers were forced to drop out of the course because of the draft. Tenors and basses are particularly needed at the moment.

Other music courses are open to students who have had no previous experience or training. Mixed Chorus, held Monday and Wednesday at 11 a.m., is open to these students, Miss Badger explained.

Men's Chorus held Tuesday and Thursday at 12 is also open on the same basis as the Mixed Chorus, she explained. All men students without previous musical training are privileged to enter the Men's Chorus.

The college musical organizations have participated in many meetings and conventions throughout the state. The A Cappella Choir has sung at Stanford, and several churches and other institutions. Plans are being formulated for a series of performances now.

Fledglings Neatly Settle To Their Aerie

Returning from a formation mission, these embryo eagles sweep over the West Point of the Air before settling to their base.

Formation flying, as well as night flying, instrument work, cross-country missions, and precision flying are included in the 70 hours flying cadets spend in sleek 450-horsepower basic training planes at Randolph Field, Texas.

Completing this basic stage, cadets can look forward to a brief 10 weeks of advanced training, after which they receive their wings and a commission in the Air Corps Reserve.

From the colleges come a large portion of the flying cadets. Harold G. Lund and Stanley W. Tobiason, both graduates of this college, are among the 330 flying cadets who were graduating on May 31 from the Basic Flying School at Randolph Field.

Former members of the college are stationed in army and naval flying bases all over the country. Almost every week sees a communication from some base noting the advancement of a past student at this college.

A recent notice tells of the graduation of N. N. Forte from the Air Corps Basic Flying School at Gardner Field, Taft, California, on September 26.

New Instructor

William Eckert Joins College Commercial Advertising Staff

Newest addition to the art instruction staff of the college is William Eckert, who will assume direction of commercial advertising course.

Eckert has had professional experience in the field of commercial art. He studied at the Chicago Art Institute, and the Art Students' League in New York City. At one time he was art director for Fox West Coast Theaters in San Francisco and Los Angeles. He was poster artist of the Roxie Theater in New York City and was once art director for Paramount Studios in Hollywood. The rest of his experience has been in free-lance advertising, and advertising agency art work.

Eckert's course is one which includes all types of advertising and commercial art. Eckert said that applicants for this course should have an inclination towards art and should be willing to devote outside work toward their objective.

Supplemented with real art jobs, the course offers employment possibilities in department stores, art services, advertising agencies, newspapers and in other fields of advertising.

According to John Duns, art club president, the club will enter some efforts in the forthcoming semi-annual art show to be held in Hotaling Place, sometime in November.

Art Majors Eligible

Duns expressed the hope that there would be more new members entering the art club this semester and said that all art majors are eligible for membership providing they are accepted by the executive committee.

Last semester, the art club took successful trips to shelter cove, Niles Canyon, Half Moon Bay, and other points of interest, Duns revealed.

Last semester also the art society formulated plans for an art society among the various junior colleges of northern California. The proposed society would be a large scale model of the art club here at the college. It would also have the name of Alpha Delta Epsilon.

most logical point for beginnings. Bear this in mind: the question of who should win is not even questioned, it is a question of why and ... It is a question of how many nations should become engaged, and of how many men, women, and children shall be uselessly slaughtered.

Now! Let's examine a few salient factors. The war is ruining England, and the sooner it comes to an end the better. Were the United States allied with the British Empire, the latter would immediately become much richer, much more able to outlast the enemy—and probably much happier. Besides an alliance with the U. S. would mean that there would be a dupe to be duped, which is a handy thing to have around.

The United States has never recovered from the last several depressions. This is probably the final economic spurt before the arrival of the monetary blitzkrieg. There must be something to keep the people going (note Ethiopia and Italy), some way to stimulate spending and production—though it be a false stimulation.

We are now being stimulated. We are stimulated by radio, by newspaper and by word of mouth. We are stimulated from dawn to dusk, throughout the night, in work, in play, in anything and everything.

It may not be long until we are stimulated right across several thousand miles of ocean and onto the battlefields—to stimulate somebody else.

The proof of the pudding is in the fact that it took no stimulation to approve aiding the Allies; and it is taking a great deal of stimulating to get past that stage.

THE GAME IS ON!

The pawns in this chess game have been eliminated and we are getting down to the vital pieces. There is no more of the half-hearted effort, both sides are beginning to play ball. The players are in little or no danger, the game is being played with human beings and with human lives.

There should be a few moments of silent contemplation. Of all the tragic instances in the past two years, the self betrayal of France and Belgium loom as gigantic firsts! Should there be an addition to that list of misguided peoples?

HEA Shifts Into High Gear With Two Teas This Month

Starting off the fall program of the Home Economics Association will be two teas, one to be held Tuesday, September 23, and the other to be held Wednesday, September 24.

Both these occasions will take place at 3:30 p. m. in Room 158.

A third tea will be held Friday, September 26 in Room 158 from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. These festivities are to be held for the benefit of students interested in the association, and members are also invited.

Students interested are requested to sign up before for entrance before Thursday, September 24, to avoid congestion and overcrowding.

A ship model testing tank has been built at the University of California.

New Faculty Bulletin Board Group Named

Appointed by President Archibald J. Cloud to serve on a bulletin board committee for the present semester were William Eckert, art instructor and chairman of the committee; Joan Nourse Muscio, faculty adviser to The Guardsman; Evans Ecke, art instructor; Claude Silva, NYA director.

All posters or announcements must have the approval of Eckert before they may be posted on any bulletin board in the college.

Standardized placards for club notices and special events are available. These forms will obviate individual signs of clubs and other groups, Eckert said.

To regulate the display of notices, the faculty committee has classed them under six categories, the nature of which will determine the placing of the notices.

The classifications appear below as follows:

1. Club announcements: Two bulletin boards, one located on the main floor, one near the library.

2. Special college events (dances, football games): on main floor, near club announcements space, and on club bulletin near the library.

3. Departmental: Distributed on all three floors according to location of department.

4. Office notices (registrar's notices, civil service exams.): near registrar's office.

5. Physical education: Main floor.

Banking Hours 10 To 1; Cartickets Sold Then

Banking hours at Room 188 will be the same as last semester, from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m., according to Michael Zarchin, faculty treasurer, who is in charge of the student bank.

Students may cut their cost of commuting to and from college in half by purchasing their books of car tickets at the bank. Books of 20 tickets are 51 cents.

No Students Admitted To Class Unless Books Properly Filed

No student will be admitted to any of his classes until his registration book has been properly filed with the registrar, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar emphasized at the close of this week.

If a student failed to file his book on the days previously designated by the registrar's office, he must inquire at the office, Room 121, for the next time that he may do so, Miss Learnard said.

The students will realize, she added, how imperative it is to take this matter up with the registrar's office immediately.

The total number registered this semester cannot be determined until some time next week when registration machinery has concluded, Miss Learnard continued.

Registration in the college is now closed to all applicants since it is felt that students entering at this time would be under too great a handicap in beginning their courses late.

Students Need More Dates

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—(ACP)—More dates for college students—plain dates, "blind" dates and "group" dates—are seen as a solution to marriage problems by Mrs. C. Brooks Fry.

Mrs. Fry, assistant to Dr. Paul Popenoe, founder of the American Institute of Family Relations, asked all teachers to urge their students to get acquainted and make dates with each other, even during class time.

Stressing the need for greater social relationships for young men and women on co-educational college campuses, she said, "only 55 per cent of the students in co-education colleges marry, and we are losing out in good citizenship by allowing this condition to exist.

"Popular students will have to take some responsibility in seeing that the 'wall flowers' get into the swing of campus social life, and the teachers also must cooperate."

An addition to the Dartmouth College library is one of the finest collections of Herman Milville first editions, presented by George Matthew Adams, New York author and book collector.

College P. T. A.

George Green New President Of Council

Presiding over this semester's junior college council organization, George Green, college geology instructor, has relieved Claude A. Shull, two-term president of the council, of his presidential duty.

Vice-president of the council is Dr. Lew Wallace, a prominent down town dentist. Secretarial duties went to Lloyd D. Luckmann, head of the college civil service department and debating adviser.

Acting as the council's treasurer this semester will be Mrs. Schnacke of the Parent Teacher's Association. Filling the position of historian is Helen Reveal with Mrs. Mitchell as membership secretary.

Activities Outlined

"The junior college council furnishes a meeting ground for parent, faculty and student," Green said. "This semester we hope to enlarge our present program to include other communities outside our vicinity.

"Many students are registering from these outlying communities and we hope to enlarge our program so as to bring them within the scope of our activity," he added.

"As to our immediate plans, I would rather not say anything definite until after consulting with President Cloud," Green said.

"Open House Held"

Illustrating the fact that the council serves to bring parent, student, and faculty together was the Open House held last April 29 during Public Schools Week, when the council sent invitations to all San Francisco high schools. Both parents and potential students were invited to attend the meeting, where numerous questions concerning financial obligations of the student, educational benefit of a junior college education, and the influence of a junior college on the community, were answered.

Various speakers were invited to talk on business, medicine, the clergy, law, and banking.

Both parent and student were conducted on a tour through the college by members of the council.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

THIS present semester has probably seen a drop in enrollment figures in the colleges and universities of America. The draft is a partial cause; more relevent is the demand for men and the high wages now available for almost any able bodied worker.

High school graduates are having little trouble in securing employment. One company here in San Francisco even has inaugurated the system of picking men off the streets and giving them jobs. All this has temporarily changed the structure of American economic and educational life.

For the time being a specialist has but a slightly better chance of finding work. His pay may be higher, but the unskilled, untrained man is having little difficulty. Because of this, the desire, for the present at least, of a higher education is not what it used to be.

All those men who are foregoing their studies for a sojourn into national defense production realize the situation that exists. They will admit that employment is determined only by the length of the present war, and they express the desire, many of them, to return to school once the conflict has ended.

THEIR RETURN DOUBTFUL

But it is one thing to express a desire, and another thing to carry it out, insofar as this job business goes. The drudgery of hours of study, of less free time, and of a doubtful success, seems to over-weigh the more fundamental advantages of a well-rounded education. Though it is said that they will return, most of them will not.

But what of that? After all the most important thing for a man today is to be able to work, support a family, and enjoy his life.

True, these advantages are present now in great numbers. But they are phantom advantages that will soon disappear. When the war ends, thousands of men, well trained men, will be looking for work—what chance will the untrained or partially trained worker have against such odds? Very little!

The men who have remained at their studies, in the laboratories, classrooms, and at the training workbenches, will be more able to secure employment when this period is over, than will the men now accepting temporary work.

Will not the man who has been working instead of studying return to school when he finds that his source of income requires a more definite qualification than mere desire to work? Perhaps; perhaps not. Many men will continue to search long after any reasonable chance exists. Even if they do return, that much time will have been lost. Time in which they could have prepared themselves for steady, good-paying positions.

Those men who are now working in order to save for a college education will be unfortunate victims of the times to come. Their plans may be well formulated, but the loss of time is going to place them at a distinct disadvantage. It is true that every graduating student coming into the business and professional world must compete with those who have arrived previously, but in this case the delay is really unnecessary, and the odds will be greater.

WHAT IF WAR COMES

The only, obvious benefit from such action would result in the event of our involvement in a war. Then the defense workers would remain behind the lines, fairly safe, while many college and university men would be called into the service.

This however is more of a hypothetical case than is the expectation of a depression to follow this boom period. And then, too, the case would be the same when the war had been brought to an end. Besides many of the men now working in defense projects may eventually be called to fight in event of a war.

One way or the other—it adds up to valuable, vital time lost.

What of the man who marries during these "good times," and finds himself out of a job—with a family to support—when the "bad-times" arrive? He'll certainly be in a pretty mess. Try going to school and supporting a wife in the fashion to which she has previously become accustomed. It can be done, but in such cases a few unhappy homelives are bound to result.

Isn't it amazing how a "foreign" war can so affect these United States?

A MORE DURABLE SUCCESS!

That is the case for higher education. It is an aesthetic as well as a practical case. The answer, if it can be so called (and if it is possible to carry it out) consists in forgetting the

Class Elections

George Coart Elected High Soph Leader

Class officers were elected by the students of the various classes following last Friday's college meeting.

At the high soph meeting presided over by Bob Lindeman, the president elected was George Coart. The office of vice-president couldn't be filled because a tie between Charles Howe and Bob McCoy was the result of the election. A recasting of votes will decide who will fill the office. Lois Steinhart was elected secretary of the class.

Neville Smith swept the field in the high frosh election, to come out the victorious president. Eloise Winfeldt, last semester's High Soph Sweetheart, was elected vice-president of the high frosh class. The new secretary is George Allan.

And for the low soph class, presided over by Stan Seagren, the new president is Mel Dropo. In a close race, Kay Allen won the office of vice-president. Jim Duryea was elected secretary of the class.

A record vote was cast by the freshmen in their election. Winners are Bing Kirk, president; Margaret McMann, vice-president, and Carmel Cole, secretary.

The counselors for the low freshman class were named Friday. They are Gertrude Bolton and Wesley Muscio. Counselors for the other classes are Phylis Haley and Edward Sandys, high freshman class; Mary Perry and Nelson Wells, low sophomore class, and Cecil Aggler and Yvonne Stoupe, high sophomore class.

"Mina Menen—" Finn Explanation

EUGENE, OREGON—(ACP)—"Mina menen koulun etta saan lissa tietoja," Jaakko Paakkola, 53-year-old Finnish fisherman and University of Oregon junior, replied when asked why he had chosen to return for a sixth year of university education.

Translated, Jaakko's reply was, "I attend school to obtain more knowledge."

Occupied as an expert gill net salmon fisherman on the Columbia and Siuslaw rivers during the fishing season, Jaakko takes time out for college each winter term. He has made classrooms and the library his "home" on the campus.

Leaving his father's farm and fishery in Finland at the age of 17, Jaakko moved to Oregon, where he found jobs in the lumbering and fishing industries. Years of hard work as a lumberjack and fisherman have not aged Jaakko. He has retained a youth's agility and an interest in education.

He attended Oregon State College for two years, then switched to the University of Oregon. He has taken related courses in economics, sociology, English, journalism, public speaking and psychology.

Jaakko employs an unusual method of increasing his limited English vocabulary. This system includes a room-length chart, across the top of which he has lettered the alphabet at regular intervals. Every evening before retiring, he places on the chart new and difficult words which he has encountered in his studies during the day.

Jaakko does not limit himself to textbook reading, for he spends most of his time with books of special interest. Last year, to quench the thirst for knowledge, Jaakko purchased a $200 set of books written in Finnish, covering the studies of history and science.

Warning Issued—Don't Lend Associated Student Cards

Students are again warned against the borrowing or lending of student body cards. An infraction of this rule has already resulted in two persons losing their cards, Charles Howe, judiciary committee chairman, has announced.

Football and basketball games as well as dances will be watched closely for any unlawful use of student body cards. Any cards confiscated at these functions will not be returned to the owners, Howe added.

Editorial

Only Credit Grant Will Insure Success Of Band

REAL initiative and real spirit are still alive and kicking in the college.

In response to an editorial in last Tuesday's Guardsman, a group of students came to our office with ambitious plans to start a band for the college. They wanted The Guardsman to publicize their efforts and to announce the need for additional players.

The Guardsman is following their requests. But that is not enough! These people must have administration support to insure the success of the band.

It is unfair to have students devoting the large amounts of time required for band work without any credit. Even if they are willing, that spirit might not be so strong when the work mounts.

Enthusiasm faltered in this manner last semester when a band was organized under Madison Devlin of Lowell High School. No credit was offered for the work. Attendance at the band practices became more and more discouraging to Devlin and the remaining faithful members as the semester drew to a close.

Devlin himself laid the blame for the failure of the band directly to the lack of college credit for the work.

With this latest show of interest in a band and with the wholesale desire of the students for a band apparent, NOW is the time for Music 16 to be opened as course—not in 1943 as a notice in the college catalogue defers the course.

We have the instruments for the most part; we had them last semester from the Board of Education. We have a sufficient nucleus for a complete band personnel.

We need a course with credit this semester, and we need an instructor this semester—if we are to have a successful band. A band appointed on the basis of last semester can have but a slight chance to survive unless these requirements are met.

This matter is no longer suitable for student investigation. It demands definite action one way or the other—NOW—by the administration.

Music

Newcomers Swell Choir Roster; Talent Bureau To Begin Operation

Auditions for the A Cappella Choir have been completed, Flossita Badger, college music instructor, announced last week.

Because a great many of last semester's choir have not returned, there is an unusually large number of new students in this semester's choir. Miss Badger said that she thinks that with all the fine material in the choir it will be one of the best the college has ever had. This semester's choir is slightly larger than last year's.

Miss Badger has already received four requests for performances of the choir. This is more requests than she ever received so early in the semester. As yet, she does not know if she will accept all of the requests.

The choir will elect a new manager in the near future as Andrew Nisbett, who was elected manager last year, is not returning.

Other music courses are open to students who have had no previous music experience or training. The College Chorus meets every Monday and Wednesday at 11 a.m. in Room 200.

Any man student can join the Men's Chorus which meets in Room 200 every Tuesday and Thursday at noon, without a tryout.

Miss Badger said that these two courses give students who are not advanced enough for the choir to enjoy the pleasures of singing an opportunity to perform.

Students who are interested in vocal or instrumental music again have an opportunity to gain practical experience either inside or outside the college, and should see Flossita Badger, music instructor, and arrange for an audition.

The purpose of the Talent Bureau is to furnish entertainment for various college events. The bureau also gets calls from outside the college for talent. It receives these outside calls from clubs, church groups and night clubs.

The bureau which operates like a casting office keeps a record on file of each audition and likely candidates are notified when they are needed.

Also open to students who are interested in music is the Music Club which has prepared many for the Talent Bureau.

The Talent Bureau has had continued activity since the middle of last semester, furnishing talent to all major college rallies and meetings.

Opera To Give Student Performances In October

The San Francisco Opera Company is presenting two performances of Rossini's opera The Barber of Seville in the War Memorial Opera House, specially for students; one on Friday afternoon, October 24 at 1:45 p.m., and the second on Friday, October 31 at the same hour, Flossita Badger, faculty member, announced last week.

Students who desire to go to either performance should make their reservations with Miss Badger no later than today. The prices for the performances range from 75 cents to $2.50. Students will not have to pay for their seats until a later date.

Miss Badger said that this particular opera is a particularly interesting one for students because of its comedy plot and beautiful music.

Finance Group Takes Late Soccer Request, Approves

Because of an application that was late in being turned in the Finance Committee announced last Thursday that the budget of the fall semester will have an added appropriation of $462.80 for the soccer team.

Bill Postel, chairman of the Finance Committee, announced that this added appropriation will cover the expenses of the team's equipment and the ten games to be played this season by the squad. The longest trip planned for the soccer team this season is the game against the Sacramento Junior College in Sacramento.

Taking action on the Alumni Association application for $125 Postel announced that it will not be granted after an investigation of the matter. Instead, for the period of one year, the Alumni Association will be permitted to attend the college football and basketball games. This was the compromise offered by Postel who said that the finances of the college could not stand the passing of the Alumni Association budget.

High Tenors, Low Basses Wanted In Men's Chorus

For all men interested in men's voice training there's an opportunity. According to Charles McKiernan, instructor of men's voice training, the class will be soon underway, and as yet there is plenty of room for those who have any musical ability.

Among the various sections still open, it was especially pointed out by McKiernan, are those for high tenors and low basses.

Parking Problem

South Hill Still Needs Clearing

With the exception of parking on the south hill adjacent to the college, student cooperation in regards to parking has improved considerably compared to that of last semester, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"There is plenty of room on the street level and behind the college," Browne said. "There is no necessity in endangering other people's property and well being by using those hills to park on.

"Students should not use the front drive to park, as the bus needs a clear passage. Too many students are using that particular drive not only to stop and pick up friends but to stop and talk and take up space for an unnecessarily long time," Browne said.

A parking lot will be discussed at the next meeting of the Welfare Committee, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman.

"We plan definite action in this respect," Lindemann said. "Though merely the nucleus of the committee has been formed, the members appointed are all enthusiastic about a parking lot, and recognize the need for one."

Appointed to the position of chairman for this semester is Virginia Ovenshire. Other appointed members of the committee are Jo Anne Holm, Larry Coker, and Florence Heffernan, according to Lindemann.

College Social Season Remains Tentative

Future plans for the social season at the college this semester are rather indefinite as yet, according to Pat Niemeyer, Associated Students vice-president.

The social committee under the guidance of Miss Niemeyer is making plans for a hotel dance following the Associated Men Students boxing matches. "The date of the boxing matches has not been set as yet, therefore we cannot go too far ahead with our plans," Miss Niemeyer said. "Also on the calendar is a barn dance which we would like to hold sometime in the near future," she continued.

Dance Dates Set

The Hi-Frosh and Low Soph classes have reserved October 24 and November 17 respectively, to hold their dances. The Hi-Soph Formal has not as yet received a definite date but as is the custom it will be held towards the closing of the semester, Miss Niemeyer added.

More mixer dances are also planned for the future and the committee is working on the project of obtaining a band for each mixer in the future.

Orchestras For Mixers

Students who attended last Friday's mixer were the first to dance to an orchestra for an after school dance. "The students appeared to be quite satisfied with the idea of dancing to orchestra music instead of records and we will try to obtain orchestras for future after school dances," Miss Niemeyer stated.

College Registration Closed For Fall Semester

Final registration in the college this semester is now closed, it was announced by the registrar's office on Friday.

"Students who do register late can get into classes only if the class is such that he can catch up with the work already completed," J. Paul Mohr, registrar, said. He continued by saying, "the only other way a student could be admitted into the college was that if he had taken a leave of absence after a month or so last semester he could get back into class, and pick up where he left off, otherwise he wouldn't be able to do the work."

Any other class would be too far ahead for any student to make up the past work.

The actual number of men and women students attending the college this semester will be determined soon. However, the registration office continued, the total enrollment was far less than that of last year. Defense activities, it is assumed, is the cause for this drop in sign-ups.

Players Needed

Call Issued For Students To Organize College Band

Students interested in playing in a college band at football games, rallies, and other functions, are urged to see Dean Edwin C. Browne, or Flossita Badger, music instructor, immediately.

Instruments are not especially necessary, but are desired if possible, according to Douglas Craig a member of the band. The instruments will be furnished if students so desire.

Last semester the band was started, but because of lack of interest, it was not as successful as expected, Craig said.

The band especially needs trumpets. Craig said that he needs about seven to give the band the correct volume. A minimum of 25 players is needed to make the band a success.

It will be a military band which will play at football games. Perhaps later on, according to Craig, it will be a dance band. This band will offer a chance for musicians to practice and will give them good experience.

Instruments desired are seven trumpets, eight or ten clarinets, one bass drum, one snare drum, one set of cymbals, and three French horns. Also desired are four drum majorettes and one drum major. Six bugles could be used by the band, but are not altogether necessary.

Perhaps among the new students some musicians who would like to join the band, could be found, Devlin said.

The band was begun last year, but not enough students turned out for practice to enable it to continue during the semester, so the plan was abandoned by Devlin.

Part-Time Jobs Available To Anyone

Practical guarantee of a part time job for anyone interested was announced by Joseph A. Amori, director of college employment, last week.

Hours applicable to the average student's schedule are available and the jobs varied. Stock clerks, elevator operators, stenographers, and soda fountain-creamery workers are in demand with no experience required.

Both experienced and unexperienced men are wanted as service station attendants, paying up to 60 cents an hour. Ushers and doormen are being placed through the union, Amori added and anyone interested should apply at the employment office immediately.

A typical condition is shown in civil service announcements received in the employment bureau. For the first time in his experience said Amori, the government accompanied announcements of examination with a request for names of any student he thought competent enough to handle the positions available.

Additional opportunities as to placement are received daily, so students who were unable to find a satisfactory position earlier are urged to apply again.

The college employment service was organized last year to supplement the student services being offered at this institution. Positions in almost every line of endeavor have been found for qualified applicants.

AMS

Boxing Night Next Event

Plans for the Associated Men Student's semi-annual boxing matches are still in the embryonic stage, according to Don Jensen, AMS president. A tentative date has been set for the first part of November, but if this time interferes with some other college activity the date will have to be changed to correspond with the calendar, Jensen said.

"The barn dance which is also sponsored by the men students of the college twice a year is still more of a dream than a reality," Jensen added. "Because of the pressing matters at hand concerning the bonfire I have not planned any future events," Jensen added.

Now that the bonfire is a thing of the past the association's executive committee can proceed with plans for the future, Jensen said.

Last semester's barn dance was pronounced a great success by then present student leaders. This semester's attempt will try to equal and surpass it, Jensen concluded.

The bonfire and barn dance are semi-annual events in the Associated Student social schedule. Both are conducted by the AMS. This men's organization also sponsors the semesterly boxing matches, usually held at the Coliseum Bowl, in conjunction with the physical education boxing program.

Book Exchange Returns Money To Students Sept. 29

Money for books sold through the Women's Service Society book exchange will be returned to the owners at the school bank during banking hours, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. starting Monday, September 29, Violet Butler, president of the WSS announced early this week.

Claim checks must be shown, Miss Butler said, before money will be given out.

No more books are being received to sell, but we will continue selling the books that we have, until the end of this week, she added. "Up until Friday of last week we had collected about $750 for used text books."

After the book exchange is closed, WSS will not remain inactive, Miss Butler said; "for we assist at various college activities such as open house during Public Schools Week, graduation and have several socials planned for WSS members."

WSS officers for this semester are Miss Butler, president; Leona Schaeffer, vice-president; Barbara McRae, secretary, and Nancy Leaman, treasurer.

Turnabout

Idealism Challenges Modern Moral Theory In Unique Case

It is occurrences like this one that cause the cynic and skeptic to reexamine their philosophy and wonder if there is not something inherently good in human nature.

At the beginning of last semester a student whom we shall call John Adams wanted to do his part in the college and pay the Associated Student membership fee, but he simply lacked the money. Not daunted he asked Dean Edwin C. Browne if he might exchange his services in odd jobs about the college for a membership card.

The Dean promptly assented and Adams promptly went to work. He did odd jobs about the college with a ready will, so much so that he more than worked the equivalent of the card.

To close the story here would easily earn Adams recognition, especially if we were to compare his case to the too numerous incidents where students blandly signify an intention to join the Associated Students and then, just as blandly, dismiss the subject from their minds.

But it seems that Adams is of a unique calibre, and there is a sequel to the action.

This semester he again walked into the Dean's office. He quietly placed four dollars on the desk with the simple comment:

"I got a job this summer and made a little extra money. Will you use this to pay the fee of some worthy student who really wants to be a member of the college . . . someone in the same position as I was last semester."

The he just as quietly left the office.

Do you want to reconsider your philosophy?

The Toll Mounts

109 Tomorrow

ONE hundred and nine Americans will die tomorrow. An equal number will die the next day and the day after that. They will find death in the twisted steel of an automobile. One hundred and nine will meet a violent death each day of 1941 until approximately 40,000 victims have been chalked up at the end of the year. These are cold, hard facts!

If they can be fully realized, these ghastly statistics might well cause us to look on the automobile with the same kind of revulsion that the sight of a machine gun creates and to wonder how we may curb them.

In competition with other Bay Area colleges and high schools last semester, Kei Hori, then managing editor of The Guardsman, wrote the following editorial on safety and submitted it for rating to American Legion Post No. 400 as part of its safety campaign.

This summer we received word that Kei Hori's work captured first place. The editorial is reprinted here from The Guardsman of last April 25 with the dual purpose of recognizing this achievement and of reiterating the great need for SAFETY FIRST. A new traffic fatality each thirteen minutes is intolerable.

AMID the cry for National defense, for all out aid to the oppressed and for the need of succor for humanity arises another cry, many time stifled, but nevertheless as important and steadfast as the present demand from across the seas.

It is the cry for National safety—need for vigilance in traffic, where the total of death and injury has been in open competition with the death and injuries of war.

Fifty per cent of the automobile accidents which occur involve students of high school and college age. The startling, if not shocking fact has been on record at traffic bureaus, and was released recently by the American Legion, which is therefore endeavoring, with the assistance of local newspapers, to initiate a formal and continuous program of Safety Education in public schools.

The fact that one-half the automobile accidents involve students should in itself picture for the student driver the need for more care and intelligence in driving motor vehicles.

All of us realize the value of traffic safety. It is obvious that no one would purposely be involved in traffic accidents. Yet, injudicious action combined with the "competitive spirit" have too often resulted in a tie race to the crossroad.

Greater need and more thought on the traffic safety situation is obvious. The situation is understood by all who drive. It is up to them to apply intelligence in driving. When high school and college students are responsible for half the automobile accidents at least half the responsibility for their safety rests upon their own shoulders.

National defense means the safety of the country. Safety within the country necessitates assured safety on the roads and highways of the country, so that the progress of the nation shall not be obstructed by unnecessary traffic accidents. They can be avoided by a moment's thought for the mutual safety of men.

On Books And Buses

EVERYONE riding to and from college on the Tenth Avenue bus is aware of the tenuous nature of his equilibrium and the general discomfort suffered when he, like the majority, has to stand during most trips.

Since the best solution for the problem—more buses — is at the present doubtful, a certain amount of inconvenience might be relieved by a general following of a practice now in vogue to a certain extent. The more thoughtful and courteous of those lucky enough to find seats are making friends by offering to hold the books of those in the aisles forced to dangle perilously from the chromium bars at the top of the bus.

This offer is appreciated. Why not try it tomorrow?

Shots At ...RAMdom

PAUL PENDARVIS,

raven-haired maestro of the violin, whose orchestra is playing to an ever-increasing crowd of lovers of sweet swing at the Mural Room of the Saint Francis Hotel, has an unusual hobby. It's turtle racing.

Pendarvis is the proud owner of a sleek racing turtle that galloped in just behind that of Mickey Rooney in the great Turtle Stakes, sponsored by the Variety Club in Texas.

"Turtle racing is in my blood," said Paul. If Rooney hadn't fed his beast Mexican jumping beans instead of ant eggs, the Pendarvis Special would have run circles around it.

HIS THEME,

"My Sweetheart," has been banned from the air because of A.S.C.A.P. restrictions. At present, he and "the boys" are strranging a theme called "Phi Delta Bungalow," song of Pendarvis' fraternity at Phillips University in Oklahoma where he studied music. He also attended U.C.L.A. "We've been going on the air cold, without a theme song, until this song can be released for radio," Pendarvis said.

WHEN ASKED

if he had any advice for aspiring musicians, Pendarvis said, "The trouble with most of the youngsters who try for orchestra jobs is that they start before they're ready. One must have a thorough knowledge of music. In a college band a musician can miss a few notes here and there, but in a commercial orchestra everything is systematic, exact." A thorough background, practice, knowledge of music, classical as well as popular, are the best recommendations any musician can offer.

to cancel the steel orders on the Union Square excavation, we received many letters through the Rumshorn full of ideas for the future use of the "big hole."

Hubert Shubert, high soph, suggested putting a diving board on each end of it and waiting for the rainy season. Kudyard Ripling, English major, suggests putting a roof over it and waiting for prohibition.

We propose something useful. Why not make the main man who wrote the Hut Sut Song, place him carefully, very comfortably, perhaps put a pillow under his head, in the exact center of the excavation and suddenly fill it in.

● Air-Conditioning?

Editor, The Guardsman:

How about air conditioning the lecture and art rooms? I have to stay in school until 5 p. m. practically every day, and the last few hours are terrifically cold. The only hot air we get, we can't utilize—even you can figure where that comes from.

Yours for a better distribution of hot and cold, clean air,

Alberta Meek.

● Cover For Hello Walk

Editor, The Guardsman:

Can you tell me why, in the name of common sense, the designers of this school didn't provide a covered-walk on the path between the main building and the two gymnasiums?

It seems that there are two classes a day for some students and, because of the schedule, have to go up and down the hill twice in one day. What are the chances of having some protection from the inclement weather which will soon be here?

● Chivalry?

Editor, The Guardsman!

Perhaps something could be done about the chivalrous nature of some of the student body. A course in the social graces would go a long way in improving their manners.

Men. The muscle-bound hunks, who are always bragging about their own strength; and yet they haven't the strength to stand on their own two feet in order to give a tired woman a seat.

When one of them sees a girl standing by his side, he immediately becomes intensely interested in some inane volume which he has never before opened out of pure interest.

Not that we women are weaklings. But it is the principle that they are always calling themselves better than we are.

About the only time I have ever seen a man stand up in a bus or a street car was when he was forced to do so by dirty looks.

Maybe this is why a pipe dream of mine to think that the male species could ever be induced to give way to the so-called weaker sex, but someone in my life has said, "Just be nice to the big brutes and they will do anything for you." I wonder if that would apply to this problem of getting a seat on a crowded bus?

Just Plain Puzzled.

● Inside Mailbox

Editor, The Guardsman:

I am one of many who would like to have a small box inside the college. Many students, who have free hours, write letters of importance which need immediate mailing. May I suggest a box on the corner, (a slot by the telephone exchange would be wonderful). Yours hopefully,

J. M.

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

"WHAT shall I wear?" is the all important question asked not only for social events, but also for sport events.

As this is the week that physical education classes really get into full swing, as well as the first week WAA clubs meet, it seems this time is as good as any to mention sport activity outfits. As usual the regulation outfits will be required of certain activities, but for archery, bowling, riding and several others, clothing apropos to the sport is worn.

Let's look at the regulation outfit first. Really is it so bad, once you take a good look at it? White shorts, shirt, sox and shoes. A group clad in such a uniform looks cool, well dressed, and shows excellent taste. Much better, in fact, than the group clad in multi-colored shorts, sweaters, sweat shirts, or whatever was left over from last summer's vacation.

RIDING REGALIA

Riding (no, horseback riding—for convertible riding almost any outfit is acceptable) is an activity that does not require a fancy supply of regalia. Vests and derbies need not be worn. In fact a well-dressed equestrienne is often seen with breeches, a bright colored tailored shirt, and boots. Of course, when the weather gets cool, as it most-times does, a jacket comes in very handy.

Classroom garb—sweaters, skirts or tailored slacks are becoming very popular for bowling purposes. Since the class meets on school days it is nearly impossible for the potential 290 roller to run home and change to her bowling clothes. Fortunately, all kinds of dress are seen on the alleys, so no one need worry about being properly dressed.

Shorts, and extra short dresses (perhaps saying short skirts, would be better) are very good for tennis, or badminton, mainly because they allow those arms and legs to move freely and quickly, they also make the wearer very presentable. And who of us doesn't try to do that very thing. Back to tennis, however: White, is always acceptable, and it looks well on everyone—especially those with sun tans, either from the beach or the golf course.

WHAT! NO BATHING SUIT?

Here is another one of those wear-what-you-have-on sports—archery. No special dress is required or needed so women partaking of the sport come as they are. In sweaters, skirts, tailored dresses, suits—in fact nearly everything but bathing suits. Or has anyone shown up in one, Miss Weber? Next time you run down the hill or while you are puffing up it, look at the archery class and just see for yourselves how nice they look in their "school uniforms."

Now that we have told you all what is being worn by many students in the physical education classes, you can go out and wear exactly what you had planned to wear before reading this.

My Life With Caroline . . . it could be livelier

FARCE is defined as comedy whose humor is due to exaggerated effects or distortion of incidents. Farce is dangerous film stuff with which to work; it is subtle and thin, it may tear and fall to irreparable pieces at any moment. It must be backed by competent material, good cast, wise understanding, direction, a clear, encompassing script, effective setting to tie-in with the general feeling of high-gated nonsense.

If any one of the above elements fails to co-ordinate properly or becomes intolerable through clumsy handling, farce will degenerate into childishness.

My Life With Caroline is a sophisticated farce. Incidents are exaggerated; effects obtained through emphasis on over-emphatic dialogue and facial expression. But the film skirts the very rim of complete ethereal boredom; it threatens to evanesce into a gossomer nothingness . . . but never quite does, thanks to a very charming gentleman named Ronald Colman.

AN EXCELLENT JOB BY COLMAN

Said Mr. Colman does an excellent job of holding together a thin, tenuous script and an almost non-existent story. Our ruler for farce demand a strong, underlying plot upon which to rotate comic values. My Life With Caroline suffers thus from the beginning; it is nonchalantly apparent and transparent where some solidarity would have benefited all around.

The all too simple tale revolves around a married couple (Colman and Anna Lee). Wiffe is a manic-collecting butterfly who flits with reckless abandon from one suitor to another swain while hubby looks on with calm, unattached amusement. When wife, Caroline, reaches the smoldering stage with her various pals, in steps hubby Colman with careful, calculated plans that ultimately ruin all of Caroline's preparation and deposit her safe and sound in hubby's arms, blushingly protesting, "I'll never wander again, my one and only."

That's your "story," wandering easily through a series of luxurious sets of ultra-modern design. Mr. Colman wanders along also, taking wife, suitors and assorted trials and tribulations in easy complacency.

THAT OLD CHARM REMAINS

The years rest kindly on Colman's shoulders. He still presents a charming, dashing figure as of old and one that will probably be appreciated by the ladies. He performs a not-too-difficult role with easy dexterity and holds much of the falling segments together.

There is a good supporting cast, special mention going to Charles Winniger as Caroline's happy-go-lucky father, and Hugh O'Connell as a harrassed butler. Reginald Gardiner and Gilbert Roland as rejected suitors of the fluttering Caroline fit the picture well.

And now for Miss Anna Lee—presented to American audiences in her debut. Miss Lee as the scatter-brain Caroline is another weak cog in the picture's continuity. Perhaps it was the part (and it was a difficult one to portray), but Miss Lee seemed very amateurish and uncertain. Where Caroline should have been a charming little bundle of naive innocence, Miss Lee made her seem stupid and foolish. We couldn't coincide Colman's frantic efforts to hold on to his wife with Miss Lee's unwieldy personification.

Perhaps proper blame should be placed on the shoulders of Director Lewis Milestone for not utilizing what material there was to better advantage. Milestone should remember farce and return to raw, elemental dramas such as All Quiet on the Western Front with which he excels. Leave sophistication to Lubitsch.

Field

DISCussions

COLUMBIA'S waxing of Will Bradley's Six Texas Hot Dogs' stuff called Basin Street Boogie gives a few stabs and is worth the money. Other side shows off the whole band on a drab pop titled Call It Anything, It's Love.

Two Glenn Miller com stabs, The Kiss Polka and It Happened In Sun Valley, are on the turntable's waxing.

Miller, still in a rut, turns two fairly presentable discs, Deillah and Elmer's Tune.

Tommy Dorsey thrills with big band jive on Victor's Loose Lid Special, mainly kicks on this one. Other side spots Frank Sinatra and the Pied Pipers on pop, I Guess I'll Have to Dream the Rest. While mentioning Sinatra, we might add that The Love of Mine hits a new high, comparable to his I'll Never Smile Again.

Columbia's, repressing of Teddy Wilson's Don't Be That Way shows little but the leader's fine piano work along with a fine beat. Billie Holiday sings a strictly-from-Dixie vocal not worth mentioning.

The King Cole Trio do Slow Down and Scotchin' With the Soda on Victor. Slow is not up to Krupa's disc. Scotchin' gives forth with some solid small combo jazz.

Bing Crosby knocks out Who Calls, a good cowboy tune with Bing in best form. Other side finds Brother Bob's Bobcats backing Bing and the Merry Macs on Pale Moon. Two fine sides.

Benny Goodman, in a sweet rut, does From One Love to Another and Anything, sung Tommy Taylor on vocals on both. Taylor is fair, but these two fall flat.

Jan Savitt's Victor platter of La Cinquantaine and I See a Million People is topo. Fine tenor, well balanced arrangements from La a must on your list. Reverse spots adequate vocal by Alan De Witt.

The Andrews Sisters do Boogie-Woogie Pizzy and Nickel Serenade for Decca. Boogie is slightly below par but Serenade finds them back in form.

Maxine Sullivan's St. Louis Blues for Columbia is one of her better recordings. Other side shows Maxine on a smooth vocal on The Hour of Parting.

Bobby Byrne turns out two pops for Decca, It's You Again with a Dot. Claire vocal. Fair big band commercial. Stuart Wade sings the reverse, I Went Out of My Way.

Heated controversy has arisen over A Train. Which will it be, Glen Miller's waxing or Duke Ellington's version? Opinion is greatly divided. Solid senders, however, seem to ride along with The Duke.

If any individuals have to take the rails out of town their best bet would be The Chattanooga Choo Choo, another by Glen Miller.

Your College Presents . . . Studying the Crust of the Earth

By Iwanna Hayworth

GEOLOGY is defined as a science which investigates the structure of the earth, the successive physical changes it has undergone, and the causes which have operated in producing such alterations in the crust of the globe.

The geology department here, as a whole, is preparatory to various universities. Since training is limited to two years of work, the course must also be limited to cover only the lower division. Universities therefore do consider this as a lower division of their work.

In general course 21ab university parallel, the first part is taken up with the geological processes of erosion, volcanism, etc. Along with this, laboratory work is taken to acquaint students with 45 important minerals and all common rocks. In the second semester of this course, the historical part of geology is studied and instruction is given dealing with the evolution of plants and animals through the geological ages by the study of fossils. Students also take the history of mountain building particularly in reference to recent America.

Another course, Geology 1, which is one of the general college courses, deals with a study of meterology, geology and biology of the globe. The first third is handled by Joseph E. Williams; the second by George L. Green, and the last by Kenneth L. Hobbs.

Course 22 is a study of the land forms of the globe and the theories and principles in back of it in the form of history of the growth of mountains and reasons of growth. Instruction is given in topographical maps. Near the end of the course, considerable time is taken up with the study of the history of various national parks of the United States, which, after all, are the geological beauty spots of our fair land.

This semester, a new course, Geography 24, was introduced into this department. This course gives the students, majors in particular, a chance to get practice in such things as the use of survey compasses and practice in mounting and making map projects as well as interpretations of geological structures by the use of such instruments as the planimeter, which is used in the making of map areas. This course can never be taken by more than six or eight students because of the lack of equipment. They not only get practice in the mounting of maps, but the college in turn gets maps mounted by the meantime which can be used in the department.

Along with these and other courses, the students participate in various field trips. The trip which is taken by the 1-a students covers study fossil and geographic structures, and the old coal mines which belonged to Frank Ehrenclark in one time. For their field trip the mineralogy students go down to the Perimenti cement works on the other side of Los Altos. They also visit the mercury mines at Mt. Diablo and the molding sand and clay of Nortonville.

The Pick and Hammer Club, a recognized club of the college, is composed of geology students. It is surprising that a high percentage of graduates from this college who have gone on to Stanford and the University of California come back to the college for the meetings of the club. The group makes an average of three or four trips each semester, and each trip is liable to include anything of interest in geology, such as Mt. Diablo, Mt. Tamalpias, Knoxville (for the collections of garnets, cinnabar, etc). Another trip which may be taken again this semester is a three-day trip to Pinnacles east of Salinas.

Members of this group consider anything of geological interest, including color movies, stills and lectures. Each time the men come to a meeting, they bring in various collections of minerals to be discussed by the others. Three of the members of the club are soldiers approximately 70 miles. They leave early in the morning and really make a day of it. The best of the reports which are made of the trip are kept on file by the department. This trip is taken toward the end of the semester. Another of these field trips is a day-long trip which takes them out past Livermore past Corral Hollow, the region through which the Hetch-Hetchy runs. They

Sports Attendance—Phooey! Band Still May Be Formed

ALTHOUGH most attention to fall sports is paid in tribute to King Football, there are also several other sports carried on at the same time. For instance, soccer, boxing, intramural activities, rifle, fall track, fall basketball, and Women's Athletic Association sports.

Color, as far as the average collegiate (or enne) is concerned, is found only in a sport where bodily contact predominates. It seems that the average student in this college does not attend athletic contests unless the players are continually being knocked down and dragged around as in football. And none too many habitually show up in the stands when football games roll around.

What then of athletes in other sports; from whence comes their support? An average of .00001 spectators attend track meets and basketball games. Basketball has drawn slightly better attendance than track and baseball, but other Ram activities have always been unattended. Phooey!

PEARL SHOWS SYMPATHY

Art "Canvas-back" Pearl has made boxing coach Jim Jensen cry in his beard, Pearl keeps saying in a sotto voice which can be heard from one end of the college cafeteria to the other. Pearl has consistently been a modest lad, and hardly never (please note double negative—Ed.) mentions the fact that he fought in the finals of last semester's intramural boxing tournament. He also contends that he is understanding facts when he says that he may be missed by the present boxing team.

Once again the hope eternal for a band at athletic contests, with main emphasis on football, has cropped up. Doug Craig, Anthony Storti, and Bud Ginther, seizing the bull by the horns, are attempting to organize a college unit. A room for practice sessions has been secured and a probable time for rehearsals has been set at 4 p. m.

HERE'S THAT BIG CHANCE

Craig, Storti, and Ginther have issued a plea for all interested students to leave their names, addresses, telephone numbers, class schedules and the name of the instrument which they play at the office of Dean Edwin C. Browne.

In the event of students eligible for the band being reluctant to sign up, Craig, Storti, and Ginther have asked that non-musical students of the college resort to some good old Nazi fifth columning and betray their friends by leaving information concerning them at Dean Browne's office.

WHY NOT?

The triumvirate, Craig, Storti, and Ginther, incorporated, have a problem on their respective minds. Why, they ask, doesn't the college give out awards for musical activities? They just happen to be wondering.

The State game is now past, the score is permanently in the books of the gods of football. The next problem to confront us will be getting over the high hurdle presented by the Los Angeles City College Cubs. There happens to be a little 150-pound scatback by the name of Jackie Fellows, who plays quite a bit of football for the Cubs. For the Rams to stop the Cubs they must stop Fellows, and that happens to be no easy task. Cherchez Li Fellows!

Tony Piazza, Star Distance Man, Joins Sweet's College Track Team

By Nick Barbarotto

Coach Russ Sweet welcomed Tony Piazza, rated as the greatest distance runner to come out of San Francisco, with open arms last week as the ex-Balboa track star registered at the college.

Contrary to all advance notices that Piazza was to attend San Jose State College, his appearance on the campus was well greeted by members of the Ram track squad.

Piazza was one of the most sought after athletes on the coast because of an impressive high school record. While competing for Balboa last year, he led the Buccaneers to the city track championship. His performance in the city meet was one that will be well remembered. BROKE MILE RECORD

The distance ace entered both the mile run and the 880 in that meet and romped home an easy winner twice. He toured the four lap event in 4:29.6 seconds to break the city record that was previously held by Gene Clarke of Lowell.

Piazza then came back later in the afternoon to win the half mile event and equaled Grover Klemmer's mark of 2:00.8 seconds.

FINISHED FOURTH IN P.A.A.

Piazza's best time for the mile run, however, was not in the city meet but in the Pacific Association Meet at Berkeley where he competed against college stars. He finished in fourth place but turned in the remarkable time of 4:25.9 seconds, fastest mile run in the entire nation for a high school student. The time was the second fastest ever run by a high school boy, topped only by Les McMitchell's 4:24.2 seconds effort while he was attending an eastern school.

The addition of Piazza to the track squad lends to strengthen it tremendously, and Coach Sweet expects to have a possible championship team next semester.

Intramural

Free Throw Tournament Opens Today

Competition in the intramural basketball free-throwing tournament will begin this afternoon at 3 p. m. in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, announced last week.

Any student of the college may enter the tournament simply by reporting to the gym at the time announced, since no signups are required. A total of 25 shots will be taken by each contestant from various angles designated on the floor, in a series of five, and the person sinking the most through the mesh will be declared the winner.

Gold Medal For First

A gold medal will be given for first place and a silver one for the runner-up position. The winner, if belonging to any club or fraternity, will help aid his team in securing points for the team trophy, which is awarded at the end of the semester.

Basketball Starts October 2

Basketball, first major sport on the intramural calendar, will start Thursday, October 2. Entries must be handed in to Brady personally by Friday, September 26, as the schedule has yet to be drawn up and because of the fact that the varsity basketball squad will be using the gym, making it necessary to be concluded at a specified time.

Last semester's free-throwing winner, Al Woo, will be defending his laurels against many deadeye artists who have been practicing in the gym in anticipation of displacing the champ. At present, anyone who enters, has a reasonably good chance of stealing the honors.

Strong competition is reassured from the All Americans, who have won the title twice in succession and from the Newman Club, Stats and Eagles, a team composed of former Washington High School players. Already in the fold of the Newman Club are Dale Goodyear, former Balboa High star and Jack Batiaff, former Commerce forward.

Newman Club Activities

Volleyball will follow immediately after basketball has been completed, Brady said. The Newman Club, which will be trying for its third straight triumph, is the pre-tournament favorite as only one man was lost via graduation.

All freshmen students are urged to form teams and enter intramural activities, since the program is held in the students' behalf, Brady added.

Schedule For Boxing Team Still Unformed

Because of the short semester this year, and the changing of coaches, Jim Jensen for Joe Lantagne, the boxing class has not had sufficient time in which to line up its schedule.

Coach Jensen feels, however, that in a short time the boys will be ready for the intramural bouts. The finals of the Associated Men Students fights will be held in the Coliseum Bowl, where they made such a great name last semester. All of these bouts, the intramurals, and the finals, will be held before the Christmas vacation.

Although practice has not officially started, many of the boys will be, or are already, working out in other gymnasiums to get in shape.

"As yet, we are not sure who the other bouts will be scheduled with, as only Salinas Junior College, and Modesto Junior College have boxing teams," said Jensen.

Signups are still being taken in the Monday and Wednesday classes at 1 o'clock, but the boxing classes on Monday and Wednesday at 2 o'clock are now filled to the quota of 40 students.

Jensen is doing a fine job of organizing the boys, and with a little time he will build them to the high

Women's Athletics

Coaches To Tell Women All Football Pointers In Rallies

To give women students a better knowledge of football, Coach Lee Eisan, and Louis "Dutch" Conlan, college co-ordinator of educational management, will be instructors during a series of three rallies tomorrow, Thursday and Friday for women students only, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the Women's Athletic Association, announced last week.

The rally tomorrow will be held in the women's gymnasium at 1 p.m., Miss Kraul said, and added that all physical education classes meeting at this hour will be excused to go to the rally.

The second of the series—Thursday, September 25, will be at 11 a.m. and will also be held in the women's gym. The third, Friday, September 26, will meet in Room 48 at 12 noon, according to present schedules.

Rally Last Year

"WAA sponsored an all women rally last year before the football season, and found it very successful, this year," Miss Kraul said, "we decided to go one better and have three rallies. This will give all the women a chance to attend.

"Unfortunately we were unable to have the rally before the season officially opened," she added, "but in this way the women will have a chance to see how much they know, or rather how much they don't know, at the game Saturday with State College, and will be better prepared to attend the football appreciation class offered by the WAA, and the Women's and men's physical education departments."

The men's department has just as much to do with these rallies as the women do, Miss Kraul explained, because it is the coaches in the department who are giving out the information, and it is the men players who want to be appreciated for that broken field run.

Both Coaches Eisan and Conlan will be on hand, it was announced, and will give chalk-talks explaining such football terms as holding and clipping, tactics used by the players, and will show by use of diagrams just what the men on the field are attempting to do.

Although the rally is primarily for women students, Miss Kraul said that any faculty members who wish to know more about the game are welcome to come to any of the rallies.

To Be Quiz Program

"After the women see the game Saturday, they may save the wear and tear on their escorts' nerves by saving their questions to ask Professor Conlan when we answer any questions that may arise concerning the game. Unfortunately," Miss Kraul revealed, "no money will be awarded for prize questions or correct answers."

Terzian Sparkles As Team Downs State 7 to 6 In Opening Game; Hoffman Blocks Last Minute Goal

Sparked by hard-hitting Armand "Turk" Terzian, a spirited Ram football squad eked out a seven to six victory over San Francisco State in the seventh autumnal meeting of the two teams last Saturday night at Seals Stadium.

Terzian's running sparkled, especially in the first half of the contest, as he clawed and fought his way through the State line 23 times to gain a total of 101 yards for an average of slightly better than four yards per attempt. Terzian, himself, ran for almost three times as many yards as the entire State backfield, which could only penetrate the line of the Red and White for 49 yards.

Things looked very bad for the Ram, when on the first scrimmage of the game Bill Horner, outstanding State threat, rambled for 14 yards and a first down on the Gators' 39 yard line. The college defense then tightened, and State made only two yards on the next three plays, and was forced to kick.

Play then see-sawed back and forth for the rest of the initial quarter, with the Red and White gradually beginning an offensive momentum.

The final minute of play in the first half saw the Rams put together a series of ground-eating gains, a State penalty, an inadvertent fumble play, and a plunge by Terzian to ring up six points. Terzian also place-kicked the extra point.

In a State-controlled second half, the Rams, after a State Chinn to Lorber touchdown pass, fought back bitterly and finally clinched the contest when Bob Hoffman blocked a last-minute field goal attempt by the Gators.

Post Mortem

Saturday Night Game Passing In Review

Resplendent with huge white numbers on both the front and back of their red jerseys, and easily recognizable from every darkened corner of the field, the Rams were reminiscent of the Southern California Trojans under the synthetic sunshine of Seals Stadium last Saturday night.

The longest ground gainer of the night was made by Bob Christen, cotton topped Ram fullback, who rambled 45 yards from his own 15-yard line to the State 40, where he was finally dragged down from behind.

Armand "Turk" Terzian proved himself to be the best ball packer of the Rams, repeatedly driving hard off tackle for huge gains through the on-charging State forward wall.

Captain Bob Hufnagle and Bob Hoffman, guard and tackle, respectively, saved the game for the Red and White on two occasions in the fourth quarter. After State had scored its initial six-points and was attempting the all important conversion, it was Hufnagle who sliced through and blocked the kick. Hoffman also knifed through to block a field goal attempt by the Purple and Gold, catching the ball in mid air with his stomach, and falling to the greensward with his huge frame smothering the pigskin.

A stellar game was turned in by Ed Cassidy, Ram left end, who looked like the fifth man in the State backfield by stopping many State offensive drives cold, knocking to the turf the blockers who were leading the plays.

In the dressing room at halftime, interested onlookers were Vic Ramus, halfback from the University of San Francisco, and Johnny Honnert, Ram fullback of last year.

Beaming with great satisfaction as to the outcome of the game, Coach Ed Eisan remarked, "We looked good in the first half and terrible in the second. The squad needs brushing up on the passing and blocking assignments, and that will be stressed in practice this week."

Junior Varsity Resumes Practice Under Al Eisan

Under the tutelage of bespectacled lamb coach, Al Eisan, former LaVerne College halfback of recent years, the college junior varsity football squad has been practicing daily on the Ram field along with the varsity.

The squad is composed of newcomers, who, in the estimation of the varsity are learning the intricacies of the complicated double wing formation. At present, only two men have warranted promotion to the varsity, namely George Stokes, a guard, and Red Giovia, a center, who both played their prep football at Mission High School.

Shinkickers Fight To Make First String

With practice really in full swing now, and the men trying their best to dig in and earn the right to play on the first string, the soccer team appears well on its way to a successful season, Jim Jensen, soccer coach, indicated last week.

"The boys are out there every day practicing from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m.," Jensen said, "and are looking forward to their three biggest games this semester against Stanford, California, and San Jose State.

"The team shows marvelous spirit," he added, "and with a few of the breaks we stand a fine chance of providing an upset or two."

Signups Still Open For Rifle Team Spots

Because the first meet isn't until November 1, signups are still being taken for the rifle team, Jim Juri, president of the rifle club announced, and all those interested should see either Juri or Myron Pierce in Room 30.

Practice will be every Monday and Wednesday from 9:00 to 10:30 a.m., Juri said, and each member's score will be kept at these practices.

The team will be chosen from these scores, Juri disclosed, with the eight men with the highest scores being put on the first team, and the next eight with the next highest scores being put on the second team.

Intramural Entries Due Sept. 26

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, September 26, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for basketball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Please enter the following team in the basketball round robin that is to be conducted as part of the intramural program of sport activity. I have read the intramural program of sports as it appeared in The Guardsman, September 12, with special attention to the rules and regulations, awards, and point system.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Old Members Asked To Aid Organization Meeting Oct. 1

On Wednesday, October 1 at 4 p.m., Alpha Gamma Sigma, college scholarship society, under the leadership of Alice Cooper, faculty adviser, will hold the first meeting of this semester to consider the plans of the group for the year. The place of meetings is as yet undecided, Miss Cooper said.

To be considered at the meeting is the election of officers, dues for pins, plans for coaching. Entertainment will be given.

Scheduled for this semester are four meetings. First, a reception for new members which is to be followed by a meeting of new and old members later in the year. The final get-together is a Christmas Party which will be in December.

The following is a list of new members who are eligible to come to the meeting:

Virginia Allin, Ruth E. Altsehuler, Nadine Arnson, Clarence Ashman, George A. Baffice, Clifford Bauer, John L. Begon, Nina Lou Bell, Grace Bernhardt, Harold Bobbel, Ruth Breuer, Beverly Brown, Mary Burke.

Mrs. Stella Carter, Jack A. Cederlund, Dora Chew, Alta Clisbee, Helen Clark, Theodore Conde, George Cowie, Arthur A. Crofts, Rose D. Donabedian, Dale M. Dwelley, Rita Elissanibaru, Edmund Ellis, Viviane Emmal, Frances Fabris, Roberta Falen, Evelyn Fong, Marie Fong, Anita Fridley, Chiyo Fujino, Lilly Fukui.

Robert G. Garner, Doris Garnick, Anne Gillespie, Edith Gustafson, Ella M. Haines, Charles Hall, Daniel Harmon, Edith Handry, Harold Hillman, Mamoru Hirota, Louise Horne, R. Hufnagh, Borrie Hyman, Kayo Ieki, Harold Gunter.

Margaret M. Kaneke, Lily Kasuija, Norma Keddie, Myata Kimigo, James E. King, Daniel C. Koblick, Dixie Kolsum, Lucille Landresse, Nancy T. Leamon, Patricia Lee, Theas D. Lindborg.

Philip Maas, Carol Machol, Geraldine C. Magee, Clifford W. Marcus, Joseph P. Mark, Catherine L. Markovich, Lillian Martini, June Matsuda, Marleen McCray, Donald Michaelian, Fredericka Mornement, Iris A. Muller.

Lorraine Nalpantian, Mary J. O'Berst, Richard D. Odabashian, Elma Oddstad, Alice Ota, Robert Pedigo, Henry H. Pierce, Anne Pilgrim, Marion Porsch, Edna E. Price, Vivian R. Prueshold, Harriet Ralston, Ruth Rehbock, Marie Richardson, William S. Rybensky.

Leon Shafer, Herbert Silverman, Barbara Stahmann, Betty J. Stringfield, Frank Strazzarino, Bernice M. Strube, Jean Stuart, Robert Tomasetti, John Traverso, Doris Tunheim, Audrey V. Turner, Adele Vidal.

William L. Weatherly, Irene Weed, Lillian Weiss, Lloyd Wellingham, Shirley Woltzen, Orville I. Wright.

Aviation

C.P.T. Course Begins Oct. 1

Ten students registered at the University of San Francisco but attending the college aviation courses have been selected to enter the flight training course under Captain George D. Richards, for the fall semester.

The secondary or advanced Civilian Pilot Training program under Major Richards will begin approximately October 1.

Procedure of training will include preliminary flying of the 225 HP Waco in which they will have about forty hours training. The ten flyers will learn all the acrobatics that is taught in Army primary training courses and will also use identical equipment with that utilized by primary course schools over the country.

A feature of the new program will be the uniforms which will be purchased by the men enrollees themselves. Civilian Pilot Training insignias will decorate the uniforms.

Upon soloing the Waco ship, the men will be entitled to wear a pair of gold wings sewed on their shirt and jacket.

Upon graduation, these men may enter the Army Air Corps as flying cadets with credit for primary training behind him. They will then enter into basic flying fundamentals.

The college aviation course has sent flying cadets to all portions of the country. West Point of the Air and the U. S. Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Florida are two bases that hold a number of college aviation major graduates.

One of the most interesting things of the whole department from an outsider's viewpoint is the varied assortment of fossils which have been gathered from all over the world. Some of them are one-half billion years old, while some are only 500 million. Late last year a student, Bob White, succeeded in getting a total collection of a former student of Stanford University which included many valuable publications and shelves of labeled specimens. Another very interesting fossil is a limestone block in which are the tracks of a dinosaur. This was found by one of the professors in the Connecticut River Valley in the southern part of Massachusetts, brought out in pieces then cemented together. It is also very interesting to note that at one time scientists thought that the dinosaur was a bird.

Speaking of collections, there is a very modern collection of minerals, 280 of them, for the geology students to look at and to use as comparisons. Sounds interesting, eh what?

NJCJ Debating Confab To Be Here In October

This college will play host to a convention of Northern California Junior College debating societies some time within the first two weeks of October, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, college instructor of forensics.

Purpose of the convention will be for the various junior colleges to set up their questions and discuss plans for competition, Luckmann said.

This is the first attempt at a debating league within junior colleges. Its main purpose will be to get away from the leagues dominated by the National Collegiate Debating Society, he said.

Case Of Missing Records

Summer Blackout Shrouds Music In Mystery Disappearance Act

By Nancy Nazle

Anyone seeing a box of photograph records is asked to pick them up, dead or alive, and return them to the Associated Student office. Records were purchased last year to enable students to dance at mixers and to enjoy music before rallies, but alas and alack, they are no more!!

When the officers began to collect properties needed for the dance last Friday in the Women's gymnasium, everything turned up, except the records. Sixty of them, at that.

For this reason an orchestra was mustered into service to provide music for dancers.

Just what happened to the records remains an unsolved mystery. One of the peace officers training course could very well unfold. Perhaps they went on an extended vacation and haven't gotten word that the ASSFJC need them, or perhaps again, they were "borrowed" by some student to use over the vacation, and said student was "caught in the draft" and therefore could not return them. Maybe, and most possibly, they are hidden in some undiscovered vault throughout the college walls.

Last time they were used in the women's gymnasium for a mixer dance they were returned to the student office. That much is certain, but from there throughout the summer—blackout!

Living students, who wish to have something to jive to in the future, should form a posse and search the grounds, the classrooms, and every dark corner in the school. Then, perhaps, the missing records would turn up.

The BMI-ASCAP tiff has been ended, and as many of the records were among those banned, they may not have been notified. Notification of this might solve the situation. Only time will tell.

Since the search first began, records of all kinds have turned up. Music for physical education classes, such as folk dance music, which were lying inactive in the women's gym. Music for physical education classes, such as folk dance music, which were lying inactive in the women's gym.

Since the search first began, records of all kinds have turned up. Music for physical education classes, such as folk dance music, which were lying inactive in the women's gym. There are records, but not quite as much as regular dance music should be. However, if students wish to dance folk dances like many people do in the east, these will be sufficient.

Description of the missing records are as follows: dark coloring, round in shape, and with many different aliases. —Rhumba Cardi," "Green Eyes," and many others.

Anything answering such a description, the ASSFJC officers beg, urge, and implore that it comes back alive.

Purses Found—Owners Should See Dean Dougherty

Purses containing money, keys and other valuables, and several with no marks of identification have been found in the college, according to Dean Margaret Dougherty.

Students should inquire about these

Dean Gives Interview Time To All Freshman Women

To discuss their college program and future plans, Dean Margaret Dougherty would like to interview every freshman woman student in her office, Room 125.

She would like to see them on any morning between 10 o'clock and noon. Although Miss Dougherty only wants to interview the freshman women now, she will probably ask to see the rest of the women students at a later date.

Miss Dougherty added that even though a student has already inquired for such property, it is advisable to do so again.

Building Progress

Priorities Interrupt Expansion

Because of the great demand for steel by the national government in the present emergency, the college campus will not be enhanced with any new buildings to take care of the overcrowded college this year, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, said.

The Board of Education has received word from the Works Progress Administration who in turn received a letter from Washington, D.C. saying that steel will no longer be available for school buildings for the remainder of the year," Mohr added.

He continued by saying, "If an order could possibly be passed through, it would probably be the only one, and the building that was started on the college premises would be left standing, to become worn by time, wind, and weather until the steel shortage is finally overcome.

"Because of this obstacle, the students of the college will have to bear with us, and in time, our campus will be built to its full extent, and be able to fulfill all registration requirements of the college," he continued.

Five Year Weather Studies Help Army Engineers

HANOVER, N.H.—(ACP)—Weather studies recorded over the last five years by Shattuck observatory at Dartmouth College have proven of great practical value for army engineers designing a proposed $500,000 airport near here.

Every hour for five years the observatory, directed by Prof. Richard H. Goddard, has recorded the wind direction and velocity. These facts were analyzed and recorded, for which the army is now thankful.

When Professor Goddard sought modernization of the observatory equipment he told college officials wind measurements possible with automatic recorders would be invaluable if anyone undertook to build an airport in the vicinity of Hanover. He admits, however, that at the time he was theorizing and is as surprised as anyone else that the government is considering the project.

Step Rally To Determine Future Schedule, Plans

Future rallies of the college will be based on the result of the step rally held prior to the State game last Friday, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, said last week.

Turnout for the rally was excellent, the committee said, and plans for future ones will be more inclusive, with outside speakers, entertainment and things of interest for the students of the college.

"The purpose of a rally is for creation of college spirit. Thanks to the work of the committee, and Merrill Steele, our head yell leader, the spirit has grown some 150 per cent," Mohorovich said.

The next student rally has been scheduled for Thursday, October 24, the day previous to the Sacramento game. Following will be the rally for the San Mateo game, scheduled for November 14, according to the calendar released by the registrar.

Class Cutting Penalties Prove Promptness Pays

Mary Jane Learnard today released the following explanation of cutting, and the penalties thereof, in order to enlighten students unfamiliar with the system.

Cuts equal to the number of times the class meets each week, not necessarily consecutive, results in the expulsion of the student from the class. Reinstatement may be procured only through the instructor. If the person again cuts the same number of times he is permanently dropped from the class. Appeal and appearance before the Administrative Committee is the only recourse for students who then wish to continue with their classes.

Some instructors have supplemented the attendance regulations by inaugurating a system of counting late entrances to class as absences, in the ratio of three to one (in most cases). With this system nine late entrances to the classroom will constitute the allowed three absences, placing the student on probation in a course. Nine more late entrances will prevent any further enrollment in that course; re-entrance subject to the decision of the aforementioned committee.

Reading Test Experiments Lead To New Course

NEW YORK CITY—(ACP)—An experiment in reading tests undertaken this year at Barnard College by Gerda McHugh of the department of psychology has resulted in introduction of a new course for next year.

The course, "Mental Adjustment Laboratory," will be conducted by McHugh. It will have no academic credit. McHugh said it will include training in reading skills, in which students will improve in their adjustment to problems of mental health, educational achievement, and vocational or avocational guidance.

He added it may include an analysis, by objective tests and standard scales, of the aptitudes, interests, attitudes, methods of study and other traits of each student, with a view to providing information that may be practically useful to each individual.

short road to riches, and plodding along the straight and narrow. A goal may be reached by this longer route —it is a more stable, tangible, and dependable goal, once achieved.

Not to be overlooked, of course, be taken to mean that training in colleges is a requisite for being able to work in 1941; but it may serve, in an allegorical sense, to point out that false prosperity is not to be trusted in place of good old, efficient, rational, anticipation. Let's not allow ourselves to get so far into our mythical paradise that we may not return once more to earth when the occasion so demands.

Library Gets Supply Of Old German Books

A supply of old German books has been given indirectly to the college library, Marcus Skarstedt, head librarian, announced yesterday in his office.

Skarstedt said that there was no specific reason for the secrecy of the donor and added that he would be known to all in due time.

The books contain the works of Goethe, Leeing, Schiller, and others.

Numerous volumes have been added to the shelves during the number months; many of them are to work in class.

The college library, on the third floor at the south end of the building, is open from 9 o'clock to 5 o'clock daily, Skarstedt said. The book collection, he added, has increased considerably over that of previous semesters. Also a new addition, contributions were recently made of geology department interest in particular.

AMS

Fire Rally Put State Game On Ice

As a prelude to last Saturday night's football game against San Francisco State, the annual Associated Men Students bonfire-rally was held last Friday night on the college archery range, adjacent to the women's gymnasium.

The original list of speakers for the program included Head Football Coach Lee Eisan and Dean Maddox, local radio announcer, more commonly known as "Budds". Neither Eisan nor Maddox, however, were able to appear at the function.

Jack Gaddy, assistant to Eisan, spoke in lieu of his colleague, while Doug Montell, eminent bay area sportscaster, ably filled the gap left by the inability of Maddox to appear.

Other speakers at the rally were Tom Wilson, faculty adviser to the AMS and varsity basketball coach; Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser; Russ Sweet, coach of the college track team, and Jim Jensen, coach of the soccer and boxing teams.

Acquiring pep for the State game was the main function of the evening and preparing yay activities fell to the leadership of Mel Steele, newly-elected head yell leader of the college, and his two assistants, Don Taylor and Don Cole.

Steele, Taylor and Cole led the 250 men in attendance through the repertoire of college yells, in which students and bonfire waxed hot. The final minutes of the get-together found the entire gathering forming one huge serpentine and marching around the waning pile of hot coals and burning wood in an impromptu obeisance to the gods of football's Valhalla.

Refreshments, doughnuts and ice cream were served by members of the catering committee of the hotel division, led by Bud Laurenson.

Vol. XIII FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1941 No. 5

By Francis Chrisman

AT a time when a nation is inactively engaged in a war, and is heading toward actual engagement in that war, it is well to thrash out all issues which tend to create any attitude other than that of unity among the people. Naturally all such issues now existent cannot be discussed here; but one may at least be considered.

The question of isolation as opposed to foreign entanglement is certainly a vital issue, certainly it is current, and certainly it requires attention.

People of the United States are divided in their beliefs concerning the good and bad of isolationism. But much of the trouble with those who oppose it lies in their misconception of its basic interpretations.

WHAT'S ISOLATION?

Isolation is a good old-fashioned word which puts forth the meaning of keeping away from others and keeping to one's self. But isolation as used in the twentieth century American sense means keeping away from those foreign entanglements which will lead to actual physical warfare for our people.

This seems like a simple enough action, keeping to one's self. However in the modern world it is impossible. So! The attempt must be to continue relations with others while at the same time taking care to forego any actions which will lead to more serious things.

ISOLATIONISTS FEAR INVOLVEMENT

Now, it is not that the isolationists oppose the cause of the English people in their opposition to Hitler and his tyranny; it is that they fear our own involvement. Thus we may approve of their fight, (England's) and in our fortunate geographical position we may aid in this fight—yet proponents of the isolation theory hold out little hope for sensible results should the U. S. send another AEF to Europe.

This opinion is held for the following reasons:

1. According to England's own admission the use of American troops would be merely a waste of men. Hitler's horrible opposition has plenty of fighting material. (That is human fighting material.)

2. Again, by England's own admission, we may aid sufficiently by sending mechanized arms and supplies. For reference note Churchill's "give us the arms and we'll finish the job" speech.

3. Now what is the sense of killing off thousands of American men, perhaps millions, to gain a victory which is desirable in the most urgent way, when we may accomplish the very same end by less bloodshed, and much more to be desired, manner?

OPPOSITION LISTS ITEMS

Opposition to this line of reasoning mentions some of the following items:

1. Hitler and the Nazi methods are a menace to the American way of life.

2. The U. S. will ultimately be attacked, in an economic if not in a militaristic attempt, by a victorious Germany.

3. It behooves our nation, therefore, to insure a Nazi defeat by doing everything in our power to gain that defeat.

4. Because of the necessity of using the sea lanes to Britain, and because of German opposition in this regard, we must have convoys; and convoys mean shooting, and shooting means war.

5. So, actively engaged in warfare, we may as well go whole hog or nothing. In this way we may reach victory sooner than if the whole affair had never occurred.

Now this is not too bad reasoning, but the conclusion reached is not necessarily correct.

Even if the admission is made that convoys are necessary, the belief that we should, as a result, get into every phase of the battle is not true.

LET ENGLISH FIGHT

It is to our advantage to let the British Empire do our fighting (assuming it is our fighting that they are doing), and convoys may be used without necessitating involvement.

Consulting the map of the world it may be seen that a convoy system operating from the east coast of the U. S. northward to Greenland and Iceland would constitute the use of convoys in a much safer capacity than if they were used straight across the Atlantic to England.

From these northern points the Royal Navy could take over the job.

In fact, we're doing that now, and things aren't going so badly.

Care must be taken to realize that

Soph Leader

George Coart, newly elected high sophomore class president, looks to a gala high sophomore week next December. Among the various things planned, he has devised a new system by which the sophomore sweetheart will be elected this semester.

Soph President Coart Plans Class Revisions

Announcing that he has several new ideas that he hopes the Associated Students of the college will approve, George Coart, newly elected high sophomore class president, assumed office this week.

Elected with Coart were Charles Howe and Bob McCoy, tied for the Vice-presidency, and Secretary Lois Steinhart, who have pledged their full support to the sophomore leader.

Most of his immediate plans had to do with the high soph week in December, but he assures the students who elected him to office that he will do his best to uphold their confidence in him throughout his term.

New System Planned

A new system of electing the upper class sweetheart was foremost in his thoughts. He intends to select a committee of four or five high freshmen who will name a dozen women students as candidates for the honor. From this number all but two will be eliminated, and finally the sweetheart will be chosen by the vote of the entire soph class.

Soph Plans Tentative

He also reports that tentative plans are for the soph formal to be held December 13 at the California Country Club, climaxing soph week. Any suggestion from the students about this occasion will be welcomed in the student office, Coart stated.

He is planning to hold several regular meetings of his class for discussion on various topics of importance to them.

Low Soph Officers To Hold First Meeting Next Week

Newly elected officers of the low sophomore class for the fall semester will hold their first meeting early next week.

Mel Dropo, president; Kay Allen, vice-president, and Jim Duryea, secretary, will meet to map out their program for the ensuing semester. They will discuss plans for the low sophomore dance which is to be given on the evening of November 17.

Further suggestions to be taken up at the meeting will be a roller skating party which will be open to the students of the college, and a picnic which would be held some time in the near future. The skating party, if it receives the approval of the Social Committee, would be held in Pacific City, according to Dropo.

"My assistant officers, and I will put our best efforts toward making this semester a successful one for the low sophomore class," Dropo said.

College Clubs Prohibited After-Dark Meetings In Building Without Permit

All clubs desiring to hold meetings in the college building after closing hours are asked to fill out a request for the use of the room and present it to Edward Redford, building superintendent, in Room 146.

No club or college organization will be admitted to the building unless it has complied with the rules and made previous arrangements for a room, Redford said.

Arrangement Aids Janitors

Main purpose behind this measure, he said, was to help the janitorial staff of the college who work at night and must plan their work schedule.

A request was also made to all students to vacate the building by 5:30 p.m. every afternoon, Redford added.

This is the ruling of the Board of Education as there are no instructors in the building at that time.

Necessary Measure

"We realize this measure will be hard on East Bay students having evening classes, but the rule must be enforced," he added. "We cannot have students in the building at this time, however, when there are no faculty members present."

Registrar

First Midterm Period To End October 10; Attendance Committee Issues Statement Of Policy

First midterm period will end the week of October 10, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. Examination schedules will be arranged by individual instructors.

The same system used last semester, that of sending an explanatory letter concerning grades to the parents or guardian of all new students, will be used again this semester. All students will report to their adviser, however, Tuesday, October 21 at 11 a.m. to receive grades and deficiency notices.

Other Dates Set

Other midterm dates have been set also. November 14 will terminate the second mid-term period and finals have been set from January 19 to January 28 inclusive.

Last day to drop courses without receiving a grade of incomplete is Friday, October 24, Miss Learnard warned.

Tardiness Equals Cuts

Some instructors have begun to count late entrances into the classrooms as absences in a ratio of three to one, added Miss Learnard.

Nine such tardy notices would equal three full cuts in a three-unit course. Students are warned to observe carefully the starting time of their classes to avoid cutting by tardy attendance.

Requirement Out; Classics Popular

CLINTON, N. Y.—(ACP)—The Greeks are popular at Hamilton College.

Recently the 129-year-old institution decided to inaugurate a new method of awarding an A.B. degree. The new method eliminated Greek or Latin from the course. Prof. Donald B. Durham of the Classics department anticipated a sharp decline in enrollees.

However, 34 students elected to include the course. A year ago only 20 enrolled.

Lost, Found Department Moved To Room 148

Lost articles should be turned into Room 148, where a lost and found department has been permanently established, according to Edward Redford, faculty member in charge of building supervision.

Several automobile and house keys which were found this semester and last semester, are waiting for their owners in the new lost and found department.

"Students have been turning in found articles to the registrar's office and looking for their lost articles there. The new department has been established in 148 to keep the registrar's office solely for business."

Coats, Hats, Umbrellas Accepted In Check Room

Coats, hats and umbrellas will be the only articles accepted in the check room from now on, according to Claude D. Silva, check room director.

"There are no facilities for handling books or packages," Silva pointed out.

An average of five coats a night have been uncoiled for. As there is no way to lock the check room this necessitates the removal from the check room any articles not called for by 4:30 p.m., Silva revealed.

Working in the same capacity as in previous semesters, the attendance committee, under the chairmanship of Tom Gabbert today issued a statement of policy to be followed during the current semester.

The statement, issued through President Archibald J. Cloud's office, stressed the fact that, although no new rules had been put into effect, strict emphasis would be made on present rulings. Attendance requirements currently in effect include the following:

Attendance Requirements

1. Absence from any course for a period of one week, not necessarily consecutive, places a student on probation. The responsibility of keeping account of these absences rests solely with the student.

2. If a student's absences are equal to two weeks' attendance in any course, the student will be permanently dropped from the course and will receive a final grade of F; however, should the student feel his absences were legitimate, he has the privilege of appealing to the attendance committee for permission to reenter the class.

3. The departure of a student from the college without an official leave of absence will entail a final grade of F in all courses.

Leave of Absence Necessary

Stressing the fact that a great many students, in leaving the college, fail to secure the proper leave of absence, the committee made known the fact that the leave could be obtained from the Registrar's office with a minimum of effort.

Headed by Gabbert, the attendance group has as members Margaret Dougherty, Sue Menke, Mary Perry, Ward Nichols and all faculty members.

Students of the college desirous of contacting the attendance committee are advised to see Gabbert during his regular office hours.

Haesloop Nominates Committee Heads

Chairmen of the Associated Students' standing committees, were nominated this week by Harry Haesloop, Associated Students' president. Approval of the nominations will be forthcoming next week.

Proposed as head of the Welfare Committee for the coming semester is Bob Lindeman. The purpose of his committee is to undertake the direction of any activities not specifically designated to other bodies within the student government, that will be for the welfare of the college.

George Coart, High Sophomore president, was suggested as chairman of the Internal Publicity committee by Haesloop. The duties of this committee are to publicize all college events and activities within the college and of interest to the college students.

Postal Heads Finance Again

Bill Postal, last semester's Finance Committee chairman has been asked by Haesloop to undertake the duties of chairman again this semester.

The duties of this committee will be to supervise and control the allocation and expenditure of all Associated Student funds, subject to the approval of the Executive Council.

Howe For Judiciary

The Judiciary Committee may be guided by Charles Howe, newly named chairman.

The Judiciary Committee is the tribunal of the Associated Students and as such hears the cases of misconduct that occur in the classroom or on the campus, and all cases concerning misuse of Associated Student cards.

The president of the Associated Students shall give public notice of his intention to appoint the chairman and members of standing committees, at least one week previous to the time that appointments are to be made, according to Article III of the Constitution of the Associated Students.

Rallies

Suicide Yell Secret Of Pep

A sensational "suicide" yell is being imported from China this year by Cheer Leader Mel Steele to really put some pep into the Associated Students at future yell sessions.

Steele says that he has contacted a Chinese student of the college (name not disclosed) who claims to have knowledge of a yell that caused 28 suicides in his native land in one day. It was supposed to have been conducted on some junks on the China Sea, following which came the self-inflicted deaths.

The fellow, it seems at this time, is a bit reluctant about disclosing the yell, but Steele is confident that he will come around, and is planning on using the yell as a prominent factor in his plans for a super rally season.

New Routines, Yells Aim Of Rally Group

New and different routines and yells are being perfected for the coming year by the college rally commission, with Steve Mohorvich, rally commissioner and Mel Steele, cheer leader, in charge.

The commission has an abundance of excellent talent now, according to Mohorvich, and all members are working in full cooperation with one another to provide an outstanding year. Others on the group are Tom Chavalas, George Coart, newly elected high sophomore president; Alden Smith, faculty adviser to the committee, and Don Cole and Don Taylor, new assistant cheer leaders.

Chavalas Key Man

Chavalas is the key man of the commission and is overflowing with talent and new ideas. He is a graduate of Technical High School in Oakland, where he originated three new yells and four new songs, which are still sensations, and he is now working on some new ones for the college, he intimated soon.

Formerly Associated Student president at the University of California, Smith is putting into practice some of the knowledge he gained through that experience.

Fresh Praised

Mohorvich reported Wednesday that he is "extremely pleased with the new freshman class," and that it is the most "hep" fresh group to enter the college so far."

He urged all students to attend every game, and when the contest is held in Seals Stadium to sit in the lower stands.

New Reading Course Surveys 100 Best Books

ST. PAUL, MINN.—(ACP)—Freshmen at the College of St. Thomas are offered this year a reading course based on the "100 best books" idea.

Men placing in the highest quarter of the class in aptitude tests are allowed to enroll in a discussion class for study of works by Homer, Aesychylus, Plato, Aristotle and St. Augustine in their English translations.

Administration Investigates, Finds Instruction Impossible This Year; Hope Expressed For Spring Practice

Despite the fact that the administration is united in the idea of offering a course in band instruction, certain obstacles prevent the offering of such a course until the spring semester, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

"The matter has been under consideration for some time," President Cloud said. "The administration has gone over the problem minutely. We are just as enthusiastic about a band for the college as the students are."

Funds have already been appropriated to supply sheet music, President Cloud remarked. Possible places for the band to practice in the building have been studied.

"Music is enjoyable, but it can be distracting when played next to a crowded class room," President Cloud said. "We considered using one of the laboratories in the basement, but that has been required for use far into the afternoon.

"It appears, therefore, that the gym would be the the only place remaining in which a band might practice," he explained.

The idea of having a Saturday class was discussed, but it was found that many students worked on Saturdays, and other personal matters demonstrated that the plan would not be practical.

Besides the lack of a suitable practice place the difficulty of getting an instructor for the course at this date would prevent any action until spring, President Cloud said.

"We are encouraged to think," he said, "that we shall be able to offer credit courses in instrumental music instruction at the immediate start of the spring semester."

Last semester the Board of Education provided new instruments for the band. A lack of student interest because credit was not offered for the course led to its temporary abandonment.

AWS Leaders Meet Tuesday To Plan Semester Events

Associated Women Students officers will hold a meeting next Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock to make plans for the coming AWS events of the semester, according to Margaret Dougherty, dean of women. The meeting will be in Dean Dougherty's office.

The tea which the AWS sponsored earlier in the semester was typical of the gatherings which the association plans to sponsor in the future, Dean Dougherty said.

Already planned, however, is the barbecue which will be held in collaboration with the WAA, at Sigmund Stern Grove, Wednesday, October 8. The purpose of the barbecue will be to provide an opportunity for new members to get acquainted with present members, and to initiate new members of both organizations, the AWS and the WAA. Games, singing and vocal solos are expected to constitute the entertainment.

Aeronautics

20 Get Pilot Licenses

Private pilots' licenses were received by 20 members of the college aviation course, according to Major George Richards, instructor in the aviation division.

All students who took the final test passed with flying colors and not one member of the class was "washed out," Richards said, explaining that in aviation parlance "washed out" means nothing else than failed.

The students who passed this course had to meet the following requirements: Possession of United States citizenship, normal physical condition, and completion of one year of college education or its equivalent.

A new class has already been started for other students who wish to take up the aviation course, Major Richards announced.

The college curriculum in aviation was introduced two years ago following selection of this college by the government as one of an original 400 offering such instruction.

Although most of the training is practically directed, Richards said, there is a general course in background open to students whether participating or not in the complete curriculum.

Social Committee Plans Future Mixer Dances

More mixer dances throughout the semester are being scheduled by the Social Committee, according to Pat Niemeyer, associated students' vice-president.

The last mixer dance, which drew a record crowd, prompted such action by the Social Committee, Miss Niemeyer said.

The Social Committee and faculty advisers are working on a plan to eliminate the stag line which is present at all afternoon dances. Suggestions on the improvement of this situation are being taken at the student body office now, Miss Niemeyer added.

The future social events already on the calendar are the High Freshman Dance, October 23, the AMS Barn Dance, November 1, the Low Sophomore Dance, November 17, and the Hotel Night following the AMS Boxing Matches, December 5.

Passing Of Bond 4 Noted At College

Three years ago tomorrow, September 27, 1938, the citizens of San Francisco passed a bond issue furthering the improvement of the present college campus.

The passing of this bond issue added two gymnasiums to the college. In that same year, October 1, Harold Ickes granted additional federal aid to the city. In the Spring of 1939 this money was used for the further development of the campus in the form of concrete foundations.

Because of present world conditions, no improvements will be made at the college until the crisis has abated.

The campus as it looked before San Franciscans backed the bond issue for the development of the present college site.

An Anniversary

And A New Goal

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

EVERY success and every failure strengthens these words and builds for them a tower of irrefutable truth.

Three years ago tomorrow the people of San Francisco found themselves in a state of seige. The bombarding batteries were impelled, by enthusiasm, and the projectiles that whined overhead were zealous word-of-mouth campaigns and thoughtful, impressive circulars.

The people gladly yielded to the beseigers. The overwhelming drive of enthusiasm dictated no other choice. The people said yes to the terms; they said yes in voting booths in every city precinct.

Proposition Number 4 was passed. September 27, 1938, the people of San Francisco in a special election voted a financial burden on themselves to further the development of the Balboa Park campus with two gymnasiums. October 1 of that same year Harold Ickes granted the city the additional federal aid necessary to finance the projects. This money was translated into terms of concrete foundations in the spring of 1939.

Something "great" had been achieved. United effort and the will to win had triumphed. The students, faculty, and administration perceived a need in the new campus, and they perceived an opportunity to realize the need. This was enough. The goal was before them. Tacit but sturdy bonds brought unity and enthusiasm lured them on.

In the college itself, rallies were called on the separate campus to make everyone aware of the situation. Letters were sent to voters throughout the city, appeals were made to the city newspapers, stickers were displayed on cars, leaflets distributed through the streets. On the crucial day of voting, students patrolled the polling places offering literature to the citizens. The Guardsman in a special one-page edition set forth the want of the college for expansion, and copies were circulated city-wide.

This was an enthusiastic group of college adherents. It had to be, for only enthusiasm could have done the job.

Of course everyone was working to a definite goal, and the fruits of success would be tangible. Today, three years away from that accomplishment, the college might look to another goal. But it is nebulous and intangible, and the spectacular element is lacking. To define it best would be to exemplify the steps by which it might be approached.

Simple steps might be named, like joining the Associated Students, attending rallies and all college functions, being a good citizen on the campus and a good advertisement for it outside. Not a wrong step would be a furtherance of "college nationalism" or personal pride in attending the college and in speaking of it. Student officers would work diligently if they knew that the student body they were representing took a real interest in their plans and deeds. Perhaps you can name a few more steps toward this indefinable goal. If not, following these steps will bring the college comfortably close to this goal.

The power of enthusiasm is illimitable. That was proved by the college in 1938. Can the college of 1941 prove it again?

"Civilization must find a refuge in America; the abolition, except as training schools, of the universities of totalitarian states; the tendency of recent educational pronouncements in France; the dispersion and bombing of universities in England mean that nowhere else in the world, except in this country, can the standard of freedom, truth and justice be raised. The American universities are the last resource of a world plunging to destruction." Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, sees the American college as the hope of the world.

Shots At ...RAMdom

against the wall overlooking the beach by the Cliff House, watching nature's gaudy brushwork slowly being erased by the shadows of approaching evening. Arm in arm, they stared across the sea.

Thousands of musical "tweedle-tweedles" filled the air with a message to the whispering surf. Crickets.

From below them came the vibrant strums of a guitar and soaring lilt of a girlish voice. The guitar strummed. The voice lilted. The crickets tweedled.

He turned to his companion. "Beautiful, isn't it?"

"Yes," she sighed, "they do it by rubbing their legs together."

THE FOG

had driven him of the street to the reading room on the main floor of the library. His grey hair was damp. The frayed collar of his black, cloth jacket, the paper thinness of the heels of his shoes, despair washed eyes tabbed him as a member of the one-third of the nation that is ill-fed, ill-clothed, and ill-housed.

We glanced over his shoulder. A dirty finger nail was laboriously guiding his eyes down a column of print.

"Heiress Claims To Have Spent $25,000 On Care Of Dogs In Tax Squabble," screamed the head over the story.

He felt us looking over his shoulder. He turned.

"Look, bud," he smiled slowly, "a dime will buy me a place to sleep tonight."

Communists aren't born. They're made.

CUTY WIFE

said the dilapidated tourist in a hollow voice, "wanted to spend her vacation here in San Francisco. She wanted to go window shopping on Grant Avenue, ride over the bridges, go to the zoo.

"Now look at me," he said catching my gaze on his hollow cheeks, dirty shirt and ragged suit. "No place to sleep. The hotels are striking. I can't get a shave. The barber shop stays open too long and doesn't charge enough. Every time I want a clean shirt I have to buy one. My laundry's on strike. When we came here we lived on hot dogs for three days. The restaurants were on strike. Now I have to live on hot dogs because I'm so broke from buying shirts."

A little man came slowly past our bench, wheeling a cart in front of him. "Hot dogs!" he shouted, "get 'em while they're hot."

My tourist friend looked at him with an empty smile.

"Woof," he said happily, and trotted rapidly out of sight.

RAM'S HORN

More Shelley Wanted In Library; Some Ideas Annoy Readers

EDITOR'S NOTE:
Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 154. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

● Additional Books
Editor, The Guardsman:

What is a college library without a few volumes of the great works of literature? In truth it is nothing. I refer, for example, to the shortage of the works of Percy Bysshe Shelley the great English poet, second only to Shakespeare.

There is only one volume of this masterful work in the whole library, and that volume is combined with one John Keats.

Shelley's most famous poem "Queen Mab" is not included in this two-in-one edition.

Not only is this work missing from the volume but there is not a copy of Shelley's Necessity of Atheism, or one of the "Assasins." Such a shortage should not be treated lightly and something should be done to improve the stock of the library.

● Canvas Covers?
Editor, The Guardsman:

While glancing through your publication the other day, I happened to notice a letter in the Ram's Horn which dealt with the construction of a canvas cover over the walk to make things easier during the "inclement" weather.

Perhaps the writer would settle for an escalator instead. As I think he had better keep canvas cover over his head to keep the sun from drying up the remainder of his brains.

A couple of semesters ago talk was going around that they should install ski lifts to save the energy of the tired and returning gymnasts. Of course the idea did not get very far with the board of education. But perhaps the new student would like to start his college career more auspiciously by circulating a petition among the students of the college for the realization of his worthy cause.

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

CLOTHES will be worn, but clothes also will be warm. This statement sounds rather peculiar doesn't it? But really it is sane. For during the football season many clothes-conscious women drag out their autumnal robes, and forget about the cool sea breezes that flutter around Seals Stadium, as they did last week.

Being warm doesn't necessitate bundling up in a woolen scarf, sheep lined mittens and snow shoes. Not at all! A woolen dress and coat, or a three-piece suit will keep you warm and will possibly help out the women next to you who thought the day was warm and went out without her coat.

WELL-SUITED

Of course, where you go after the game makes a little difference in your costume for the event, also. But, if you are among the many who start out with no particular stopping place in view, you would be well-dressed in a suit. (Please forgive us, we're of a school who believes in suits—only. But we'll try to be partial.)

One very well-dressed woman at the game last Saturday had on a dark green corduroy dress, a brown herringbone top coat, shoes and bag of matching officer's tan, tiny new brown tone, and one of those knitted beanies with a tassel hanging down the side.

This was just one of the many women students making up the crowd. Several others had tailored dresses and fur coats. Fur coats, if the fur is one of the sturdier furs, are very nice. Warm, too.

LET'S YELL ABOUT IT

While on the subject of the game —how did your throat feel Sunday morning after recovering from the first victory of the season? Was it sore and tight? Did you feel like you'd never speak another word in your life? No, you probably didn't! For throughout the game, hardly a yell was heard.

Women are supposed to have low, well-modulated voices, so the etiquette books say, but once a year it is permissible to raise them above a whisper and yell to spur your own team to victory. Even Emily Post when she was a school girl probably yelled louder than any boy present at a game.

Next time, let's have the college men stand up and take notice of the women cheering. The men provide the leaders, so let us provide the cheers. How's about it??

(Incidentally, IF you do get hoarse, it won't last long, so don't let that worry you.)

NAN SEES

Leather button bracelets—very tailored—for sportswear.

Grosgrain ribbon used as shoestrings—the same color as your sweater bindings.

Women, cheering at the game Saturday. Not booing, remember, cheering only. Learn when at the rally this afternoon.

Cowie Belle Starr . . .
Spectator . . . It rates low bells or stars

DARRYL F. ZANUCK, perennial producer of historical epics and assorted excursions into the private lives of long-dead outlaws, has dipped into his basket of fruitful scripts and come up with another lemon, Belle Starr.

Perhaps the term "lemon" is rather harshly administered, but Belle Starr remains merely a pallid rehash of many scenes and situations that have formed the basis of hundreds and hundreds of motion pictures. It remains no better, no worse than any of the many other glorified westerns that have manifested themselves upon the nation's screens of late.

SCRIPT NOT TOO BRILLIANT

The laudation of notorious female bandit Belle Starr provides the plot material for a none too brilliant script by Niven Busch, Cameron Rogers, and Lamar Trotti. Miss Starr is extolled and beautified to such an extent that she is a fit companion to enter the ranks of gilded movie badmen (you know the others . . . Jessie James, Frank James, Dalton Brothers, Billie the Kid, etc.) Bewildered youngsters of the future will probably rank these greats and Belle Starr on an equal with Washington and Lincoln, thanks to the haloed, idolatrous treatment of the cinema.

Here, Belle is interpreted as a gentle, sensitive, pretty Southern lass of Missouri lineage. Father killed by Yankee renegades, she entertains a growing bitterness against the North that endures after the cession of the war. To assuage her hatred, Belle joins the ranks of notorious Sam Starr, a Confederate renegade who masks outlaw activity under a guise of guerrilla warfare in the hills. Ultimately Belle marries the outlaw-chieftain and the pair scour and ravage the countryside in terror raids. But Fate and the Will Hays office eventually catch the galloping Belle and a bushwacker's rifle sends her tumbling into the dust as she rides to warn hubby Sam of a Yankee trap.

FILM EMPHASIZES CHARACTER

The film seems to be building toward some smash bit of action, but that action never arrives. In fact, for a pretentious western epic, Belle Starr has a surprisingly limited emphasis upon physical movement. Rather, Director Irving Cummings and writers have concentrated on Belle's character development; her gradual transition from a gay, carefree Scarlet O'Hara type to grim, relentless bandit queen. A methodical, job of medial direction albeit some tiresome rusticity lower the picture to average level and hold it in that precarious position verging on the satisfactory and yet bordering on the unchartable and trite obviousness.

GENE TIERNEY PROVES ABILITY

The film is important in one respect; it gives Gene Tierney an opportunity to prove her ability, ability that has been stifled in her three other minor screen roles to date. Miss Tierney has much to learn yet in screen technique and in certain emotional sequences an obvious weakness is detected; on the whole, however, she does a competent job that predicts some nice things for the future.

There is a standard portrayal by dependable Randolph Scott as outlaw Sam Starr and nice support down the line from such performers as Dana Andrews, John Sheppard, Olin Howland, Chill Wills, and Louise Beavers. The latter as Belle's old colored mammy deserves top acting honors for a touching death scene at the film's conclusion.

Quotable Quotes

"It has been well said of universities that they are among the true immortals. They have outlived nations and forms of government. Their task is essentially the undramatic and long-range task of diffusing light and leading among mankind. Without them democracies are crippled. They are themselves as integral a part of the national defense as our arms and soldiers. They deal with the ideals which we must defend and all that strengthens them strengthens the foundations of democracy itself." Harry Woodburn Chase, chancellor of New York University, sees the universities as beacons in times of distress.

"National defense and education are close kin, for both of them are plans to preserve the way of life to which we Americans have dedicated ourselves and our children. That way of life, which we call democracy, is held together with the idea that every man is to have a chance." Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh, sees America strategically strengthened by education.

"The American college has demonstrated both its vitality and its usefulness, but to maintain it and to extend that usefulness to the world of today and tomorrow, the college must think harder and think straighter about its job than it has thought up to the present." Dr. E. P. Keppel, president, Carnegie Corporation of New York, poses a straightforward challenge.

"We no longer speak a common language as we no longer have a common intellectual background. Putting it another way, our modern education suffers from intellectual malnutrition. The scientists have been the greatest specialists, and . . . there is probably no other group quite so narrow in its interests. Our system is out of balance, and if we would restore it to equilibrium we must give more attention to the social and the human problems which we face." President John W. Nason of Swarthmore College calls for corrective measures in the education system.

"Wherever a dictator has arisen, there education has suffered. The desire for knowledge, the spirit of inquiry which is the God-given right of a free people, has been stifled and the training of the young has been confined to the trades and the most elementary general subjects. This must not happen in America." Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio charges educators to stand guard against dictatorship threats.

Your College Presents . . . Biology Studied In The Coast's Finest Laboratories

Jean Peterson, left, and Basbera Bettencourt carefully adjust the vernier dials on their microscopes to open up a new world of study. This pair is a part of Glenn Noble's biology class. The intentness of their gaze attests to fascination which the microcosms revealed by the high-power microscope. College science students work pleasantly in the most modern of science laboratories in any college in the nation.

By Ivanna Hayworth

LOOKING only at the growth of the number of instructors in the biology department would tell how this department itself has enlarged since the college started. When the course was first instituted into the college curriculum, there were three instructors, now there are eight. For these instructors, there is a research floor where various members carry on research work, etc., some of them work on scientific books of their own.

The laboratories alone of this department are some of the finest and most complete on this coast. Every branch of the biology department has in its laboratories the finest equipment with which to continue its work. A very good example of this is the botany department.

ADDED ADVANTAGE

Besides the laboratory which both the 21-a and b students use in their work, a greenhouse on the fourth floor is now being completed. At present the construction is finished, although more soil is needed as yet for the various plants which will be grown there. The idea of this special greenhouse is for these botany students to see and become better acquainted with plants as they are studied in the course. When this greenhouse is completed and ready for use, which will probably be next fall, both the a and b classes will derive benefit from it.

Since botany is the classification and development of plants, this course is usually taken by forestry and agriculture majors.

Taking the biology department itself, there is a non-lab course which is generally taken by non-science majors. The laboratory course in general biology is a study of both botany and zoology which is designed to furnish a background knowledge for later courses in this field.

ADDITIONAL COURSES

The following courses which come in this division, will be given next year. Henatology, a study of the blood; serology, a study of serums; clinical biology, chemistry; and clinical bacteriology. Clinical Parasitology is the only one of this group which was started this semester, primarily because of lack of teaching time which was needed. There has been a great increase in the number of students planning to go into this work, and there are very few places where adequate training in this type of work can be had. It is a mistaken idea that only women take up this work, since there are several men registered in the course. Since this is one of the terminal courses of the college, it is planned to prepare students to take the state board examination as laboratory technicians. There has been, so far, an enrollment of ten students, which is very good for a new course, according to Dr. Glen Noble, head of the biology department.

Zoology is a very important and interesting course for majors in zoology itself and in pre-medicine majors. There are several courses in this division which students may take, all of which are university parallel courses. In 21a and b there is an introduction to the principles of animal biology with special reference to the structure, functions, and evolution of animal life. The first part of this one-year course emphasizes the invertebrates, and the latter the vertebrates—quite technical, what? Other such courses are listed in this semester's catalogue with definitions of each.

The biology department is so large and covers such a large scope, it is only fair to the course not to try to break it up and put it in one column, therefore, it has been planned to present other courses under this division at a future date.

Tuesday the Paint Technology department will be featured.

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Intramural

Entries For Basketball Due Today; To Be Given To Brady In Men's Gym

All teams wishing to enter the intramural basketball competition must hand in their entry blanks this afternoon to Jack Brady, faculty adviser, in the men's gymnasium.

The list of players must be written on the application slip and handed in with the entry blank. Anyone whose name does not appear on the blank will not be eligible to compete. Late entries will not be accepted as the schedule will be drawn up this afternoon, and the number of teams entered will determine whether the tournament will be played on a round robin or elimination basis.

If a larger number of quintets are entered, a drawing will determine in which league the squad will play. All games will be played on Tuesday and Thursday, with the first tipoff to start Thursday, October 2.

Basketball Most Popular

Last spring, basketball was considered the most popular sport of the entire intramural program. A total of 24 teams were entered, and as a result three leagues were formed, the International, American, and National. This included a schedule of six games daily over a six-week period and found the Newman Club, All Americans, and Goats, the winners of their respective leagues.

A playoff was held and in the first round, the Goats eked out a close 43 to 40 verdict over the Newman Club in two overtime periods. In the finals, however, the All Americans, defending champions of the previous semester, came back to defeat the Goats, 30 to 23, and ultimately walk off with championship honors.

All-Star Squad Selected

An all-star intramural team was selected by Brady, and of the starting five named, two players came from the All Americans, two from the Goats, and one from the Newman Club. First team members were Ed Cassidy of the Newman Club, and Jack Hare, of the All Americans at forwards, Mickey McCabe, of the Goats, at center, Jerry Phillips of the Goats, and Charley Smith from the All Americans at the guard positions.

This semester, however, McCabe has been added to the roster of the Newman Club along with Jack Batiaf and Dale Goodyear, prep stars from high schools in the city. With the addition of this trio, it undoubtedly makes the Newman Club strong favorites to win the championship. Nothing is heard from the other squads, however, and there is always a dark horse who may upset the odds and steal the crown.

Women's Athletics

Association Clubs Elect Managers; Council Meetings Scheduled For Friday Afternoons

Women's Athletic Association clubs began activities this week with the election of managers who will be additional members at council meetings, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced recently.

Council meetings will be held on Friday afternoons at 4 p. m., Miss Kraul said, in the women's gym. All managers are expected to be present, she added.

Tennis Turnouts Better

Tennis turnouts this year are better than last year, Bertha Keller, faculty adviser of the WAA, announced. Last year the tennis team won nearly all the awards at the San Mateo play day, and it is hoped that this year the team will be even better.

"This year we are fortunate enough to have Helen Crienkovich, college student and diving champion, in the tennis class, and we hope that Miss Crienkovich will accomplish in tennis what she has accomplished in the diving world," Miss Keller said.

At present, archery has the best turnout that it has ever had. Archery play days and tournaments will be announced in the near future.

Meeting To Be Held Soon

A meeting is to be held presently where the faculty advisers and WAA club presidents get together and decide which play day will be held where, and where the tournaments will be played.

"This semester we want to have the hockey play day at the college, but unless more students sign up for the game, we will have to abandon all hopes of a play day here," Miss Keller said. "Hockey is a very good game for women, and we have been trying for several semesters to fit it into the physical education program."

Last year basketball and riding play days were held here, the horse show being one of the highlights of the riding play day.

Coeds Show Added Interest In Badminton Competition

Interest is on the upswing in coeducational badminton, according to Bertha Keller, adviser for the Women's Athletic Association.

It was suggested that this year at the spring conference, both men and women take part and compete for the trophy offered, Miss Keller said.

Men interested should report to Russ Sweet and women to Aileen Kinkel, Miss Keller said, and perhaps a suitable practice may be arranged.

Today Last Chance For Football Information

Today will be the last chance to obtain free information about football at a rally sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced recently.

The last in the series of three rallies will be held this afternoon in Room 47 at 12 M., Miss Kraul said.

"Coach Lee Eisan, and possibly Louis Conlan, former coach, will be present and will answer all questions concerning football. After the game with State last Saturday, many questions have arisen which need answering, and Eisan will answer them all."

The rally is held for the women students of the college, who, through no fault of their own have not had the opportunity to learn about the game, Miss Kraul said. However, any faculty members wishing to come are welcome.

"During football season last year, a similar rally was held and proved very successful, so this season we decided to have a series of three rallies," Miss Kraul said, "at different times and on different days, thereby reaching many more students."

Eisan will describe various plays, formations, and terms that may be confusing to the spectator of a football game.

Bowling Round Robin To Start In Two Weeks

Preliminary practice for Women's Athletic Association bowling clubs will end in two weeks, and round robin games will start, Bertha Keller, bowling instructor, announced recently.

These games will be played by teams, made up of women in the club to provide competition, which will better prepare the bowlers for the tournament, Miss Keller said.

The bowling club plans play days in the future with San Mateo and possibly Santa Rosa.

Attempts are also being made to form intercollegiate bowling teams between the women of this college and San Francisco State College, Miss Keller said.

Notre Dame University football teams won 105 games, lost 12 and tied 5 while Knute Rockne was their coach.

Fraydom Of The Press; Fellows Invades North

By Bill Cothran

ABOUT two years ago a great hue and cry was raised over the gulping of goldfish by college students. Most of the gulping was done in private homes and fraternity houses. Last Saturday evening, students of this college finally got around to sampling raw goldfish, a la mental midgets. The gulping, however, was definitely not done in private. Of all places to eat goldfish, a football game, especially a night game, is considered taboo. Incidentally, where were the fish obtained?

SEMPER EADEM

Certain students from this sacred precinct of learning read last Sunday morning's write ups of the State game in a couple of the San Francisco daily newspapers. These students did not happen to be in the stands when State was defeated by the Rams. As a result, they have been laboring under the impression that State continually pushed the men of the Red and White around, and were extremely unfortunate to be scored upon, let alone defeated.

If the truth were to be recognized, State suffered a much greater statistical loss than is indicated by the seven to six score. State gained 49 yards from scrimmage and lost 26, for a net scrimmage gain of 23 yards. The Rams, on the other hand, gained 176 yards and lost only nine yards, for a net scrimmage gain of 167 yards. ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY-SEVEN to TWENTY-THREE YARDS. Yes indeed, State was certainly very, very unfortunate.

HERE COMES FELLOWS

Now that the opening football hurdle has been cleared, Lee Eisan's gridders are looking forward to tomorrow night and their meeting with the Cubs of Los Angeles City College. The Rams will not only have to stop eleven fellows, but also one Fellows in particular. The one in particular is Jackie Fellows, who last year at 150 pounds was a ball of fire against the Red and White. This year, according to releases from the den of the Cubs, Fellows has added another ten pounds to his five-foot seven-inch frame. A vaunted threat on the gridiron last year, there is no telling what heights Fellows will rise to this year. Eisan's probable battle-cry for Saturday night is, "Stop Fellows!" (No comma.)

Greatest surprise at the State game was not on the football field. The fans pulled off a tremendous upset of form when they showed up approximately 3,000 strong. Huzzah!

Experience Or Money Offered For Pianists

Pianists wishing either experience or NYA remuneration were advised to report to Laurine Bergin, women's dance instructor, immediately.

Dancing classes needing the pianists are the Monday and Wednesday classes at 10 and 11 a. m., Mrs. Bergin said, and music will be provided by the department.

LACC

Ackerman Heads Squad North

By Bob Marcus

Coach Glenn C. Ackerman, head coach of the Los Angeles City College eleven, who brings his squad to the Bay Region tomorrow night, has held that position for the past 10 years, having won three championships in that time.

Chief threat of the Cubs will be Jackie Fellows, diminutive halfback. Fellows, a graduate of Manual Arts High School in Los Angeles, is but 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 163 pounds, and can run like a streak of lightning.

Last year in the Ram game, he picked up his heels and raced 67 yards to a touchdown, outdistancing everyone on the college squad. There should be quite an interesting duel between Fellows and Turk Terzian for individual honors.

In preparation for the game tomorrow night, Coach Lee Eisan has sent his squad through vigorous scrimmages all week in hopes of sharpening up the squad's blocking and passing, which was found wanting in the State fray.

Don Reese, Ram center, who played prep ball at Cathedral High in Los Angeles, has virtually cinched the pivot position after the fine performance he displayed last week. Dutch Danielson has his work cut out for him if he is to get the nod over Reese.

Johnny Sanchez, LACC tackle of last year, has confined his talents to the University of San Francisco this season.

Although spectators in the stands last Saturday night did not know it, Art Ekdall, who played the major portion of the game at the right halfback spot, was playing under the handicap of a very bad cold, as was Bob Christen, starting fullback.

Frank Molina, who replaced Armand "Turk" Terzian when he left the contest, proved himself a yeoman worker. Besides ably filling the bill at quarter, Molina recovered a Ram fumble on the Gator's goal line; one play later Christen plunged to a score.

Rams Out To Make It Two Straight Against LA Cubs At Seals Tomorrow Night

By Nick Barbarotto

Fresh from their 7 to 6 victory over the San Francisco State Gators last Saturday, the Rams will attempt to make it two straight tomorrow night at Seals Stadium against the Los Angeles City College eleven.

With the kickoff set for 8 p.m., and the Perpetual Trophy, now resting in the college trophy case at the left of the main steps through the 7 to 6 victory in 1940, at stake, the contest should be a wild and woolly game.

The exchange of the trophy, donated by Roos Bros., dates back to 1935, in which year the Los Angeles outfit took it south by emerging with a 7 to 0 victory. In 1936, however, the college won, 12 to 0, and the trophy came to the Rams for the first time.

By virtue of their 20 to 7 victory in 1937, the Red and White kept the trophy for another year, but in 1938 it went South again when the Cubs won the fray, 13 to 6.

College Retains Trophy

A 6 to 0 Ram victory in 1939 found the trophy back to the college, where it has remained until today and where, according to the spirit of the Eisanmen, it will remain for at least another year.

The aforementioned 1940 contest was a bitterly fought game, packed with thrills until the final gun. Jackie Fellows gave the Cubs a 6 to 0 lead by rambling 67 yards on an intercepted Ram pass in the first half, and, with both teams playing as they were, those six points appeared mighty large on the scoreboard.

Honnert in Hero's Role

Then the Rams exploded and after some scrimmage plays of the second half, Jim Honnert went into pay dirt to tie it up at 6 to 6. With Al Nuzum holding the ball, Honnert added to his hero's role by calmly kicking the convert and gave the Rams a 7 to 6 lead, which eventually came to be the outcome of the game.

Tonight's contest will mark the seventh meeting between the Rams and Cubs, the college having won four and the Southerners two.

Fellows Invades North

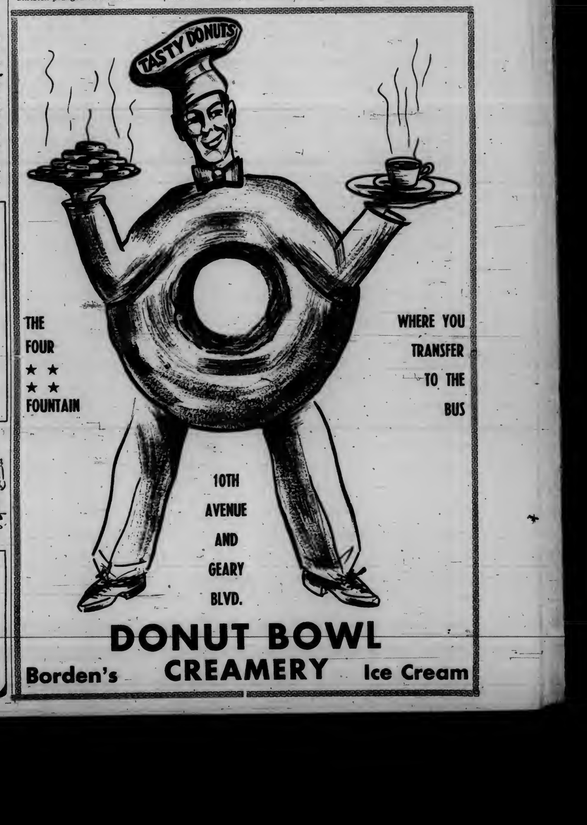
Los Angeles comes north with a team built around their triple-threat ace from last year, the same Jackie Fellows. Fellows boasts such honors as All Conference and All Southern California last year, plus being voted the most valuable player's award last season. The 190-pound star, although not exceptionally fast, is very shifting, and, should his reputation hold true, he will give the college gridders something to think about.

Jack Watts and Gordie Sheldon are lettermen from last year's Cub squad and, according to the Southerners, play an important part in the line. Davie Davis is the new fullback and reports from Los Angeles say he's showing fine in the recent practice sessions.

The Cubs have Rex Schroder, Charley Beckman, and Johnny Beauchamp at the end positions, and Joe Romano and Jack Bernateen playing either tackle or guard along with Sheldon and Watts.

Ram Starters Same

Bob Norman will hold down the center spot, and Earl Seid and Jerry Schneider are expected to make up the backfield combination with Fellows and Davis.



Coach Lee Eisan will probably open the contest with the same eleven that started against the Gators. Ed Cassidy, who played brilliantly last Saturday, and Dick Souza will start at ends, Bob Hoffman, blocker of State's all-important field-goal attempt, and Augie Kaineu will be the tackles. Bob Hufnagle, who played a hero's role by blocking State's conversion, and Bill Brown will be the starting guards, and Don Reese or "Dutch" Danielson,

NYA Time Cards Due No Later Than Oct. 2

NYA time cards must be filled out in ink and handed in at the NYA office not later than Thursday, October 2, Claude Silva, director, warned this week. Cards received later than this date can not be honored nor the student paid for the hours listed.

"Students unfamiliar with NYA rules unintentionally cause the department a great deal of extra work," Silva said, adding that only five fundamental rules are necessary to fill out a time card correctly and adherence to these rules would save hours of work for the staff.

The five rules are as follows:

1. Time periods for this year end on the 1st of every month. It would be most helpful if time cards could be brought to Room 170 one day early.

2. Time card procedure is being changed. Each day's work need not be initialled. Sign only under line, "Signature of person supervising work."

3. Student work maximum is four hours on college day and seven hours on non-college days.

4. Work hours are to be noted not in fractions but in decimals. Only decimals allowed are 0.25; 0.5; and 0.75.

5. Each student should (a) sign his name to card; (b) write his address on bottom of card.

Wisconsin U. President Emeritus Serves 66 Years

MADISON, WIS.—(ACP)—A little old man with a long mustache, Dr. Edward Asahel Birge, 89-year-old president emeritus of the University of Wisconsin and limnologist, once again has been honored for his long service to the state.

By unanimous vote, the legislature adopted a resolution expressing sincere congratulations and felicitations to Dr. Birge, a member of the university faculty for 66 years—7 as president, 27 as dean of the college of letters and science and 34 as president emeritus.

Dr. Birge, whose scientific work on lakes and streams is known throughout the world, can be found almost any day of the week in his tiny office-laboratory in the university's biology building. Two years ago he learned typing so that he could write his own reports and scientific studies.

A native of Troy, New York, the university's president emeritus began teaching here in 1875. As one of the directors of the Wisconsin natural history survey, he has collected more scientific data on Wisconsin lakes than any other person with the exception of his colleague and co-worker, Dr. Chancey Juday.

we are already at war, but that we may still carry out the most important requisite of the isolation platform if our leaders so desire.

GOVERNMENTAL ELIMINATION

If the Administration could have its way it would probably eliminate the isolationist opposition—that's efficient but un-American. However, Washington has a great deal of respect for the power of public opinion; unless public opinion changes Washington may soon be forced to change the tune to which it is trying to make the country dance.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Coaching System's Fate To Be Decided At Initial Meeting Next Wednesday

Along with the election of officers and discussion of dues, plans for a coaching system this semester will be tentatively formulated at the initial fall meeting of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, Wednesday, October 1, at 4 p.m. in Room 204, Alice Cooper, faculty adviser of the society, said.

In addition to the 104 new members who were listed in last Tuesday's edition of The Guardsman, 45 additional students, who entered the college this semester, have been ruled eligible for next Tuesday's meeting, Miss Cooper continued.

Gordon Petersen, out-going president of the society, will preside.

Coaching In Balance

Last semester, when a coaching system was first inaugurated at the college, a marked lack of student interest was evinced; therefore, before planning any definite program for student coaching, the Alpha Gamma Sigma will discuss and weigh the benefits of any such plan, along with all conceivable obstacles.

Those eligible to attend this meeting are last semester members and those listed in The Guardsman of Tuesday, September 23. Because new students have a scholastic standing comparable to the present members, Miss Cooper explained that they are associate members for a period of one semester, in which time they are able to establish their college records.

Transcripts Determining Factors

For new students from other colleges and schools throughout the nation eligibility is determined by transcripts or membership in the California Scholarship Federation or honor societies in schools not associated with any large honor organization.

The following is a list of students who have had their transcripts checked and who are eligible to come to the meeting. Any omission should be checked as soon as possible, Miss Cooper advised and announced her office hours as 10 to 11 a. m. in Room 186:

Robert Arnold, Wesley Beach, Ruth Shirley Betts, David D. Billings, Audrey L. Blaisdell, Ira F. Castney, Hellie Chew, Victoria Chin, Rosemarie Cochran, Henry Cooley, Edward Coray, Beth V. Craddock, Olive B. Caulkins, Doris E. Crane.

Juliet H. Duncan, Florence Hanson, Margaret J. Hatch, Dorothy Hogan, Zulphe Holt, Barbara L. Jacobs, Lester L. Jones, Yukiye Kawaguchi, George C. Lambert, Donald Lee, Virginia M. Lee, Edward Lopez.

Doris Meyer, Taamar Mykkanen, Ruth E. Nell, Ada A. Perotti, Gene Poon, Herschel Reed, Edwina K. Biesnecker, Ann N. Roosman, Phoebe G. Rosenthal, Betty Jo Rosa, Beatrice E. Sanguinetti, Sophie Schoenstein.

Toshiko Takkawa, Kimiko Tamura, Eugene Valdemi, Mary C. Wong, Helen Yee, Nadine Zogar, Miriam Zimmerman.

who was out of the State game because of an injury, will start at center.

"Turk" Terzian at quarter, Temple Davies and Art Ekdall at halves, and Bob Christen at fullback, a combination that performed so well against the Gators, will undoubtedly be the starting backfield.

Elsan Pleased With Squad

Coach Elsan was pleased with the way the Rams played the first half of the State game, but was rather disappointed with the final two quarters. He has scrimmaged the gridders hard during the week and has went back to a few fundamentals in preparation for tomorrow's fray.

Coach Glenn Ackerman brings a determined bunch to San Francisco and both he and Elsan expect the game to be very interesting, close, and exceptionally hard fought.

WAA Social Activities Begin With Barbecue

Women's Athletic Association social events will begin with a barbecue Wednesday, October 8, at 5:30 p.m. at Sigmund Stern Grove, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced this week.

All women of the college are invited, besides all WAA members, and general chairman for the day is Bernice Strube, Miss Kraul said.

Miss Strube has appointed Janice Berch, arrangement chairman; Elma Oddstead, invitation committee; Jean Peterson, program chairman; Marie Richardson, game chairman; Irene Weed, folk dancing chairman; Berta Reid, publicity chairman, and Tomi Nagasugi, rearrangement chairman.

Initiation Scheduled

Initiation of new members, and of newly-elected managers is expected to take place.

Entertainment planned by Miss Peterson will consist of dancing, community singing, and a presentation of puppets by Teddy Reuge. Miss Reuge has given performances with her puppets at several WAA functions, Miss Peterson said, and will appear this time with several new acts.

First WAA, AWS Plan

"Box lunches will be served, and refreshments will be furnished by either the Associated Women Students or the WAA. This is the first time the AWS and the WAA have come together and jointly planned an event," Miss Kraul said, "so we hope as many women as possible attend."

Reservations may be made through the college bank, Miss Strube concluded.

Publicity Committee Wants Student Talent

A plea for student talent from the Associated Students was issued by George Court, internal publicity director of the college, Wednesday.

Any student entertainer who desires to perform for the college at assemblies or pep rallies, was urged to apply at the student office in Room 168.

Court intends to set up a display of photographs of college athletic games and other activities in the show case in the front hall of the administration building. The photographs will be taken by John Duns, Guardsman staff photographer.

Plans for these pep rallies will be a more common event in the future is the hope of the publicity director. An effort to this end is sought by Court in the students concerning night rallies and bonfires, similar to that of last night, before each football game.

Talent Bureau Auditions To Be Given Soon

Students having talent for music, vocal or instrumental, will soon be able to gain practice through the college talent bureau. Auditions may be arranged through Flossita Badger, music instructor, or Irwin Cohen, student director of the bureau.

No time has been set, as yet, for auditions, but it will be as soon as possible, Miss Badger promised.

Students auditioned have their records kept on file in the bureau. They may be called for college events or for outside programs.

Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, Texas, Sept. 23—In practically every section of the nation the favorite dance orchestra of the American college student is Glenn Miller's.

Student Opinion Surveys of America, leaving aside political, social, and economic questions that today bother the world and the collegian, has turned to the field of college recreation, and in h nation-wide poll finds:

FAVORITE RECREATIONS:
1. Dancing
2. Swimming
3. Tennis
4. Reading

FAVORITE DANCE ORCHESTRAS:
1. Glenn Miller
2. Kay Kyser
3. Tommy Dorsey
4. Guy Lombardo
- Wayne King (tie)

Miller's Band tops all others, polling twice as many ballots as any other one orchestra. His music is sought by nearly one-fourth of all students.

Kyser was a favorite in the Southern states, with Miller a close second.

While dancing is the one thing most eds and coeds would rather do when away from the classroom, swimming is not as great a favorite with women as it is with men. Second choice of the women was tennis. Bridge was among the least popular of recreations. Among the most unusual mentioned were beer drinking, writing, flying, sleeping, singing, eating, and —yes, studying.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 151, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Foresters Fraternity . . . Meeting to be held Tuesday, September 30, at 4 p.m. in Room 136. All interested in forestry invited to attend.

● Forum Club . . . First meeting to be held tonight, at the home of Frederick Bracher, faculty adviser, 2611 Larkin Street, at 8 p.m. All are welcome; topic: "Is Lindbergh a Patriot?"

● Home Economics Association . . . Tea to be held Friday, September 26, for all members and interested students in Room 158 from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

● Pi Mu Gamma . . . All members are urged to attend a meeting in Room 136, Wednesday, October 1, at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Dr. Chauncy Leake, to discuss Development of Anaesthesia.

● Chinese Students' Club . . . Freshmen initiation will be held Friday, September 26, at Baptist Church, 15 Waverly Place, 9 to 12 p.m. All members are urged to come.

● Riding Club . . . Will meet in near future at the home of Betty McKinnon, former member of the club, now a student at the University of California. Date to be announced later.

● Rifle and Pistol Club . . . First meeting of the semester to be held Thursday, October 2, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 46. All members and non-members are urged to attend. A business meeting will be held to discuss future events. Shooting will be held, together with refreshments, after adjournment.

Hotel Show Participations Gets Two Students Jobs

Because of participation in the Hotel Show recently given in the Civic Auditorium, two students from the Hotel and Restaurant division have secured positions.

Ruth Smith has become dining room manager of the Adams Hotel in Phoenix, Arizona. Hotel Merrit in Oakland accepted Don Woods as a desk clerk.

Three former Hotel and Restaurant students are in the navy. One of them is a lieutenant in the Army Air Corps and two are mess sergeants in the regular Army.

Dean Gives Interview Time To All Freshman Women

To discuss their college program and future plans, Dean Margaret Dougherty would like to interview every freshman woman student in her office, Room 125.

She would like to see them on any morning between 10 o'clock and noon. Although Miss Dougherty only wants to interview the freshman women now, she will probably ask to see the rest of the women students at a later date.

Debate

Northern California Junior College Societies Will Meet At College In October

The college will play host to a convention of Northern California Junior College debating societies some time in October, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, college debate coach.

Objectives of the convention will be to select topics for subjects of debate, and set up a schedule among various junior colleges participating.

● Those junior colleges which form the society are Salinas, San Mateo, Menlo, Marin, Sacramento, Placer, Modesto, and San Francisco, Luckmann announced.

Luckmann Directs Organization

Faith Frazier of Salinas Junior College, together with Luckmann will be the sponsors of the group, and Luckmann will be the director of the organization.

The college will in all probability, serve lunch to the visiting group, after which Luckmann expects there will be an afternoon program consisting of debating and extemporaneous orations.

Student Debators Needed

Students are needed for the college debating society, Phi Rho Pi, which is under the sponsorship of Luckmann and Charles McKiernan, college speech instructor.

The debating society known as Speech 16 in the catalogue offers an opportunity for personal growth in expression together with inductive and deductive logic.

Business Dept. Adds Three New Courses

Added to this fall's business department curriculum are three new courses which will affect the semi-professional courses during the coming year, according to information released by Ward Nichols, college comptroller and chairman of the Faculty Association.

Changes include three new accounting courses which are being given now or are in preparation to be given in the spring semester. Interfediate and advanced accounting are now established courses. To be added in the spring is tax accounting, Nichols said.

Secretary Training Change

Plans are being formulated for a course in secretarial training under the direction of Llewellyn R. Snyder and Carl F. Stough, both members of the business division of the college.

"This course," Nichols said, "will provide adequate training for any one who is interested in a secretarial job. It is one of the many semi-professional courses which this college offers."

Louise Dorr Joins Staff

Taking the place of P. Grant Marsh as chairman of the business department is Louise Dorr. Marsh was called to the Naval Reserve at the University of California, where he is an instructor in Naval Science with the Naval R.O.T.C.

Marsh served in the Navy during the last war as an instructor and as Lieutenant Commander of a naval submarine tender.

His course in Naval Science at this college prepared many for naval careers, many of his students having gone on to the naval station at Tiburon.

Kent State University dramatists have revived "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in a new streamlined version.

Vol. XIII TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1941 No. 6

By Francis Chrisman

ABOUT once every generation the working man realizes his monetary ambitions. Those realizations are in effect today.

Every generation or so there is a war which sends the price of labor sky high. When this occurs the working man may bathe in the favorable flux of wages and working control. Today there is a war, and today labor is receiving its' self conceived just dues.

Tomorrow all may be chaos and ruin, but Mr. Average Worker is living only for the present.

GET RICH QUICK

From Fort Worth, Texas come pleas for men to work on construction jobs at unheard of salaries, with all the overtime (at time and a half) desired. Trade schools are booming, correspondence courses in machine work are advertising profusely. Ordinary labor is having the time of its life.

Ship fitters and workers in the ship yards drive to their jobs in automobiles whose prices would have made them shudder a year ago.

Recently we heard a man complain because his job (rather specialized) was being divided into two sections, necessitating a pay cut from about $350 to about $300 a month. He declared that he didn't see how he'd be able to get along on that salary. He is single, with only himself to support.

Well, after all, he's got to keep up his car payments.

Work at the big construction yards is considered so good that men stand in line all day just for an opportunity at an interview.

BIG CITY EXAMPLE

A lady in one of San Francisco's homey districts walked into a butcher shop the other day and, noticing that the butcher was a new man, inquired as to the whereabouts of the former meat handler. "Oh," replied the new man, "he quit yesterday. He's working in the ship yards."

Just what the butcher become shipbuilder we don't know. The college's activities not revealed, but he probably signed on as a machinist's helper.

If a man wants a raise in this modern world of theory all he has to do is threaten to quit. That ought to do the trick.

NOT FOREVER!

Of course when the war is over the bosses will resume their accustomed role, and the soldiers will be home bulging with expensive models; but until then it's a wonderful, wonderful, world.

What's going to happen to the So cial Security Board when all this comes to an end? Chances are the government will have to inaugurate another WPA to aid the unemployed. They could call it the WWPA. This war workers progress administration could turn out war materials for the next scheduled main event in 1960. If they got started soon enough all would be ready for production about that time.

But labor is not thinking about 1960, although they might well be so. The supreme play is on. The employers are on the receiving end of the big bat. San Francisco is "right" for a strike someplace within the next week or so. Even now negotiations are being carried on between worker and boss. And the worker has the best of it.

However, one can't blame labor too much. Look at the way prices have jumped. Look at the increase in taxes. Wages usually follow prices up—and precede them down. The new plan is to reverse this procedure. No one has thought, apparently, of balancing the two. Why think of it? It won't happen. And if it did all the joy would be taken out of labor troubles.

What would America be like without labor troubles? Positively tame!

WELL, MUDDLE ALONG

"No, balancing things is not the American way. We've got to be in a muddle. Always more fun. Balancing things would likely destroy a great American tradition.

But as to these happy working days; it seems as though there isn't any way to keep from working.

A dubious character was collared on Third Street last week by an employment agent for one of the large firms located here. "Say," offered the worker seeker, "you look like a good man—how about going into our company?" The character shook his head. "Come on," begged the other, "it's not hard work, simple as abc." The character still refused. The agent argued with him, pleaded, almost threatened—no luck. Finally he talked away, searching for other, more agreeable, material, while the character sat down on a nearby step to sun himself.

You could almost hear him say, "It's men like that that make life a problem."

Ex-Council

Kei Hori May Direct Publicity

A committee with full power to establish a source of external publicity for the college was named by the Executive Council at its last meeting. Chairman of the committee is Bill Postal, who is assisted by Harry Haesloop, Aspasia Vasilatos, and the Council adviser, Alden Smith.

Discussion of the issue had taken up the major part of two earlier meetings. Controversy was started by the reading, in the council of a letter from Kei Hori requesting material and supplies to defray expenses incurred by him in securing external publicity for the college.

Dean Supports Measure

Dean Browne spoke in the behalf of some material being set aside for the purpose, which he termed as "obviously necessary for the added popularity and interest shown by the public in college affairs."

Only objection shown by members of the council were doubts as to just what items could be included. This objection coupled with no definite agreement mentioned in Hori's letter as to what the college could expect in return for his efforts, led to the final decision of appointing a committee to deal directly with Hori.

Hori has been active in journalism throughout his college career. He has been sports editor and managing editor of The Guardsman, consecutively.

External publicity includes all notices or items appearing in papers or any other publications concerning the college's activities.

Council Confusion Cited

A great deal of embarrassment and confusion on the part of council members followed the statement by the adviser that the members had been out of order for at least 25 minutes by discussing the subject before it had been put into a motion.

The error was speedily corrected by the president, with the appointment of a committee to deal directly with Hori.

Campus Players Ready To Plan Semester Program

Campus Players, a newly organized club for men and women interested in the theater, is now beginning activities for the semester, Dolores Sullivan, president of the club, announced last week.

"The club is open to all members of the college," she said, "who are interested in play writing, directing, producing, acting or just with an interest in the theater."

Facilities Under Activities

The club is hindered by the fact that there are no facilities on the campus which enable members to produce any plays, but they intend to give performances at teas, and rallies, Miss Sullivan said.

The club was just organized and was recognized by the Club Advisory Board last semester, Miss Sullivan said.

The first social event for the season will be a party at the home of Marion Turner, faculty adviser for the club, on Friday, October 10.

Last Semester Officers Again Head

Last semester officers are Miss Sullivan, president; Edith Dunn, vice-president; Flora Alexander, secretary, and Jackie Blair, CAB representative.

Any students interested in the club are urged to report to the next meeting, announcement of which will be submitted to the Campus Club Crier or on one of the bulletin boards in the main hall.

Cars Needed For Proposed Caravan To Berkeley Game

College students with available cars who are willing to take passengers on the proposed auto caravan Saturday to Berkeley and the Ram-California Freshman Football game in Memorial Stadium are requested to see Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, in the Associated Student Body office, Room 168, before Friday.

The proposed caravan will start from the front steps of the college Saturday at 12:30. Cars will be decorated with red and white paper. Further details will be found in Friday's Guardsman.

Parking Lot

South Hill Violations Continue; Welfare Committee Acts To Construct Parking Lot

Parking on the south hill is still going on despite the repeated requests that this hill should be left clear, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"Recent deaths caused by hillside parking in and around San Francisco would indicate the fallacy of this procedure," Browne said.

During bad weather the danger is materially increased and there is no reason for the hill parking since there is sufficient room around the campus, according to Browne.

Roads that lead around the college hill side behind the flag pole are not to be used for parking, Browne pointed out.

"The 50 or more feet that are saved by parking on the prohibited hillside hill are so small that students of mature judgment should not take advantage of the absence of signs," Browne said. "They only cause a state of confusion concerning a proper parking space," he added.

Many cars, belonging to people who are physically handicapped, or which carry freight, have been given permission to park on the hilltop.

"This, however, is no excuse for students to take advantage of the absence of patrols and park too on the hillside. The campus, as it is, offers closer parking facilities to classes than most colleges, and the desire to eat up the last few feet of space near the building is hardly commensurate with mature judgment," Browne pointed out.

After meeting formally for the first time this semester, the welfare committee closed the business of the day, Wednesday, September 23, enthusiastically united behind the idea of a parking lot for the students of the college, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the committee.

"Students who live in the outlying districts and must drive to school obviously need a place to park," Lindemann said. "Pictures of the terrible parking conditions of last semester, when many car owners were forced to park in mud up to the hub caps were shown to the members," he added.

Team Needs Support

Committee members agree that more college spirit is needed at football games. Students should follow the rally commissioners who will be present at all future games wearing red and white hats.

"The college is definitely in need of a solidified rooting section, if more students came wearing red and white, the general appearance of the rooting section would be greatly improved," Lindemann remarked.

The committee discussed the possibility of having an organized rooting section, divided into one white section and one red section, he added.

That more students should attend the games was the opinion of the entire committee.

Admission is only an associated students card with a small charge for those not having a card. Students who lend their card to others will have them confiscated.

Hello Walk Discussed

Money for a plaque for Hello Walk has been appropriated, according to Lindemann. The plaque will be of bronze, bearing the inscription, "cheerful company shortens the walk," and will be placed in the cement walk just in front of the flag pole in the rear court.

Plans for dividing the rear courts, which have been planted and trimmed during the summer, into meeting places for freshmen and sophomores, were also discussed. The rear courts in the rear of the science building will be for freshmen, while the south court will be for sophomores. Students are requested to keep off the lawn.

Plans for a student directory containing the names, addresses and phone numbers of students to be printed in pamphlet form, have hit a snag in that it is a rule that no secondary school may print such a directory, according to Lindemann.

Suggestions Solicited

"The office of the welfare committee is open every day," Lindemann pointed out, "and any student who has an idea for the betterment of the college should bring it to the office between classes. If the idea is worthy of attention it will be brought before the committee and discussed."

The office is located in Room 169.

Employment

Applications Ready For Christmas Jobs

Applications for Christmas work are now being accepted in the employment office, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director. Interested students are urged to apply early in order to get their name on the first list. Christmas jobs will be available in almost all established stores, he added, so early applicants will be allowed a choice of many positions.

Students with a knowledge of draughting and mathematics are qualified for afternoon and Saturday work with a large concern.

Both experienced and inexperienced students are wanted for fountain, sales, and service station positions. Hours can be arranged to coincide with a college schedule in any of the aforementioned jobs.

Grocery clerks for Saturday are in demand but must have some experience.

"Anyone qualified or interested in any of these opportunities should contact me in Room 155 immediately," said Amori.

The college employment bureau has a variety of positions, both full and part time, to offer to interested college students. Only requirements are that the student applicant be a member in good standing of the Associated Student group. According to Amori there is no priority given one applicant over another because of longer attendance at the college. Those who first apply for a position will be given preference providing that they meet the requirements set forth by the prospective employer.

AMS Dance Nov. 17 First Of Extensive Social Dates

Important social dates on the social committee schedule for the semester remain the AMS barn dance and a dance formal on November 17 and December 5 respectively, according to Pat Niemeyer, vice-president of the Associated Students.

The traditional high sophomore formal which is held at the end of every semester has received a definite date this Niemeyer said. The date will be December 13.

Several mixers are also being planned but nothing definite can be said about these affairs as yet.

Hitler Breaks Coed Tradition

PORT ARTHUR, Texas—(ACP)—Maybe Hitler's doing something to thank Adolf H. and his playmates for, after all. This fall, for the first time since John W. (Dan's Millions) Gates founded the school in 1909, Port Arthur (Texas) College is permitting co-eds to attend classes bare-legged.

Because of government-confiscated silk supplies, college authorities decided to suspend the traditional ruling that campus legs must be covered.

Incidentally, co-eds in the "Shed Silk for Uncle Sam" club at the University of Minnesota, believe theirs was the first of its kind to be organized. Purpose of the club is to convince campus women that the army needs parachutes worse than girls need silk stockings.

The SSUSCS nine "charter martyrs" have pledged themselves to go along with bare legs and, if necessary, go barefooted in the interests of defense."

War's Tentacles Invade College Dome

By Doug Johnson

Tentacles of national defense and the war in Europe have reached across the Atlantic and wrapped themselves around the very dome of the college, literally putting out its eye.

The college astronomical observatory, according to Louis Berman, astronomy instructor, is suffering from myopia because optical discs for a full sized telescope must come from Germany, and other materials needed are on the nation's priority list.

"And with Mars coming so close," Berman sighed.

Perhaps some of the new students didn't know that that large silver "derby" the college wears is one of the largest astronomical observatories on the Pacific Coast. When a button is pushed, the sides of the dome part in the center, allowing space enough for a telescope to scan the heavens.

Every Monday evening at 7 o'clock the members of the astronomy club ascend the five flights of stairs to the observatory and roof of the college to study the path of the stars, until 9:30 p.m. With binoculars and the one small 'scope available they chart the courses of planets.

Then, with the wind howling about the college, they sit coolly inside, sipping and munching chocolate and cookies and making charts and studying astronomical globes.

"The sun spots that caused all the atmospheric and electrical cut ups on earth were observed three weeks ago with binoculars by students of the astronomy class," Berman chuckled smugly.

"This was very unusual because sun spots usually aren't seen at this time of the year. Still, we must have seen them because other observatories reported them, too."

Astronomy students are constantly on the alert to report a new comet. The Astronomical Association of the Pacific awards a bronze medal to any one who reports one.

Mars, fiery planet and namesake of the rod of war, will approach as closely to the earth as is possible in its 15 year orbit on October 3. Mars will then be only 32 million miles from Earth, a mere stone's throw to an astronomer, and astronomy students will have a chance to study its canals and polar tips with binoculars and the small telescope.

"If there are any inhabitants of the planet, Mars, they must be just as puzzled about some of the cavities on Earth as we are about their canals," Berman said.

Perhaps he was referring to Union Square.

College Band

Nineteen Musicians Ready To Practice Now Without Credit; Signups Still Open

Hopes for a college band next spring increased today with the signing up of 19 student musicians, according to an announcement made by Dean Edwin C. Browne.

Even though a regular class will not be inaugurated until next semester, it is hoped that a possible organization will take place in the current semester. According to Dean Browne, a meeting of the students now signed up will be held in the near future, and plans for musical organization will be discussed at that time.

New Band Members

Students of the college already signed up for the organization include the following:

Applications for drum major and majorettes have already been received by Browne, and will probably take over their positions when the band is permanently formed. Applications for positions of major and majorettes included:

Bill Walker, Neville Richards, Shirlia Ione Fagerstrom, and Irene Marie Wood.

First Attempt Failed

Begun last semester in response to student demands, the band was begun under the leddership of Madison Devlin of Lowell High School, but enthusiasm in the venture failed, partly because no credit was given for the course.

Registration for the current organization is still progressing in Dean Browne's office, and will continue until a sufficient number of applications is received.

Money, Unsold Books Ready For Claimants

Unsold books are now being returned to their owners at the Women's Service Society book exchange, and money for books sold is at the college bank, according to Violet Butler, president of the WSS.

Claim checks will be necessary before either money or books will be given to the owners, Miss Butler explained.

Exchange Remains Open

The exchange will remain open during the rest of the week, Miss Butler pointed out, and will then close until next semester when books will again be sold.

"Unclaimed books become WSS property," Miss Butler said, "and will be disposed of in some way. As there is no permanent book exchange room we have no space to store books from semester to semester."

Complete Figures Not Available

Complete figures for this semester's sales will be available in the near future. Some figures have been formulated, however, she added.

More than 2,000 books were handled during the first week and a half of the present semester, according to Miss Butler. The number of books handled nearly equaled the total of last semester. Nearly $600 was taken in this semester up to September 19, concluded Miss Butler.

Rallies

Commission Wants Women Yell Leaders

Two women are needed by the rally committee to assume the position of pep leaders, according to Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner. All college women are eligible to try out for the position. Applicant's names will be taken at the Associated Student office and referred to Mohorovich.

Duties of a pep leader are to take part in the between-halves ceremonies of all football games and to participate in college rallies. The pep leaders are a separate unit from the yell leaders having their own leader and their own part on any program in which they participate.

New Assistant Yell Leader

Another vacancy which had to be filled on the rally committee was the position of assistant yell leader. Don Cole, originally chosen for this position, has contacted larynx trouble which seriously hampers his yell leading. The new assistant will be introduced to the Associated Students at the step rally next Friday, October 3.

Also to be introduced at this rally will be a new yell that gains its derivation from the Chinese, according to the rally commissioner. The time of the rally has not been set as yet.

Students Wear College Colors

Mohorovich expressed the desire that all college members wear red and white in some form to the football games, and that the students who attend the games form a more compact rooting section.

AWS Officers Meet Today To Discuss Future Plans

Plans for future Associated Women Students events will be discussed at a meeting to be held this afternoon at 2 p.m. in Dean Dougherty's office, according to Betty Fox, president of the AWS.

Already this semester, the AWS has sponsored a mixer ten to three freshman women students. Plans are progressing for a barbecue which the AWS will sponsor in conjunction with the Women's Athletic Association on October 11, at Sigmund Stern Grove.

Purpose of the gathering will be to initiate new members of both organizations, and to acquaint the new members with the present ones. A nominal fee of approximately 25 cents will be charged for admission to the barbecue, said Bertha Keller, WAA adviser.

As yet the program of entertainment is problematical but will probably be composed of some games, some songs, and a few vocal solos, Miss Keller said.

Miss Fox declined to give any additional information about future plans of the AWS, saying that everything was rather indefinite, as yet.

Patricia Ruf Elected CAB Vice-President

Patricia Ruf was elected vice-president of the Club Advisory Board at a meeting of the board, Cecil Aggeler, CAB faculty adviser, announced last week.

Miss Ruf was formerly secretary-of the board. A new secretary will be elected at the board's next meeting.

NYA Applicants Advised To "Keep Trying"

Many students have applied for NYA work and have then virtually vanished, according to Claude A. Silva, NYA director. Immediate placement is not always possible, but students should keep trying until they receive a definite answer.

Approximately 10 applications are lying dormant in the NYA office because students have failed to return after their first interview.

"Our office staff is too limited for an individual investigation of these applicants. A dead line of October 9 has been established for further information regarding these applications. Situations not cleared up by then will be stricken from the files and the jobs given to other students," Silva said.

AMS Wants Men To Work On Barn Dance Committee

Men students are urgently needed to work on a committee arranging plans for the Associated Students barn dance to be held Monday, November 17, at the Alvarado Barn in Richmond, according to Don Jensen, AMS president.

Students who wish to gain a place on the committee should leave their name in the student body office or with Jensen. Any male student is eligible for appointment. Positions and assignments on the committee will be given out at a later date, Jensen said.

The boxing matches, which are also sponsored by the AMS, will be held on December 5, in the Coliseum Bowl, San Francisco. Winners of the intramural boxing contest will vie for championship honors of the college at the matches. Both of these events are semi-annual affairs sponsored by the AMS.

Band

Next Time Sure

BY NEXT spring President Cloud has assured the college of everything that goes to make a band but the players.

It is unfortunate that one more football season has to pass without the color of a band in the rooting section. We do know, however, that if sufficient students demonstrate an interest in band work, beginning next semester the football season of 1942 will see a band in action. That a portion of the band may be available for the next basketball season is quite within the realm of possibility.

One of the greatest impediments to the band thus far has been a suitable practice room. The soft strains of band music swelling about the economics or English classroom just do not contribute to the advancement of knowledge. It isn't that the architect had no music in his soul and omitted to plan a music room, it is merely that the campus is not completed. Full plans for the campus call for a super-auditorium with provision for music rooms.

For the present, the men's gymnasium is cited as the best solution to the practice room problem.

President Cloud also notes that money has already been appropriated for sheet music, and, as has been stated, instruments were granted the college last semester."

The best that can be done now is to look to next year and to remember that the college is still young, and development takes time.

And Pegler Smiled

LABOR-CONSCIOUS columnist Westbrook Pegler undoubtedly took time out from his attacks on the hod carriers' and common laborers' convention to cast a penetrating gaze on the State Federation of Labor's convention last week here at the Civic Auditorium.

A broad smile actuated by a kind of poetic justice must have crept over the usually stern face of Pegler when he read how Governor Olson, speaking before the convention, in one breath vilified him for his work and in the next breath issued a plea for observance of the very principles for which Pegler has been demanding for some four years now.

Speaking impliedly to Pegler in an address before the California labor convention, Governor Olson thundered:

"We all know that columnists writing for the capitalistic press are exploiting labor, and if they find a crook or racketeer they play that up. Labor is at a disadvantage in the field of publicity and seldom are its rights respected in the papers."

Immediately after these words, the Governor put forth a plea for prompt action against labor racketeers and that they be given maximum sentences for their crimes.

Almost daily, Pegler has reiterated his consternation at the crookedness of labor leaders. He has repeatedly exposed their nefarious practices. Last year he garnered the Pulitzer prize for this very work. Trying to impress the deep rottenness in American labor upon the public and the public officials has been almost an obsession with him.

We are quite sure that Pegler does not mind how much anyone may assail his writings so long as that person is incited to thought and action. It would seem that Governor Olson plays into both of the last classifications.

Quotable Quotes . . . (ACP)

"War is an evil, yes, a horror. But there are greater evils. War involves death, but what a different world we should have if men had not been willing to face physical destruction for a great and noble cause, for religion, for freedom of thought, for freedom of the body and the mind. Harmful as the effects of war have been on mankind, infinitely worse would it have been if mankind, to avoid it, had made a Munich of every crisis." Dr. Monroe E. Deutsch, vice-president and provost of the University of California, labels the totalitarian regime as worse than war.

Shots At ...RAMdom

was filled but not over-crowded, with students leaving the college. At the Forest Hills Station a well-upholstered woman boarded the bus, paid her fare and staggered between the seats, fighting centrifugal force all the way. She stopped in front of the seat of a Japanese gentleman. He smiled and courteously stood so she could sit down.

The lady sagged contentedly into the proffered seat, crossed her legs and stared out of the window.

"What was that you said, lady?" questioned the gentleman.

The lady paid no heed. He repeated his question.

"I didn't say a word. What's the matter with you?" she snapped.

"Excuse me," he replied, "I thought you said 'thank you.'"

Which is just about as diplomatic a rebuke as we've ever heard.

PERHAPS

some of you second-year students remember Frank Lellaris, who graduated in the spring of '39, just before the end of the jitney days when students studied between classes on street cars.

Frank was ambling down Market Street about two months ago. One of those fellows who take your picture and send it to you for 25 cents snapped him. Frank had just had a shave and was wearing his new suit so he sent in for his picture. When he received it 10 days later he was very surprised to see a picture of an old high school friend in the background.

He was so surprised, in fact, that he looked her up.

Perhaps they'll have their pictures taken when they leave Samuel's House of Lucky Wedding Rings tomorrow.

From now on we look behind us whenever we pass one of those men with cameras.

IN NEED of a haircut, we hopped down to the barber shop to buy one. All the chairs were occupied by helpless customers listening to their barbers eagerly explain the international situation. We parked comfortably, picked up a magazine and started to read an article entitled "Will the Auto Replace the Horse?" We overheard one of the men in white talking to a shave customer.

"You've been here before, haven't you?" he asked.

"No. 'Sa first time," mumbled the steaming man from under a towel.

"That's funny," mused the barber, "Your face looks familiar."

The customer sat up, removed the towel from his face and looked into the mirror.

"Heh, heh," he chuckled. "You're right. It does at that."

Makes you think, doesn't it?

● Electricity Or Gas?
Editor, The Guardsman:

Some people call me a crank, maybe that's why they always twist my words around, but I have been thinking about something that is turning me into a regular vortex of confusion. I am anxious about the current bond election to determine just who is going to distribute electric power to San Francisco. Maybe I'm a Socialist, but I want to see the city own the power plant, even if Harold Ickes wants it and even if I don't like Ickes.

Why doesn't The Guardsman do something about this? I'll be glad to furnish you free literature describing why the P. G. & E. shouldn't operate the city power system.

Hubert (High Voltage) McGee.

Editor's Note: Gee, I wish we could help, Hubert, but it happens that our sympathies still lie with the gas light. Besides, who ever was able to fry eggs over an electric light. No, Hubert, P. G. & E. or no P. G. & E., you can't change that. Why don't you try the Chamber of Commerce, they'd be happy to help you.

● Band Enthusiast
Editor, The Guardsman:

The comments which were expressed in the recent editorials are the sentiments of a lot of us students. Of course we feel that the college definitely needs a band to add to the school spirit. At least we hope that a band would add to this feeling which students of any organization should have. (What I mean is that good 'ole school spirit.) As for myself, I can't play an instrument, but I'll certainly say this much, if I did, I'd certainly be in there fighting for an opportunity to blow a few notes for "ye olde alma mater." I'm afraid, however, that I'll have to leave the tootin' of the horns to someone who knows how, but may I say this, "Gee I wish we had a band!!!!"

Hand Crazy,
Editor's Note: Refer to last Friday's issue for the background on the band. Briefly, a band is impossible again this semester. We are assured administration backing on a band for next semester. And we do echo your sentiments.

Your College Presents . . . Paint Technicians: They Can Really Mix Things Up

By Ivanna Hayworth

ONE of four in the United States to offer paint technology as a course, this college is the only one to offer it as a semi-professional course.

This course itself was organized and instituted into the college terminal curriculum after President Archibald J. Cloud had asked Walter D. Forbes of the chemistry department to try to find how the chemistry department of the college could be brought together with departments outside of the college.

Since the Bay Area is one of the most important paint manufacturing centers of the United States, it seemed logical to go into this field. For some time various meetings were held by executives in the industry to get their reactions on such a course, and their unanimous approval had much to do with the organization and foundation of this department.

STARTED WITH NEW BUILDINGS

This new department had its start in the new buildings of the college one year ago, with its laboratories containing the finest and most complete equipment for the students to start their training. Because of the difficulty in securing an instructor who was fully prepared to teach the course, Forbes has served as the instructor for the students enrolled in this work, for the past year.

This year, however, a man from the industry, Hal Harlan, is instructing the students. This idea is carried out in other terminal courses as well, as it seems to be a good idea to have men who know the business instruct the students interested in that field.

TRAINING IN COMPOSITION

The idea of the course is to give the students thorough fundamental training in composition of paints, lacquers, varnish, synthetics, and enamel so that these students can find jobs in this field. Lectures are supplemented by laboratory work in the formulation of paints and the use of these oils, pigments, thinners, and driers.

Only one course is being offered this semester. In it elementary instruction is given to the students enrolled. The class, so far this semester, has 17 students enrolled, which is a very good percentage, according to Harlan.

NEW COURSES TO BE ADDED

Next semester it has been planned to offer three such courses, which will, of course, take a much larger scope in the field. One such course (and this will be of interest to a great many of the students here), will take in the basic principles of interior and exterior decoration, color harmony and lighting effects. A brief study of different fabrics, wall coverings, and building materials will also be undertaken.

Another rather interesting course to be offered will be one in synthetics. This will involve the study of the formulation and composition of clear synthetics, enamels and the relation of synthetics to paints, varnishes and lacquers. Laboratory practice will be given in the preparation of surfaces and the application and use of these synthetics.

A rather illuminating fact which will prove another point of interest is the business training which the students in the course obtain. Opportunities are given these people who are majoring in the course to acquire skills through co-operative work on the job in local establishments.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE

Employment possibilities in this field, it seems, are at a high tide at the present time. All the students who were enrolled in the course last semester found employment during the summer. For this reason, if for no other, any student who might wish to qualify for employment as technician in a laboratory, a store, an office, or as a salesman in the paint industry should be highly interested in this opportunity.

Although this program is semi-professional in nature, it is not intended as a trade course for painters and contractors. The scope of work, however, as well as the skills acquired will be of great value to anyone who may later choose to follow painting as a line of trade, or who might wish to engage in contracting business. Also this course may be of interest to those people who are in any industry which is engaged in or allied with the various phases of the making or applying paint.

Something very unusual to note is the fact that there are two women students enrolled in this paint technology course.

Within the next two or three weeks, the men in charge of the department at the college and those from the industry have plans to begin a series of lectures in the evenings at the college. These lectures will be made by various experts in the industry, and will be free and open to the public. The exact time will be announced later, according to Forbes.

CLAY MAKING

The paint technology class hasn't as yet a club organized, however, according to Forbes, the plans for one are in the making. This club will probably meet in one or various downtown plants and laboratories. Last semester although the whole class made these various trips, it was not under the functioning order of a club. Some of the planned trips for this semester are to the Fuller plants, National Lead, and others.

A final and very interesting bit concerning the paint technology department is that it has been planned as the course grows to have a complete manufacturing paint plant in the college. This will take place in the laboratory where they already have practically all the needed equipment. The students will learn to make lead-oil paints, varnishes and other needed equivalents in small quantities, which in turn will be used in their work.

(Friday the radio engineering department will be featured.)

FEM ADS . . . by Nancy

BY THIS time you probably know what the college women are wearing this year. There has been a mixer dance, a football game, a tea, and the inevitable—classes. So if you have been to any or all of these events you know what makes up our campus fashions.

Today there won't be any clothes mentioned. And you can see just what goes on for the benefit of women students in the way of extra-curricular activities.

WOMEN ONLY

Upon registration all women automatically become members of the Associated Women Students. Generally three activities are planned by the AWS during the school year. One, a tea for new students, has already come and gone. Last year, Homecoming for the alumni and the fashion show were the other two events. Future plans for this year are indefinite.

Women's Athletic Association is another of the larger organizations primarily, or rather exclusively for women. All women students are invited to join, and take part in the playdays, tournaments and social gatherings with women of their own college, and of nearby colleges. Athletic clubs are formed so that women may get other sports into their college life in addition to their physical education class. Splash parties, barbecues, and costume parties, are some of the social events given by the WAA.

If you are one who goes in for school sweaters, here is your chance to get an SF block without being on the football team. For WAA awards blocks to eligible women who fulfill specific requirements.

READY, WILLING, UN-ABLE

Home economics students have an organization in which they admit a limited number of non-home economics students who are ready, willing, and want to become able. Meetings are held monthly, and social events are held where the women cook and serve the food themselves. "It's good, too," (voice of experience speaking). They also have foreign dinners where costumes are worn to fit the country and the food served.

Theater lovers (although love actually isn't required—an interest will do) may join the Campus Players. An organization whose members perform for rallies, teas and other social functions. Since there are no facilities for stage plays on the campus, none have been attempted as yet. Eventually, is not strictly women. Men, too, are included.

Clubs, some of which are sororities, also exist for those interested or majoring in nursing, physical education and recreation, riding, skating, music and art.

NAN SEES . . .

collegennes realizing that extra-curricular activities are just as important as daily instruction classes. Besides, they add to your social life.

The University of Texas spends less money per student than any of the other 32 members of the Association of American Universities.

Cowie ... New Wine ... more like tepid lemonade
Spectator . . .

LIFE stories of great classical composers have always remained an inexhaustible source for screen material; many great music masters lived dramatic and rich lives, as glowing and burning as their imperishable music.

The screen, for some reason in its wild quest after story ideas and themes has wantonly ignored this evident, abundant field. The purposed screening of Paul Muni in the life of Beethoven has been postponed and postponed until now it is only an indefinite rumor. Until strong meat of this dynamic caliber comes along, we will have to be content with minor efforts such as New Wine, a purported glimpse into the life of composer Franz Schubert. Not that this dainty little ethereal number is bad, but it never attains the potent heights that potentially lay in the script prepared by Howard Estabrook and Nicholas Joy.

GOOD SETTINGS AND PHOTOGRAPHY

Gloria Productions assembled a smart, capable cast headed by beautiful Ilona Massey, maneuvered some fresh, charming settings and sparkling photography, added a group of Schubert's lovely melodies, put them together in a nice compact bundle and the result . . . a quiet, peaceful little prodduction with scarcely one outstanding moment to lift it from a state of restful passitivity.

New Wine bases its story on a semi-fictional episode in the life of the unfortunate young genius who gave to the world immortal music before passing on at the age of thirty-one. It carries Schubert as he flees Vienna into Hungary to escape the baite of conscription-hungry mercenaries and the pangs of personal starvation. In Hungary, he encounters Anna (Ilona Massey) manager of a sheep farm. Anna perceives the budding genius in the shy, awkward young man returns to Vienna with him to drive him on to belated recognition.

Hardships are many for the struggling pair; Franz is forced to return to his mathematics professorship, but Anna continues fighting for Franz. Eventually, she takes a copy of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony to Beethoven to gain an encouraging word from the deaf master.

Upon Beethoven's advice hinges the climax of the story, a climax of bittersweet tragedy.

STORY FAILS TO MOVE

The story really is too weak to produce any power of emotional scope. Actually, the story has as much emphasis placed on comedy as upon the dramatic aspects. Director Reinhold Schunzel did absolutely nothing to build up climaxes or highlights; he constructed his film on the same level mold throughout. New Wine's 87 minute running time consequently. New Wine proved somewhat of a disappointment although it is not a poor picture in any sense of the word.

As Anna, Ilona Massey is appropriately charming and lyrical. Her voice, limited to three brief numbers, is beautiful. We hoped for more singing, less acting from Miss Massey. Franz Schubert is portrayed by Alan Curtis, a young lad who has done little or nothing before in Hollywood. His performance is quiet, dramatically unimportant, but quite sincere.

ALBERT IN SUPPORTING ROLE

Actually Albert Basserman as Beethoven does all the acting of any worth in the picture. His one scene with Miss Massey is the outstanding sequence of the film.

The true star of New Wine is Schubert's powerful music. It carries the picture along as passable entertainment.

WHAT the well-run initiation is doing this season was materially demonstrated at the recent football game with State. The game was won, but, no doubt, there were a few fluctuating gullets around afterwards, especially among those persons who were ordered to eat live goldfish as a trial of courage. One character remarked sarcastically that he felt fine. He was trying to convince himself of the fact more than he was anyone else.

Believe it or not, the mascot of the college is not a Ram. According to some around the gym it is a toad. This toad perhaps was a token of good luck if one chooses to believe superstition. Oscar, as he is called, can sometimes be found sitting in a puddle near the south end of the men's gym.

Are there saboteurs at work? From the appearance of those desolate and forlorn looking lamps along the walk leading to the gym it would seem so. Don't tell us that the wind is so stiff that it does that.

Ted Theodus, ex-AMS president, claims the distinction of being the only eighth semester student of the college. Ted is very happy about the whole thing. If he lasted another eight, the college should certainly erect a statue to him.

Art Pearl, that silent, reserved lad, has promised to do something colossal within a short while. Art claims no outde the most stupendous act ever to take place within the college.

A practical place for an ashcan(?) is that windswept corner at the southeast corner of the building. We have hardly seen a human being standing out on that tornado center—let alone a light piece of paper.

During the fire-drill held last Monday the batallion chief scrutinized the entire building to find it practically devoid of students, but found an office full of instructors hiding on the second floor in fear of the fresh air.

For the benefit of those who insist on holding hands, (sweet, isn't it?) in the hall, summer is over.

A lot of people have been complaining about riding in the Tenth Avenue bus. Some say that they are getting flat feet from standing up every day of the week. Others complain about men not giving their seats to the ladies. Well, after profound consideration we have the matter figured out with the essence of equality. Not everyone can sit down, but the seats could be removed and everyone would be riding to college on an equal basis. Remember, girls, if a man gets up and gives you his seat after a hard day's work it is either a sign that you're good looking or that you're pretty decrepit. Don't flatter yourselves.

Chapman, Hitler All Stars; California Freshmen Next

By Bill Cothran

FRANCE'S Maginot line and Germany's Siegfried line are two of the world's three great lines. The third great line? The line of the 1937 University of California football team, better known as the "Thunder Team." The Siegfried line won the world championship from its traditional rival, the Maginot line. The "Thunder Team" won its title in the Rose Bowl against Alabama. Both winning squads, strangely enough, had an All-something-or-other back. Sam Chapman was rated All-American for the Bears, while Adolph Hitler is still rated the trickiest and hardest man to stop in his, or any other, league.

REMEMBER THE "FOUR HORSEMEN"?

Which men on these two great teams received, or are still receiving the reams of publicity written about them, did the stalwarts of the Golden Bear line receive their share of publicity? No, it was that Chapman, Bottari, Meek and Anderson combine that wolfed up the greater share of the team's glory, although the line did, from time to time, share a minor part of the limelight. The Siegfried line was publicized only in the contest against the Frogs. The rest of the time it was Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and Himmler that received praise as a new set of "The Four Horsemen" (this time of the Apocolypse, not Notre Dame).

THUS BE IT E'ER

Such is the case on all football teams, when that "best I've ever coached" squad turns up, it is the backfield that is marked down for posterity, and rarely, if ever, the seven stalwarts in front of the backs. And thus will it ever be. For as long as the backs carry the ball, and there is no other way to play football, the backs will be the men who accumulate the most clippings in their scrap-books.

CAL FROSH NEXT

Now that the Los Angeles City College game has been played, the Rams find two-ninths of their season already completed, and only seven more contests, or 420 minutes of football, remaining. This Saturday, Lee Eisan's varsity will amble across the bay to Berkeley, there to enjoy, and attempt to abuse, the hospitality of the California Frosh, endearingly called the "Cubs," in contrast to their varsity organization, the "Golden Bears."

SPLASHERS ORGANIZED

According to latest reports from we-don't-know-who, this semester the college will sport a water polo team. Never before, in its brief career, has the college organized a water polo unit. The splashers will compete against teams at the University of California and Stanford University, coupled with several other outfits. A tentative squad has already been selected. Our spies, however, have not yet revealed just who will hold down the position of Head Coach in charge of Water Polo and Assorted Splashing.

WHAT'S THIS?

Helen Crienkovich, she of diving acclaim, seems to be turning her abilities into another field of athletic endeavor. This semester, under the women's physical ed. system, Miss Crienkovich has enrolled in a tennis class. Wonder if she'll play tennis as well as she dives?

Women's Athletics

Members To Use Women's Gym On Mondays, Wednesdays At 2 PM

Women's Athletic Association members wishing to practice badminton or basketball may use the women's gymnasium on Mondays and Wednesdays at 2 p. m., Bertha Keller, faculty adviser for the WAA, announced last week.

Ping-pong tables have also been set up on the mezzanine floor and at the southern end of the lobby for WAA members.

Aileen Kinkel, swimming instructor, reports that she has one of the best swimming teams the college has ever had, and hopes with the aid of those students and others not in the WAA to have the swimming playday here.

Signups Taken Now

Students who have signed up for WAA activities are reminded by Miss Keller to have their health echeck as soon as possible. Alice Potter, women physician, is in her office in the gym on Tuesdays and Fridays from 9 a. m. to 12 m., and on Mondays and Thursdays from 1 to 4 p. m. Appointments may be made, although they are not necessary.

Qualifications, other than health eligibility, required for the chenille emblem awarded by the WAA are a scholarship rating of not less than "C" average, regular participation and interest in sport and club activities, neat appearance, and not more than two unexcused absences, Miss Keller explained.

MANAGERS ELECTED

All club activities began last week, Miss Keller pointed out, and managers were elected. Names of the newly-elected managers will be published next week.

Members who wish to drop clubs they signed for should report to the gym and check off their names, Miss Keller said.

Intramural

Finals In Free Throwing Set For Today

Finals of the intramural basketball free-throwing tournament will be held this afternoon at 3 p. m. in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, faculty adviser, announced last week.

As has been stated before, no entry blanks are necessary, and any student who did not participate in the competition last week may enter today. At present, leading the field of qualifiers into the final round is Suzy Louis, who found the range for 10 field goals out of a possible 25. Bob Roberts is holding the runnerup position momentarily, sinking eight field goals out of 25, two short of Louis' standing mark. If these marks are not overshadowed this afternoon, the winner will be awarded a gold medal, and the runnerup a silver one.

Basketball October 2

From advance reports, the basketball league is scheduled to begin Thursday, October 2. The schedule for the first round of play may be found on the intramural bulletin board in the science building or on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium, Brady said. Managers of the quintets are requested to keep close contact with these notices, for it will be their own responsibility if their squad does not report for the game at the specified time.

If there are any teams who failed to hand their entry blanks in last Friday and still wish to enter the league, the manager of the team should hand the entry slip in to Brady immediately. The entry may be accepted, provided there is an opening.

New Rules Effective

Two new rules are being taken into effect this semester, Brady said. First, a team which forfeits its second game because of non-appearance, that team will automatically be disqualified from the league. Secondly, if any team appears with four men only, they are eligible to play provided they are given permission by Brady and the other team. However, if the four-man squad should win, the game cannot be protested at a later date.

Decision of the judges will be final and will not be disputed. In case of any doubt, which cannot be settled on the spot, the team captain will state that he objects and play will be resumed. However, the protest may be filed with Brady.

Finalists Of AMS Fights Back This Semester

With signups still being taken in the Monday and Wednesday classes at 1 o'clock, and with boxing getting into full swing as the semester progresses, Coach Jim Eisan seems very well pleased with his boys after a week of boxing practice. The other class on Monday and Wednesday at 2 o'clock is filled, and is now closed.

"We have some boys back this semester that fought in the finals of the AMS fights last semester," said Jensen. They are Dave Hunicke, who gave the fans an exciting moment when he annexed the 165-pound crown from Ken McKenzie.

Another returner is Bryant Finch, who put up a game battle before losing to the more experienced Tom Mahoney in the light heavyweight class. Also coming back this semester is Duke Drake, winner of the heavyweight crown, and Ken Ludlem, 130-pound class, and George Chew, 125-pound class.

The AMS fights will be held in the early part of December, with the finals being held before the Christmas vacation, Jensen announced.

He explained that the boys are just limbering up now, with the less experienced boxers being taught the fundamentals of boxing, such as the proper way to stand, and to punch, while the other more experienced boys are working out with other fighters.

As an afterthought, Jensen said that he had discovered a boy in one of his boxing classes that is very good, and should be a strong contender in the coming intramurals. He fights in the 150-pound class.

Barbecue Planned By WAA For Sigmund Stern Grove

Circle grove, a portion of Sigmund Stern Grove, will be the scene of the first outing planned by the Women's Athletic Association, in collaboration with the Associated Women Students, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, announced.

"Reservations may be made through the school bank," Bernice Strube, chairman of the barbecue stated. This reservation entitles the student to a box lunch and a hot drink, which will be furnished by the AWS.

Entertainment for the event will consist of folk dancing, community singing, presentation of puppets by Teddy Ruegg, and a short talk by Betty Fox, president of the AWS.

New members as well as new managers for the WAA will also be initiated at the affair, Miss Strube said.

As the day following the outing is a school day, Miss Strube pointed out that it will begin at 5:30 p. m. and end early enough that students may still have time to study.

Stories Of Ram Vs Cub Game

By Bob Marcus

Proving to be as great as his press notices from the southland, Jackie Fellows, fleet-footed halfback from Los Angeles City College, practically defeated the Rams single handed last Saturday night. Fellows not only turned in an excellent piece of field generalship as signal caller, but displayed ability equally as a dynamic ball carrier and as a passer. He will be a welcome addition to the Southern California Trojans next season.

Coach Glenn Ackerman's eleven employed the Notre Dame system, using mostly a shift to the right with a man in motion to the left, showing to great advantage.

Scouting the Rams and busily taking notes on the game was Bob Herwig, former All-American center from California and present Bear Freshmen coach. Reason for his intense interest is that his Bear Cubs face the Rams next Saturday afternoon at Berkeley in the California Memorial Stadium.

Also viewing the game from the first base stands were Tony Compagno and Bill McFarland, members of the St. Mary's Gaels, who appeared battered and torn through their efforts in the California game last Saturday.

In the third quarter, a pass thrown by Fellows intended for Charley Beckman, Cub right end, was momentarily deflected off the outstretched finger tips of Art Ekdall, Ram right halfback, into the hands of Beckman, who caught the ball outside the end zone boundary. Had Beckman caught the pass two yards further in, the Cubs would have scored their third touchdown, but as it was, the play was called back.

Visiting the Ram dressing room after the battle, Coach Ackerman commended, "Although we started out with a green squad, at the beginning of the year, the team was built around three members who saw plenty of action the previous year, namely Charley Beckman and Rex Schroder, ends, and Jack Wallis, tackle. In Beckman and Schroder, I honestly believe that LACC has the best pair of ends playing in the junior college ranks today. In short, I think our squad was too fast and that Fellows was too much football player. However, during the first half, a weak pass defense was detected by my observers in the Ram defensive area, and so changed my offensive tactics in the latter part of the contest, having Fellows throw passes until one clicked for a touchdown. At no time did I believe that the boys were going to lose."

In the rather solemn dressing room of the Rams, Coach Lee Eisan said, "Our squad played bad football and the LACC'ans were too big and fast."

In a general summary of the tilt, the college squad lacked a good running and passing attack, and showed only a creditable kicking average, mainly through the educated toe of Temple Davies.

Sweet May Get Grading Machine To Level Track

The main objective of fall track at the present time is to get the practice field in better shape so that the track and field men can condition themselves for the coming season.

Coach Dan Sweet is very busy trying to get a grading machine, which will level the track and clean it of weeds. This will mean that the athletes will have a much better chance to show their best, and should develop more swiftly than under the conditions the track was in last semester.

Should Sweet get the grading machine, it will be a tremendous help to the success of the team. As it was last year, the college tracksters had to practice on the Balboa High School field, which was not especially handy for them.

Coach Sweet also plans to resurface the track, which will make it faster and much better to run on. The athletes will not have to encounter holes, which can be very dangerous to a runner, while practicing.

There are still some 40 men turning out for the fall track practice sessions, including some notable transfers.

Four Aces Dealt Rams

Water Polo Added To College List Of Sports; Practice At Jefferson

Coached by one of the new physical education instructors, Allan Elsan, the new, and very popular sport, water polo, made its entrance into the college this week.

Any man student, whether he has amphibian tendencies or not, may still sign up with Coach Elsan in the men's gymnasium.

Although no definite dates have been set as to the games scheduled with other colleges, many contests are expected to be played. The mermen are already practicing at the Jefferson pool with the advanced swimming class.

"From what I've seen of the boys, they look pretty good," Elsan said.

The team is being managed by Don Rush, who may or may not be eligible to play. So far, the college splashers have eight other potential teams to meet, the Stanford Frosh, California Frosh, San Jose State Frosh, Olympic Club Reserve, Athens Club, Moffett Field, Hamilton Field, and College of Pacific or Stockton Junior College.

It will be interesting to note that two of the teams are from the Army air bases around the Bay Region, namely Moffett Field, at Sunnyvale, and Hamilton Field, in Marin County.

Although only 12 students have come out for the sport, Coach Elsan hopes that more will do so soon.

The students that are already out practicing are Don Rush, Maurice Richardson, Warren Kleist, Bill Hickey, Phil De Lano, Don Barton, Don Grannis, Tom Calahan, Bill Lockstuff, Bill Weiner, Howard Schuff, and Jim Duncan.

Water polo, as many people know, is no child's game. It requires plenty of stamina, a lot of intestinal fortitude, and quite a lot of experience as a swimmer.

It is a rough and tumble game, with both sides playing for keeps.

"If the students of the college take to this sport, as I think they will, it will become a major sport in the college curricula," said Coach Elsan.

Clinic To Aid Students In Horseback Riding

To aid students who wish to improve their horseback riding, the northern unit of the National Section of Women's Athletics will have a riding clinic Saturday, November 1, at Mills College stables, Laurine Bergin, college riding instructor, revealed last week.

"In addition to having riding criticized by experienced riders, there will be a demonstration of horses and displays of riding tack," Mrs. Bergin pointed out.

Men or women who wish to attend this clinic should contact any member of the riding club or Mrs. Bergin. Students need not be members of the riding club or be enrolled in riding of the college to attend the clinic. Entrance fee will be one dollar.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

First Meeting Tomorrow To Set Policy, Plans

New and old members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma will hold their first meeting of the semester tomorrow in Room 204 at 4 p.m. to consider the plans of the group for the coming year. Presiding at the meeting will be Gordon Petersen, past president of the society.

To be considered at the meeting are the election of officers, semester dues, club pins, and plans for a coaching system.

Tea To Follow

Entertainment will follow immediately after the business meeting in the form of an afternoon tea so the new members can get acquainted with the old.

Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser of the organization, extended a welcome to all the new members and expressed hope that everyone would attend.

Membership Defined

Eligible to attend the meeting are the old members and the new members whose names were either printed in The Guardsman on September 23 or on September 26.

Any student who thinks that his or her name should have been included in the printed list was advised to see Miss Cooper in Room 186 between 10 and 11 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Faculty Association Committees To Meet

To plan activities for the semester, each committee of the Faculty Association will hold a meeting in the near future, Ward M. Nichols, president of the association, announced last week.

The Educational Problems Committee will meet at chairman John Ross' home on Thursday evening, October 2 at 7:30.

Welfare Committee Meets

The Welfare Committee is to meet on Wednesday, October 1, at the home of Mary B. Perry, committee chairman.

Other committees of the Faculty Association are expected to announce the time of meetings at an early date.

Committees Named

The following is a list of the committees of the Faculty Association and their chairmen:

Public Relations Committee, Lloyd Luckmann; Book Club Committee, Nelson Wells; Social Committee, Oscar Anderson; Educational Problems Committee, John Ross; Insurance Committee, Manfred Mueller; Service Committee, Glen Camp; Welfare Committee, Mary Perry; Salary Committee, Alfred Agosti.

The Contributions Plan Committee has no chairman as yet, but its members plan to elect one in the near future.

Theater Management Course Added At Duke—No Credit

DURHAM, N.C.—(ACP)—A non-credit course in "theater management" is now a part of Duke University's student training.

The students gain practical experience at the university motion picture theater on the campus. Their training is supplemented by instruction by non-faculty lecturers.

Graduates who formerly worked at the student-operated cinema hold annual "alumni reunions" and are guests of honor at a party given by the theater's current staff.

Primary School Sign-ups Drop; Colleges' Rise

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ACP)—While elementary school enrollment figures are plunging far below those of a year ago, America's colleges and high schools have not yet felt the full effects of lowered birth-rates during the depression of the thirties.

The United States office of education estimates college enrollment this year will be 1,450,000, a rise of 25,000. Some educators questioned the accuracy of this early estimate, in view of the drift of college-age men into the armed services.

Those expecting an increase in total college enrollment contend that while Johnny may go to the army or to work, "more men in jobs means more money for Mary's education."

The education office estimates enrollment in elementary schools has dropped to 20,707,000, a decline of 210,000 in a year. The estimate for high school enrollment is 7,334,000—up 100,000.

Total school enrollments, as calculated by the education office, embrace more than 2,800,000 in evening and part-time schools, business colleges, nurse training institutions and private trade schools. The grand total is set at 31,566,000, a decline of 160,000.

High Sophs

Festive Week Starts In December

With the appointment of his high sophomore formal dance committee, George Coart, class president, launched early preparations for high sophomore week in mid-December.

Myron Du Bain was named chairman of the trio in charge of the formal, tentatively set for December 13 at the California Country Club. He will be assisted by Dick Naftaly and Marion Anderson. All agree that they hope to make the dance the best in the history of the college.

Dance Climaxes Final Week

The dance will climax the final week of classes before the Christmas holidays, a week in which the high sophomores will be allowed to "reign supreme." Several other events are being arranged which, according to Coart, will make the week a gala one.

As yet no orchestra has been decided upon, and the president and his committee are open to any suggestions any member of the college might have.

Breakfast Held Last Semester

Last semester, the high sophomore formal, held at the San Francisco Golf and Country Club, was followed by a breakfast at Fishermans' Grotto.

This breakfast was started in the fall of 1940, and the custom was so popular among those attending the formal, that it was continued by Edward Hardies, then president of the high sophomore class.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Astronomy Club . . . Students interested in astronomy are invited to attend the meeting of the Astronomy Club held every Monday evening in the college observatory at 7:30 p.m., according to Anna Held, a member of the group.

The purpose of the organization is to promote interest in astronomy among the students of the college.

Officers of the club are president, Margaret Haloner; vice-president, Edmund Ellis, and secretary-treasurer, John O'Brien.

After each meeting refreshments will be served.

● Christian Science Society . . . All those interested in a Christian Science Society will get in touch with Gloria Shank by telephone. Telephone number is OVerland 2776. All calls should be made by October 3.

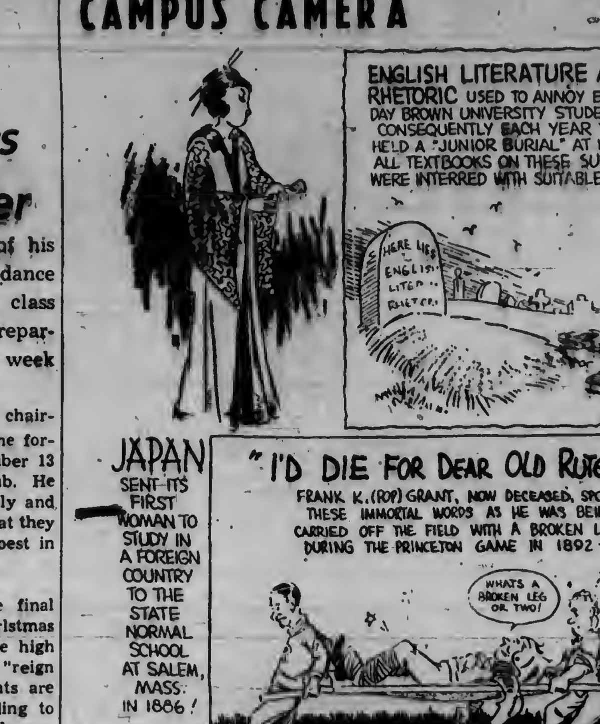
● Forester's Fraternity . . . Meeting today, September 30 at 4 p.m. in Room 136. Motion pictures pertaining to forestry will be shown. Those interested in forestry are invited to attend.

● Nu Epsilon Sigma . . . Those interested in joining the society, primarily devoted to students in the pre-nursing curriculum, are invited to attend a get-acquainted party on October 1, at the home of President Pat Mooney, 177 San Aleso Way at 7:30 o'clock.

● Pi Mu Gamma . . . All members are urged to attend a meeting in Room 136 Wednesday, October 1, at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Dr. Chauncy Leake, to discuss Development of Anaesthesia.

● Riding Club . . . Will meet in the near future at the home of Betty McKinnon, former member of the club, and now student at the University of California. Date to be announced later.

● Rifle and Pistol Club . . . First meeting of the semester to be held Thursday, October 2, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 46. All members and non-members are urged to attend. A business meeting will be held to discuss future events. Shooting will be held, together with refreshments after adjournment.



Internal Publicity Posts Posters; Enthusiasm Rises

Every possible effort is being made at the present time to coordinate the spirit of the student body, George Coart, chairman of the internal publicity committee, announced Friday.

The small signs seen throughout the halls of the college this semester are being done by students of William Eckert's advertising art classes, according to Coart. Jack Dunn and John Prangos have been doing a great deal of the work, he added.

Coart disclosed that at the end of each week henceforth, pictures of all that has happened during the week will be placed in the showcase on the main floor for the students to enjoy.

Frosh Orientation Groups Learn Through Tour; New Books Here

To learn the inner workings of the college library, freshman orientation classes have been permitted to inspect the library thoroughly this week, according to Marion Turner, orientation instructor.

Each orientation class has been to the library once this week, each person being allowed to roam and explore the library at will. The students are learning the principle of the Dewey decimal, the process of locating essential material, workings of the card catalog and reader's guide, and how to look up reference material both general and specific.

Individual Floor Plan Made

An individual floor plan was drawn by everyone so as to gain a thorough knowledge of the library.

An experiment is now being carried on in one of the classes. Each student will be required to work out his own individual bibliography for a research problem.

Student Finds Subject

The student is to find a subject in which he has a special interest, or wishes to specialize, gather his own source of reference material, and then share his findings with the class.

"This experiment was carried on last semester and found to be very practical and helpful to the new student," Miss Turner pointed out.

With plans for an increasingly usable library for the college, Marcus Skarstedt, librarian, announced that many new volumes will be added to last year's total collection.

"Although our library is rather small for the size of the student body," Skarstedt said, "we can still seat about 225 students at one time, since a number of tables have been added for studying purposes."

The librarian continued, saying that last year, the library was used extensively by the students and that daily circulation never dropped below 250. In April, he said, the library averaged a circulation of 360 books per day.

"The library is open every day except Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and any student is welcome to use it during those hours," he added.

Unclaimed Purses, Books Remain In Lost, Found

Several purses and books are still unclaimed, Margaret Dougherty, dean of women reported last week, and await the call of their owners in her office, Room 126.

Although this has been announced several times before, Miss Dougherty said that the right owners have not yet turned up. She suggested that anyone who loses or has lost anything report to her office several times before giving up their search. Many times the finder is delayed before bringing the article to the office and in the meantime the loser has searched all possible places and given up.

Advanced Pilot Training To Start October 1

Advanced training in the Civil Pilot Training program will begin around October 1, under the direction of Major George D. Richards, Civil Pilot Training instructor, here.

Training will include preliminary flying of 225 Horsepower Waco planes in which students will have about 40 hours training. Flyers will learn the acrobatics taught by the army primary training courses. It will use identical equipment used by primary schools throughout the country.

Students of the courses, for the first time, will wear uniforms. These uniforms will be purchased by the student and will bear the insignia of the Civil Pilot Training.

After graduation the men will enter the Army Air Corps as cadets with credit for primary training. They will then enter into basic fundamental flying.

The college aviation course has sent cadets to all parts of the country. Randolph Field, and the United States Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Florida, are two bases that have a number of these graduates.

College Students Promoted To Mess Sergeants In Army

Because of experience gained in the Hotel and Restaurant Division, two former students of the division, Carl Rutledge and Ronald Flauntz, were promoted to mess sergeants when they recently joined the United States Army, Mozelle Milliken, publicity manager of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, announced last week.

Citing another example of how a student benefited from his time spent in the Hotel and Restaurant Division, Mrs. Milliken said that Henri Carbonell, a graduate of the division, is now working in a local hotel.

Carbonell was recommended for this job by Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel Division, Mrs. Milliken added.

Youth Knows More Of Shoes Than Of Prospective Spouses

ST. LOUIS—(ACP)—Too often young people know less about their prospective spouses than they do about a new pair of shoes, the Rev. Benjamin R. Fulkerson, S.J., declared in a recent marriage lecture at St. Louis University.

Father Fulkerson said:

"Just as shoes must wear well to be practical, so also must a partner in matrimony wear well to make a successful marriage."

The subject of Father Fulkerson's lecture was "Picking a Partner and Falling in Love."

"Marriage," Father Fulkerson said, "is not a perpetual honeymoon nor a heart-throbbing frolic; it is an important step and an important state that is binding upon the contracting parties until death."

"Bad" choices in marriage partners are made because of infatuation or concupiscence, hasty entrance into matrimony because of a fear of fleeting years, or a false value of charm placed upon a person of the opposite sex, Father Fulkerson said.

"Infatuation causes a person to see good looks, a fine physique and sterling qualities in another when actually there are present only bad morale, laziness and a shriveled and selfish soul," Father Fulkerson said. "Too many unmarried people get frantic after 21 and rush into marriage. Others place a false premium on appearance, kid ideas about sophistication, wise cracking and jitterbugging ability."

Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, Texas—Three years in the making, a self-portrait of the American collegian is today ready.

On more than two hundred campuses from coast to coast, student interviewers have been conducting the Student Opinion Surveys of America, an organization financed by the University of Texas Student publications and sponsored by the country's leading college newspapers, include The Guardsman.

Democratic through and through, awake to the social problems of the day, even more emphatic in his beliefs than his elders—that is the kind of student found among the majority of the million and a half now occupied in the process of higher learning in this nation. Student Opinion Surveys, using a representative cross section to cover every type enrolled in all manner of institutions, represents every section of the country, mathematically weighting each geographical division to its proper proportion in the national sampling. "A Gallup-esque poll," Time magazine called it.

Analyzed from a common point of view, 96,000 separate answers result in the most complete continuing study yet devised to measure the attitudes of U. S. college youth. Summarized from more than a hundred questions polled, here is a picture of what the students themselves think and what education ought to be.

Higher education, a good majority believes, is not over-emphasized, as some people would seem to think. Education is not even meeting present-day needs, they conclude.

What would they do to improve it? The problem is obviously one of tremendous proportions, but these are a few of the suggestions: Students will tell you that there are too many campus misfits cluttering up the schools; they would find some way to restrict enrollment. Sex education courses they would make compulsory, but attendance would be voluntary to college classes. Most co-eds would disparage the notion that it is more important to find a husband at college than to study. Final examinations, 53 per cent say, are not a fair test of a student's knowledge in a course. But most would prefer to keep the ABC system of grading instead of being either passed or failed. The larger part frown on hazing.

Overwhelmingly approved by both men and women is R.T.O.C. training and civilian aviation courses. In general, however, higher education as the students would plan it would point more and more toward a wide cultural background than technical and professional training. The war has brought new problems. But college students are apparently level-headed. They approve of military training now, but not permanently; they are more emphatic about keeping out of war than their elders.

In one of the most emphatic votes ever registered by Student Opinion Surveys, 96 per cent asserted that college administrations should have no right to hinder a student's personal political activities or expressions of opinion. Only 9t per cent, however, defended faculty members' right of complete academic freedom. Most students want to learn the facts about the "isms" in the classroom. "But be sure the teachers teach; not preach," said a middle-western junior. They want their college editors to discuss extra-mural problems of the day; 75 per cent read editorial comment in their college papers. (Condensed from an article currently appearing in Motive magazine.)

Nat Hoekenga Elected A Capella Choir Manager

Nathaniel Hoekenga was elected unanimously by members of the A Capella Choir to serve as their manager for this semester at the choir meeting held Wednesday, September 24, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

The A Capella Choir will open its season with a program for the convention of Women's Clubs, beginning October 31, at the Western Women's Club.

Auditions have been completed, and the choir will soon be ready to start its activities for the semester.

From present indications, it looks as though the A Capella Choir and Men's Chorus will have a very active season, Miss Badger commented.

"We have had several offers already from various groups to perform at their functions. I don't know just yet how many we will be able to accept," she said.

Forty-first editions of Joel Chandler Harris are the latest addition to the Harris Memorial Room in the Emory University library.

Registrar

Slight Drop Revealed In Final Enrollment Figures; Attendance Rules Cited By Administration

A total of 2717 students is now enrolled in the college, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. This is a small drop from the figures of the fall semester, 1940.

The decrease has been noticeable among the new students enrolling. Miss Learnard said that a majority of the decrease can be attributed to improved economic conditions and that students are encouraged to go to work because they are more fortunate in securing positions.

Ratio Figures Change

Another change in registration figures has been the ratio of men to women. In fall, 1940, there were two men students to one woman student. The ratio is at present three to two in favor of the men, Miss Learnard revealed.

More Students Tested

"This year we tested more students than ever before in the history of the college.

When opening day arrived quite a few of those who took the entrance examination did not enroll. This seems to indicate that they got jobs," Miss Learnard said.

In fall 1940, there were 1475 new students enrolled, this fall that figure has dropped to 1136.

Any student who has been absent from a class the number of times the class meets each week will be expelled from that class, the registrar's office has declared.

Reinstatement may be secured only through the consent of the instructor concerned. If the person again misses the same number of classes, or more, he will be permanently dropped from the course. Appeal and appearance before the attendance committee are the only recourse for students wishing to continue with that course.

Late Entrances Equal Cuts

Some instructors have supplemented a system which counts late entrances to class as an absence at a ratio of three to one. For instance, if a student is late to a lecture 12 times in a three unit course he will have, according to this system, taken his limited number of cuts.

Students will no longer be admitted to class unless the instructor feels that the missed work can be made up. Miss Learnard said that the only courses of this type are reading courses.

First Midterm Next Week

First midterm period will end Friday, October 10. The day and time for the examination will be arranged by the instructor. Second midterm week will end Friday, November 14.

Final examinations will take place from Monday, January 19, to Wednesday, January 28. Time and day for finals will be announced later on in the semester.

Civil Service Job Openings Posted

Now posted on the bulletin board opposite Room 160 are announcements of many civil service examinations for which students of the college may qualify, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, college civil service instructor.

Among the positions is one for an assistant communications operator, the pay being $1620 per annum. Also open in this field is one for junior communications operator at $1440 a year.

Examinations for senior and general mechanic, and junior and helper general mechanic, with pay ranging from $1,320 to $1,860 a year, are also to be given. These opportunities are offered throughout California, Arizona, and Nevada. All examinations will be open until further notice.

Classified laborers are wanted by the government. The pay for such positions ranges from $5.12 to $5.68 per day. These openings are at the United States Ordnance Department, Benicia Arsenal, Benicia, California. They include preformance of manual labor requiring some skill training or experience. The job will involve some degree of responsibility and hazard.

All interested in such positions should apply immediately, Luckmann said.

Lost, Found (Except Keys) Still In Registrar's Office

All lost and found articles, with the exception of keys, will be handled by the registrar's office. Keys will be handled by Edward Redford, building superintendent, in Room 148. This is a correction of the announcement in last Friday's Guardsman.

Georgia Recommends Draft Deferrment For Students

ATLANTA, GA.—(ACP)—Georgia selective service headquarters has recommended that college students be deferred from military training as long as they "maintain a standard of academic work which is satisfactory to the college and to the local board."

Major Charles J. Brockman, state occupational deferrment director, said the new deferrment recommendation will include all college students not yet placed in classification 1-A.

Local boards already had been authorized to defer students taking "essential courses" such as medicine, dentistry, chemistry, engineering, biology, geology, physics and mining, but the state headquarters wants the grades looked into first.

Teacher Training Pays Dividends At Stout

MENOMONIE, WIS.—(ACP)—A practical approach to training teachers is paying dividends for graduates of Stout institute.

The small college has gained a national reputation by specializing in training teachers for specific lines of work that surveys indicate will be in demand at the time of graduation.

How well the plan works is illustrated by Stout's placement record. All 128 members of last June's graduating class as well as all of this winter's midyear graduates have obtained employment. With all available graduates placed, employers even are "raiding" the senior class, according to Registrar Gertrude M. O'Brien.

"In the last semester," she said, "I received calls for 20 more women than I have been able to fill."

Stout limits its curriculum to training men for industrial education and women in home economics. "It is the only school in the nation with such a singleness of purpose," asserts Dean C. A. Bowman.

With the present emphasis on defense production, the result has been that Stout graduates average $140 to $150 a month in their first teaching positions and some get as high as $200, according to Bowman.

Burton E. Nelson, president, collaborates with Bowman in working out surveys used to determine types of training. To predict what specialized training will be in demand four or five years hence, Nelson and Bowman study past and present educational trends, both political and economic. They consider trends in national affairs, world conflicts, trade unionism and their effect upon journeyman development, scientific discoveries and education.

What of the Future? Prepare for a Business Career

There is a place for you in business or government when you are trained for business. There is an acute shortage now for qualified young men and women office workers.

Come in for a friendly talk or write to find how quickly you can prepare and how little it costs.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

It has been said that great ages produce great minds, great art, and great contributions to the civilization of mankind.

But all of us are not fortunate enough to live during a great age; we do not all possess great minds, and the contributions of the many are but small when compared to the contributions of the gifted.

So it is that an average person, living in any age, great or insignificant, looks upon civilization as a whole when considering the relative merits and demerits of the human race and its progress. He does not, or should not, consider only the geniuses of his time, for they are but satellites in the vast universe of talent that has gone before.

THE COMMON MAN!

True, it is the ability of the great intellect that has given man his present position, but the accomplishments of the millions of common people the world over has given cause for a greater rejoicing.

World periods of attempted suicide, times of intolerance and prejudice, decades of war and revolution, centuries of laxity and apathetic interest—these are not the work of the ordinary people.

Far from it; the ordinary person is not such a bad fellow. He has his pet beliefs and ideas, separate, no doubt, from your own. He possesses his idiosyncracies, his vices, his political, social, and economic tenets. His is his own life to live and enjoy, as is your own. His is his own, and he wishes that understood. So do we all.

But aside from the trivial and common failings that infest us individually there is a bond between each ordinary person that is not to be found between nations or possessors of great and powerful intellects.

VIRTUES ARE MANY

This ordinary man of whom we speak, do not his virtues compare favorably with his vices? Without question!

He has an interest in the affairs of others that is not born of pecuniary desires. He exhibits a friendliness that is foreign to competition of the more mercenary sort. He asks that he be allowed peace and peaceful occupations, friendly, sociable, relations.

The good samaritan of Bible fame has not died out with the passing of that one example. There is in the ways and kindnesses of men—ordinary men—a force that touches a deep well of sentimentality within one. These are not the contributions of the great and famous, nor of the rich and noble.

They are simple, ordinary, usually unappreciated and unnoticed accomplishments of men of every race in every land.

So when talk of disaster as exemplified by world and national conditions is the common vogue, when pessimism is running rampant in the idle gossip of the time, it is then that we should stop to think of these vital facts:

WHAT ARE WE?

That men are pawns, and only pawns, in a game of all importance. They are shifted from place to place with indiscretion, without consent, suddenly and tragically. They bear the brunt of the conqueror's fancies and the schemer's limitless dreams. They look upon a past of toil, a present of work, and a future of ceaseless, useless, endeavor. Yet they cling to life with a tenacity that defies the laws of all that is rational.

Therefore it must not be reiterated that this or that great leader, this or that mighty genius, will lead a people through troubled and uncertain times into a period of peace and prosperity and good will.

Never is that the true case. Leaders are what their followers make them, not what they make themselves. For if there are none to follow what is a leader but a useless appendage to the social group? Leaders lead because men wish to be led, and have always wished this. Most people are too busy with their own affairs to meddle in those of others.

WHY BLIND OBEDIENCE?

Men accept disasters because it is their intrinsic nature to tend their own flock first. They have neither the folly of the mighty tycoon, nor the shallowness of a great mind, to direct them in any other direction.

But the world will not come to an end because men fight. Men do not fight. They are made to do so.

And though they be forced to fight through all eternity their natures will not change. The ordinary person, who is perhaps seated or standing

Bulletin Boards

Committee Lists Regulations For Students

Students wishing to post notices or posters on the various bulletin boards around the college should not do so without first consulting William Eckert, college art instructor and chairman of the bulletin board committee.

All notices not having the approval of the bulletin board committee will be taken down. Students are asked not to post notices at their own discretion, Eckert said.

The art club will make posters for clubs desiring them, Eckert announced.

Six Types Of Notices

There are six types of notices, each being assigned a separate place.

The classifications are as follows:

(1) Club announcements: Two bulletin boards; one located on the main floor, one near the library.

(2) Special college events (dances, football games): On the main floor near the club announcements space, and on club bulletin near the library.

(3) Departmental: Distributed on all three floors according to location of departments.

(4) Office notices (registrar's notices, civil service examinations): Near registrar's office.

(5) Physical education (intramural, Women's Athletic Association): Main floor.

(6) Outside posting material (notices from other colleges, community events): Main floor.

Further Regulations Named

Further regulations for posting of bulletins as formulated by the committee are as follows:

(1) All clubs and departments which have regular announcements from time to time will have a standard printed form with windows in which to insert typewritten information. These will appear only in the two designated places on the main floor and outside the library.

(2) All outside matter will be posted for a limited time of one week only.

(3) Announcements of special college events will be made by NYA students under the supervision of the art department, and will be posted only in the space specified above.

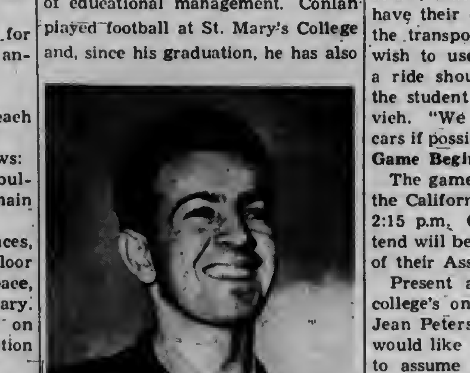
AMS Barn Dance Faces Difficulties—Postponed

Difficulties encountered in securing a location for the Associated Men Students' Barn Dance have made it necessary for Don Jensen, AMS president, to postpone the date indefinitely.

Suggestions by Dean Edwin C. Browne for a different location are being considered by the AMS.



Boxing matches, also an AMS affair, will be held on the evening of Friday, December 5 at the Coliseum Bowl in San Francisco. Winners of the intramural boxing contests will be matched against each other to decide the champion of each weight division. Any college man is eligible if he first enrolls in the intramural classes, conducted by James Jensen, college boxing instructor. Both men and women are invited to attend the matches.

Rally Commission

Step Rally Set Today At 1; Car Caravan To Lead Rooters To Ram-Cal Frosh Game

To build up student interest in the California freshman football game with the college gridders, the rally committee will hold a 10 minute pep rally on the front steps at one o'clock this afternoon, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner announced.

Special speaker for the rally will be Louis "Dutch" Conlan, coordinator of educational management. Conlan played football at St. Mary's College and, since his graduation, he has also served as an official for many of the local football games. His most important officiating job was that of head referee at the last two Rose Bowl games.

Also to be introduced to the college students will be Norman Applebaum, new assistant yell leader. Applebaum is a graduate of Polytechnic High School in San Francisco, where he served as head yell leader. He is replacing Don Cole who was forced to resign his position because of larynx trouble.

The rest of the program will be taken up with some of the college yells which are to be a feature of every rally.

A "car caravan to Cal" will be inaugurated by the rally committee to carry college students to the Ram-California Freshman football game in Berkeley tomorrow, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, announced this week.

The caravan will be formed in front of the college at 12 M Saturday and will leave at 12:30 p.m.

Trip Share-Expense Affair

The trip will be a share-expense affair; that is, students who do not have their own cars must help with the transportation costs. Those who wish to use their cars or to obtain a ride should leave their names in the student body office for Mohorovich. "We would like to have 20 cars if possible," Mohorovich said.

Game Begins At 2:15

The game between the college and the California freshmen will start at 2:15 p.m. College students who attend will be admitted on presentation of their Associated Student cards.

Present at the game will be the college's one feminine "hep" leader, Jean Peterson. The rally committee would like to have one more woman to assume the position of assistant "hep" leader to Miss Peterson, Mohorovich said.

Employment Bureau Reveals Job Placement Figures

More than 130 men and women have secured jobs through the college placement bureau. Most of these are either students or alumni, Joseph A. Amori, bureau director, has revealed. A few people from other colleges have been placed when our own students were not available.

No exact figures are available because of laxity on the part of applicants in reporting results of interviews obtained through this office. Anyone contemplating transfer from one job to another or quitting a job should also report to the office so that another student may apply for the resultant vacancy, Amori added.

Job applications are still being accepted for work starting two or three weeks before Christmas and enduring throughout the holidays. This work will be available in most types of businesses, but sales jobs will predominate, according to Amori.

Former Student Radio Success

SPECIAL RELEASE TO THE GUARDSMAN — NBC — Sept. 30, 1941—Barbara Norman, a former student of the college, is at present a member of a trio that is doing two transcontinental shows a week over NBC, and will soon open an engagement at the Hotel Summerton's Show Club in this city.

Miss Norman is the vocalist of The Aristocrats, a two piano and vocalist team billed as Babs and her Beaux, Wayne and Mel.

The Aristocrats have been on the NBC, KPO, KGO air lanes for the past eight months and just recently concluded an engagement with Norville Knight and his orchestra at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley.

While at the college Miss Norman studied radio broadcasting and appeared at several of the college rallies.

Talent Bureau Auditions Of Hopefuls Next Week

Talent bureau auditions will be held Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday at 3 p.m. in Room 200, Irwin Cohen, student manager of the bureau announced this week.

Those interested are urged to see Flossita Badger or Wesley Musclo, advisers to the bureau, and apply for applications.

Not only singers may be placed through the bureau, he explained, but all students who can entertain, comedians, actors and musicians.

The bureau furnished entertainment for college events, and often gets outside calls for entertainers from various groups.

The bureau operates like a casting office, and a record is filed of each student who is auditioned by the bureau.

College Band

First Practice Slated For This Afternoon

First meeting of the members of the newly formed college band will take place this afternoon at 3 p.m. in Room 200, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

Students attending the meeting are urged to bring their own musical instruments, if it is at all possible, but use of college owned instruments will probably be made for those students having none.

Devlin To Direct Band

Organization of the band will be under the direction of Madison Devlin of Lowell High School, who served in the same position last semester. John Gerstung, college faculty member, will serve in the capacity of sponsor. Operation of the band will be in the hands of students involved.

Credit Next Semester

Because of the lack of a music instructor and the time for the course, the organization will not be given college credit this semester, but, according to administration officials, plans for next semester favor the formation of such a course.

Students asked by Dean Browne to attend today's band meeting in Room 200 include the following:

Five Want To Lead

Even though the band may not participate in any events of this semester, the signing up of students desirous of serving as drum majors and majorettes with the band has already taken place.

Students who have already stated their intentions of serving in this manner include Bill Walker, Clyde Menke, Irene Marie Weed, Shirlianne Fagerstrom, and Neville Richards.

Today Last Chance To Get Books Or Money From WSS

Today is the last day for students to claim books left for sale at the Women's Service Society book exchange in Room 103, according to Violet Butler, president of the WSS.

"All books should be called for," Miss Butler emphasized, "because we have no place to store them until the exchange opens next semester."

Money should be called for as soon as possible, she added. It is paid out at the college bank during regular banking hours. More than $300 has already been claimed but there is approximately $400 yet unclaimed. She explained that the claim checks, given out when the book was brought to the exchange, must be shown before the money will be given to the student.

"We still have quite a few books which haven't been called for," Miss Butler said, "but there will be someone at the exchange from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. today so that all books may be taken out."

After today the exchange will close until books will again be sold next semester.

Registrar

Midterm Period Ends Next Friday; Attendance, Course Withdrawal Rules Repeated

First midterm period will end a week from today with grades going in to the registrar's office on Monday, October 13, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Last day to drop classes without receiving a grade of F is Friday, October 24. After that date, any student dropping a course will receive an F for the course, Miss Learnard revealed.

Student Needs Petition

Students desiring to drop a course should secure a petition from the registrar's office, have the petition approved by his faculty adviser and signed by the instructor or instructors concerned.

Courses required such as English A, physical education, and hygiene cannot be dropped, Miss Learnard announced.

Students Meet Advisers

Students will meet with their faculty advisers to discuss grades received on Tuesday, October 21, at 11 a. m. The place of meeting will be announced in a later issue of The Guardsman.

"This will be an opportunity for students to take up problems with their advisers," Miss Learnard said.

Students Warned On Cuts

Students having absences in class equal to the number of times that class meets each week, will be automatically placed on probation by the attendance office. A second series of absences will result in exclusion from the course.

The only recourse for a student being dropped after twice exceeding his cuts will be appearance before the attendance committee, headed by Tom Gabbert, Spanish instructor. The attendance committee will decide whether or not the student should be re-admitted to that class.

If the student again cuts the same number of times he will be permanently dropped from the course and will receive a grade of F for that course.

"Everytime a case is just, it will be heard fairly," Miss Learnard said.

Parking

Student Aid Praised; Parking Lot Next

Increasing student adherence to the no parking rule on the south hill adjacent to the college leaves the next step toward solving the parking problem to the blocking out of a parking lot, Dean Edwin C. Browne noted this week.

"Though steps in this direction should be made very soon, I cannot state exactly where or when construction will begin," Browne explained.

"The matter must come to the attention of the school board and an appropriation voted upon," he said.

Response Satisfactory

"As to the parking on the south hill, I'm quite satisfied with the students' quick response to the stories published in The Guardsman showing the uselessness of parking on the hillside," he remarked.

Browne has previously pointed out the inadvisability of parking on the hill, citing the recent deaths in and around San Francisco caused by hillside parking. He stressed the fact that with rainy weather approaching the danger of cars slipping would be doubled.

"Don't Park On Hill!"

"An uncontrolled car careening down that hillside could cause a lot of property damage and perhaps injury to passers by," he explained, "and machines parked under the very portals of the college do not add to the beauty of the campus."

At present a few machines will be permitted to park on the hill. These, however, will belong only to those persons who have business with the college or to those who make special request to park there because of a sound reason, such as a physical handicap.

"Other students should not take advantage of this condition to park there," Browne stated.

Campus Players To Plan Theater Visits Monday

Emphasis upon theater parties to be given by the Campus Players, college dramatic group, will be the main item of discussion at the Monday meeting of the club in Room 257 at 3:15 p.m.

Possible visits to the Curran and Geary Theaters, and interviews with the principal actors and actresses of the legitimate stage will be the chief activities of the club during the present semester, according to Dolores Sullivan, club president.

Further business to be enacted at the Monday meeting will concern the coming social of the organization, for which no date has been set.

The Campus Players, formerly the Drama Club, is under the faculty leadership of Marion Turner.

Welfare Group Still Works For Hello Walk Plaque

Still struggling to provide a tradition for the college, the Welfare Committee is concentrating its efforts on the matter of plaque for Hello Walk, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman.

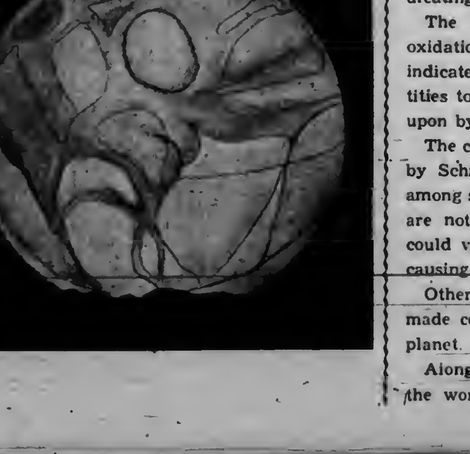
"Funds for the plaque have been appropriated," Lindemann said. "The inscription, 'Cheerful company shortens the walk,' has been decided upon," he added.

Bill Postal, finance chairman and member of the committee, was appointed last semester as a committee of one to purchase the plaque, according to Lindemann. The flurry of incoming members and succeeding officers at the end of the semester prevented the committee from coming to a decision as to the dimensions or shape of the plaque, Lindemann explained.

"We shall meet soon to discuss a unified rooting section at college football games," Lindemann said. "The committee is of the opinion that more college spirit is needed at these contests and feels that the lack of a band may be made up with student spirit."

The present members of the committee are Virginia Ovenshire, vice-chairman; Ugo Jaeuzzi, Joanne Hall, Florence Heffernan, Lary Coker, Bill Postal, and Steve Mohorovich.

Martian Propinquity Draws Attention Of Astronomical Adherents



Mysteries Of Mars—Red Planet—Reviewed

By Doug Johnson

Mars, fiery mystery planet whose orbit sends it whirling within 32,000,000 miles of Earth every two years is about to make another visit to Earth. Perhaps the ruddy planet is coming to see how its namesake, the god of war is making out on Earth.

Astronomers for many years have conjectured on the possibility of life on Mars, according to Louis Berman, college astronomy instructor. Certain observations made at Lick Observatory and other large observatories, reveal what may be snow at the poles of the planet. The presence of snow would indicate that moisture is present, Berman explained.

"It's up to astronomers to puncture all the romance and superstition connected with the planets," Berman said. "For instance, when Orson Welles panicked thousands of people with his story of the invasion of Earth by Martians, a group of astronomers organized a planetary defense system, 'for the prevention of invasion by Martians'."

Evidence of life has been observed in the changes of color that occurs during the Martian summer indicating presence of vegetation.

The ruddy color of the planet is caused by the oxidation of the rock content of Mars. "Whether this indicates the presence of oxygen in sufficient quantities to support life as we know it can not be agreed upon by scientists," Berman remarked.

The canals lining Mars' surface that were discovered by Schiaparelli in 1877 have caused many disputes among scientists, according to Berman. Some say they are not canals but channels, as the water on Mars could very easily be deposited in Lake Erie without causing so much as a ripple.

Others are determined that those canals are man made communications spread in a net work over the planet.

Along with the thousands of telescopes throughout the world that will be turned on Mars will be the binoculars of Berman's astronomy class.

No wonder Mars looks red. Who wouldn't be self conscious, too?

"As Mars has only a third of the gravitational pull that Earth has, an Earthman would be a Superman on Mars," Berman pointed out. If we ever have interplanetary travel, doctors will probably send their weakened patients to Mars to get their confidence back.

"The mystery of Mars, perhaps will never be solved," Berman said. "We can see it just clearly enough to define shadows and faint outlines on its surface. It's there before us and yet what we see is not enough. One gets that feeling experienced when you can just overhear the sound of conversation but not distinguish the words.

"The planet will be clearly observable for the next three months," Berman said. The astronomy class may have a chance to see Mars through the telescope at the Lick Observatory. The club is discussing plans for a trip and a tour of the observatory.

Educational Aims

For A Crisis

TEN objectives of the national defense program as it relates to public education were recently outlined by John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education.

As will readily be seen, these salient points demand equal observance in war and peace. If we are to escape the brand of hypocrisy that is already warm upon our backs, item number seven, concerning understandings with the Hispanic countries, should not be a transitory and selfish campaign just "for the duration." Most of the other aims will find fulfillment in proportion to the wisdom of the high school's and the college's administration and faculty.

1. Improving the understanding and increasing the appreciation of Americans, young and old, of the meaning and value of our democratic heritage — the unique values of our democratic way of life—which we are resolved to defend at whatever cost.
2. Showing that although political democracy is not perfectly realized in our midst, it remains the form of government which holds greatest promise for the steady and peaceful improvement of the lot of mankind.
3. Increasing the understanding of Americans, young and old, of the nature and the menace of totalitarian doctrines; and of the methods used to disseminate these doctrines.
4. Creating a zeal and an enthusiasm for our national defense program by showing how and why we are preparing to maintain our liberties and the civilized values we cherish.
5. Promoting in every way the better health and nutrition, and a greater physical vigor of our entire population young and old.
6. Promoting the morale and well-being of Americans of all groups and ages through the intelligent husbanding of our resources and the creative use of the potentialities of our people.
7. Promoting an understanding of our good neighbors in this hemisphere, to whom our destinies will be more closely linked in the decades ahead.
8. Increasing the unity of our people through measures designed to discourage intolerance, misunderstanding, and ill-will; and especially seeking to knit the foreign-born and unassimilated elements of our people more closely into the national life.
9. Developing the practical skills and vocational competencies needed in the national defense.
10. Conserving the morale of the people through varied opportunities for wholesome and satisfying forms of recreation.

Reread these objectives carefully to see if your part in achieving them could not be more than passive; it would be worthwhile.

Just Tradition

ONCE firmly rooted, tradition and the classics are beyond the scythe of Time. Tear the ivy from the walls of "good old Wahoo U.," and it will out-Hydra Hydra; tell the freshman that they've stopped hazing this year, and he'll cry out for chastisement: it's just tradition.

In a flurry of largess this year, Hamilton College in Clinton, New York, with grandiose gesture, eliminated the requirement of Greek or Latin from the requisites for an A.B. degree. Was the professor of Greek abruptly tossed from his chair? Did the student body respond in exultant jubilation at this bountifully-tossed crumb? Were Euripides and Aeschylus given the "gate"?

Professor Donald B. Durham understandably expected at least one of the above catastrophes to descend on Hamilton. But Professor Durham discounted the compelling call of tradition and its edification of the classics. The step of emancipation not only left his job secure, but enrollment in Greek course swelled from 30 to 34.

The philosopher, on reading this bit, might ponder the results if this college were to eliminate American institutions and physical education from the graduation requirements. While we bow to tradition, somehow we don't think it is quite firmly rooted here.

Shots At ...RAMdom

EVERY SUNDAY

. . Lightfoot Henry walks down the Embarcadero, his big black pipe leaving a wake fatal to anything smaller than a sea gull, his left, aluminum "foot" tapping the pavement.

Henry is one of the last of the old seamen that skimmed through the Gate under sail. He has an exquisite contempt for "pretty-boy sailors who go choppin' around in coal skuttles." "Hit aint natural," he insists wistfully. "Wind ships were slim, graceful things. They got their whims an' moods an' sometimes had to be humored, just like a woman. There was nasty ones, like the one that got my foot, an' there was nice ones that'd give you a fair go if you treated 'em right."

He cocked an eye at us, the hint of a smile deepening the wrinkles around his mouth.

"You know, son, in my day they built wooden ships an' iron men sailed 'em. Now they build iron ships. . . ."

Henry "gits kinda lonely." Stop and talk wtih him if you see him.

THE CONCERT IN THE PARK

was blasting to a hectic finish in the grand, thundering manner of old. The brasses were blowing people's hats off, and the violinists were racing the bass viols to a finishing climax. Came a pause. The maestro lifted his arms dramatically.

The little boy in front of us, who had been brooding over a bag of popcorn all through Brahms, Beethoven and Strauss, suddenly tensed. His jaw dropped. A few kernels dropped from his buttersmeared lips. He leaned forward.

Finally, the conductor brought his arms down in a magnificent flourish.

A meek looking little man with glasses stood up in the percussion section and gave a huge drum a magnificent wallop.

The little boy stood up and clapped madly, spewing pop corn wildly.

"That's my pop," he screamed. "He just did his first solo."

PARIS,

Spain, Italy, and South America are all noted for their sidewalk cafes. One sits languidly in the sunshine sipping slowly and carrying on flirtations with mysterious raven-haired ladies who throw flowers from balconies. There is the noisy hub-bub of vendors, the bustle of traffic past one's outdoor table.

Lovely, isn't it? Perhaps you wonder what brought this on. Well, listen.

On Irving street in San Francisco, there's an enterprising dry cleaning shop. In the window of this shop there is a sign. It says, "Pants Pressed While You Wait, Curb Service."

And we were just wondering. . . .

RAM'S HORN
Bus Conduct Praised; Hello Walk Draws Comment

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 184. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

• College Students Courteous

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Dean of Men, who promptly sent it to The Guardsman for the Ram's Horn.

Mr. Edwin C. Browne,
Dean of Men,
San Francisco Junior College,
San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Mr. Browne:

I feel that someone should come to the defense of the Junior College students who ride on the Tenth Avenue bus (Municipal Railway No. 1). This year, as I did last year, I ride on this bus twice a day five days a week at various times between 7:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m., frequently at crowded hours, so that I have had ample opportunity to observe the behavior of the Junior College students.

I have been amazed at the unusual display of courtesy shown by these students. I have never seen any act of rowdyism or rudeness, except possibly the failure of a student to give his place to a lady who was standing — and this has been the exception rather than the rule. Men and women students alike relinquish their seats to women of all ages, to elderly men, and to people with children—and do it with a smile. I personally rarely stand if there is a student near enough to offer me his (or her) place. At times when the bus has been crowded to the point that breathing was difficult, the students have accepted cheerfully a condition that was almost intolerable.

The only discomfort I have experienced has been due not to the behavior of Junior College students but to the overcrowded condition of the bus.

Yours very truly,
Andrewa Noble,
Instructor, S.F.J.C.

Editor, The Guardsman:

The suggestion for a covering for Hello Walk was read with interest by myself, but opinions seem to differ. To be specific: maybe Disgusted (Friday, Sept. 2) hasn't tried

FEM FADS . . .
by Nancy

TECHNICALLY, this is supposed to be a feminine column, at least that is what the name implies. Furthermore, it is supposed to give the student an idea of new fads—clothes, accessories, gadgets, and what have you. But, by now you probably have enough clothes to last you for another week, so again we'll branch off into another field. A most important one, deah, feminine readahs—men, gentlemen, at that!

Real gentlemen are very scarce around the campus, but occasionally one does drop out of a clear sky into the college. One particular species we saw in the student store the early part of the week. When a woman student casually mentioned that she would have to climb the hill to get her coat from the check-room, the gallant man came to the rescue and offered to go for her. And he did!

Other students will probably say that the man was, what is generally known as, a sucker. He was not. He, perhaps did do something not required of him even to claim the title of gentleman. But he did make a hit with the women present.

If the men students ever overheard a gab fest between several women they would discover what is required of them. Then, they would take inventory and improve themselves. Unless, of course, there was no room for improvement (they thought).

LUMBAGO OR TONGUETIED?

One thing that parents notice when the man in question arrives for his lady friend (and their daughter) is whether he arises when they enter the room. If he speaks to them, or just nods in a boorish manner. These things seem very insignificant at the moment but when Susie wants to go out again with HIM, the parents might hesitate.

On the other hand, we've known of fathers who engaged in such lengthy and absorbing discussions with the gentlemen friends that the evening was half over before the couple left the house. These parents were delighted with the man, and hoped that their only daughter would see more of "the fine young man." This, is only an example, of course, and not necessary. But remember, men, a cheery greeting goes a long way.

KEEP TO THE RIGHT

Remember also, that pedestrians walk on the right side. So when rushing from the third floor to the cafeteria, walk on the right side. If everyone did this, there would be less confusion, students would get to their destination just as quickly, and with much less strain on the human frame. The stairs are already divided, so see what happens if all students "kept to the right."

Nobody likes to have the door slam in her (speaking from the woman's angle) face. And what good is that muscle the men are always proudly showing off, if it won't hold open a tiny door? We wonder!!

Hold Back The Dawn as bright as the new dawn

A SUPERIOR motion picture in every department, Hold Back The Dawn will undoubtedly rate high on everyone's best-film list at the end of the year.

Here, Paramount has produced a story of distinct emotional depth, a story that holds power and punch in every superb passage and one that winds a carefully calculated path to a smash climax. It's motion picture construction at its best. Smooth, intelligent story developed against a refreshing, invigorating setting that precludes any threat of triteness; marvelous direction by Michell Leisen (remember Arise My Love) rapidly becoming one of Hollywood's finer directors; top-notch pictorial settings and dynamic camera work that captures the spell of a sleepy Mexican border-town to perfection; and finally performances of unprecedented skill by the notables, Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard, that eclipses all previous work in one grand swoop.

DYNAMIC ADULT ENTERTAINMENT

All departments dove-tail perfectly into a finished whole and catapult Hold Back The Dawn into upper brackets as slick, dynamic adult entertainment of the first order.

To enumerate the excellent qualities of the various departments, one must first analyze the plot. The script is remarkably coherent and natural. Scarcely one incongruous note or jarring dissertation breaks the smooth flow of developing action. You'll find little of excess value in Hold Back The Dawn; everything is perfectly subordinated to the main plot theme.

STORY INTERPRETED BRILLIANTLY

Leisen's story is basically simple but as interpreted by director and cast, the result is rich in human values, emotionally disturbing.

Charles Boyer portrays a Hungarian immigrant stranded in a stifling Mexican town, waiting his quota number . . . a number that will not come up for three to eight years. He is desperate, nervous. Paulette Goddard arrives. She knows Boyer; they had once been a Continental dancing team. She describes a plan to Boyer, a plan she once followed herself to gain citizenship. Marry an American and become legally eligible for citizenship. Boyer selects for his victim, innocent, unassuming school-teacher Emmy (Olivia de Havilland) and marries her after a swift, breath-taking courtship. To Emmy . . . it is a glorious dream come true. To Boyer . . . it is simply a cold, methodical step to gain admittance to the States. When, to evade suspicious immigration authorities, Boyer takes his wife on a trailer honeymoon through Mexico, events shape themselves toward one of the best climaxes we have seen on the screen in years.

There's the story and projected against the vivid setting of slumbering Mexico and an immigration-jammed hotel, interest remains at a high peak throughout.

CAMERA WORK RATES MENTION

Camera work, particularly in the shots of the rural Church Saint Day Blessing scenes complemented the story beyond reproach. Also worth mention was the exciting night photography in the chase scene near the climax. As for the musical score, for once we paid little attention. We were too fascinated in the vital, intelligent dialogue.

Leisen's direction has already been extolled, but one more word. This man knows how to create pace and movement. Directors beware. Take a lesson from Hold Back The Dawn on how to avoid stiltness, sluggishness, lingering inertness in motion picture fare.

An entire review could be devoted to the performances of the film but unfortunately lack of space limits us to brief acknowledgment. Boyer and Miss de Havilland give THE performances of their careers, exceeding Algiers and Gone With the Wind respectively. The supporting cast, Paulette Goddard, Walter Abel, Rosemary de Cann, Curt Bois . . . all give sparkling aid to a very bright picture.

Field

DISCussions

TOPPING this week's reviews we find Harry James' fine band turning out Dukes Mixture coupled with Don't Take Your Love From Me. Dukes Mixture is clean, solid jazz with the leader's horn justly spotted. The way he leads his section, it's plain murder. Don't is a fair pop ably sung by Lynn Richards.

Two more James sides meet approval, You Made Me Love You and A Sinner Kissed An Angel. The leader's delicately phrased horn makes You a standout. Dick Haymes, one of the better singers of today, does a grand job on the reverse.

Tommy Dorsey fails to produce anything exciting on his Victor pressing of Free For All. Reverse finds Frank Sinatra doing his usual good work on a swell tune, You and I. Punchy brass on the final chorus made this a better than average disc.

Far below par is Tommy's Nine Old Men, which produces an ample supply of corn. How could Tommy do it? Other side, Love Me As I Am is sparked by a grand Sinatra vocal but falls on its own weakness. Too bad!

Duke Ellington thrills with I Got It Bad And That Ain't Good with Ivie Anderson on the vocal. Ivie's singing on this one puts Billie Holiday and Bessie Smith to shame. Chocolate Shake is the backing which Ivie does also in good style. This is a must for hot fans.

Tony Pastor, ex-Shaw sideman, has turned out some fair records for Bluebird but his slow treatment of Dinah falls flat. A typical Pastor vocal all but seals this one's doom. Other side comes up with a well done pop, All Alone And Lonely, sung by John McAfee.

Erskine Hawkins' Blackout and Whose Beating My Time With You? prove run-of-the-mill stuff. Blackout features Avery Parish's super piano stylings but nothing else. Whose is marred by a stinko Ida James vocal. Fair but not worth the price.

Glenn Miller's Bluebird platter of Cradle Song just isn't. Reverse, Peekaboo To You, is as bad as it sounds. To think that a fine group such as Miller's can turn out such weak, uninspired junk.

Next comes John Kirby's well-rehearsed group, on Bugler's Dilemma, which features Charlie Shavers on trumpet, which (pardon my saying) is just too technical. Reverse gives out with a few kicks in the guise of Close Shave. Really not a lot here.

Gene Krupa turns out something novel on his latest, Tuning Up. He carries the theme of musicians in the process of tuning-up throughout.

Your College Presents . . . Static But Challenges These Disciples Behind The Dials

By Iwanna Hayworth

NATIONAL Emergency finds place for students majoring in another phase of the college curriculum. Such might be the lead of a news story concerning the radio engineering department. Among the students in the course last semester and who have found jobs during the summer are Joe Kurpieski, who is now employed in the ship yards in Richmond in the radio division. Raymond Anderson and Allan Goodwin are at present working; Anderson as a telephone operator in the Long lines department on Grant Avenue here in the city. Goodwin has been assigned at present as switchboard repairman.

From a communication recently received, it was learned that Blas Narro is at radio station XEQ in Mexico City. Sounds interesting, doesn't it? Robert Garner is now employed in a Watsonville radio station.

This course in radio technology or engineering has been given for the past four years. Until last year when classes opened in the new college buildings, classes were held at Samuel Gompers Trade School. This semester for the first time a course in radio telegraph and telephone has been offered, and in this new class 62 students have enrolled. It seems that a number of students who are in the Civil Aeronautics Authority are taking this radio work as a part of their training, however, the course is not restricted to these students or even to majors in the department.

This course is really a comprehensive background basic to the understanding of modern radio, as well as a study of the mechanical operations which are involved in the designing, construction, repairing, and the operating of radio receivers, transmitters and public address systems.

RADIO REPAIRING IMPORTANT

It seems that radio repairing offers the widest field of employment, and small radio manufacturing plants and radio broadcast systems also offer certain employment opportunities. Students in the course have the opportunity to operate studio equipment similar to that used in broadcasting stations for advanced students. The laboratories which are used, and particularly in the control room, students have the opportunity to gain valuable experience along with instruction in the manipulation of the controls in the control room.

The music and the speech departments make use of this department for recordings of their students' work. Students in the speech department also are given instruction in radio production, including all types of broadcasts. Practical experience is also given in producing the programs in the CBS studios.

YOUNGER DAYS AT GOMPER'S

A bit of information gleaned from an early edition concerning the radio department in its younger days gave detailed description of the classes which were, at the time of this particular issue, held at Gompers. Although hardly as fully equipped as the present one, an opinion expressed by Williams, a former student of this division, "Radio engineering is the most practical course taught in the college." These sentiments were probably expressed because at that time, Williams was soon to become the radio operator of a Coast Guard ship.

(Next Tuesday the museum technique course will be examined.)

Inscription in the lobby of the Mills College music building reads: "Such as the music is, such are the people of the commonwealth."

Radio instructor Lowell Hollingsworth busily supervises these radio engineering students as they note delicate calibrations with the sensitive meters before them. Many of the students in the radio classes have readily found employment owing to the demand for trained men in national defense industries. Radio engineering students once trakked to Gompers Trade School for classes, now have completely equipped laboratories at the college.

MOST football authorities agree that linemen normally are supposed to make between 50 and 75 per cent of the tackles during the course of an average football game. Against the Los Angeles City College Cubs, last Saturday night at Seals Stadium, the situation was exactly reversed. Only one member of the college forward wall consistently made his tackles. Outside of Bill Brown, rugged guard, the college linemen were woefully weak and sloppy in their fundamentals. If the Cubs had displayed the drive and power in the first half that they did in the second, the score could well have been larger than 14 to 0.

THREE-MAN DEFENSE

Backbone of the Ram defense was constituted by three men, all members of the starting backfield; Armand "Turk" Terzian, Art Ekdall, and Bob Christen. Terzian, playing at safety, probably set a world record for last ditch tackles. At least ten times during the Saturday evening encounter, Terzian, the last man between Fellows, in most cases, and the goal line, made point-saving tackles. Christen, playing at defensive fullback, made the evening's hardest tackle. On a Cub interception that was headed for a sure touchdown, Christen nearly tore the hips off of the ball carrier. Ekdall, besides blocking for the Ram punters, made well over half the tackles on Fellows' punt returns. Ekdall also has proved outstanding on pass defense and offensive blocking assignments.

PLAYS?

So far this semester, the football squad has only used about four plays, these being off-tackle, one or two passes, a cut-back that is used only once or twice, and the always helpful punt formation.

HELP TERZIAN

Another fact that everyone has noticed, or should have, is that on almost every play, the ball is either carried or passed by "Turk" Terzian, and after one or two quarters the opposing side actually ignores the other backfield men, and lays for Terzian. This goes on for another quarter until Terzian is so tired from carrying the ball, or being hit by everyone on the opposing team but the water-boy, that he can just about get back in the huddle.

It has been said time and time again that Art Ekdall is a great ball carrier, as was proven in his high school days, when he made all-city halfback. Now he is used only as a blocking back, but in order to win ball games, a team must use deception, such as mixing up the plays, and feeding the ball to the other three men in the backfield.

Now that Eckdall has been shifted to left half, we will probably see some of those reverses being run by him, instead of only by Terzian, and also that the team will be throwing more passes as the schedule rolls on.

Seven New Managers Elected For Semester To Represent Sport Clubs On Council

Seven new managers for the fall semester have been elected for Women's Athletic Association clubs, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, revealed. New managers are Virginia Hanlon, basketball; Helen Rissetto, archery; Gracine Lowe, bowling; Barbara Drake, fencing; Betty Wood, rifle; Nell Brandt, golf, and Jean Peterson, tennis.

Managers are elected during the first week to act as representatives on the WAA council, and to act as coordinator between the club adviser and the members. One of the first duties of the managers, Miss Kraul pointed out, will be to see that all members have their physical rechecks. A deadline will be set soon, and all health examinations must be made by that time. Dr. Alice Potter, medical adviser to women, has her own office in the women's gym, and her office hours are posted there. No definite appointment need be made for this recheck.

Each club is allotted a certain amount of money from the general WAA fund, Miss Kraul announced, and is allowed to spend it anyway they decide upon. The bowling club has already decided to finance the games which they participate in. Members of this club are looking forward to a tournament in which they hope San Francisco State College will participate.

Turn-outs this fall for WAA basketball were less than last year, Virginia Hanlon, manager of the club announced last week, but any students wishing to signup may see me in the library this afternoon at 1 p.m.

The club now meets at 3 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays, but perhaps a more suitable time could be arranged, she added.

Plans For WAA Barbecue Are Almost Complete

Plans for the barbecue, which is to be held Wednesday, October 8 at Sigmund Stern Grove on Sloat and 19th Avenue at 5:30 p.m., are almost complete, according to Bernice Strube, chairman for the affair.

"We have contacted the Talent Bureau for entertainment," Miss Strube said, "in addition to several performances previously planned. We plan to have a large bon-fire and have community singing, folk dancing, and games around it. New members of the WAA and newly elected managers will be officially initiated during the evening."

As the event takes place during the mid-term examination period, we will begin early and end early so that students may have a chance to study for classes the next morning.

Although the day may be a warm one, Miss Strube suggested that all women attending the outdoor affair wear a warm sweater or coat. As the grove is down in a hollow, it will undoubtedly get cool early in the evening.

Reservations are now being made through the college bank, and, with payment of 35 cents, a box lunch will be provided, Miss Strube said. A hot drink will be furnished by the Associated Women Students, who for the first time are merging with the WAA to sponsor an event for all college women. Fruit of some kind will also be provided.

Deadline for ticket sales will be Wednesday noon, and no one without a ticket will be admitted, Miss Strube added. Women of the college are invited whether active members of either AWS or WAA.

Five mathematics courses at University of Texas have been rearranged to tie in more closely with problems relating to defense.

Russian Discovers Comet; Enemy Within 150 Miles

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — (ACP) — Harvard scientists report a Russian astronomer, standing by his telescope less than 150 miles from the invading German army, has discovered a new comet.

Dr. Fletcher Watson of Harvard was informed by cablegram that Astronomer G. Neujmin sighted the comet at the Russian observatory in Simeis, East Crimea.

Soccer Squad In First College Game Tomorrow At Davis

Taking the road for the first time during the present practice season, the Ram soccer squad, under the guidance of Coach Jim Jensen, moves upon the town of Davis tomorrow to take on the California Aggies. This will be the Rams first game against a major college opponent, heretofore the only practice games that have been played were against local talent.

During the past two weeks the soccer team has been expending its strength against local teams such as Balboa, George Washington, Lowell, and the H.M.S. Orion.

Rams Win Two, Tie One

In the two practice sessions against Balboa the scores were 5 to 0 and 1 to 0. George Washington was the next opponent, and the Rams, led by John Lazar and Ted Theodus managed to scramble through a 1 to 1 tie. The games against Lowell and the H.M.S. Orion were after the deadline of the paper and will be announced in the next issue of The Guardsman.

Coach Jensen issued practice suits to the team last Tuesday and today the game uniforms will be distributed to the members who will make the trip to Davis tomorrow. The practice suits are red T-shirts, red shorts, and red and white sox, while the new game uniforms will be white T-shirts with red trimmings, white shorts with a red stripe down the side, and white sox. Red sweat uniforms have been ordered and will be worn for both practice sessions and regular games.

Weak In Reserve Power

The Rams are weak in replacements with only one or two reserves to be substituted from the bench. This is probably the smallest squad in recent years for the Rams.

Next week, in another Saturday game, the squad will tackle the California Bears at Berkeley.

The tussle against the Golden Bears, aside from being a hard-fought contest, should prove a barometer of the college team's capabilities. The U.C. teams, year after year are top-notch, and Jensen, a week from now, will see just what he has.

Stanford Freshmen Face Red And White Polo Team

With the water polo team continuing to work out at the Jefferson High School pool, the outlook for the squad is very good this semester, as this is the first time this sport has entered the college.

"The boys will continue to practice at the Jefferson pool, and the YMCA, and will, in all probability keep on practicing there until water polo season is over until next semester," Coach Al Eisan said. Although no tentative dates have been made as yet, two games are scheduled with the Olympic Club, who has a strong squad, and one with the Stanford freshmen.

The squad is scheduled to meet a number of other colleges as the semester proceeds, but no definite dates have been set.

Because of the national emergency, many of the college students are dropping out of the college, and consequently, out of the sport that they have signed up for. Thus in water polo, Coach Eisan is finding it increasingly difficult to get enough boys together so that he can get a regular squad all at one time. Sign ups are still being accepted in the men's gymnasium, Eisan said.

Another contest, one which should prove a true test of the team's strength, has been added to the schedule which Jensen has tentatively arranged. Although no definite date has yet been agreed upon, the Ram splash-artists will contend with the Golden Bear aquapoloists at some time during this season.

Boxing

Many Fighters Return; Appear In Fine Shape

With a number of boxers returning this semester that fought in the Associated Men Students' fights last spring, the boys appear to be in fine shape, according to Jim Jensen, college boxing coach.

As yet no actual bouts have been scheduled because the college seems to be the only one to have a squad to speak of. Two other junior colleges have boxing classes, those being Modesto Junior College, and Salinas Junior College, but these two haven't offered our boys any bouts as yet, Jensen said.

"The boys are just taking light workouts so far, and should be in fine shape by the time the intramurals roll around," he said. Jensen continued by saying, "that the boxers with experience are working out with each other, and the less-experienced boxers are learning the fundamentals of fighting which are very necessary."

Dave Hunicke is back with the squad this semester, and if he gives the students as great an exhibition of fighting as he did last semester, and if the other boxers, such as Bryant Finch, Ken Ludlem, George Chew, and Duke Drake make as creditable appearance as they did in the last AMS fights the college students will have another reason to howl as they did in the Coliseum Bowl in the preceding semester.

The class that is open on Mondays and Wednesdays at 1 o'clock is for police training students, but other students may still sign up, Jensen conluded.

Sports Staff Picks Frosh To Defeat Red And White

In response to the game with the California Freshmen at Berkeley tomorrow afternoon, The Guardsman sports staff has been requested to make their selections on the outcome of the contest.

Sports Editor Bill Cothran: "I look for California to defeat us convincingly because they have the best Frosh squad in the history of the institution."

Bob Marcus: "California should win as they showed in practice against the varsity, a powerful line, backed with a fast and shifty backfield combination."

Nick Barbarotto: "The California Freshmen have one of its best teams in history and should defeat the Rams by a couple of touchdowns."

Jimmy Lee: "California should win by one touchdown for they have ample reserves and will overpower the Rams in the second half. The squad is too large and have plenty of experience behind them."

As shown, The Guardsman consensus picks California.

Dr. Charles B. Qualia, head professor of foreign languages at Texas Technological College, believes Spanish should be available to school children in Texas, beginning with their first year.

Intramural

Koster Sets New Free ThrowRecord

Setting a new all-time intramural record in the basketball freethrowing contest, Jack Koster, member of the Newman Club, is currently leading all contestants in the tournament with one day of competition remaining.

Replacing the old mark established on the record books by Al Soo, winner of last semester's tournament, Koster calmly sank 15 field goals out of a possible 25. The previous record set by Soo was 13 goals out of 25 attempted shots. It is reasonably safe to say that this mark will not be bettered as Koster has a commanding lead.

Fighting for second place and runnerup honors are Mickey McCabe and Suey Louis, deadlocked with 10 field goals each. If no one surpasses their mark, it will necessitate a playoff between the two. Logical choice to cop the honors would be McCabe who has seen more service as a basketball player than Louis. Only two medals will be awarded, a gold one to the winner, and a silver medal to the runnerup.

Ten Teams Enter

With the basketball entries closed, the casaba tournament swung into action yesterday afternoon in the men's gymnasium. A total of 10 teams handed in entry blanks and the various quintets will be pounding the maplewood boards for the next four weeks, Jack Brady, faculty adviser said.

This is a considerably less amount than the 24 teams who competed for intramural laurels last semester. All games will be played on Tuesday and Thursday, averaging five games a day.

Hare Leads All-Americans

The squads that entered are the All-Americans, Newman Club, Goats, Rabbits, Tri Epsilon, Japanese Students, Blitz Boys, Phi Lambda Epsilon, Alpha Delta Epsilon and the Rifle Club.

Heading the All-Americans, winners for the past two semesters, will be Jack Hare, star forward, who has played such standout ball that his name was placed on the All-Star intramural squad last spring. Missing from the roster is Charley Smith, guard, who also made the All-Star squad.

Goats Lose McCabe, Kelly

The Goats, runnerups to the All-Americans, will practically be on a par with last semester's squad and perhaps a bit weaker. The squad lost the services of McCabe and Bill Kelly, center and guard, respectively. The only addition to the lineup is Ivar Nelson, former Poly High basketeer.

Spearhead of the Newman Club attack is Koster, who, as already mentioned, broke the freethrowing record this week. New additions to the starting five are Del Goodyear and Jack Batiat.

The other clubs are distinct dark horses and a rating can not be given until they are seen in competitive action.

Managers of the quintets are requested to keep close contact with the intramural bulletin board in the men's gymnasium concerning the schedule of the games. If the team does not report for action at the specified time, it will be the manager's responsibility.

If any team forfeits its second game because of non appearance, that team will automatically be disqualified from the league without further competition. Decision by Brady will be final.

Football

'Worst Team' Faces 'Best Ever' California Frosh At Memorial Stadium Tomorrow Afternoon

"The worst football team I ever saw in my life, but we'll improve because we can't get any worse!" were the flow of words that came from Coach Lee Eisan as the college squad drilled in preparation for its game against the California Frosh at Memorial Stadium, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

Eisan undoubtedly had reference to the shellacking administered the Rams by Los Angeles City College and Jackie Fellows last Saturday night to the tune of 14 to 0. It was made clear that he was quite disappointed with the team's showing against the southerners.

Squad Worked Harder

"We are going to work them hard this week," Eisan said earlier in the week, "and we'll be much better than we were last Saturday. At least the tackles and ends will be able to get across the line of scrimmage."

True it was, and the Ram squad went through tougher drills and scrimmages the past few days than at any time since the opening of the season. Results of the practice sessions will be seen tomorrow against a Cub team that is rated one of the best in the Berkeley institution's history.

No Frosh Lineup

At the time of this writing, Coach Clint Evans of the California Frosh had not named a starting lineup and didn't intend to do so until close to game time. It will be the Cub's first contest of the season, their game against Placer Junior College being canceled, and, therefore, little is known of the individual stars.

The Berkeleyans have not been without practice, however, most of their time being taken up scrimmaging against the varsity teams. The scrums consisted mostly of defensive work and the Cubs should be in condition to give the Rams all the competition they want.

Eisan did have some good words to say for the team, claiming, "We're a little better than we expected to be but not one has played as well as he is capable." The Ram mentor expects to see a much improved team on the field tomorrow, mainly because of the tactics employed during the week and also because he believes it's about time the men reach their peak.

McKinnon Injured

The Red and White will face the Frosh without the services of both their fullbacks, Bob Christen and Bud McKinnon, first and second string, respectively. Christen, who played so well against the Los Angeles City College, was called for flight duty and must give up football. McKinnon was injured last Saturday and will be forced to stay out of competition for the remainder of the season.

The loss was lightened, however, with the return of two backfield stars from last year's varsity, Pat Castellano and "Izzy" Urbano. Castellano, who played behind Jim Honnert in 1940, is expected to fill the fullback position left vacant by Christen, while Urbano will break in to one of the halfback positions. Urbano was slated for first string at the outset of the season until it was learned that he would not return to school.

Coach Eisan believes that the addition of the two men will help strengthen the team considerably, as their performances will show in tomorrow's encounter.

Ram Lineup Same

Outside of the two new members, the starting lineup will probably be the same as that which opened the first two games, although it's not definite.

The Frosh are favored to win the contest, and Coach Evans is eagerly looking forward to what many figure will be an easy victory for the Cubs. Although he doesn't make any predictions as to the outcome of the game, Eisan believes that the team will be more efficient than last week and that the Cubs will far from have an easy time of it.

College Students May See Game With Student Card

Admission to Saturday's encounter between the Rams and Bear Cubs, at the Memorial Stadium on the Berkeley campus, will be by Associated Student Card only, Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, said last Wednesday. In the past college students were admitted for a charge of 50 cents, or 25 cents with an Associated Student Card.

Rams Face Cub 11 At Berkeley

When the Rams invade the Berkeley campus tomorrow afternoon, they will face one of the strongest Cub elevens in the history of the university. More than 64 freshmen turned out for the squad, compared to the 50 which reported last season.

. . . The 6 to 0 victory by the Rams last season was the first victory over the Cubs since the rivalry between the Red and White and that of the Blue and Gold first began.

. . . Starting backfield for the Cubs will find Stan Nigg at quarter, Bill Pennington, ace from Piedmont High School at right halfback, and Clifford McClain, clever passer at the tailback post. Art Honenger, who has been shifted from left half to fullback, will get the starting call at the bucking position.

. . . The bay region squad is coached by Clint Evans, and assisted by Bob Herwig, former All-American center, and Larry Lutz, stellar tackle of recent seasons.

. . . The Rams showed no improvement in their pass defense in the game with Los Angeles City College last week. The running attack was slow and ragged and never started to function properly.

. . . Although Coach Ackerman of LACC said that he had changed his defense in the second half to stop a few plays that were used successfully in the first half by the Rams, the college eleven failed to use them again for some mysterious reason.

. . . With Dutch Danielson returning to the game tomorrow for the first time since the season started, the Rams will be abundant with centers. Coach Lee Eisan has his choice of three pivot men, namely, Don Reese, Red Giavia, and Danielson.

. . . The squad was heavily hit last week with the announcement that Bob Cavender, bearded fullback, has forsaken the gridiron for Coach Jim Jensen's soccer squad.

. . . New additions to the varsity, however, are Izzy Urbano and Pat Castellano, veterans of last year.

Now that Temple Davies has been shifted to the second unit, the kicking department will undoubtedly be handled by Auguie Kalnen, Ram right tackle, who will be pulled out from the line. Kalnen did this as a prepster at Mission and at St. Mary's as a Gael Freshman.

An added threat to the Ram aerial game was the shifting of Art Ekdall to left halfback.

The Latin-American collection of the University of Texas library, with more than 40,000 volumes and almost 500,000 original manuscript documents, is the most extensive such collection in the United States.

Civil Service

Exams Scheduled Soon For Jobs Open To College Students

Civil Service examinations for positions which junior college students may possibly fill were announced this week by Lloyd Luckmann, civil service instructor of the college.

Applications for position of classified labor at the Mare Island Navy Yard will be accepted on Tuesday, October 7. This job pays from 68 to 80 cents an hour, and overtime will be paid at the rate of time and a half.

Mimeograph Operators Needed

Mimeograph operators' examinations may be taken until Thursday, October 16. Positions are open throughout California. Pay starts at $1,260 per annum. Age limits are from 18 to 53 years.

Positions for trade helpers are open in the aircraft industries, in the Eleventh Naval District, San Diego, California. Applications will be received until further notice.

Chauffeur Needed Also

A chauffeur is needed to fill the position of a truck driver and chauffeur. Pay varies from $1,200 to $1,320 a year. Like positions are open throughout California, Arizona and Nevada. Application will be received until October 14, 1941. Applicants are to be filed at the Federal Office Building, San Francisco, California, Room 119.

Persons trying for this job must possess a chauffeurs license, or must secure one within thirty days after application. Also they must be able to make minor repairs.

Storekeeping Jobs Open

Junior storekeepers to receive $1,260 to $1,440 a year are wanted throughout California, Nevada, and Arizona. Applications will be received until further notice.

More details on the above positions may be secured by consulting Lloyd D. Luckmann.

Other competitive examinations are posted on the bulletin board outside the registrar's office.

Students Wanted To Work At Noon In Cafeteria

Any student having a free hour from 11 a. m. to 12 noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays may earn his lunch by working 40 minutes in the cafeteria. Hilda Watson, head of the college hotel and restaurant division, announced.

The jobs are those of bus boy, dishwasher and counter server. Students interested should see Cynthia Richardson in the cafeteria as soon as possible.

Table service for the college faculty was started last Tuesday by the class in dining room and kitchen management. This is to be a regular service for the faculty to give students experience in handling the problems of the dining room. Previous to this, the faculty had been using the cafeteria service.

A Cappella Choir To Sing At Clubwomen's Convention

College A Cappella Choir members will open their activities for the semester by presenting a program for the convention of Women's Clubs, October 31, according to Fiosita Badger, choir instructor.

Auditions for the choir have been completed and rehearsals will soon begin, Miss Badger revealed.

The remainder of the choir's calendar has not definitely been decided upon. The group has had several offers from various organizations, but, according to Miss Badger, no definite commitments have been made.

Groups desiring such notices to be made must give the art department two weeks' notice.

(4) Space on departmental bulletin boards will be used only for the departments specified and when not in use, will remain empty.

(5) Each bulletin board space will carry a heading designating its purpose and use of such be confined to such designation.

Lee Harmon Elected Honor Society Leader

Lee Harmon was voted president of Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor society, at the initial meeting of the group last Wednesday afternoon.

Bernice Strube was named vice-president, Barbara Stahmann, secretary, and Cliff Bauer, treasurer.

Gordon Petersen, out-going president, presided at the meeting.

Social Committee

Hospitality House Asks College Aid In Entertainment

Leaders of San Francisco's Hospitality House have asked the college social committee to organize an entertainment program for the benefit of the members of the army and navy, according to Pat Niemeyer, student vice-president.

The plan is in the tentative stages as yet and is subject to the approval of the faculty advisers of the social committee.

"We hope, however, that the plan will meet with approval as we would like to do our share in providing entertainment for the men of the services," Miss Niemeyer said.

Hospitality House was founded by a group of civic-minded citizens to provide recreational entertainment for the men of the armed forces. It is the first building of its type to be constructed in the United States and was constructed by contributed labor, and with contributed materials.

Other activities of the social committee are to be planned at a meeting this afternoon at two o'clock in Room 158. "All committee members are urged to be present as we must decide upon the dates for future social functions," Miss Niemeyer commented.

entered with a small boy whom he told to sit somewhere while papa had a trim. The small boy sat while papa had a trim. Then he lifted the youngster to the barber chair.

"Give him a haircut," he told the barber, "I'm going down the street for a while. I'll be back to get him and pay for our haircuts."

Papa left. The barber gave the little one a haircut, and told him to sit and wait. . . .

An hour passed. No papa.

"Say, when's your father coming back?"

"That wasn't my father," the wee one answered innocently, "I just met him on the street and he asked me if I wanted a haircut."

climbing the hill when it is wet and slippery.

The steep angle and comparatively smooth surface of the walk present a real danger when it is wet. A canvas covering would be cheap and easy to build, and would reduce this hazard.

Finally, a word of pity for Disgusted for the childish references to escalators, ski lifts, etc.

● Piggy-back Service

Editor, The Guardsman:

I agree with "Disgusted" as to the folly of a canvas cover over "The Road Back" from gym, but how about a nice, hard, cheap, wooden bench about half way up that mountain-climber's nightmare?

If such a bench were available, those coming down the hill could lay the prostrate forms of the ascenders on it, thus eliminating their cluttering up the path.

Seriously, though, this would really be a welcome convenience to some of us weaklings, at least until the football team organizes a piggy-back service.

Exhausted.

NYA

Opportunities Soon For Practical Work In Public Service

Opportunities for practical experience in civil service jobs will soon be offered NYA students, according to Louise Ball, Area Student Officer of the NYA.

The plan, adopted as a public service program, allows any student on the NYA payroll, with the consent of his adviser, to apply for work of a civil service capacity. If accepted, he would work the hours alloted him under the supervision of civil service employees. College training in this field would be a prerequisite.

As an example, Miss Ball mentioned a student majoring in police administration. He would work the regular number of hours allowed him by the NYA, not at college as before, but in the police department, supervised by police officers. Everyone participating in the program will be eligible for the maximum number of hours allowed by the NYA.

The program has been successfully carried out in four year institutions for more than a year, Miss Ball added, but this is the first year it has been extended to include junior colleges.

Any student who secures the approval of his adviser may apply for one of these jobs but, she warned, only outstanding students will be accepted.

Death Of Charles A. Derry Marks Loss To College

In tribute to Charles A. Derry, member of the Board of Education who died Sunday morning, the flag in the rear of the building was flown at half mast.

"San Francisco Junior College suffers a great loss upon the death of Mr. Derry," President A. J. Cloud said. "He was a constant loyal friend, having a true view of the needs of the college, and a fine reception of the possibilities of adding to public education."

President Cloud expressed the sympathies of the entire college upon the death of the man who conferred so many benefits to this institution, both in personal and business relationships.

Commissioner Derry's death will not be mourned by members of the public school system alone, for he was also a prominent figure in the labor world, having served as editor of the American Federation of Labor paper, The Labor Clarion, for the past 10 years.

High Sophomore Leaders Revise Sweetheart Selection Program

Method of election of the woman to rule as queen during the high sophomore class week in mid-December has been revised somewhat, George Coart, president of the class, announced this week.

Since his statement of last week that only two women's names would be placed before the men of the college as finalists for the honor, Coart has had numerous suggestions presented to him and has finally developed with the following plan of election:

Six high sophomore men (not named as yet) will be selected as preliminary judges for the election; each will choose the four women of the college he thinks most beautiful; from these 24, each judge will nominate one for the finals and the Associated Men Students will eventually pick the queen from the remaining six candidates.

Myron Du Bain, chairman of the high sophomore formal dance committee, announced that suggestions as to where the dance should be held would be welcome in Room 188 as soon as possible.

Blue Books Shock Green Freshmen

Freshmen are supposed to be green—not as in envy but green as in unripe or not full grown. But when they are this green—that really tops all!

Here are the facts—to-wit and whereas: instructors were giving instructions for coming mid-term exams and suggested that students have blue books.

"What in heavens name will they ask for next in college?" groaned the Fresh Frosh. "First you are told to have a certain text book, a certain edition, written by a certain author, and now you are told what to have."

When the bewildered instructor had finished explaining that blue books (they are blue, too) were small note-books in which the tests would be written, the more bewildered frosh was lost in a dream of the day when he would no longer be a green freshman but a blue soph—awaiting his diploma, never to see college or blue books again.

Low Frosh To Elect King To Rival Soph Sweetheart

Election of a low freshman king to parallel the High Sophomore Sweetheart, is foremost among the ideas that the lower class officers are working on for the enjoyment of the entire class during this semester, Margaret McMann, class secretary, announced this week.

With the low freshman dance a thing of the past, the officers are planning an early meeting to perfect plans for the election of a king, and to draft other activities for the members of their class.

Eight regional scholarships representing a total value of $12,800 are being offered for the first time in 1941-42 by Hamilton College.

RAF Retired Major, Assemblyman Cronin To Be Guest Speakers At Newman Club Meeting Monday Night

Major Frank Flynn, Royal Air Force, (retired) and Assemblyman Melvin I. Cronin will be the guest speakers at the Newman Club meeting Monday, October 6 at 8 p.m., in the Sacred Heart College auditorium. Assemblyman Melvin I. Cronin will discuss "The Legislature In Action." Thirteen years a legislator, Cronin will talk about the highlights of the last legislative session.

Major Flynn, Royal Air Force, will talk about "Flying Under Fire On the Western and Eastern Front." Major Flyn was wounded in action and was granted leave to return to his native land to act as pilot instructor to the American Expeditionary Force of 1917, United States Army Air Corps.

The meeting will adjourn at 9:15. All students of the college may attend this open meeting of the Newman Club.

The music library at Mills College contains more than 6,000 phonograph records.

Reservations Still Open For Student Opera Tickets

Students may still make reservations for student opera tickets, Flosita Badger, college music instructor, announced. The reservations are for the student showing of the Barber of Seville by the San Francisco Opera Company on Friday afternoon, October 24, and October 31. Reservations may be made today and Monday with Miss Badger. Prices are $2.50, $2.00, and $1.50.

College Executive Group Appoints Publicity Agent

Appointed by an Executive Council committee, Kel Hori is now director of all external publicity.

Publicity includes all notices of any college activity carried by any newspaper or other means of public information. A scrap book of all such articles entered through the contacts established by Hori will be kept by the Executive Committee.

A small sum was allotted Hori for use in purchasing stamps, paper, transportation expenditures necessary to execute his office and for any other expenses incurred by Hori in the execution of his job.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

WHEN Comrade Roosevelt met Comrade Churchill in the middle of the Atlantic there should have been another brother present at the meeting—just to make up a cozy little party.

Of course, at the time neither Roosevelt (Comrade) nor Churchill (Comrade) knew that this third person rightly belonged. But now all is changed. He belongs, and how!

Obviously the uninvited guest was Comrade Stalin, Man of Iron in more ways than one. If the two national leaders had been able to anticipate the future they still might not have invited our Russian amigo. Stalin has the reputation of being a difficult individual to convince, and Roosevelt (Comrade) and Churchill (Comrade) are usually trying to convince someone of something.

At any rate he wasn't there. Probably he'll be present at the next little get-together. We wonder which language they'll use to convince him of one thing or another. Probably English. It's much better to get a man to agree to something in a foreign language. Then you can always tell him that he agreed to something else, and he probably won't know the difference.

THE COLLUMNIST AND THE PUBLISHER

Mr. Hearst, the columnist, as distinguished from Mr. Hearst, the publisher (if there is any distinction), has been writing some very interesting articles of concern to the Russian government.

Now if this continues, doubt remains as to whether Comrade Roosevelt is going to approve. And if the Comrade doesn't approve—well!

In this day and age we have to stand together, and that's just what the three boys in the drivers seats are doing. Have you heard the statement of a high ranking official that religion in Russia is a perfectly free and justly operated endeavor? That's the height of something or other. For years the contrary has been the case, but all of a sudden the contrary is no longer the contrary. It's the case.

"GO BACK TO—"

Now it seems as though the old expression, "Oh, go back to so and so," will shortly become the thing to do. Anyway England suddenly has found that she is running short of men. With her face pointed towards the shores of this country she brings out this promulgation. The fighting at present is being done in the Russian fields. If we go, we go there. Then the aforementioned phrase will have become not a rebuke but a prophecy. Then we can assume the roles of clairvoyants.

Tis a great world. Life is beautiful. We're all buddies. And what the heck is a little knife in the back among friends? Why something will be sure. But nothing to get overly excited about. It's done in the best of nations.

The Iron Man once was asked, "when are you going to stop killing people?" The answer, given in all sincerity was, "when no more killing is necessary."

KEEP THE BLOOD AT HOME

Now, that's fine as long as they stick to their own country.

But the question should have been worded: "When are you going to stop trying to kill those who don't agree with you?"

Then the ferrous named individual might not have had such an easy time in replying. Or perhaps he might have given the same answer. "When no more killing is necessary." from the Russian government standpoint, is just about the prettiest idea that ever hit the official Russian mind. But there's such a thing as carrying a disciplinary measure a bit too far. STALIN AND FREE ENTERPRISE

Comrade Stalin, hope of the democracies, is really a democrat in a sort of sinister way. When he was on the way up it is a known fact that he was opposed to the restriction of freedom of enterprise. The Czarists didn't approve of his activities and tried to suppress them. Stalin thought that that was unfair, and so too, it would be undemocratic. On the other hand, the observation must be made that when old ironsides made the grade, the road was closed for once and for all; that's where the sinister part of his democratic spirit comes into the light.

The two vow boys from the English speaking countries may think that they're putting something over on the ruler of the Russians; but the final quarter hasn't ended yet. When the game is over it may be a sad pair of couches, and a wiser pair, that face the task of doing the whole job once again.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Coaching Aid By Society Will Continue

Coaching under the supervision of the Alpha Gamma Sigma will definitely be continued this Semester members decided in their first meeting of the semester last Wednesday afternoon. Election of officers and discussion of pins for members also took place at the meeting.

Coaching, as in the past, will be done by the members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma; Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser, sends out an urgent call to those students who were not at the meeting or who didn't return their registration cards to do so immediately. She wants all those who have not turned in their names, free hours, and what subjects that they will be willing to coach, hand this information to Miss Cooper or leave it in Room 186 as soon as possible.

Elected to fill the offices for the coming term were Lee Harmon, president; Bernice Strube, vice-president; Clifford Bauer, treasurer, and Barbara Stahmann, secretary. These officers will serve for the rest of the year.

All regular members are reminded that they will be able to order their Alpha Gamma Sigma pins prior to October 22 at the bank. A small deposit will be charged for such an order.

It was announced at the meeting that the next meeting will be held in the college cafeteria at 4 p.m. when the old members will put on a program in honor of the new members.

Scholarships Offered By Other Institutions

Scholarships to the various colleges and universities in the California area are now open to graduating seniors of the college, it was revealed today by Miss Alice C. Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma faculty adviser.

Because February 15 is the date at which the University of California has set on scholarships, Miss Cooper said that this year the notices advising the seniors of the awards will be sent out before Christmas. Last year they were posted after Christmas and many of the seniors missed out in the rush to enter names properly for one of the scholarships.

Meeting Canceled Today

Contrary to the announcement in the college handbook, there will be no Associated Students meeting today at 11 a. m.

The following colleges have scholarships which are available to a junior college graduate. The College of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, Los Angeles; the College of Pacific, Stockton; Dominican College, San Rafael; La Verne College, La Verne; Mills College, Oakland; Occidental College, Occidental, and Pomona College, Los Angeles.

Also there is given out among the Northern California Alpha Gamma Sigma societies two $50 scholarships, one to the men and one to the women.

Freshman Star Proves Worth As Life Saver

By Ed Lopes

Death paid a visit to the college campus this week, but was foiled in its attempt to remove from this world a tiny Persian kitten.

The near tragedy occurred by the men's gym. The kitten, since named Scoliosis, was being brutally attacked by a neighborhood dog.

Obviously Scoliosis had wandered away from his home and had become lost in the tall grass surrounding the gym. Just how long he had been there will always remain a mystery, but from his appearance he had been without food for several days.

Death was not content that the small feline should die by mere starvation, and so a bulldog arrived upon the scene and proceeded to participate in a vigorous game of ostich, with Scoliosis starring in the role of the ball.

It was then the hero appeared on the scene, in the person of an unidentified freshman. Thinking nothing of his own danger, the frosh chased the belligerent canine away and tenderly picked up what was left of the small kitten and his nine lives.

Scoliosis is now living the life of Riley, with an extremely benevolent family, who would have nothing to do with cats, let alone kittens until he made his appearance with skinned nose, mangled torso, and matted fur.

He is very much alive today, except that he is the possessor of a severe case of bad posture, a result of his harrowing experience, hence his name.

Holders Of Student Cards Still Continue Violations

Restating its policy, as announced several weeks ago, the Judiciary Committee, under the chairmanship of Charles Howe, today indicated that Associated Student card violators were still in evidence.

Football games, at the present time, seem to be the main source of violation, according to Howe; however, the number of violators have not been reduced in sufficient number.

Students who had Associated Student Cards confiscated, are urged to recover their cards through the Associated Students' office. Failure to do so will result in the forfeiture of the card by the student, according to the committee.

The use of photographs on Associated Student cards as a means of foiling card violators is still being considered by the committee, and, according to committee members, is gaining favor with the various student officials. Whether or not the use of photographs will be made next semester is as yet unknown.

With mid-terms being given next week, Howe warned that his committee would be active as a court for students apprehended for classroom cheating in examinations.

College Mystery Defense Fault

By Harold Levin

Why has there been a rise in price on some of the food served in the college cafeteria?

This question has been on the lips, at one time or another during the semester, of every student who masticates his noon time meal in the college cafeteria.

The reason for this price increase is the same in practically every eating place in the city. This reason being the higher cost of food.

Although most students know that food prices have been constantly rising, few realize how great the increase has been.

As an example, a list of some of the commodities used in the cafeteria with the amount that each has increased in price since last June printed after it, is printed below:

Eggs, 17 cents per dozen.
Butter, 9 cents a pound.
Frankfurters, 4 cents per pound.
Pork, 11 cents a pound.
Veal shoulder, 5 cents a pound.
Sugar, one dollar per 100 pounds.
Shortening, 6¼ cents a pound.
Milk, ½ cent per ½ pint bottle.

In spite of these rises, the cafeteria has made an effort to keep the price of milk down.

"We feel," said Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, "that milk is an essential item of the diet and every effort will be made to keep it available to all students regardless of rise of price.

"It is impossible, however," Mrs. Watson continued, "to serve meals and other items at the same prices as last June. As far as possible, fountain prices will be kept the same as last semester."

Besides the rising costs of food, it is almost impossible to get paper goods, such as straws, because of defense priorities, Mrs. Watson revealed.

The scarcity of straws is so great, that last week the salesman who sold the cafeteria a large order of them last June offered to buy them back at twice the price he received for them.

Ardent straw users considered last week that the hay gracing the fields across from the front of the campus might prove a solution. Unfortunately their hopes were somewhat dashed when they remembered that hay of the straw variety is scarce locally until spring.

Associated Student Activity

Talent Bureau Starts Auditions; Alumni Association Receives Approval And Aid Of Ex Council; College Band Under Way

Beginning yesterday and continuing through until today, talent bureau auditions are being held in Room 200 at 3 o'clock, it was revealed today by Irwin Cohen, bureau manager.

Interested students are advised to contact Flosita Badger, Wesley Muscio, bureau advisers, or Cohen in order to arrange for possible auditions. Auditions are being carried on continually to secure student talent for various college functions, according to talent bureau officials.

No Type Restrictions

No restriction is made on the type of talent wanted, and, according to Cohen, any student regardless of the type of talent he may have, is invited to appear before the bureau.

"This is really a great opportunity for anyone who is interested in entertaining to get experience, or possibly 'get a break'" Cohen said. "Besides performing at college rallies, and other functions, auditioned students sometimes receive calls to perform outside of the college," Cohen added.

Serves As Casting Office

Serving in the capacity of a casting office, the talent bureau hears and records student talent, and furnishes entertainment for the various activities about the college.

In operation since the middle of last semester, the bureau has progressed rapidly as a means of satisfying student wants in the entertainment field.

Parking Signs Warn Drivers Off Slopes

Parking signs made their appearance on the south hill Friday and will hereafter serve as a warning to drivers not to park their cars in the area, it was revealed today by Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"It is my hope," Browne said, "that the 'no parking' signs will have some effect upon students who have continued to park their cars in that area despite all warning."

Further Action Tentative

Further action, other than the installing of the signs, will depend entirely on the reactions of student obeyance of the signs, Browne pointed out.

"Since repeated warnings against South Hill parking have been ignored, the signs I have had installed should aid in preventing any possible accident resulting from faulty brakes," he added.

Second Parking Lot Possible

Questioned about the addition of a second parking lot to relieve traffic on Phelan Avenue, Browne pointed out that public utility property adjacent to the college could probably be used as a parking lot, if it were graded over, and permission gained from the concern.

At present there are a few vehicles which are permitted to park on the hills. These are special cases, and include persons having special business to do with the college or persons who made requests to park there because of a physical handicap, Dean Browne revealed.

Reversing a decision of two weeks ago, the Executive Council last Thursday granted a newly formed alumni association the sum of $125 for general running expenses and a semesterly social affair.

The original request was refused earlier because of a misunderstanding concerning Associated Student finances. Assured last week of sufficient money and assured of the need for an alumni association, the council readily passed the requested amount.

Group Necessary

Dean Edwin C. Browne, speaking for the association, pointed out that such a group is a necessary adjunct to a college and goes for the creation of desired good will and understanding among graduated students who are, or will act as voting citizens.

The Dean estimated that about 11,000 students have already passed through the college since its beginning.

A fee of one dollar is required for membership in the association. Free admission to all home games played by this college is a privilege of the alumni joining the group.

Approximately 20 former students have already joined the association, Browne noted, adding that further members will doubtless be gained through the action of the council.

Basketball Team Allotted $344

The basketball team was allotted an additional $344 in the same council meeting. The total appropriation for basketball is now $879.

The advisability of immediate engraving of the names of the two winners of the President Award for 1941 on the award plaque was also brought up. Action was promised by the council.

Award Plaque On Display

The award plaque may be seen in the display case at the side of the main stairway leading to the first floor.

Mary Frances Malone, former managing editor of The Guardsman and first woman to be president of the Associated Students, and Len Gross, former editor of The Guardsman, were the last two students to be named for the President's Award.

Hope Expressed For Rally Before Each Football Game

More step rallies for the college are being planned by the rally committee under the guidance of Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner. No definite date has been set as yet for the next 10 minute rally.

"My committee and myself would like to hold a rally prior to every football game if it could possibly be arranged," Mohorovich said.

One more woman "hep leader" is still needed by the rally committee to assist Jean Peterson, at present the only "hep leader." No experience in leading yells is necessary, Mohorovich revealed. The "hep leaders" are a separate unit of their own. They have their own share of the program at the rallies and football games. Any woman student is eligible for the position, Mohorovich said.

The step rally presented last Friday at 1 p.m. on the front steps featured Louis "Dutch" Conlan, coordinator of educational management.

Also at this rally, Norman Applebaum, newly elected assistant yell leader was presented to the student body present. The rest of the program was taken up with some of the college yells which are to be a feature at every college rally.

CAB Meeting Next Friday For Application Confab

All representatives of the Club Advisory Board are requested to be present at the next meeting of the club at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon in Room 311 as vital matters concerning their organizations will be discussed, Francis Goetz, chairman, announced last Friday.

According to Goetz, all membership applications of the clubs should be turned in at that meeting to the secretary of the board.

It is a requirement of the Executive Council of the college that all clubs in the college must have membership in the CAB, Goetz said.

Forum

Group Requests Student Poetry For Discussion

Poetry contributions for comment by members of the Forum Club have been requested by Dorothy Mercer, faculty adviser to the club, late last week.

Contributions are requested to be submitted by Tuesday, October 14, in Office 251, or given to Frederick Bracher, John Gerstung, William Goss or Miss Mercer, faculty advisers to the Forum Magazine.

Comparison In Idea

"It is planned to submit student contributions, as well as material by well known poets, unsigned for the members' and authors' comments. Should any student contributions be judged worthy, they will be published in The Forum Magazine next semester," Miss Mercer said.

The material contributed to the group will be discussed in the next meeting, slated for October 17 at the home of Miss Mercer, 2251 Jackson Street, at 8 p.m.

Repeat Performance

This type of meeting was requested because of its great success last semester, and it is hoped that all college students interested will attend the meeting.

Officers for the next semester will be elected at the meeting, Miss Mercer said, so a large representation is particularly desirable.

The Forum Magazine is one of the publications of the college, written and presented entirely by the students of the college. It includes poetry, prose, short stories and essays as well as cartoons and drawings.

Employment

Advancement Possibilities, Salaries In Specific Professions Forecast By Survey

Specific information as to just what opportunities await them in their chosen profession will soon be available to college students. A survey, covering a period of five years, of the advancements in position and salary received by men established in every line of endeavor possible, is now being conducted by Joseph A. Amori, employment director.

As an example, Amori referred to the insurance business. In three or four of the largest concerns, employees representing all phases of jobs available in insurance will be interviewed. The advancements in position, wages and opportunities received by them in the last five years will be recorded.

Survey First Of Type

No survey of this type has ever been made before, said Amori, but interviews with employers revealed a great deal of interest in the project. The work in this direction will continue throughout the semester, Amori added, but information concerning some businesses will be available soon.

More Than 300 Apply

More than 300 students have applied at the placement bureau for jobs so far this semester, at least 150 of whom have secured positions, Amori also said.

Those who have not received jobs have, for the most part, extremely hard schedules or family objections which they have so far been unable to remedy.

"Upon my recommendation," Amori explained, "it has been possible in some cases for the students to work out with their advisers a schedule more applicable for work outside college.

More Jobs Open

Women are wanted to paste telegrams during holidays in a large telegraph company. Early application is necessary as work before the holidays will be required to acquaint the girls with the procedure.

Other jobs available to girls include ushering, work in a children's day nursery, printing Christmas cards and many types of fountain work.

Experienced men are in demand for service station work, but inexperienced men are qualified for positions as ushers or doormen, trucking, delivery, soda fountain and shipping clerks.

The employment office is located in Room 155, the former Associated Students' office. The change was made at the beginning of this semester to accommodate the large number of students applying for jobs.

New NYA Ruling To Insure Prompt Arrival Of Checks

A change has been made in the rules for signing of NYA time cards this year to assure students getting their checks on time.

Last year about five per cent of the personnel had to wait months for their checks because they had been sent to the wrong address. Sometimes, Claude T. Silva, NYA director said, the fault was in the office, but more often the students were to blame.

This year the original address received from the students upon application will be typed on the top of the time cards, but in addition, space is available for an address as well as the person's signature.

This additional space must be properly filled in, Silva added, so that a double check can be made on the address to which the checks are mailed.

Sophomore Sweetheart

New Selection Plan Complex And Unfair

A NEW plan for the selection of the sophomore sweetheart was announced by George Coart, high soph president, last week in The Guardsman. Carefully viewed, the idea is too complex and does not correct fully the fundamental weakness and almost unfair practice that has been the rule in determining the woman to reign as queen during Sophomore Week.

It has long been felt that the traditional procedure of recruiting candidates for the coveted position is inadequate and unjust. Briefly, the method has been this: Near the end of the semester, a representative of the sophomore class gives notice through the paper that applications for soph sweetheart are now being accepted in the Associated Student office. Women are then expected to march to the office and calmly address anyone present with something like "I want to enter the sweetheart contest." From that moment she is subject to embarrassing and pointed scrutiny wherein her chances are carefully weighed by both the male and female element that happens to be in the office. Later, her picture is taken, placed in a display case with others, and a vote is held.

A certain number of women go through this each semester: some casually, others perhaps hesitantly.

That a considerable number of women quite eligible for the role of soph sweetheart either through modesty or any other understandable reason do not wish to propose themselves under this arrangement is an entirely safe assumption. Putting one's self up for such a competition is so incongruous as to be a distinct impropriety. Furthermore, when election time comes, we do not find a fair or complete sampling of the college cream.

Why this practice has continued to exist is incomprehensible. It is evident that Coart's plan aims to remedy this glaring ineptitude. His mode of election countenances first the selection of six men of the high sophomore class to act as preliminary judges. Each is to choose four sweetheart candidates. With a resulting 24 women, the judges are to meet as a committee and nominate one candidate apiece for the final voting. It is to be hoped that the high sophomore class will supervise the election and allow the votes of the men from all the four classes since nominees may be picked from any of the four classes.

Immediately we are spurred to wonder how the six judges will be appointed and how they in turn will select these 24 candidates. Frankly, we question the efficiency and integrity of such a body.

First, would this group be drawn from the limited coterie that inevitably springs up around student officials? And how would the six be determined if drawn from the high sophomore class at large?

Second, would these people be able to reach out beyond their own circle of acquaintances and pick really eligible women. Would a judge wander down the hall, spy a lovely number and mutter to himself, "What a smooth blonde; watch my smoke." Obviously this kind of desultory selection is unsatisfactory.

Third, could this group resist the considerable pressure that would be exerted upon them. Remember, each judge can choose only four women. Conservatively speaking, each would have two young things that would cut him cold if he didn't at least suggest their names. Objectivity is elusive under these circumstances. Using this premise, one half of the preliminary candidates could represent a small circle of women emanating from an even smaller concentric circle of the six men "tried and true."

Since criticism of this sort requires a constructive counterbalance, The Guardsman recommends that anyone be allowed to produce a candidate provided he places his name and Associated Student card number on the endorsement and submits a reasonably accurate snapshot of the entrant.

From the number of applicants, a select committee might then choose perhaps 10 women for a final vote by the men of the college. We suggest for this committee, the three high sophomore officers, each of the other three class presidents, a representative of the Publications Board, making in all a seven-member body.

This plan, of course, is not ideal, but we feel that the method of selection is the fairest yet conceived, and that the preliminary committee of judges would be more impartial than that of Coart's.

This question is YOUR problem. There is ample time for a satisfactory solution. Release your suggestions through the Ram's Horn on this page.

The Mailman

brought us a petition from the S. P. M. M. C. H. which stands for the Society for the Prevention of Mid Morning Cliff-Hangers. A cliff-hanger, according to the Dictionarius Jargonus Americanus, is a radio serial which ends each installment with the protagonists in a burning submarine, or even hanging from the edge of a cliff.

We listened to a few of these soap operas to see how badly the committee needed our signature. The plots are stereotyped. So and so is in love with so and so, who is married to so and so, who is in love with somebody else. Folksy advice is tossed in by good old Ma Jerkins, then comes a ten-minute commercial on Benson's Bouncing Baby Breakfast. Then, the announcer's tense voice, "Will Daddy Fourbucks get out of the overturned ambulance, that was wrecked by the fire engine that was on its way to rescue Jack, who is rescuing dear Paul, the little, blind boy, who, etc., etc.? Then more commercial. Then Orphan Annie.

We signed the petition and mailed it back special delivery. Shortly afterward we received the grateful thanks of the committee plus two tickets to a quiz program, which are on sale at The Guardsman office for 15 cents. And you can have our crystal set, too!

At The Coliseum

Bowl, where wistfully puzzled "punch-drunk" fighters hang around the box office in hopes of a handout, we saw one of the same slouch up to a young fighter entering with his manager.

"Say, Benny, how about 50 cents? I wanna see da fights?"

"I won't give you 50 cents but I'll give you a pass," Benny replied.

The punch artist backed away with an offended look on his battle-wracked face.

"Oh, no, Benny," he said loftily, "I always pay my way."

He ambled down the street throwing left hooks at his shadow.

National Defense

is slowly encroaching on our means of recreation. Fifteen hundred soldiers are on their way to set up a camp at the Beach Chalet playground where the Sunday afternoon cricket and soccer matches are played. Army supplies are being stored in the indoor tennis courts at the Palace of Fine Arts.

But they can't take the Idle Hour Pool Hall away from us! It's our last ditch.

"Gotta Go,"

rasped Dean Browne as he dashed out the office door, leaving the gaping young reporter in the middle of an interview. Things had happened too fast for said reporter. The phone had rung, the Dean had answered it, "Be right there," and dashed out as if the place was afire.

"I'd better follow him. This might be something big," thought the reporter, visioning a page one by line.

He dashed after the Dean's flying figure and caught up with him in the court . . . having his shoes shined by a fraternity initiate.

Date Bureau Is Suggested; Frosh Abused Again

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 134. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

• Puzzled Frosh

Editor, The Guardsman:

"Why doesn't somebody tell us these things?" is a common sentence muttered in the halls at various times of the day, and muttered by "meek little things" called freshmen, who can't remember such things as where the Astronomy class meets, who teaches "Poli Sci," or where the rally is being held.

We, the new additions of this hall of knowledge, are looked down upon with scorn. In fact, we have even heard ourselves being called stupid. Upperclassmen cannot understand the small but important problems of the "Frosh," and thus the Associated Students is divided into two distinct groupings—the wise and the weak!

Perhaps everyone would be happier if these two groups could be united. And this would be possible if the upperclassmen remembered that they, too, once upon a time, were wandering about with blank stares on their faces, resenting the scorn which was thrust upon them.

Indignant Frosh.

• Lonely and Blue

Editor, The Guardsman:

May I make a suggestion to help romantically inclined young things around the college? (including myself). We find ourselves extremely reticent on approaching the subject of dates with a fair damsel.

How about a Date Bureau such as they have at all the leading colleges and universities?

As a starter I might be imposed upon to give a thumb-nail description of myself for file card No. 1.

I am twenty years of age, weigh 196 pounds, have blue eyes and blond hair and am open to suggestions from the gentler sex.

Tall, Dark, and Lonesome.

Editor's Note: May we suggest a union of these romantically inclined young things around the college with you in charge of this bureau? Perhaps you might appeal to the welfare committee.

FEM FADS . . .

by Nancy

LAST week student officials asked that student rooters at college games wear something red. Just like a wedding, something new, something old, borrowed, and blue. However, at the games all that is wanted is red—new, old or borrowed. (Incidentally, freshman, the school colors are red and white..)

Eloise Windfelt, soph sweetheart of last semester, thinks that a red v-neck sweater with a white shirt, would look very nice. As Eloise generally wears a bow in her brunette hair, perhaps she will choose a red or white bow. Then, too, there are bows of two colors. A skirt (if you haven't red or white) of tan, light grey or beige would be perfect. With this outfit Miss Windfelt could be almost unanimously elected best dressed rooter —on the Ram side, of course.

While we were conducting our off the record poll for "What the well-dressed-woman-will-wear-to-the-games-from - now - on - with-something-on-of-red," we got all sorts of answers. Several no-school spirit women said that they didn't have any red and besides they wouldn't wear any anyway. These, we hope are in the minority, a great minority!

COLLEGE SPIRITLESS?

Just because we haven't a band, there is no sense in being school spiritless. If everyone would wear red, to the games, we could cause more comment than any set of skin beaters, and boogie-woogie bugle blowers.

Wearing red doesn't mean a whole red outfit — dress, hat and sox, for every woman present. Horrors no! That would be ghastly, think of the players, they would, as the saying goes, really see red. Then, too, a little red goes a long way. A beanie, a hairbow, or anklets—with your other outfit. That will be sufficient.

Another pollee on our poll suggested a red suit. There are a lot of them around the college, too, if you look sometime. Not solid red, but with red predominant. Pat Garry's suit is an example of this. It is bright red, with dark navy blue stripes running crosswise. For school she wears a dark blue sweater and pearls, but, perhaps for the game she could be persuaded to wear white instead of the striking blue.

Twasn't long ago in the hall that a co-ed ran past with a braided red and white macaroni necklace. Macaroni gadgets were very popular last year and apparently haven't lost much of their following.

NAN SEES . . .

YOU braiding yourself one of these red and white gadgets, and wearing it to the game. Then the red and white appearance of the rooting section would literally thrill the very souls of the yell leaders.

Lydia . . . Academy Award Contender

ROMANCE is so highly commercialized and cheapened on the screen today that it is indeed a novel, refreshing experience to find a truly fine love story emerging from the Hollywood studios.

Such a love story is Lydia, the new Alexander Korda production, and for sheer beauty and imaginative execution, the picture is extraordinary.

Here is a delicate, introspective glimpse into the life of a woman, a vivid, moving portrait that carries Lydia through carefree, giddy youth, troubled emotional maturity into the peace and tranquility of old age. Lydia, luxuring in the warmth of her aging years, holds a reunion party for her four beaus of days gone by. Michael, Frank and Bob arrive first and there are gay, frank confessions of their courtships, their motivations in Lydia's life. As the group lets its thoughts drift into the past, the camera slowly fades and blends into brilliant flash-back sequences, projecting Lydia's strange life upon the screen. Occasionally the camera will swing back momentarily to the aged reunion group conversing upon Lydia's penthouse veranda. Then shifting to another trend in Lydia's story, the audience is transported into the past again for another look at Lydia's life.

FLASH-BACK TECHNIQUE USED

Flash-back technique is old stuff on the screen, but as handled by Director Julien Duvivier, the process grows in stature and power. It is handled so beautifully by Duvivier that the sudden cut from past to present and back never jars. Expert camera projectory aids materially in this important aspect.

Lydia is basically the story of this woman and her four affairs. Michael (Joseph Cotton) a scientist, Frank (Hans Yaray) blind pianist, Bob (George Reeves) Harvard football player, all love Lydia (Merle Oberon). But Lydia will have none of them for she has had her one great infatuation with Richard (Alan Marshall) who subsequently walked out of her life. Lydia is emotionally exhausted. At the conclusion of the reunion party, Richard arrives, slightly bewildered. He and Lydia face each other again. What happens may surprise you. It's a tremendous climax to a tremendous motion picture.

BEAUTIFUL DIRECTION BY DUVIVIER

Famed European director Julien Duvivier has staged this superior drama with consummate skill and sensitivity. The screen play by Ben Hecht is alternately crisp, vital and poetic. Settings are luxurious and costly. The film has been developed in customary opulent Korda style.

Merle Oberon does her best work as Lydia since Wuthering Heights. The supporting cast give distinctive performances of uniform excellence. Chalk Lydia up as Academy Award material.

THE Executive Council does it again.

At the last meeting of the council the matter of appointing a publicity committee was under profound discussion. The words were flying freely. Twenty-five minutes had elapsed when one member of the council found out, much to the amazement of all, that they had been discussing the matter out of order. A ghastly mistake. According to parliamentary law, nothing can be discussed that is not in the form of a motion. So to make things proper, the topic was put up as a motion for discussion. The whole matter was again discussed in the spirit of parliamentary procedure. Finally a committee was appointed for the purpose of looking into the matter more thoroughly. Nothing was decided. Business as usual next week, ho-hum.

Your College Presents . . . How To Preserve Mammals In 10 Easy Lessons

By Iwanna Hayworth

IN the collection of animals which have been preserved by means of taxidermy and the like by the museum technique students of the college rests a suspiciously life-like specimen in the form of a coyote's head. (Take it from a Texan who has seen a lot of them) the work was very realistic. The student who did the work obtained the head of this prairie wolf by writing to a big game hunter.

HUNTER CO-OPERATES

This enterprising student, anxious for credit in the course, was looking for means to get the heads of different mammals for his work. Answering this student's question as to what was done with the heads of the animals caught, the hunter replied that they were disposed of and very obligingly sent them on to help further the student's work. Upon leaving the college, this same student left a part of his collection, among which is a very realistic specimen, that of a bobcat.

Several stuffed birds, large and small, also grace the shelves of this department. One student, with a brilliant idea in mind, attempted to preserve one of these birds by merely injecting this subject with a certain chemical substance. The bird is preserved all right. Looks pretty good too—from an amateurish standpoint.

Another phase along this type of work is study skins, that is a method of scientifically preparing animals. Some of the rodents from various parts of the country thus prepared, e.g., squirrels, mice, gophers, etc., are done very nicely —and this tribute comes from Dr. Glen Noble, head of the biology department and in charge of this course.

SOME PRESERVE SOFTNESS

Some of the skins are so preserved as to retain their natural softness and silkiness, this, of course, in cases of animals with this type of fur.

A varied and rather wide assortment of skulls have also furnished these students with work from those of bugs to an American Indian skull found by Dr. Noble. One earnest young student brought in the skull of a sea lion. This he cut from the body of one of these creatures which had been killed and had been brought in by the tide to the beach. Skeletons of various forms, from those of Crustacea to one of a guinea pig, the latter is an articulated and mounted study.

Besides the laboratory which students of this course use for their work and in which some of the specimens are kept, the department has two specially made cases. These are moth-proof zinc-lined, and air-tight. In these two cases are forty small and large drawers in which mountings can be kept in safety.

One rather interesting item for students who may care to take the course is that besides the one hour on Mondays, the other time for study can be arranged with Dr. Noble. These hours may range from one to three hours.

PLASTER OF PARIS TOO

Still another phase of work taken up is the plaster of paris, and rubber molding of different animals. These mountings are quite life-like when completed and painted. In case of disbelief on any reader's part, take a look sometime at the rubber mold which Dr. Noble made of his own hand to use as an illustration for the class. It even gives one a feeling of seeing a human hand which has been severed from an arm and just lying there in the show case.

A method of learning the way the blood vessels run in any certain organ of a body is demonstrated and taught by means of injecting a certain insoluble solution into this organ and then putting it into an acid which will dissolve the organ but since the solution in-

Women's Technique Class; Intramurals Under Way

THUMBING THROUGH THE COLLEGE CATALOGUE:

Under the heading "Physical Education For Women" are found several interesting courses—very interesting, the first of which is numbered 3a-3b. Following the number of the course is some highly enlightening information: Officiating Techniques (1-1) Year. Now, how often is an official called upon to officiate a technique? What is a technique? According to Webster's Collegiate Dictionary a technique is "The method or details of procedure necessary to expertness of execution in any art, science, etc.; hence, manner of performance with reference to such expertness; as, the technique of versification; a violinist with bad technique.

TECHNIQUE FOR WOMEN?

What, then, has technique to do with "Physical Education For Women"? After all, according to Webster, technique refers only to "any art, science, etc.;" and isn't in the least bit correlated to any type of education for women—least of all women. Women, art, science, etc.; physical, technique, education for women, fiddlesticks! And furthermore, what do women (especially Physical) use technique for? Arts? Sciences? Etc.?

SPIRIT OF 27

Farther down in the catalogue is found "27a-27b-27c-27d. Restricted Activities (½-½-½-½) Each Semester." According to that same gay lad, Webster, restrict means "To restrain within bounds; to limit; confine." What manner of institution is this? Is it a Devil's Island, an Alcatraz? Or are we advertising a two-way stretch? On the other hand, the fault may not be with the college, but with the students.

SAY IT AINT SO

Are we, the youth of today, so headstrong that the colleges which we attend must restrict our activities? Have we grown beyond those natural limits which for eons have limited the activities of youth? Hang heavy, oh time, and temper with thy weight the younger degeneration of today.

HEIL BRADY!

Once more the intramural program of the college is running smoothly, and setting a fast pace for competitive college sports to follow. Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser, is the man behind the plow, for the second semester. Jack deserves a great deal of credit for the intramural activities for this semester, as well as last spring. Brady puts in a number of hours each day for the intramurals, beside carrying on his regularly scheduled men's physical education courses.

Women's Athletics

Conference Of Society Presidents And Counselors Sets Tentative Play Dates

Tentative dates for Women's Athletic Association play days to be held on the college campus were decided on at a conference of junior college WAA presidents and their club advisers last Friday at the Whitcomb Hotel, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA, revealed.

Saturday, November 1, is the date tentatively planned for intercollegiate swimming play day, Miss Kraul said. The meet will be held at the YWCA where races for speed and form will take place. A demonstration of swimming and diving is also being planned and Helen Crlenkovich, holder of three national titles, may take part.

"Golden Gate Park will be the scene of the archery play day sometime early in the spring," Verrel Weber, archery instructor, announced. "Nearly 50 targets may be set up in the archery range at the park, so it is possible that the conference matches will be held there. This will also give the out-of-town students an opportunity to enjoy our park."

Miss Kraul said that although no date had been set, it was possible that the bowling play day would also be held in San Francisco.

At the conference Friday, WAA clubs from different colleges invited the other schools to be their guests at play days for certain activities. "This way we all get a chance to have our favorite activity at our own school, and yet get around to their colleges, too," Miss Kraul said. "No definite announcement as to where other play days were to be held was made."

Reservations 35 Cents For BarBQ

Today is the last day that reservations for the Women's Athletic Association barbecue, which will be held tomorrow at Sigmund Stern Grove at 5 p. m. The price is 35 cents, Bernice Strube, chairman of the event, said, and includes a box lunch.

Reservations Going Fast For Barbecue Tomorrow

Reservations have been coming in in great numbers to the bank for the Women's Athletic Association barbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove tomorrow, according to Bernice Strube, chairman of the event.

"The barbecue," Miss Strube pointed out, "is the first event of this type sponsored by both the women's organizations in the college, Associated Women Students and WAA. But, all women whether members of either association are urged to attend.

Entertainment for the evening will consist of folk dancing, and community singing around a large campfire, presentation of puppets by Teddy Ruegg, and short talks by Betty Fox, president of the AWS; Bertha Keller, faculty adviser for the WAA, and Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA.

Miss Strube said that although the time for the barbecue was previously announced for 5:30 p. m. it was decided that 5 p. m. would be a better time. This will enable students to come to the Sigmund Stern Grove directly from school. Because midterms take place during the same week as the barbecue, the barbecue will finish early enough for students to get some studying in before exams the next morning.

Both the 12 and the K car lines go within a block of the grove, Miss Strube said.

First Aid Kits Available For Students In Building

First aid kits may be found in Dean Dougherty's office, in the Hotel and Restaurant division office at the end of the main hall, and in Francis Mount's office in the Home Economics department, the Women's Physical Education department revealed last week.

"During the past week, several students have come down the hill to the gymnasium for first aid from one of the doctors. "This is unnecessary," Bertha Keller, chairman of the department said, "as in the case of a burn or cut. For minor injuries, the first aid kit may be used."

An attempt is being made to secure another kit for the chemistry department as many accidents happen here which do not require the services of a doctor.

Basketball To Start Today In Gymnasium At 3 p.m., Ten Teams In Tournament

Basketball, first major sport on the intramural calendar for this semester, will start this afternoon in the men's gymnasium at 3:15 p. m., Jack Brady, faculty adviser announced.

Five games will be played today with the schedule of games as follows:

At 3:15—
Unknowns vs. All Americans
Rifle Club vs. Tri Epsilon
Alpha Delta Epsilon vs. Spartons

At 4:15—
Japanese Students vs. Blitz Boys
Phi Lamba Epsilon vs. Newman Club
Goats vs. Rabbits

For Thursday

At 3:15—
Unknowns bye
All Americans vs. Tri Epsilon
Alpha Delta Epsilon vs. Blitz Boys

At 4:15—
Newman Club vs. Rifle Club
Japanese Students vs. Rabbits
Phi Lamba Epsilon vs. Goats

The tournament will be run off on a round robin basis for the next five weeks, with all games to be played on Tuesday and Thursday.

Last semester it was necessary to form three leagues, the International, American, and National, because of the 24 teams entered. This semester, however, only 10 quintets have entered, making it possible for round robin play, Brady said.

Medals will be awarded to the members of the winning quintets, a gold one for first, silver for second, and bronze for third.

A new rule has been drawn up by the intramural board this semester. If any team forfeits two games for non-appearance, that team will automatically be disqualified from further play. Also, if any team appears with four men only, they are eligible to play provided they are given permission by Brady and the other team. However, if the four-man squad should win, the game cannot be protested.

Last week basketball freethrowing, the first intramural activity, was completed. The winner proved to be Jack Koster, member of the Newman Club, who sank 15 field goals out of 25 shots, and, in so doing, set a new intramural record. Runnerup was Dave Solomon, who found the mesh for 14 field goals, only one behind Koster's winning mark. Solomon missed his big opportunity to overtake Koster when he tightened up while taking his last five shots, only sinking one basket.

The freethrowing contest showed added interest than that of last semester. Thirty-seven entrants tried their luck in winning the crown compared to the 23 entries last spring.

Intramural Warm Ups To Begin Next Week

The spotlight in the college sports world will be turned on the boxing team, as the warmups for the intramural boxing program starts next week, Jim Jensen, boxing coach, said. This semester the semi-annual Associated Men Students' ring fest will be held in the Coliseum Bowl, as it was last semester.

"The team this year may not have such fighters as Billy Edwards, three-time winner in the 155-pound class, or Tom Mahoney, another three-time winner in the light heavyweight class, and other boys, such as Manuel Isaacs, Felix Salvadore, or Joe Briseno, but we will turn out as good a team as last semester," Jensen said.

He continued by saying, "This semester we still have some good boxers returning. Such fighters as Dave Hunicke, winner in the 165-pound class; Bryant Finch, finalist in the 175-pound bout, and Duke Drake, Ken Ludlem, and George Chew."

Jensen wishes it to be known that this semester, as it was in past semesters, the fights will be open to the general public, as well as to all college students, and that everyone will get a seat, as the Coliseum Bowl has a capacity of over 5,000.

First Water Polo Game To Be Later This Week

With their first game scheduled some time this week, but with no definite date set, the college water-polo is rounding into fine shape, it was announced by Allan Eisan, the squad's new coach.

"Don Ruch is managing the team, and he has written to a number of colleges around the Bay Region to sechedule games with, but so far, none but the Olympic Club Reserves have been put on our schedule," Eisan said.

Many colleges, such as California, Stanford, San Jose State, and the College of the Pacific have water-polo teams, but their schedules are also indefinite. Other teams that Eisan hopes to get on the schedule are the Moffett Field flyers, Hamilton Field bombers, the Athens Club, and the Stockton Junior College splashers.

With the mermen working out at the Jefferson High School pool, and the Y.M.C.A., stiff opposition is offered them by the advanced swimming class, who is splashing against them. "It won't be until the middle of October before we get our first string lined up," said Eisan.

Fall Trackmen Turn Out For Practice Regularly

Fall track has gotten off to a very successful start and the college trackmen are reporting continuously, according to Coach Russ Sweet.

The Ram mentor is pleased with the determination shown by the men that will carry the colors of the Red and White next semester, and believes that the spirit shown will aid in the team's chances when the regular season rolls around.

Cindermen who have stayed out of competition for a year are slowly regaining their condition, as are the returning veterans, new members, and some promising transfers. Sweet thinks that it won't be long before the men will reach full stride and gain their peak.

A history student, roaming through the halls of Centenary College, found an inscription that Centenary was founded in 1825.

Basketball

Four Veterans To Return For Next Season

Only four men who have game time to their credit are returning to the fold for the forthcoming college basketball season, Tom Wilson, Ram casaba mentor, revealed last Wednesday. Of the four, only two men, Mel Dropo and John Cunningham, both forwards, played varsity ball for the whole of last season.

Joe Pfahnl, forward on last year's lightweight team, has signed up for fall basketball practice, while the fourth man, John "Mickey" McCabe, who saw some action last year, underwent a kidney operation during the summer months, and his return is problematical.

Squad Inexperienced

Of the men that have been working out so far, Wilson observed, a great majority of the fifty who turned out appear to be not only small, but also inexperienced. The squad, however, he added, has not yet undergone the first cut, and players haven't yet had an opportunity to display their true abilities.

"At the conclusion of football season," Wilson said, "I look for team prospects to be brightened by the addition of a veteran or two, and possibly a few men with high school experience, who are now competing under Lee Eisan."

A list of the fifty men signed up in fall basketball has also been released:

Lambs Serve As Practice Material For Ram Varsity

For the past four weeks, the lamb football squad has proved adequate material for the Ram varsity, both defensively and offensively, Al Eisan, college lamb mentor, announced.

The squad has engaged in vigorous scrimmage sessions with the varsity, making it possible for Coach Lee Eisan's men to sharpen up their tackling, offensive and defensive maneuvers, as well as their blocking assignments.

Chief threat on the lambs is Billy Wadda, who has shown exceptional ability at the tailback post. Wadda along with Red Giavia have been promoted to the varsity, Eisan said. Also showing promise is Al Morris, fullback, who may eventually be shifted to tackle, and see action at this position on the varsity before the season is finished.

Of the men now playing on the varsity squad, those who first played for the lambs are Jack Medrano, Templeton Davies, Bob Hufnagle, Harold Corbett, Louis Vasquez, and Donald Tobin.

Merv Weiner, former Ram star, also played on the lamb squad before being promoted to the varsity, and later was an All Conference tackle at Fresno State College for three successive years.

A complete roster of the lamb squad will be released soon, Eisan said.

Political science students at the University of Vermont recently attended town meetings throughout the state to further their studies of government.

Repetition Reaches Zenith As Cubs Roll Up Huge Pile Of Statistics And Points

By Bill Cothran

While the gods of Yogi, Seering, and especially Repetition ruled over the University of California Memorial Stadium last Saturday from 2:15 to 5 p. m., the California Bear Cubs starred Art Honegger in a crushing 35 to 0 defeat of the Rams.

Repetition was the god of the afternoon as the Rams, already defeated by the Bear Cubs of Los Angeles City College, went down before the overpowering onslaught of the Cal Bear Cubs, who aped their big brothers, the Golden Bears, by winning their opening game of the 1941 season by more than 30 points.

Mid-way in the first quarter Honegger started the fireworks when he intercepted a Red and White pass and ran it back 30 yards to his opponents' 32-yard line. On the next play it was again Honegger for 16 to the Ram 13 and a first down. After an offside penalty moved the ball five yards closer, it was still Honegger moving around his own left end to score from eight yards out. Honegger made good the kick for the extra point, Jack Clifford holding.

The gun ending the first period went off with the Cubs on the one yard line of the Rams. On the first play of the second quarter, Honegger ripped over right guard to score his second touchdown, following which he again successfully attempted the conversion to move the scoreboard to 14 to 0, where it remained for the rest of the first half.

With the game won in the first half, the Cubs scored twice in both the third and fourth quarters. Clifford raced 30 yards to a score on the second play of the third quarter and Honegger converted. Honegger and Mobley Milam went 16 and six, in that order, to touchdowns, and little Bill Wada, Ram safety, was nailed for a safety, while fielding a Cub punt.

Individual star, and only focal-point of interest, for the Rams was Louis Vasquez, fourth-period quarterback, who continually broke up Cub plays with tackles around the legs.

Highlights Of Saturday Ram Versus Cub Meet

By Bob Marcus

Outclassed in the forward wall and outclassed in the backfield, such is the only solution to the 35 to 0 shellacking administered by the Bear Cubs over the Rams last Saturday.

Displaying a fast, surging wall, manned by three complete units, the Cubs continually broke through the weaker Ram line to stop reverses and running plays before the backfield had a chance to swing into full momentum.

. . . The Cub ground game was sparked by Art Honegger, left halfback, who in the typical California offense, broke clear into the secondary after driving hard off his own right tackle with three men directing the play and putting on some vicious blocking to spring him clear. Honegger landed in the Ram end zone on three occasions, once around left end for 13 yards, through right tackle and into the clear for 30, and on a plunge from one yard out. To add to the Ram dismay, Honegger converted from placement three times.

. . . Outstanding on defense was Captain Ed Frassetto, tackle, who proved a bulwark on the right side of the Cub line.

. . . In the first quarter, Ed Cassidy, Ram left end, gave an outstanding exhibition of heads up football by recovering two fumbles bobbled by Clifford McClain, Cub safety. The first fumble was recovered on the Cub 30-yard line and the other on the midfield stripe.

. . . By far the best defensive man for the Rams was Lou Vasquez, who, from his right halfback position, made the cleanest cut tackles of the day. Vasquez, always a hustler, could prove a valuable man in future games for Coach Lee Eisan.

. . . After the massacre, the Rams truly looked like a battered and bruised squad. Augie Kalnen, with an infected hand looked very weary; Don Tobin, cut about the face, still appeared groggy from the effects of being knocked cold in the third quarter; Jack Medrano, playing his first game of the year, sustained a shoulder injury in the first half and remained on the bench during the continuance of the game.

. . . The only individual effort worthy of mention from the Ram standpoint was the 68-yard kick made by Augie Kalnen.

The Cub freshmen should prove ample material for the California varsity next season.

Club Backed Carnival Day Spurs Group To New Step In Tradition Establishment

College Carnival Day, with costumes, prizes, entertainment, and refreshments, is the latest idea of the college Welfare Committee, according to chairman Bob Lindemann.

"The committee is working on ideas for a big festival day at the college, complete with side shows, booths where prizes may be won, and entertainment, Lindemann revealed.

Prizes Offered

The committee hopes to have the cooperation of college clubs in carrying out the idea. To draw this cooperation, prizes would be offered to the club or organization providing the most spectacular or original booth. Students who wore the most unique circus costumes would also be awarded prizes.

"The success of this occasion would depend on student reaction to the idea, and the necessary cooperation of the college organization," Lindemann explained. "We hope to have dancing, and to feature entertainment provided by the Talent Bureau," he added.

Carnival King and Queen

The committee is of the opinion that carnival king and queen should be elected, according to Lindemann. The election would build up the necessary spirit to get the student body behind the idea, he pointed out.

"We are not so much interested in raising money," Lindemann explained, "as we are to make Carnival Day a tradition. If the first endeavor was a success, we would plan to make it an annual affair."

Money Will Renumerate Participants

Money received from the carnival receipts would pay the expenses of the organizations participating, and a certain percentage would be turned into the student body treasury. If the proceeds amounted to enough, perhaps a name band could be invited to play for student entertainment later on, Lindemann declared.

"Let it be understood that this is a call for support of the college organizations. To be a success the Carnival must have their cooperation," he said.

He requests that students having any ideas for the carnival should see a member of the committee, and the matter will be brought up and discussed.

Hello Plaque To Be Purchased

"As to Hello Walk," Lindemann said, "the plaque should be purchased next week. When it is it will be put on display where students can see it. Then it will be placed in the pavement in front of the flag pole in the rear court," he added.

The committee has been working to obtain the plaque since last semester, when Bill Postal, college finance chairman was appointed to purchase it. But, the close of the semester caught up with the activity in this direction before dimensions and a suitable resting place for it were discussed.

Social

High Frosh Dance—Cavalli Orchestra

George Cavalli and his orchestra have been chosen to play for the high freshman dance on October 24, in the War Memorial building in San Francisco, according to Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman.

Cavalli has never played for any of the college dances before, but he has played for fraternity dances at the University of California and Stanford University. Cavalli specializes in the Tommy Dorsey style of music.

Admission will be by Associated Student card only, and those couples attending are requested not to wear a corsage by the social committee.

Low Sophomores and their guests will dance to the music of Warren Ringen on Low Sophomore night, November 18, at the Scottish Rite Temple in Oakland. Admission to this affair will also be by Associated Student card per couple, Miss Niemeyer said.

Postponement of the Associated Men Students' boxing matches has made it necessary for Don Jensen, AMS president, to arrange for a different date for the hotel night following the bouts. No definite date for the boxing matches has been made as yet, Miss Niemeyer announced.

The new date which has been set for the AMS barn dance is January 10.

Alvarado Barn remains as the site of the dance.

Student Qualified Civil Service Exam Jobs Posted

Competitive examinations for civil service positions for which junior college students may qualify were announced last week by Lloyd D. Luckmann, civil service instructor.

These positions are open throughout California, Arizona, and Nevada.

Many positions are open. Students interested in qualifying for civil service jobs are urged to get in touch with Luckmann during his office hours.

Posted on the bulletin board outside the registrar's office is a list of other competitive examinations.

High Sophomore Formal Dance Plans Complete But For Music

With the exception of but one item, selection of an orchestra, plans are now completed for the high sophomore formal, December 13, Class President George Coart, announced Wednesday.

Auditions for orchestras are to be arranged for in the near future, and, in the meantime, Myron Du Bain, formal chairman, urges that any student with a suggestion for a band should submit it at the student office, Room 168, as soon as possible.

Cal Country Club Chosen

Site for the dance has definitely been set at the California Country Club. This decision was made after serious debate by members of the committee and class officers.

Last year the event was held at the San Francisco Country Club, because students desired this closer location.

Size Determined Location

It was evident at that time that the latter club was not large enough to accommodate the large turnout. Therefore, the committee has deemed it advisable to use the larger place, despite some objections as to the extra distance.

Many other events for the upper classmen are being listed for the coming semester, and Coart promises the posting of a full schedule as soon as possible.

Low Sophomore Dance Indefinitely Postponed

Indefinite postponement of the low sophomore dance, set for November 17, was forced by the scheduling of the Associated Men Students' barn dance on that date, according to Jim Duryea, class secretary.

The sophomore affair, however, will be held as soon after that date as possible, the new time to be announced probably next week, after the class officers have had a chance to confer with Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman.

Duryea said that "no low soph groups have been chosen as yet." But that he and President Mel Dropo have "been working as a committee of two" in lining up several events for the pleasure of their fellow sophomores for the semester.

A skating party at Pacific City, near the end of this month, a class picnic and a "super" rally are some of the activities the two officers are engineering for the semester. A full schedule of events, dates, times, and places will be issued within the next week or two.

Low Freshman Officers Meet To Plan King Election

Officers of the low freshman class are meeting today to complete plans for election of their "freshman king," and to draw up a finished schedule of all events for the coming semester.

President Bing Kirk assures his class that a fine semester is ahead—one that he hopes will please everyone who elected him to office.

Class Representation Wanted For Mixer Dances

To promote more interest in college mixer dances, the Social Committee, under the guidance of Patricia Niemeyer, Associated Student vice-president, has requested that students who wish to work on a dance committee volunteer through the Associated Student office.

The Social Committee has expressed dissatisfaction with the attitude of the students toward dancing at the last few mixer dances.

"Stag lines are still as large as ever," Miss Niemeyer said, "and we are trying to remedy the situation."

About 15 persons from each class are wanted by the Social Committee.

Faculty Association Backs Community Chest Drive

As in previous years, the faculty will support the Community Chest this year when the Chest starts its city-wide drive on October 13. Ward Nichols, president of the Faculty Association, announced this week.

Members of the contributions plan committee of the Faculty Association will make their pledges to the chest in a group, Nichols said. Faculty members who do not belong to this committee will aid individually.

Nichols, on behalf of the faculty, urged that all students and their parents support the Community Chest this year as the need is extremely great.

"All of this city's public schools are participating in the Community Chest campaign by making posters and having students give talks on the activities of the Chest," Nichols added.

Nichols called attention to the fact that American Educational Week will be held from November 9 to 15.

High Freshmen To Dance At War Memorial Oct. 24

The high freshman dance is now definitely scheduled for October 24 at the War Memorial Building, according to Neville Smith, class president in charge of the affair.

Neville assures the students of the college that this will be a wonderful dance, and hopes that all will attend.

More information will be available about this first of high frosh events at a latter date. Smith and the other class officers are working out a full program for the pleasure of their electors for the present semester, and promise an early posting of the completed schedule.

AWS To Entertain High School Seniors At Teas

Arrangements for a tea sponsored by the Associated Women Students, to be held Tuesday, October 28, are under way, according to Margaret Dougherty, dean of women and AWS sponsor. The tea will be held in Room 158.

The AWS will invite senior girls from San Francisco high schools to "get acquainted" with the college and its students, Dean Dougherty added.

The first tea will be to entertain senior girls from Lowell, Washington and Lincoln high schools. Each school will be invited to send 25 girls to attend.

There will be other similar teas later for senior girls of other high school, Dean Dougherty said.

Betty Fox, president of the AWS, will be chairman of the day, and will appoint a reception committee to aid her.

Already this semester the AWS has sponsored a tea to honor freshman women students, and has sponsored, in collaboration with the Women's Athletic Association, a barbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove.

School Administrators

Pres. Cloud Heads Committee For Feb. Convention Here

To be held in San Francisco for the first time, the annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators will begin February 21, according to an announcement made at the first meeting of the local convention arrangements committee, held September 17, by President Archibald J. Cloud, chairman of the committee.

The meeting held in the office of the Superintendent of Public Schools was presided over by President Cloud.

"This is the first time that San Francisco has been honored by an educational convention of such magnitude," President Cloud pointed out.

San Francisco Next

All previous conventions have been held in Atlantic City, Cleveland, or St. Louis, but an intensive study of the facilities available in San Francisco revealed that the community exceeded all requirements.

Plans to make all certificated staffs of public schools aware of the part that they would be expected to play at the convention were made at the meeting.

Representation City-Wide

Present at the meeting were President Cloud, Walter Scheffauer, representing the citizen's committee, Mrs. George Beanston, president of the second district California Parent Teachers Congress, John F. Brady, chief deputy superintendent, Walter G. Swanson, vice-president of the San Francisco Convention and Tourist Bureau, Walter C. Schmidt, assistant to the Superintendent of Schools, and H. A. Allan, business manager of the School Administators.

Allman Water Colors At Legion Gallery

Various water color works of Richard M. Allman, college art instructor, are currently showing at the Palace of the Legion of Honor, it was revealed today.

Landscapes of California, by Allman, and the works of Edward Johanson, eminent painter, have been given an entire gallery at the Legion of Honor gallery. A similar art display was made by the two men several years ago, receiving favorable criticism from local art critics.

Previous paintings done by Allman have appeared throughout the United States, as well as the San Francisco Museum of Art.

The present exhibit by the college instructor will be on display for the current month.

Ten College Students Fly At Municipal Airport

Primary Civil Pilot Training students are now flying at the San Francisco Municipal Airport, according to Major George D. Richards, college CPT Instructor.

There are now 10 students of the college enrolled in the course as primary students, and they train in 65 horsepower Luscombe Trainers.

Requirements for the course may be secured by consulting Richards during his office hours. The only change in the requirements, effective September 1, is the new age limit, 19 to 26 years of age, Richards said.

A new feature of the course is the wearing of uniforms by the trainees. These uniforms are optional and are not requisite in the course.

Hotel Division Limits Evening Dinner Bookings

For the current college year, the Hotel and Restaurant Division will undertake to handle a maximum of but two dinner bookings for each college month, according to Hilda Watson, Division chairman.

Bookings for the current month are the dinner for the Hotel Greeters of America, San Francisco Charter, set for October 15, as arranged by the students of the Hotel Division, and that planned for the following week by the class in Paint Technology.

Registrar

Students To Meet Advisers October 22 To Get Grades, Arrange Conference Times

Students will meet with their faculty advisers to discuss grades on Tuesday, October 21, at 11 o'clock, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced last week.

All classes will be excused for the meeting, Miss Learnard added. Instructors will arrange a time for personal conference with the student. Rooms and instructors will be announced this week.

Last day to drop classes without receiving a grade of F, is Friday, October 24. Procedure in such a matter is as follows: the student must first secure a petition from the registrar's office, he then must secure the consent of his faculty adviser, and must get the signature, on the petition, of the instructor concerned.

Students Face Probation

Students who have been absent from class the number of times that class meets each week, will be put on probation in that class.

If the student again cuts the same number of times, or more, he will be dropped from that class. Appeal and appearance before the attendance committee, headed by Tom Gabbert, Spanish instructor, is the only recourse for students wishing to continue that course.

Some instructors have inaugurated a system of counting late entrance into lecture as cuts in the proportion of three to one. For instance if a student enters class tardy nine times, he will have taken his quota of cuts, according to this system.

Late Sign-Ups Prevented

Students will no longer be permitted to sign up for class unless the instructor feels that the late student is able to make up for work missed. This would apply mostly to reading courses, Miss Learnard said.

The following are the rules of the attendance committee released through the office of President Achibald J. Cloud: Absence from any course for a period of one week, not necessarily consecutive, places a student on probation. The responsibility of keeping account of these absences rests solely with the student.

Students' Absences Curtailed

If a students' absences are equal to two weeks attendance in any course, the student will be permanently dropped from the course and will receive a final grade of F; however, should the student feel that his absences were legitimate, he has the privilege of appealing to the attendance committee for permission to reenter class.

The departure of a student from the college without an official leave of absence will entail a final grade of F in all courses.

The committee headed by Gabbert, consists of Margaret Dougherty, Sue Menke, Mary Perry, and Ward Nichols, all faculty members.

Rifle Club To Stage Hayride Next Friday

A hayride will be held by the college rifle club at Happy Hollow Ranch in Sharp Park next Friday evening, the club announced last week.

At 7:30 p.m. Friday, a caravan of cars will leave the front of the college bound for the ranch.

The price for the ride is 50 cents per person. Any student desiring to attend this affair should see Jim Juri in the rifle range on Tuesday or Thursday at any time from 8 a.m. to noon.

At sunset there will be a hayride followed by refreshments and a barn dance. The party will break up at about midnight.

The refreshments will consist of sandwiches of all kinds and coffee and Coca Cola. Two wagons pulled by white horses will be ready on the arrival of the caravan from the college.

The 50 cent admission price includes everything, the club pointed out. Members of the Rifle Club are urged to bring their friends.

A good time is promised to all who attend, as previous hayrides were very enjoyable.

The nation's defense preparation has caused postponement of reopening of the Mohawk Drama Festival on the Union College campus this summer.

Debate

Convention Program Nearing Completion

Plans for the forthcoming meeting here of the Northern California Junior College Debating Society within the next two weeks, are progressing although no definite date for the convention has been announced yet, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, college debating coach.

The purpose of the meeting will be to discuss plans for debate among the various junior colleges within the league, together with the problem of choosing debating topics. One of the topics to be discussed will be that of post-war reorganization.

College To Serve Lunch

"The college will probably serve lunch to the group. After luncheon there will probably be a program of debating and extemporaneous speeches," Luckmann declared.

The debating team of the college will be chosen from the following students: Robert McCaffrey, Peter Kakures, Anthony Cosola, and Jacqueline Blair, according to Charles McKiernan, colege speech instructor, also a debating coach.

"This semester we have several speakers of unusually fine ability to choose from," McKiernan said.

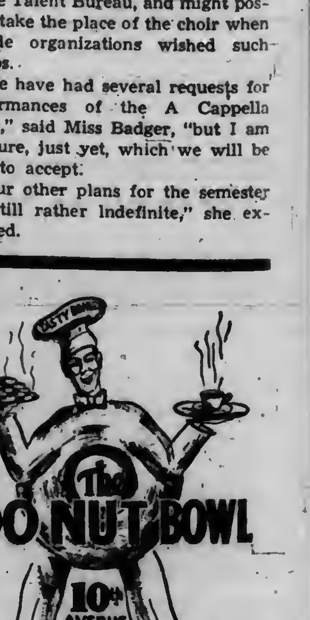
No Schedule Yet

As yet the college debating team has no arranged schedule of debates but McKiernan says, that the teams' outlook for the coming semester is a promising one.

Edith Frazier, of Salinas Junior College, together with Luckmann, will be the sponsors of the group. Luckmann will be director of the organization.

Junior colleges which compose the NCJCDS are Salinas, San Mateo, Marin, Sacramento, Placer, Modesto, and San Francisco, Luckmann revealed.

Choir Appearance Oct. 31 To Open Full Season



Friday, October 31 will mark the beginning of a full season for the A Cappella Choir, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor. On that day the choir will perform for the Convention of Women's Clubs, at the Western Women's Club.

Also being considered by the A Cappella Choir are plans for smaller groups of vocalists who would perform in place of the entire ensemble when a smaller group was wanted.

These groups would probably be a women's trio, a men's quartet, a mixed quartet, and any other good combinations. Miss Badger stated that these groups would be auditioned by the Talent Bureau, and might possibly take the place of the choir when outside organizations wished such groups.

"We have had several requests for performances of the A Cappella Choir," said Miss Badger, "but I am not sure, just yet, which we will be able to accept.

"Our other plans for the semester are still rather indefinite," she explained.

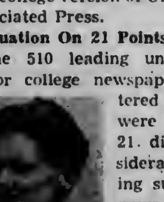
Guardsman Gets All-American Again

Last Semester Issues Place Among Top 5 Newspapers In Junior College Division



The Guardsman, for the third time in four semesters, this week won All-American rating as one of the top college newspapers of the nation by the Associated Collegiate Press.

This highest possible honor was awarded on the basis of last semester's papers, which were under the editorship of George Cowie. Only four other junior college newspapers in the nation were so honored this year.

Each semester college editors of member papers submit a file of their newspapers to newspapermen and professors of journalism for comparative evaluation. The judges work under the supervision of the Associated Collegiate Press, an organization that may roughly be described as a college version of United Press or Associated Press.

Evaluation On 21 Points

The 510 leading university and junior college newspapers that entered competition were apraised on 21 different considerations including such topics as news coverage, news vitality, writing style, typography, make-up, feature writing, editorials, columns, and many others.

George Cowie, All-AmericanEditor

The Guardsman was judged in the field of weekly papers because of the relatively few junior college papers that are published twice weekly. Out of a possible 1125 points, The Guardsman amassed 1025 points, more than gained in the three previous semesters.

One of Few Repeaters

The number of comparably rated junior colleges winning the Superior or All-American award suffered a decided drop since fall 1940, and The Guardsman was one of the few college papers to make a repeat performance by winning the All-American two semesters in a row.

The following students comprised last semester's editorial staff:

George Cowie, editor; Kei Hori and Mary Frances Malone, managing editors; Francis Chrisman, news editor; Hugh McDonald, assistant news editor; Willard Akers, sports editor; Elizabeth Cook, feature editor; Dorothy-Helen Thurmond, advertising manager, and Ted Green, business manager.

The reporting staff was made up of the following students:

Nick Barbaretto, Arliss Boone, Arthur Cohen, William Cothran, John Dewey, Dorothy Eames, Leon Elie, Mary Gannon, Jean Gutman, Iwanna Hayworth, Borrie Hyman, Douglas Johnson, Harold Levin, Robert Marcus, John Metcalfe, Nancy Nagle, Frank Quinn, Dorothy Tsuda and Albert Weinberg.

Nadan Chiladoux, Lorraine Kirby and Dolores Sullivan were the staff artists, and Howard Marg was the staff photographer.

Business staff members included Lydia Hruby, Gerald Phillips, Bill Schaefer, Ogden Wheeler and Edmund Wunsch.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

THE art of the clairvoyant is the envied accomplishment of all who dare to foretell any or every event.

This is true in the case of the political observer as well as in the case of the sports prognosticator. It is true of all who predict.

Today there are more self-appointed clairvoyants wandering about attempting to lure innocent bystanders into their way of thinking than have graced this nation for a good many years.

But many of the plans for the future as promulgated by these people bear some bit of truth.

ADVICE TO THE YOUNG

When a young man sets out to make his way in this war world he is given special advice. The advice is something like the following:

Get a job that will still be a job after the defense boom has run its course. Don't get into a job that will only last until the war is over. Get something permanent—there's going to be a lot of unemployment after all this is finished.

Well, in a sense the above is quite true. There must certainly be job shortage when the war is over that is greater than the existing one of today. In many cases there is not even a job shortage today. For example: in most defense, and production industries.

But when the need of slowing down defense output finally arrives, there must certainly be a slowing down of hiring—and a speeding up of firing.

HARD TIMES COMING?

The depression which is being predicted for the United States in about two or three or four years—or when Germany is beaten—is supposed to be the best ever. They claim that it will outstrip the 1929-35 fiasco by a comfortable margin.

If such is the truth, that is, if there is going to be a gigantic depression, what will be done to combat it, to help care for the unemployed, stimulate business, level off trade conditions, aid a return to better times?

The best answer to this question lies in the trend of business and national management today, at the present moment.

THE TREND IS THERE

For decades now the trend has been toward more and more government control. Not really control, that smacks of socialism, communism, or something definitely anti-American, but really, regulation—regulation of key industries and production points.

When this war is over, and a depression results that will necessitate drastic government action, probably the first step will resemble the present WPA (or similar national aid projects) except that it will be on a much greater scale.

Unfortunately, America can not remain a healthy, progressive nation if a goodly number of her people are working for the government in quasi-relief jobs. Such employment, it is claimed, steals initiative from the worker, and increases his already apathetic attitude toward advancement.

The next step must of necessity see the national government assume responsibility to the people as a whole by guaranteeing their protection against low wages and unfortunate working conditions that are not by the farthest conception the fault of the employer, but are rather the fault of the times.

WASHINGTON TAKES OVER

This will entail supervision of vital industries: food production, clothing, housing. The resultant supervision will lead to more thorough supervision, as is now done in the case of the public utilities. And the supervising range may be widened to include many and most American businesses. The small retail store will perhaps be left to itself.

This idea of government supervision, at its reception, is repulsive to most Americans. The majority want their chance to step on some-

Holiday Jobs

Applicants Get Personal Interviews

A radical change in methods of choosing students for Christmas jobs will be introduced by the college placement bureau this year. Working with interested businessmen, Joseph A. Amori, bureau director, has devised a plan for a more personalized selection of available applicants.

All applicants suitable for each job will be interviewed as a group by the employer, and from this group he will take his choice. This will be the first year that employers have come to the college and chosen their employees, said Amori.

Jobs Plentiful, Varied

Christmas jobs will be plentiful and varied this year, Amori added. One firm alone has put in an application for 170 women. The openings will be for typists, office messengers and clerks. This particular firm requires 5 to 10 days of training which the student may receive by working afternoons or holidays whichever is convenient. A wage of 30 cents an hour will be paid while training and 40 cents an hour for regular work.

Forty jobs will be available with the same concern over the Thanksgiving holidays, Amori noted, with the same provisions as stated for Christmas work. Immediate application is necessary to secure one of these jobs for either period.

Requests are being received daily by the bureau for students to work as clerks, cashiers, and in merchandising over the Christmas holidays.

Post Office Applications Here

Post office jobs will be open to both men and women this year, Amori said, but students are warned against applying directly through the post office department. An agreement has been reached with the department for the available positions to be registered with the college placement bureau.

This will relieve the confusion usually suffered by the post office in trying to handle all applicants. To enforce this, Amori added, the department will discourage any personal applications.

Drop In NYA Rolls Shows Rise In Job Opportunity

How national defense helps solve the employment problem is graphically illustrated by this semester's NYA payroll. There are approximately 33 per cent fewer men working for the NYA this semester, Claude T. Silva, director, said this week.

The fact that 33 per cent fewer men need financial assistance is improbable as the figures never vary that much in one semester. A more practical explanation is the abundance of jobs in defense industries and vacancies resulting from the draft, Silva explained.

Talent Bureau

Program Request Filled; Audition Time Extended

Although talent bureau auditions will not be completed until next week, requests for student talent are being filled, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor and talent bureau adviser.

The talent bureau service has not yet officially opened, but today students are presenting a program to an assembly at the Half Moon Bay High School, and another is being planned for Monday, October 13, to be given for the Daughters of the American Revolution, Miss Badger explained.

Six On Program

At Half Moon Bay High School today, the program will include musical numbers by Katherine Davies, soprano; Ruth Berryesa, contralto; Pierce Davis, tenor; Clarence Ashman, bass; Doris Crane, violinist, and Bob Ibarolee, accordion player.

A demonstration of a radio broadcast by Marie Weller's radio class was also presented. Assisted by the musicians, the students presented a skit based on the life and music of Stephen Foster.

DAR At Federal Auditorium

On Monday, October 13, the students will present its program for the Daughters of the American Revolution at the Federal Auditorium. It will feature Jean Fraser, soloist, and Elenc Brooks, pianist.

Talent bureau auditions have been extended because of the great deal of interest shown in the project, and because all the available talent at the college is wanted for the files, Miss Badger said.

College Instructor Chemistry Authority

Recent publication of an article written by Arthur Furst, college instructor of chemistry, in the Journal of Chemical Education was announced last Wednesday. The article, in which Furst discussed the improvement he has made in the dilatometer process for measuring changes of volume caused by chemical reaction, appeared in the July 1941, issue.

In the old dilatometer, Furst stated, it took too long to pour the contents of the proposed chemical union into the thin tube. In this space of time, the reaction took place before an accurate measurement of the change in volume could be made.

Furst merely added a cuplike opening through which to pour the solution and also capillary stopcock or shutoff valve which prevents air bubbles from reaching the reaction in the tube which leads to the bulb. This takes not half as long as the old method and is more thorough in doing so. The reaction takes place and expands the volume strongly in

Coart, Hyman Tell Stands On Soph Plan

October 7, 1941

Dear Editor:

Due to the fact that I'm Sophomore President and the activities of the Sophomore class are vested in my power, I feel that cooperation from The Guardsman is most essential in carrying through my ideas and plans for the class I represent. Constructive criticism is always welcome. However, when you doubt my power of selecting men who are most apt to be unbiased in their selection of girls for the coming Sweetheart Contest, you bring up the question as to whether or not I am well-adapted to my office.

I wish to state that my plan will be carried through with or without the cooperation of The Guardsman and I will assure the students who are inclined to be of same opinion as you that the contest will be held with the high standards of respect of the student body for an honest, unbiased contest as my goal.

George Coart

October 8, 1941

Dear Mr. Coart:

In reply to your letter, may I say first that there is absolutely no question either now or at any time concerning your adaptation to your office. On the contrary your interest in remedying the past methods of electing the sophomore sweetheart proves your sincerity and capability.

May I further state that nothing but constructive criticism was intended in the editorial of Tuesday, October 7, as proved by the words printed therein, "Since criticism of this sort requires a constructive counter balance . . ."

The further statement was made that the editorially suggested plan was not ideal, but simply a second attempt in an effort to gain the fairest method possible. The final paragraph carried the intention of the editorial—presentation of the problem to the students that they might offer still other suggestions out of which might be developed a workable and fair method of sophomore sweetheart selection.

To the staff of The Guardsman the editorial suggestions express the utmost cooperation whatever plan is adopted. The Guardsman feels that its plain is still more fair and less complex and hopes to see the best one presented that there can be no question of anything but the "honest, unbiased contest" that you as well as The Guardsman have named as the goal.

Very truly yours,

Borrie Hyman,

Editor, The Guardsman

No Holiday For College Students Next Monday

Monday, October 13 will not be a holiday for the college, the administration announced last Tuesday. As Sunday, October 12, is Columbus Day, elementary public schools will celebrate by a day's holiday Monday.

College Band

Group Meeting Today May Decide Future Activity

Meeting for the third time since its organization, the college band will hold a 3 o'clock meeting today in Room 200 for a further discussion of band activities and policies.

Meetings of the group will be held on Mondays and Fridays until organization is complete and practices get under way, according to Douglas Craig, student manager of the band.

Practice Until 5

Practice sessions will be held until 5 p.m., but students desirous of attending the meets are urged by Craig to come at their convenience.

Possible use of the band at the several remaining college football games may be made, it was disclosed today by band leaders, but only if a sufficient number of practices are held.

Ginther Temporary Leader

Bud Ginther, temporary student leader in charge of the band, today indicated that the band was in need of several trumpet and clarinet players, and that the addition of these instruments to the band will bring the group to full musical strength.

Even though the band will rely on students to lead the group for the present semester, Madison Devlin of Lowell High School will serve in the capacity of organizer and musical adviser.

Parking Violations Intolerable--Browne

With the posting of no parking signs on the south hill of the campus nearing completion, Dean Edwin C. Browne has indicated that continued violations of the no parking rules will not be tolerated.

"Cooperation of the drivers who continue to park illegally on the hill is needed to put an end to this dangerous practice," Dean Browne said. Parking violators now number about six each day.

"Disregard of the signs by drivers indicates that the driver can't read, or that he is the independent type who doesn't need to cooperate," Browne added in his announcement.

Posting of the signs on south hill is under the direction of Claude Silva, NYA director.

Installation of parking signs marks the end of a verbal campaign by student officials to curb hill parking.

AWS Plans Teas To Honor City High School Girls

Plans for teas to honor San Francisco high school girls were discussed at a recent meeting of the Associated Women Students, according to Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, and AWS sponsor.

The first tea is to be held Tuesday, October 28 in Room 158, and will be in honor of senior girls from Lowell, Washington and Lincoln high schools, Dean Dougherty explained.

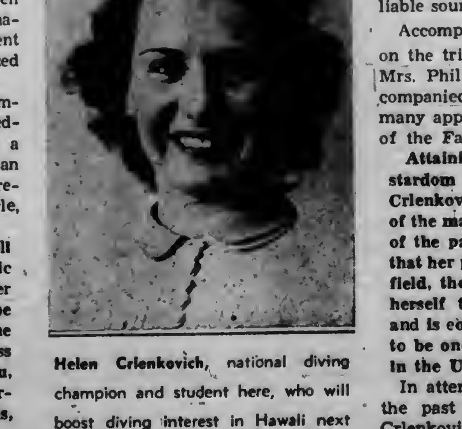
Each school will be invited to send 25 senior girls to attend the tea. Similar affairs will be held later in the semester to honor senior girls from other high schools.

The chairman of the day will be Betty Fox, AWS president. She will select a reception committee to assist her.

Already this semester, the AWS has sponsored a tea to honor the freshman women students, and in collaboration with the Women's Athletic Association, has held a barbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove.

Members of the committee paying honor to the high school girls on Tuesday, October 28 will be Madeline Cardinali, Eleanor Coleman, Barbara Stewart, Fern Romaine, Marie Strube, Gloria Olivi, Betty MacKillop, Donna Meyers, Jacquelin Blum, Fleeta Alexander, Betty Rost, Phyllis Burley, Virginia Franz, Sally Nelson, Peggy O'Neil, Barbara Stahman, and Pat Brand.

Helen Crlenkovich To Tour Hawaii



Diving Champion May Take Clipper

Plans for a December diving tour to the Hawaiian Islands have been made by Helen Crlenkovich, national aquatic star and student here, according to a bulletin issued by the University of Hawaii.

Leaving San Francisco December 11, Miss Crlenkovich is scheduled to travel by steamer, but a possible use of the Pan American Clipper may be made, it was revealed by Theodore Searle, Hawaiian athletic official.

Miss Crlenkovich is well known in the various athletic circles of the islands, and her part in the December tour will be primarily to boost diving in the territory. Not only will Miss Crlenkovich perform in Honolulu, but she is also scheduled to perform at the various other islands, according to Searle.

A possible trip to South America had been planned by the swimming star, but that trip has been indefinitely postponed in favor of the Hawaiian trip, according to reliable sources.

Helen Crlenkovich, national diving champion and student here, who will boost diving interest in Hawaii next December.

Accompanying Miss Crlenkovich on the trip will be her chaperone, Mrs. Phil Patterson, who has accompanied the swimmer on her many appearances, and is the wife of the Fairmont swimming coach.

Attaining swimming and diving stardom several years ago, Miss Crlenkovich has appeared in all of the major aquatic tournaments of the past few years. Realizing that her prowess lay in the diving field, the swimmer has confined herself to that particular field, and is considered by sport critics to be one of the foremost divers in the United States today.

In attendance at this college for the past several semesters, Miss Crlenkovich will return in time to complete the semester in January.

San Quentin News Wants Reporters

By Doug Johnson

The editor of the San Quentin News (The Other Side of the Inside) is in search of new reporters. On page three of the October 2 edition he ran an ad enumerating qualifications for applicants.

"Applicants must be able to read and write," (aspiring reporters will find that any of the really important publications require this), and the ad stated further that "applicants must have an I.Q. of at least 45."

This last tempted a few of our own reporters who thought that they might just be able to make the required intelligence quota, but then the gentleman turned exclusive.

"Only residents of the prison need apply," according to the ad, snobbishly dashing the hopes of those on a staff who can read and write.

The editor of the San Quentin News showed a slight distrust of his little striped brethren, asking them to please "don't leave your cells to apply—write."

He's probably afraid some of his little chums have heard of the Freedom of the Press, and will take it too literally.

We could probably cell ourselves, but we haven't the conviction.

Christie Named New School Commissioner

Named by Mayor Angelo J. Rossi to fill the vacancy on the Board of Education by the death of Charles A. Derry, school commissioner for the past few years, Harry I. Christie, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades Council, was given membership at the Tuesday meeting of the education board.

The late commissioner Derry had served as a member of the Board of Education for the past six years, having been named to the position in April of 1935. Originally coming to this country in 1884 from England, Derry gained membership on the printing trades union, and held membership until the time of his death. Derry had also served as editor of the Labor Clarion, A.F.L. organ, for the past 10 years.

American Education Week Is Nov. 9-15

Observance of American Education Week is already being planned for in San Francisco's educational institutions although it doesn't fall until the week of November 9 to 15, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

"The part that will be played by this college is as yet unknown and will not be decided until the meeting of the Citizens' Committee under the chairmanship of Jesse C. Colman on Tuesday, October 14," President Cloud said.

President Cloud, a member of the committee, will attend the meeting to be informed of the part expected of the college.

He attended the meeting of the State Council of California high school principals last Saturday in Fresno where various problems of school administration were discussed. President Cloud attended to give information on convention of the American Association of Schools Administrators which comes to San Francisco on February 21.

President Cloud was also a guest at the state-wide conference of the California Superintendents of Schools last Saturday and Sunday in Santa Cruz. Various ramifications of the future convention were discussed with their regard to the teachers' institutes to be held during the convention, according to President Cloud.

"The decision of the American Association of Schools Administrators to hold its convention in San Francisco is a feather in the city's cap," Cloud said.

Low Soph Mixer Set For November 14

A Low Soph mixer is tentatively set for Friday, November 14. It will be held in a barnyard atmosphere, with gingham and jeans the official dress for the occasion.

The mixer will be held to promote interest in the all-important Low Soph dance of the semester, the semiformal, which will be held at the Scottish Rite Temple in Oakland, November 12.

While the dance is not sport, semiformal is to be stressed, Jim Duryea, class secretary, said.

The Guardsman
Published Twice Weekly by the Associated Students of San Francisco Junior College

Vol. XIII, No. 9 Friday, October 10, 1941 Page 2

Five Reasons Equal

Distinction

FIVE points make this thrice-won All-American honor for The Guardsman more noteworthy than the two previous top awards.

First, the number of comparably rated junior colleges winning the Superior or All-American award has suffered a decided drop since the fall of 1940 when the second All-American was attained. At that time 11 junior colleges classed with The Guardsman received highest honors over the entire country. This time, The Guardsman was one of only five in the United States so judged.

In line with this fact, competition was increased through the addition of 98 newspapers to the total of publications submitted for rating.

Next, The Guardsman came closer to the high point newspaper than ever before. The top score was 1038 in our classification The Guardsman earned 1025 points. Also those junior colleges comprising the All-American winners were tightly grouped in a margin of 50 points, the range being from 1000 to 1050 points.

Moreover, this third award is distinctive because of the tendency of Associated Collegiate Press judges to apply more stringent standards when grading the publications issued during the spring semester. This is the first time The Guardsman has won the All-American rating for a spring semester. Of the four times The Guardsman has entered ACP competition, only once did it fall below the highest honor of All-American. That occasion was the spring semester of 1940. A First Class award, just under that of All-American was garnered then. The judges feel that college papers should be at their peak of efficiency in the spring semester.

Finally, since The Guardsman was graded along with weekly junior college papers (few junior colleges publish more than once a week), the competition was heightened to a certain degree. More pains may be taken when only one paper a week is produced. Reporters, columnists, editorialist, and make-up men may have more time in which to debate and polish their work. Not too much consideration is given this last point, though, by The Guardsman, for the increased pressure in twice-weekly publication necessitates more capable and efficient management and reporters able to turn out acceptable copy on short notice. Many a strain, however, is laid on the shoulders of the editorial staff, as any taut-nerved, grey-haired editor will testify.

Since the college newspaper is one of the most effective and far-reaching advertisements of the college to its community, those responsible for the continued high standards of The Guardsman feel both a certain amount of pride for their own work, and, in a greater sense, for the added distinction that such honors bring to their college.

Extract The Thorn

HILLSIDE parking is still a thorn in the side of the college. Some students, lacking common sense and heedless of simple safety rules, persist in leaving their cars on the steep slopes on the south hillside. As Dean Edwin C. Browne pointed out this week, "Recent deaths caused by hillside parking in and around San Francisco would indicate the fallacy of this procedure."

It might be well to follow the college parking regulations before active enforcement is begun and before a runaway car causes serious damage.

and lonely looking, even in the crowd that lined the curb six deep to watch the night parade of October 3 file by, he sat on his little box on the corner playing a wheezing Barcarole out of an ancient accordion. The sign in his hat said "Blind." And no one cared.

Bayonets, silhouetted against the glaring shop windows like fingers pointing skyward above the helmets of marching men, filed past wave on wave. The rumble of lumbering cannons echoing the drone of speeding planes drowned out the puny squeak of his pathetic music.

The sign said "Blind." The backs of the watching crowd seemed to answer, "So what?"

We felt sorry for him. He was pathos, we thought. But not for long. Because, no matter how patriotic you are, you've got to see the American flag before you stand up for it. The little "blind" man stood up when it passed. Still, he risked his job for his patriotism when quite a few are risking their patriotism for their jobs.

has been in that embarrassing situation that arises when two people try to pass each other on the street and see-saw back and forth in front of each other. One gets that hopeless feeling. One feels he's in a rut. One laughs lightly and passes on when the impasse is solved.

Herman Sherman, paint technology student, wrote in to us to tell of a little bon mot that was bounced off his quivering ears when he found himself in the same spot.

"We'd been jockeying around for about five seconds before we got straightened out," writes Herman. "When we did manage to pass each other the other fellow turned and said, 'Well, it's been nice knowing you,' and walked away."

Perhaps the best quip arising from this little situation comes from Peiree Dundas, who is studying to be a boy soprano. The fellow he was trying to pass said, "That was swell, now let's rhumba."

was Arthur but we called him Waltham, (1) because it annoyed him, (2) because he wore an Elgin watch. He was very conscious of everything he said and was forever studying the little frailties of the human intellect.

"Faith is all one needs to go through life happily," Waltham insisted blandly. He would pucker his eyes and look off into space over his pipe as if he'd discovered a great truth.

One day we were walking down to the college store with Waltham and were just about to cross Ocean Avenue. Hoping to take some agility to cross Ocean Avenue than it does faith, but our little pal was all wrapped up in his theory. He didn't notice the truck. The truck didn't notice Waltham.

All we know is that Waltham disappeared very suddenly. If any one has seen a little man with a big pipe and laughing eyes floating down Ocean Avenue, please notify us. His cuts are piling up rapidly and we are getting worried.

● Avoid Mess, Get Best
Editor, The Guardsman:

What could be more fair than Mr. Coart's plan for the selection of the Soph Sweetheart?

True, it does not entirely flatter certain groups who seem to be afraid to admit that their material could be surpassed by several "nobodies," but we want the best, don't we?

As for the picture method—OH! How lovely our campus would be if only we lived up to those make-up jobs.

How about a "Sweetie" who lives up to the name.

Avoid a mess and get the best with Coart.

How About It?

Editor's Note: We too should like to see a "sweetie who lived up to the name," but we think we shall only get one through a more democratic method than that proposed by Coart.

Disgusted

● Fresh Air Fiend
Editor, The Guardsman:

I protest! I protest loudly! I am a firm believer in the principles of fresh air and sunshine, and how may I ask, can the sun's rays penetrate the layers of dust and dirt that adorn the surface of the windows throughout the building.

Conditions have become even worse during the last few days. Not content with the dirt, students have brought The Guardsman through for its third All-American rating. This semester, Hyman is at the wheel again.

The faculty adviser for this department since the end of the first semester is Joe Nourse Muscio.

For anyone who isn't familiar with newspaper "jargon," there are deadlines to meet twice weekly, Wednesday and Friday for news, pages, and Tuesday and Thursday for feature and sports pages at 11 a.m.—(A deadline, by the way, Is a set hour when all copy must be in.)

The Guardsman is thoroughly tied-in with the college curriculum. Students who are interested in making a career in journalism are required to begin with English 14, which is a study of newspapers as a whole and emphasizes training in writing news and feature stories.

Reporters for The Guardsman are registered in English 15. These students are given preference as to sports or straight news at the beginning—(that's where the preferences end, dear students, it's up to them from there on). Reporters are given various beats, which are assignments of specific news sources in the college which the reporter must cover.

If at the close of English 15, a student's interests and abilities so warrant continuing in this field, the editorial staff assumes the catalogue designation English 16ab.

Work consists of organization, makeup of the different pages, editing the copy, assurance of full news coverage, and "seeing" the paper through mechanical production to the press itself.

To understand this work, there must be a certain interest on the part of a student. A very true statement, which someone in newspaper work has said, "that once you're on a paper, the printer's ink can never really be blotted from your system." This doesn't mean exactly what it appears to mean at first glance. There's a certain satisfied feeling which comes to all news hounds when a job is well done.

The work which has to be done can be anything a student wishes to make it—exciting and a lot of fun, or just "plain work," and when it is just "plain work" it isn't worth the trouble. It's a certainty that success can't be gained by doing that.

Going back again to reporting the news on The Guardsman, a reporter hasn't a chance to identify himself in his stories except when he receives a by-line on a good story.

In closing, our story would not be complete without mentioning a final definition of the newspaper jargon, the identifying marks which indicate to the news editor that the subject is closed for the time being, the symbol

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

REMEMBER Columbus? Well, dear students, he discovered America in 1942, or perhaps it was 1492. Anyway we celebrate his discovery by setting aside a day, which happens to be Sunday. But to get down to the point, it seemed apropos to look around the college and see what could be "discovered" in a college in America in honor of this great man.

Discovery of the week (accompanied by loud fan-fare) is the goosgrain ribbon straps sewn in the lining of a coat from the shoulder to the hip line which enables the wearer, Gerry MacGee, to slip the coat off in over-the-shoulder fashion, and yet not continually be pulling it up onto her shoulders. She just slips her arms through the strips, and the coat is there when she wants it.

If Columbus were writing this column about what was being worn in 1492 he would have described the necklaces worn by the male populace of his newly discovered land. But time marches on! and now only women wear such things.

In the neckwear line we uncover many new ideas. One may have been hauled in from kindergarten days, although Kay Parac, the owner, swears up and down it didn't. This is a string (no, there are two strings) of multi-colored wooden beads. If you want one like it all you have to do is rummage through baby sister's toy box, and find some beads. Then string them on string (really?!) cord, or ribbon, and wear them until baby gets old enough to demand that her property be returned to her. By that time the fad will have worn away so it will be all right.

DARN CUTE

Another find was also a string of "things." Only this time we leave the beads, and go to spools of darning cotton. Varied colored darning cotton, you know, the colors you mend anklets with. Well, these also, were strung and worn around the neck.

HOT, HUH?

As it was so warm that last week or so, no one ventured out with anything but a skirt and white shirt, sweaters being warm, suits being hot, and coats out of the question entirely.

Angora is a funny yarn, it seems to make the wearer feel warm, but the looker cool. Pastel colored angora, especially, is a cool looking yarn. And the angora yarn gadget that Gloria Oliva was sporting last week was one of these coolies. Just what the design was (if any) on the gadget remains a mystery. But really, Miss Oliva, it was different looking.

NAN SEES . . .

varied costume jewelry being worn around the campus, (you may have gathered this from above). However, if you have any original ideas why not turn them into practicalities. For instance, a la Carmen Miranda, we have heavy looking (but not heavy feeling) costume jewelry. Thus, the Carmen Miranda admirer might get a hank of bouclé yarn and put it through about five evenly spaced curtain rings about one inch around, and behold! a surprise, can't wait to try it, how about you?

Spectator . . .

IN this era of war-conscious humanity, our eyes constantly focused on the far-flung scythes of aviation, our national policy deviating between sympathetic unity with the British and outright assistance despite a determined minority, Mr. Zanuck of Hollywood has constructed a tremendous box-office prospect in his latest, A Yank In The R.A.F.

Zanuck, recently pummeled soundly for a little item called Belle Starr, has produced here a sizzling piece of showman merchandise that will pile up box-office records throughout the nation, without any doubt. It is timely, topical, in complete stride with slowly developing American emotion . . . a picture that will draw crowds no matter what is written pro and con of its merits and defects.

FILM MAY DISAPPOINT MANY

What the crowds see may disappoint many for A Yank In The R.A.F. unfortunately has quite a few defects to balance its good points. Result . . . equilibrium and an average hour and a half of competent entertainment while brilliance lurked in the offing.

Brilliance could not be developed from a series of standard, trite situations whipped up by the story department. Perhaps it was the deliberate intention of Producer Zanuck and Director Henry King to avoid anything that held a similitude to the epical, the heroic, the grandiose. King utilized a simple, unassuming love story concerning that old triangle to pad the major portion of his story—occasionally, he would stop to insert a flying shot of bombers winging over Berlin or Spitfires hurtling the English Channel to remind audiences that this was England. But other than these sparsely spaced glimpses of R.A.F. might, the film could readily have occurred at any other locale in this old globe of ours. In fact the plot has served duty before . . . you know, A Yank At Oxford, A Gob In The Navy, A Smart Guy In The Army, Joe At Annapolis, Pete At West Point, or the forthcoming Hollywood epic, A Jerk At Alberkerke.

THAT "SMART GUY" THEME

It's the old theme of a smart guy, smoothly cynical, who knows perfectly what makes two and two four, joining a service unit. Comes the great emergency, the great climax of battle, and the hero discovers the truth, the glory, the falsity of his smug assertions. Cagney used to be good at that type of thing.

Here, it's Tyrone Power as Yank Tim, ferrying bombers to Britain for the cash involved. He ecit counters an old gal of his in London, portrayed by Betty Grable. Tim joins the R.A.F. to be near his chorus-girl friend; a very stormy romance begins. In steps Tim's flight commander (John Sutton) as the other third of our triangle and a nice bundle of romantic potpourri is evolved. But then comes Dunkirk.

AUDIENCE EXPECTS MORE

Anticipations were high for something that would surpass a mere, ordinary love story (an obvious one at that). Here was an opportunity to paint fire and courage on the canvas of the screen; Director King smothered the fire before it could start burning. Power and Grable, in familiar clinches, were substituted for the more dynamic theme of man against the heavens, and the picture loses all intrinsic value. It's light, fluffy entertainment but scarcely a "best-ten film" selection.

Power, a personality—not an actor, takes his role easily in stride. It fits him nicely and will regain some of his old fans. Aerial photography is excellent. We may add, to quote an old Hyman saying, that Miss Grable gives a very, very well-rounded performance.

Quotable Quotes

"During the past two decades our universities have suffered from a negative complex; our faculties have analyzed issues and balanced factors; they have exposed the follies and the vices of historical figures and movements; they have not emerged with a positive philosophy to which students and public might attach themselves. There is justice in the complaint of the undergraduate that his academic experience had not provided him with a faith," President Charles Seymour of Yale University points to a fault in the higher educational structure.

"True freedom of all men and of all women has never yet been realized on this earth. It may never be realized altogether. But if it is ever to be realized, the people of the United States, with their tradition of political responsibility, their mastery of the skills of industry and agriculture, their ownership of the wealth of the richest of all lands, have a better right to hope for its realization than any other nation has ever had," Archibald MacLeish, poet and librarian of congress, sees America as democracy's vanguard.

"At college, if you have lived right, you have found enough learning to make you humble, enough friendship to make your hearts large and warm, enough culture to teach you the refinement of simplicity, enough wisdom to keep your feet in poverty and temperate in wealth. Here you have learned to see great and small in their true relation, to look at both sides of a question, the good and the bad, of view of every honest man or woman, and to recognize the point of view that differs most widely from your own. Here you have found the democracy that excludes neither rich nor poor, and the quick sympathy that listens to all, and helps by the very listening. Here too, it may be at the end of a long struggle you have seen if only in transient glimpses—that after doubt comes reverence, after anxiety peace, after tentative courage, and that out of weakness we are made strong. Suffer these glimpses to become an abiding vision, and you have the supreme joy of life," LeBaron Russel Briggs, long-time professor at Harvard, summarizes from his varied experiences what college can offer.

"Today it is obvious that Germany is a country that has to be reckoned with; it is obvious, too, we are not to put it mildly, on friendly terms with her; it is all the more important to understand her and her language. Chamberlain did not understand German and for that reason perhaps could not understand Hitler." Dr. Berthold L. Ullman, professor of Latin at the University of Chicago, says the complete disappearance of German during the World war years was deplorable and foolish.

Your College Presents . . . The Guardsman: How It Goes To Press

By Iwanna Hayworth

WITH the closing of American Newspaper Week, it seems a fitting gesture to herald into the spotlight the journalistic department of the college, namely, The Guardsman.

To get really into the spirit of things, The Guardsman staff last semester was awarded its third All-American rating by the Associated Collegiate Press this week. The point which makes the whole of the staff swell with pride is the fact that the college paper was one of the five junior colleges in the United States that won this rating.

The outstanding parts of the paper which were given highest awards were news writing and coverage, the sports page with its news and general makeup, editorials and signed columns, and the general stories on the news pages.

For those who are interested in the history of the journalism department, when the college began, a newspaper was formed immediately under the faculty supervision of Francis J. Colligan in the editorial department, and Lloyd Luckmann in charge of business. When first organized, the paper was called Emanon (spelled backward, No Name). In the first semester, Emanon was published twice. Then the staff chose the name The Guardsman for their publication and 10 issues were published. The second semester, however, this publication was published once a week. This system was followed until the spring of '39, when it began one full-sized four-page paper on Fridays and a two-page edition on Tuesdays.

It isn't probable that many students will remember the pioneer editors who have led "Ye Olde Guardsman" up to the present time. Joe Goodell has the honor of being the first editor of this publication. Following Goodell came Bill Rawson, who contributed through one full year as editor a sound organizational management. The first and only woman editor of The Guardsman was Florence Murphy. Both she and Don Mix, the next leader of this group, are active at the present time in the Alumni Association of the college. Bob McArthur and Fred Vast, consecutively came next. Then came Bill Frantz, who led the staff to its first All-American rating.

Quite a number of students will remember, in the spring of '40, Len Gross, the next editor-in-chief, who held this position for two consecutive semesters. Not only was Gross successful in his attempts in putting out a full-sized publication twice weekly, but he piloted the staff through the first semester for a first-class rating by the Associated Collegiate Press, followed by an All-American rating. Last semester Borrie Hyman was in charge for 10 issues, then in accordance with doctor's orders, handed the "reins" over to George Cowie, who

Ram Tackling Improves; Dog-Plays Havoc On Turf

Although the Rams were defeated 35 to 0 by the University of California freshman team last week, the college squad showed a definite improvement over their showing against the Los Angeles City College Cubs. The entire team showed a certain degree of sharpness in tackling which had not been present in the foregoing games this season. Blocking, however, still remained ragged and inadequate.

SOMEBODY'S MISTAKE

Two weeks ago, in the LACC contest, Bud McKinnon, fullback on Lee Eisan's varsity, chipped a bone in his ankle and pulled a couple of tendons. Last week at the Bear Cub game in Berkeley McKinnon was sitting in the press box enjoying, well watching, anyhow, the plays on the turf below. Midway in the first half, the public address system announced that on the last play McKinnon had passed for a loss. McKinnon, greatly startled, jumped so high that he nearly put his other ankle out of commission when he came down. There was also another slight mistake in the P.A. announcement, the ball had been thrown, sio nuff, but lateralled—not passed.

SERIOUS FROM NOW ON

Although definitely not heartening, the football games played up to this point don't mean much. Tonight at Stockton, the Rams play their first conference contest of this season. They will be meeting the Stockton Tiger Cubs on the College of Pacific gridiron. It is still conceivable that Eisan's stalwarts could corral the conference championship by the simple expedient of winning the remainder of the games on their 1941 schedule. There we have the recipe for a successful season—will the cooks be able to handle the order?

WOOF! WOOF! WOOF!

Living up to an old saying, "Better late than never," a hound with the appearance of a flea-bitten burlap bag trotted onto the stadium floor during the second half of last Saturday's game. Not being satisfied with merely delaying a football game, prior to kickoff time the same dawg had been sitting in the middle of a Berkeley intersection, and of all things, scratching his fleas. Later it turned out that the only name the old chap would answer to was Saroyan.

California Associations Complete Playday Calendar; Six Planned This Semester

Dates and locations of play days throughout the college year were decided upon at a meeting of the Alta California section of the Federation of Women's Athletics last Friday at the Whitcomb Hotel, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the Women's Athletic Association, revealed.

The dates were decided upon so as not to conflict with final examinations or with games in which each college participates. Colleges belonging to this conference are Marin, San Mateo, San Jose State, San Francisco State, Santa Rosa and this college, Miss Kraul said. Faculty advisers and the presidents of all WAA clubs were present.

Play Day April 18

The general play day, in which tournaments and matches of all activities take place will be held Saturday, April 18, with San Francisco State College acting as hostess. However, Miss Kraul announced that this college would run the bowling tournament and the ice skating contests. "We were hostesses in 1939," she said, "and held the play day at Treasure Island."

Other play days for specific sport activities will be Saturday, October 18, a hockey day at Berkeley in which Stanford, Mills, and California will participate; Saturday, November 1, the riding clinic at Mills College; Saturday, November 8, the swimming play day at the YWCA when the college will be hostess; Saturday, December 6, tennis matches at San Mateo Junior College.

Swimming At San Jose

Opening the new semester will be the fencing and swimming meets at San Jose, on Saturday, February 14. Followed by basketball at Marin Junior College, Saturday, February 28, badminton Saturday, March 7; and softball at Santa Rosa, Saturday, March 21; archery at Golden Gate Park sponsored by the college on Saturday, April 25, and the last of the year, golf, Saturday, May 9, at San Mateo.

Miss Kraul remarked that at the meeting in San Jose on February 14, the policy for the conference will be announced. Several members were appointed, of which Miss Kraul is one, who were to get together and decide the policy which will consist of the manner of holding play days, the colleges to be invited to partake, and the method of keeping in the scrap book recording all activities, and publicity received either through college or outside papers. Until this committee was appointed, Miss Kraul added, there was no definite way with which to hold the events.

Managers Elected

Several new managers were elected during the past week, Miss Kraul continued, Betty Masiel, ice skating manager, and Lelia Royal, badminton. These new managers will be members of the WAA executive council and will take charge of the activity they head.

"Although women have never before entered the men's intramurals, members of the rifle WAA club and also class members are shooting against the men," Miss Kraul said.

"Golf this year seems to have a good turnout," Laurine Bergin, advisor to the golf club said, adding, "we have room for more golfers, either beginners or intermediate students, and equipment is furnished, so any interested students should report to the archery range at 9 a.m."

Although students are now using the archery range, toward the end of the semester there may be provisions for use of a golf course free of charge.

Ram Squad Combats California Varsity

Anticipating an extremely tough game, the college soccer team will invade the University of California campus in quest of its second straight collegiate victory tomorrow morning at 10.

The squad made its initial appearance in collegiate competition this season in a smoothly played 2 to 0 win over the California Aggies at Davis last Saturday. Coach Jim Jensen was very pleased with the polished performance of the Rams last week, and has hopes of a highly successful season.

Bears Formidable Foe

The fellows went to work on the Aggies as though they had been playing together for several months, instead of just a few practice scrimmages with local prep teams.

The Rams face a formidable foe in the Bear varsity tomorrow, and, with a few breaks, may come out on top.

Théodus and Lazar Star

So far, during practice sessions, no individual stars have risen to prominence on the college squad. Ted Theodus and John Lazar, however, are the leading point makers on the squad, and are good men for opponents to watch.

The following soccer schedule has been approved by the college soccer coaches of central California:

October 11
U.C.—vs.—S.F.J.C.
October 18
S.F.J.C.—vs.—U.S.F.
October 22
S.F.J.C.—vs.—S.M.J.C.

Ninety Men Sign Up For Boxing Classes

With about as many students signed up in the boxing classes this semester as in the preceding one, Jim Jensen, college boxing coach, is confident that this semester's squad will almost equal the fine record set by the squad of last semester.

To date there are approximately 80 to 90 men students signed up in the two boxing classes with signups still open. Not all of these men, Jensen said, are taking boxing with the thought of participating in the boxing matches, which are not included in the regular course. For that reason all men students who would like to enter in competition as a member of the boxing team should get in touch with Jensen at once.

Practice for the coming intramural matches has already started, but it will be a few more weeks before the boxers will be able to attain their true physical condition.

Because of the abundance of new students in the boxing classes, Jensen said that there would be no specific assigning of any of the boxers until the practice session has progressed a bit further.

As yet, no definite schedule has been made, but with other colleges building up their respective teams, Jensen hopes to have one in the near future.

Football

Eisan's Charges Face Tiger Cubs Tonight In First Conference Tilt Of Season

In an attempt to overcome two straight defeats at the hands of Los Angeles City College and the California Frosh, the Ram football squad travels to the College of Pacific for its first conference game against Stockton Junior College tonight at 8 o'clock.

Despite the trouncing suffered the Rams by the Bear Cubs last Saturday, 35 to 0, the Tiger Cubs will have no breeze against a fast and white team that is determined to win the conference encounter. Losing to a Cal Frosh that is rated by its coach and by the university as probably the best freshman squad in the Berkeleyans history, is no disgrace, and the Rams showed that they had what it takes in fighting until the final quarter was over.

Undoubtedly the Cal Frosh would land most of the junior colleges in the major circuit a trouncing such as that of a week ago and perhaps more.

The Berkeley contest is a thing of the past, however, and all eyes are on tonight's game at Baxter Stadium. Stockton's record to date is one victory and one defeat. The Tiger Cubs lost a close 13 to 7 decision to Salinas Junior College, but handed San Bernardino Junior College a 13 to 6 dumping.

Coach Larry Siemering, ex University of San Francisco All American center, has built his Stockton eleven around two break-away halfbacks, Bill Orvis and Bob Ward. Both Orvis and Ward perform in the backfield at the same time, and along with Jack Prowse, whose knee injury is almost healed, at quarterback, make for a dangerous offense.

Siemering has has problems, however, because the Tiger Cubs will be without the other member of the starting backfield, Johnny Bruna. Bruna's blocking from the fullback position was one of the main cogs in the Stockton offense.

In the line Stockton boasts its captain and letterman, Martin Locke. Locke is the running guard and is said to be a fine blocker, whose ability to pull out of the line and lead interference is responsible for much of the yardage gained by the backfield.

Concerning the contest, Coach Lee Eisan said, "we had three fullbacks in a week, and that makes a little difference." He was referring to Bob Christen, who is in the Civilian Aeronautic Association, Bud McKinnon, who sustained an injury against Los Angeles City College, and Pat Castellano.

Castellano was supposed to start against the Cal Frosh but was unable to play. According to Eisan, it is doubtful whether he will start or play tonight.

The starting eleven for the college is intact in the line, but several backfield men may get the call for the opening kickoff. Ed Cassidy and Dick Souza at ends, Augie Kalnen and Bob Hoffman at tackles, Bud Hunagle and Bill Brown at guards, and Don Reese at center will undoubtedly open the contest.

Squads Formed In Men's P. E. Classes

With the men's physical educational classes in full swing, the various classes are now competing in interclass activities, Jack Brady, men's physical educational instructor announced.

Basketball and touch tackle are the chief sports of interest, and various teams have been formed. Squads have been selected, making it possible for six men each and a four man basketball squad, Brady said.

Varsitems

New Lights Installed At Baxter Stadium

Scene of tonight's encounter between the Stockton Cubs and the Rams will be in Baxter Stadium, home of the College of Pacific Tigers. Seating capacity of the stadium is 10,000, and with the new 100,000 candle power recently added to the six light towers, the field has one of the best lighting facilities on the West Coast.

. . . The Stockton eleven is coached by Larry Siemering, stalwart center from the University of San Francisco, who played such standout football for the Dons that he was mentioned on several All American squads a few years ago.

. . . Martin Locke, veteran running guard and letterman of last season, was named seasonal captain by the Cubs, and will be on the midfield stripe to participate in the flip of the coin at the start of the game.

. . . The squad will be without the services of Johnny Bruna, blocking back in the Siemering system. However, Stockton possesses breakaway threats in halfbacks Bill Orvis, and Bob Waird. Jack Prowse, who was previously benched with a knee injury will probably open at the quarterback position.

. . . If the Rams are going to defeat the Stocktonians tonight, they will need blocking finesse which was sadly missing in the California Frosh game last Saturday.

. . . Badly crippled with injuries, the college squad has been narrowed down to where there are only two men for each position.

. . . Although winning rather easily last week, the Bear freshmen were without the services of their practice and scrimmage sensation, Billy Witter, who witnessed the fray from the sidelines on Andy Smith's Memorial Bench. Smith, as you know, was the former California varsity coach.

. . . If comparative scores mean anything, the Rams are riding into stormy weather. Recently Pasadena Junior College defeated Santa Ana Junior College by two touchdowns, who was rated the strongest junior college squad in the United States last season. Later on in the year, the college forces must face Pasadena in the Rose Bowl, and indeed look for a real tussle.

. . . Quite a disappointment in last week's game was Art Ekdall, recently moved to left halfback. Ekdall was stopped in his tracks by the fast forward wall of the Californians and showed little worth cheering about. Perhaps, if the much needed blocking had been used, Art might have piled up some yardage.

. . . Absent from his coaching duties last week was Lee Eisan, who traveled into the Pacific Northwest to referee the conference struggle between the Oregon State Beavers and the Washington Huskies. Coaching duties were assumed by Jack Gaddy and Al Eisan, assistant coaches.

Dr. J. M. Steadman, Jr., professor of English at Emory University, has met an eight o'clock class every morning for 17 years.

First Student-Adviser Meeting October 21 Marks Real End Of Midterm Period

First student-adviser meeting of the semester has been definitely scheduled for Tuesday, October 21, at 11 o'clock, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Students may see their advisers, however, during their regular office hours. Students will not be permitted to sign up for classes at this late time, Miss Learnard said, unless in rare instances instructors feel the student can make up work.

Book Exchange

Books, Money Still Not Collected

Although the book exchange has been closed for a week, there are still 75 unsold books, and nearly $100 uncalled for, Violet Butler, president of the WSS, announced this week.

Turn-out for the books and money has been very slow, Miss Butler commented, but WSS members still hope it will pick up within the next week.

No room is set aside for the book exchange to store the books until the following semester, Miss Butler said, and at present, all books will be found at the college bank during regular banking hours.

This semester nearly 1,000 books were handled by the exchange, and about $700 was received for sold books.

Rally Group Still Wants Woman Leader

One woman yell leader is still needed by the rally committee to assist Jean Peterson at the rallies and football games, according to Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner. Any woman wishing to assume the position should see Mohorovich or leave her name in the Associated Student office.

The women will have their own individual unit under the title of pep leaders and will appear at all rallies and football games.

A full hour rally will be held Friday, October 24, at 12 noon, preceding the football game between Sacramento Junior College and the college. The place has not been selected as yet but all classes will be excused.

Talent for the program will be taken from the college talent bureau, Mohorovich said, as was the case at last semester's rallies. During its first semester of operation, last spring, the talent bureau, under the management of Patricia Riley, who organized the bureau, supplied singers, dancers, magicians, and various other types of performers, individual and group, to entertain the college at its gatherings.

Club Board Meets Today At 2 In Room 311

To plan its semester's activities and to discuss vital matters concerning the organization, the Club Advisory Board will meet today in Room 311 at 2 o'clock, Francis Goetz, president, announced this week.

The main aims of the CAB this semester will be to increase the interest of the students in the various organized groups, in attending rallies and to aid Bob Lindemann, chairman of the college Welfare Committee, in carrying out his latest idea, college carnival day, Goetz added.

He warned that all membership applications of clubs should be turned in to the secretary of the board during today's meeting.

It is a requirement of the Executive Council that all clubs in the college must have membership in the CAB, Goetz explained.

Omicron Phi Pi To Hold Initiation, Election

Omicron Phi Pi economics society, will hold its initiation Tuesday, October 14, at the home of Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser, 295 Urbano Drive. Immediately following the initiation an election of officers will be held.

All candidates are requested to see Zarchin for particulars about the initiation.

After the meeting refreshments will be served, Zarchin continued.

Directions on how to get to Zarchin's home are as follows: take the No. 12 or K car, and get off at Cerritos Gate. Walk down Cerritos to Urbano then turn to the right.

Welfare Committee

Group Asks Ideas, Club Support For Carnival Day

With the business of Hello Walk all but completed, the college Welfare Committee is still calling for student ideas and college club support of the committee's proposed college carnival day, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the committee.

"An occasion of the type we plan must have the support of the college clubs, both financially and in spirit," Lindemann said.

Booths Planned

"We plan to have booths where prizes and refreshments may be had. The present plan is for each club to have their own booth. Prizes would be given for the most spectacular booth," Lindemann explained.

Site Still Undecided

Still undecided as to a site for the carnival, the committee is conjecturing on the possibility of using either the men's gym or the cafeteria. The time required to set up the booths would be a factor against the use of the cafeteria as it would necessitate the cessation of facilities there for at least a day.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 151, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

High Freshmen

Semi-Formal Dance Scheduled October 24 At Veterans Building

High freshmen will hold their semi-formal dance at the Veteran's War Memorial Building in San Francisco on the evening of Friday, October 24. The dance will be open to all students of the college and admission will be by Associated Student card only. In keeping with a custom of the college, women students are expected not to wear corsages.

George Cavelli and his orchestra have been selected to provide music for the evening's dancing. Cavelli's nine-piece orchestra specializes in the Tommy Dorsey style of music. Cavelli has also promised to play the college hymn sometime during the evening. Dancing will start at 9 p.m. and will conclude at 12 midnight.

Although Cavelli has never played for the college dances in the past, he is a favorite of the fraternities at the University of California and Stanford University, having played at many of their dances.

Furst's improvement on the dilatometer was tested for the study of the hydrolysis of acetal and excellent results were obtained. According to Milton Polissar, another instructor of chemistry at the college, Furst's article has attracted many requests for additional copies.

However, it is a recognized fact that security and rugged individualism don't go so well together. Someone always gets hurt. Therefore, if the need comes, supervision will come too.

GOOD OR BAD?

All this might result in a standardizing of wages and hours and security that is unknown at the present time. And it is not undemocratic. Before the war, England and France, and many of the smaller European countries, were using the method with success.

The most important thing to remember is that if such action comes it will come through the consent of the people and in no other way. That's the kind of a country this is. And that's a far cry from tyranny and oppression.

Civil Service

Helper Jobs For College Students Available Through Competitive Examinations

Open competitive examinations for civil service jobs for helpers, for which students of the college may qualify have been received by Lloyd D. Luckmann, college civil service instructor.

The positions are open throughout California, Nevada and Arizona. The following helpers' positions are some which students of the college may qualify: aircraft, blacksmith, electrical, general machinist, metalsmith, pipefitter, sheetmetal. There are also examinations for Underwood mimeograph operators, classified labor, firefighter (motor equipment) and junior foreman of laborers.

Applicants Over 18 Years

All applicants must be 18 years of age or more.

Applicants must be citizens of the United States at time of filing application. Foreign born citizens who meet the citizenship requirement must furnish proof of United States citizenship before they will be eligible for appointment under civil service rules.

A physical examination will be made by a federal medical officer or other duly licensed doctor of medicine before appointment. Persons who are offered appointment must pay their own expenses in reporting for duty.

Defense Lowers Requirements

The above physical requirements are those which must be met for regular probational appointment. In view of the possible shortage during the present emergency of persons who are fully qualified physically, applications will be accepted from those who cannot meet these normal requirements but who can perform a minimum of acceptable service at the present time without undue hazard to themselves or to others. Such persons may be certified, if otherwise eligible, for temporary duty for the duration of the emergency in the absence of qualified eligibles. In the case of remedial defects the status of an appointment may be changed from temporary to probationary if the defect is corrected.

In Filling Vacancies

In filling vacancies, preference will be given to eligibles residing at the place at which the appointee is to be employed or in the immediate vicinity thereof.

AMS

Conflicting Dates Force Plan Change

Conflicting dates on the college calendar have made it necessary for Don Jensen, Associated Men Students president, to postpone the AMS Box Hatches and Barn Dance to December 5 and January 10, respectively.

"These dates, although not altogether satisfactory to the AMS, are the best possible we could obtain, Jensen said.

Changing of the Coliseum Bowl into a roller skating rink over the weekend has necessitated the acquiring of a week-day evening for the Boxing Matches.

The Alvarado Barn is already reserved on the dates best suited for the Barn Dance, Jensen explained, hence the postponement to such a late part of the semester.

"Both of these occasions are semi-annual, and are big events on the AMS calendar," Jensen said.

Social Committee Needs Student Assistants

Students are needed by the social committee to work on a dance committee, according to Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman.

Any person interested should report to the Associated Students' office and ask either for Miss Niemeyer or Shirley Slayton. About 15 or 20 students are wanted from each class.

Vol. XIII TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1941 No. 10

DURING the course of every war the question of post-war re-adjustment is always a prevalent one. During the last world conflict plans were being made for a resettling and rehabilitating of peoples and economic properties while the battle was raging fiercely throughout eastern France.

Today the battle rages over a much greater area, involving more nations, more men, more material, and more fears. But even now plans are being laid by many; plans which relate to this post-war settlement.

MODERN PROBLEM

There is one outstanding feature of our modern civilization that requires the consideration and rational reasoning power of a second Shakespeare. For only individuals with an understanding of the human mind and the human heart need apply for this position. And the person who does apply must be long on understanding and short on intolerance.

The problem is older than the wars which it causes. It is more ancient than the shortsightedness of political dynamos—or the banality of political ramifications. It consists only of a consideration of things less materialistic and personal, and more idealistic and universal.

The question simmers down to the point of whether or not men and nations are going to respect ability in aesthetic rather than pecuniary fields.

THE QUESTION IS WHY

Specifically the problem is this: why is education ebbuffed in most economic fields which concern the common citizen? Why are possessors of a degree looked upon as oddities by the general public? Why are the things for which men live—pleasure, entertainment, art, literature, comradeship, family—made the butt of a gigantic economic joke? Why are they desecrated so that the hope chests of business men may be filled to overflowing? Why is there not a change?

It is this problem which brings up such situations as the artist working as a truck driver (not that truck drivers aren't nice people) when instead he should be devoting his time to painting; of the sculptor who lives of necessity in a garret and sells newspapers so that he may exist so that he may create great pieces so that they may be praised and discarded; of the musician who writes popular music because it provides a living, but who deep in his heart knows that he is capable of symphonies and opera; of the economic expert, holding a civil service job far down the ladder, who has spent years studying the complex problems of supply and demand, and who could answer many unanswered questions but must remain all his life in a filing office; of the hundreds of Americans who are able by their abilities to aid society—but who cannot because society won't let them.

You to whom the above may apply don't give up yet. There is still hope. The time is coming, and soon. People and governments are awakening to the fact that many a rose is born to blush unseen simply because it is trampled underfoot.

THE TIME HAS ARRIVED

And the time has already arrived when men look unfavorably upon those who wantonly crush that rose. The time has arrived when men are discovering that their backyards are actually overflowing with bright red flowers, and that they spell the opening of an era of new and bojter human methods.

With one disastrous fiasco to their credit, with a resulting war on their hands, with the destruction of life and property to their credit, and with a future of millions of peoples in their laps, the leaders of men are going to think twice and think cautiously before they attempt to rehabilitate and regenerate a scarred world.

And when they do finally stop to think, as they sometimes must, these individuals are going to find that their idols of the past are completely false—basically unsound, morally corrupt.

WHAT TO DO?

What are they to do then? A return to the old ways would be ruinous and is out of the question. A continuance of the present way is sheer self-suicide.

The only answer that they will find is the answer that many of them do not want but will be forced by necessity to accept.

And when that happens—wonder of wonders, if it only could happen—graft will have no use, corruption no sense, and the very nature of the times will no longer possess her trite form and figure but will exhibit a revised and modern dress that shall dazzle common men and rival the hopes of the most optimistic.

Soph Sweetheart

Seven Men At Large Will Choose 21 For Initial Voting In Latest Plan

Rules and regulations governing the election of the high sophomore sweetheart have just been drawn up by class president George Coart. The queen is to rule over high soph week, the second week in December, and will be presented with a token of appreciation at the formal dance, December 13, at the California Country Club.

1. A committee of seven men will be chosen by the president of the sophomore class. These men constituting the committee may be in any class of the college, (freshman or sophomore).
2. Duties of each committeeman:
   a. Select according to his judgment, the three most attractive women in the college.
      1. These women are to be chosen on the basis of their personality, general physical appearance, and facial beauty.
      2. Any woman of the Associated Students may be chosen.
      3. They shall not be sponsored by any organization before they have been selected by the committeemen, nor shall the candidate be allowed any sponsorship by any organization after she has been chosen to run for Sophomore Sweetheart.
   b. Distribute one card to each of the women selected.
      1. This card is to contain the following information:
         a. Women's full names.
         b. Time and place of the primary election.
         c. Committeeman's signature.
      2. This card is not transferable.
      3. This card is to be held by the contestant for a means of identification and is to be attractively printed in order to make a suitable souvenir for the contestant.
      4. Only one girl should be offered more than one card, the committeeman making the second offer will give his card to another girl of his selection.
   c. Vote in the primary election:
      1. All seven committeemen are to vote for the seven most attractive women from the group of twenty-one.
3. The primary election will be held on December 2, 1941 (tentative).
   a. This election will be held during the afternoon and will be held in a room within the college.
   b. All women selected by the committee will attend.
   c. All committeemen will attend.
   d. There will be seven ballots cast to determine the seven women who are to be put be-

Faculty To Participate In American Education Week

Although no plans have yet been made, the college faculty will participate in the observance of American Education Week, November 9 to 15, if it is called upon to do so, Ward Nichols, president of the Faculty Association announced last week.

A resolution calling upon Mayor Angelo J. Rossi to appoint a Citizen's Committee for the coming observance of American Education Week was approved unanimously by the San Francisco Board of Supervisors recently, Nichols said.

Carnival Day

'Anemic Death Unless Spirit Transfusion'

Still planning for a college carnival day, the Welfare Committee hopes to have definite plans solidified soon and the machinery put in motion to make the carnival day a reality, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the committee.

"Though the committee is behind the idea enthusiastically now, the fact remains that our enthusiasm isn't enough and the plan is likely to die of anemia unless it gets a transfusion of spirit from the students," Lindemann said.

Club Support Sought

In a recent meeting the committee voted unanimously in favor of the idea.

"We are still seeking the support of the college clubs," Bill Postal, a member of the committee, said. "It is these organizations that will do the most to put carnival day over. We are counting on them to have their booths set up to add color to the occasion," he explained. "So far their response doesn't look very encouraging," he added.

Prizes Offered

The committee plans to offer prizes to the most spectacular booth at the carnival. Each organization will have a chance to show it's ingenuity, and creative ability in the competition.

Prizes will also be awarded to the students wearing the most colorful and original circus costumes. Entertainment would be offered from the booths as well as refreshments and the chances to win prizes.

Registrar

File Petitions Immediately For Graduation

Students planning to graduate in January should file a petition for graduation in the registrar's office immediately, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Close of the semester is January 28, with commencement ceremonies to be held June 5, at the War Memorial Opera House. No student will be graduated until he has completed satisfactorily his present program, Miss Learnard declared.

Students will meet with faculty advisers to receive grades on Tuesday, October 21 at 11 o'clock. All classes will be excused for the meeting, according to Miss Learnard.

Following is the list of students who have been granted their graduation petition as released by the registrar's office:

Ruth Harriet Adamson, Ruth Evelyn Altschuler.

George Andrew Baffico, Antolnette Beilu, Robert S. Black, Warren William Broemmer, Suzanne Finnell Brun.

Trainees Stand In Review

Being reviewed by school commissioner Richard Doyle, President Archibald J. Cloud, and Major George D. Richards, students of the college, who are taking part in Civil Pilot Training, stand at attention in a recent review. Students partaking in C.P.T. include Sam Benigno, Stan Guerning, Evan Poston, Frank McKenna, Ray Albrecht, Robert Haworth, Wesley Byron Prather, William Storey, front row; Kenneth Kleinenbroich, Darrell Anderson, Edward Olson, Donald Roth, back row.

The Civil Pilots pictured above are primary students in Civil Pilot Training, and are now in flight training at the San Francisco Municipal Airport, according to Major George D. Richards, C.P.T. instructor.

Flying 220 horsepower Waco planes, students in training will receive wings on their C.P.T. uniforms, when they complete the course with their solo flight.

Requirements for the course remain the same as in previous semesters, except for the age limit, which now includes men from the ages of 19 to 26.

Publicity

Education Board Ruling Cancels Hori Appointment

Plans drafted by the Executive Council several weeks ago to provide a publicity committee for the college under the leadership of Kei Hori were put out of commission today with the reading of a report issued by the Board of Education.

Hori, if he had received the position of publicity director, would have been voted an expense account to carry on his work; this same account had been the source of some trouble when the committee had been formed by the Executive Council.

Report Made This Week

Making its annual inspection of the college this semester, the board was confronted with the issue of the publicity committee, and at the time of inspection did not offer any comment upon the issue; however, the report received at the college this week from the auditor of the Board of Education formally vetoed any idea pertaining to a publicity committee.

Prior to the inspection made by the Board, an official ruling by that body stated that there, the board, disapproved any measure where student association funds would be spent for salaried purposes, especially that of a publicity director."

Ruling Long In Affect

College officials had no other alternative but to comply with the board ruling. It was not a matter of having anything against the particular person, but of complying with a long standing ruling, it was revealed today by college officials.

The case of Hori was thrown out as was a similar case of an Associated Student secretary, Mimi Colton, whose case paralleled that of Hori.

Attendance Committee Advises Leave-Takers

Any student who finds it necessary to withdraw from college temporarily for any reason except illness should first consult Thomas Gabbert, chairman of the attendance committee, in Room 341, it was announced today.

Any student will be excluded from his classes as soon as the number of absences equals two weeks attendance even though he is granted for a temporary leave of absence, Gabbert explained.

"However," he added, "the student may gain readmission by appealing to the attendance committee.

"If students have not made arrangements with the attendance committee beforehand, it will be more difficult to obtain reinstatement to their classes from the committee upon their return," Gabbert concluded.

June Walsh Named New Woman Yell Leader

June Walsh was officially selected pep leader last week by the rally commission, according to commissioner Steve Mohorovich.

This leaves only one of a proposed hep trio lacking, for the selection of Jean Peterson as the first member of the group was announced a few weeks ago.

Miss Walsh will fit well into this job, Mohorovich said. She is from Lowell High School, where she was cheer leader last year.

The pep leaders are to work as a separate group from the yell three-some of Leader Mel Steele, Don Tayor and Norman Applebaum. They will originate their own routines.

At times, however, the women will join with the men for special yells, Mohorovich concluded.

WSS Finds Money, Books Still In Book Exchange

There are still books and money from the book exchange in the college bank waiting to be claimed by their owners, Violet Butler, president of the Women's Service Society, announced last week.

"We have nearly $100 and 50 books," she said, "which must be claimed this week, because there is no place to store the books until the next semester."

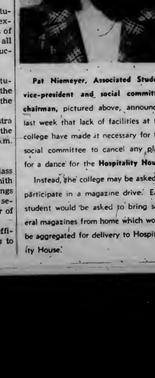
Frosh Dance Oct. 24; Hotel Night Out

War Memorial, Scene; George Cavelli, Music

First important event on the high freshman calendar, is the high freshman dance which is to be held Friday, October 24, in the War Memorial Opera House, Neville Smith, class president, said last week.

The dance will be open to all students of the college, but Smith expressed the hope that the members of the high frosh class would do all they could to make the affair a success.

No Corsages



Admission is by Associated Student card only, and members of the social committee urged that as in the past no corsages be worn.

George Cavelli and his orchestra have been selected to provide the music. Dancing will start at 9 p.m. and will conclude at midnight.

More Activities Planned

Activities for the high frosh class will not end with their dance, Smith added, many other social gatherings have been planned, to make this semester a success for every member of the class.

A meeting of high freshman officers to discuss future activities is to be held today.

Pat Niemeyer, Associated Student vice-president and social committee chairman, pictured above, announced last week that lack of facilities at the college have made it necessary for the social committee to cancel any plans for a dance for the Hospitality House.

Instead, the college may be asked to participate in a magazine drive. Each student would be asked to bring several magazines from home which would be aggregated for delivery to Hospitality House.

Strike Kills Dance At St. Francis Nov. 7

Labor differences have made it necessary to cancel the Hotel Night scheduled for November 7 at the St. Francis Hotel, Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman, stated.

The High Sophomore class was sponsoring the Hotel Night on the evening of the 7th.

Pickets Block Hotel

Picket lines which have been parading in front of the St. Francis for the past week cannot be crossed by college students attending a college affair, according to Miss Niemeyer.

The Mural Room of the St. Francis was also scheduled for a Hotel Night following the AMS Boxing Matches on December 8. In the hopes that the labor trouble will be settled by that date the affair has been left on the social calendar.

Other Dates Scheduled

Dates for other social events remain as scheduled.

They are: the High Freshman Dance, October 24 at the War Memorial Building; the Low Sophomore Dance November 18 at the Scottish Rite Temple in Oakland; the Mixer Dance on December 8, and the High Sophomore Formal, December 13, at the California Country Club.

Music

Band Sets Meeting Time; Talent Bureau Continues Auditions

Talent

Because all available student talent is needed, and because so much interest has been shown in the project, the talent bureau will hold further auditions on Wednesday, October 15, at 3 p.m., and on Thursday, October 16, at 9 a.m., in Room 200, announced Flossita Badger, music instructor, and talent bureau adviser.

"Auditions begah last week, and the students were so enthusiastic about them that we've decided to extend the time for auditions," Miss Badger explained.

Students who are talented in any way are urged to be auditioned by the bureau. "We want all kinds of entertainers on our files," stated Irwin Cohen, student manager of the talent bureau.

"Most students think we want only singers. That isn't true—we want all talented students who can entertain at college functions, or even for outside events," he explained.

"Most people don't realize what opportunities the talent bureau offers. Often we get calls for talent from outside groups. One such engagement might just get the entertainer that all important break," Cohen added.

Members of the talent bureau board are Flossita Badger and Wesley Muscio, advisers, and Irwin Cohen, student director.

Patrick Southard New Omicron Phi Pi Leader

Patrick Southard was elected president of the Omicron Phi Pi, economics honor society, at the last club meeting, according to Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser for the club.

Other officers elected were Harold Silverstein, recording secretary; Barbara Huson, corresponding secretary; Carl McKenzie, historian, and James Ono, treasurer.

"Tonight the initiation of new members into the club will take place at my home, 295 Urbano Drive," Zarchin said. All members should be there as this is one of the really important events of the semester, Zarchin concluded.

Band

Inauguration of regular meeting hours and a band policy was determined at the Friday meeting of the newly formed college band, it was revealed today by Douglas Craig, student manager of the group.

Meeting hours of the band have now been officially set at Monday and Friday at 3 o'clock in Room 200.

The possibilities of the band appearing at the various remaining football games seemed evident today, with juniefice sessions being held at regular intervals, but no dates have been slated as yet, according to Craig.

Still in need of several more trumpets and clarinets to bolster the band, Craig indicated that any students desirous of joining the band are invited to do so at once.

Attendance at band meetings are the only requirement for membership. Even though students may have classes after the beginning of the meeting, they should come in at their convenience, Craig added.

Campus Players Discuss Purposes, Meeting Reasons

Members of the Campus Players, held a joint meeting and social in the home of Dolores Sullivan, president of the organization, last Thursday evening, October 9.

Marion Turner, faculty adviser, discussed with the members of the dramatic group the purpose of the founding of the organization and reasons for the meeting.

Definite plans were made concerning the presenting of a play for the Associated Students, and perhaps later an old-fashioned olio, or barn dance.

The Campus Players is purely an organization for all those interested in dramatics, and its purpose is to promote a wider college participation in the field of the theater.

Choir Begins Programs With Women's Clubs Meet

A Cappella Choir activities will begin on Friday, October 31, when the choir will perform for the Convention of Women's Clubs at the Western Women's Club, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

Plans are also under way for organizing smaller groups of vocalists who will perform in place of the entire Choir when smaller ensembles are requested.

These groups will be a women's trio, a men's quartet, and a mixed quartet. They will audition for the talent bureau, and be organized as regular entertainers.

In Which We Discuss

Labor Prestige

ASK the average man what he thinks of labor. He will reply, "Oh, labor's O.K., but I think it's gone a little too far." At that moment, someone should be on hand to retort, "Brother, you don't know the half of it!"

Plainly speaking, labor leaders are rolling Uncle Sam and the American people over a barrel with a chesty attitude of "You stop us if you dare." Do you question that last comment? Hearken to the words of Daniel J. Tobin, president of powerful teamsters' union and a member of the American Federation of Labor Executive Council. In reply to President Roosevelt's message to the 61st annual A. F. of L. convention in Seattle last week asking workers to remember their responsibility to the United States and their goal to defeat Hitler, Mr. Tobin said:

"Mr. Roosevelt's message could not possibly be a veiled threat of anti-strike legislation should stoppages continue because the government doesn't dare enact such a law.

"There is a scarcity of labor and labor must not be irritated unnecessarily. If our country is compelled to declare wars, the government may contemplate strengthening the Mediation Board to adjust misunderstandings. But we are not at war."

In effect, Mr. Tobin states, "We'll maintain status quo as long as we d--- please until war breaks out."

Does this high representative of American labor want Hitler to personally bayonet him in the comfort of his cozy fireside chair before he realizes we are at war, and before labor stops encouraging Hitler with every new strike?

Let us stop here for a moment and examine another, but not isolated, instance of current barrel-rolling. The facts may later lend themselves to extenuation, but, at the present time, a Detroit contractor, P. J. Currier, is doing his best to have the government accept a bid he made for the construction of 300 prefabricated homes for Detroit defense workers — a bid $400,000 lower than any other. It seems that the A. F. of L. had exerted pressure on the government to hold up or disallow the bid. Thomas L. Stokes, who several years ago won a Pulitzer prize for crusading reporting, interprets the action this way:

"Mr. Currier's company is 100 per cent CIO-organized. The A. F. of L. has fought prefabricated houses. It intervened here on the basis of its claim to a monopoly of defense housing construction, because of its agreement not to strike on defense projects, which seems to have support of Sidney Hillman and the OPM."

We shall not discuss the government's apparent complicity in this row. The important point is that labor leaders feel that it is justified to qualify their strike actions on the basis of their own selfish interests; if we are to give credence to Stokes' words, similar cases are not rarities!

This shady deal, like Tobin's challenge, is representative effrontery, as is every strike during a time when defense factories should be working to a capacity dictated only by the supply of man power and materials.

Naturally, we ask Why? We must ask Why? We find the answer in an address by A. F. of L. President William Green last Labor Day. He claimed for his union "through its prestige, its patriotic record, and its host of friends in Congress the credit for having killed each of the past year's 'drastic anti-labor bills.'"

It's that word "prestige." Prestige is power; power is sweet—too sweet to relinquish.

Next Friday we shall continue this discussion and learn what this intense desire for prestige or power is doing to the American public and to labor with a capital "L."

Shots At ...RAMdom

WE WERE

absorbing the sparkling atmosphere at the Persian Room amid the cacophony of laughter, music and tinkling ice cubes. Our little chumbuddy, who has an imagination that makes H. G. Wells look like a moron, spotted a tall, dark, mysterious gentleman standing in the entrance. He surveyed the crowd with a certain bored hauteur. His gaze was calculating but aloof.

"I'll bet he's a Russian count traveling incognito," whispered our little friend.

In the next breath he was a writer, a movie actor in disguise, an exiled French patriot and a poet with a soul.

"He is surveying the garishness of it all with scorn," she breathed.

"Yeah, garishness," we chimed in, humoring her.

Then, this soulful poet, this exiled nobleman, picked up a tray, bore it to a table, waited for his tip and returned to his former position and resumed staring at the crowd with a certain aloof hauteur.

SAN FRANCISCO'S

first air show will start November 1. Among the many types of planes that will be demonstrated by aircraft manufacturers will be Ercoup's flivver plane. This model is designed with the utmost safety and ease of handling in view. It is "the type anyone can afford to fly," according to Ercoup testimonials.

If this flivver plane catches on, students of the college will probably be flying to school in the future. We are watching for this development with enthusiasm for it's always been our ambition to parachute into our 8 o'clock class.

For a long time we've been screaming for a parking lot. What would the reaction be if we were to ask for a flying field? Probably the same as we're getting now when we ask for a parking lot.

THE PORTLY GENTLEMAN

bustled pompously into Tiny's, where we were brooding sadly over a bacon sandwich. He was the acme of epicurean sophistication, the type who imagine themselves to be cultured connoisseurs of food and of service. He demanded a higher, and wider chair. His water must be in a tall glass with ice cubes in it. He sent back his coffee twice because it was too hot and then too cold. He raised his eyebrows in pained surprise when he was told there wasn't any sauted frog legs a la Astorbilt.

The waitress was between breaking into tears and hitting him with a gravy schooner. Personally we favored the old gravy schooner treatment, gently, but firmly.

He called for the check, got change for a 20-dollar bill and with a grand flourish accompanied by a condescending smile tipped the poor girl a dime.

"Thanks so much," she breathed, "Now I can send my son to college."

IF SHE MEANT

here, she wasn't kidding.

The University of North Carolina's 39 CAA student pilots have amassed a total of 1,640 flying hours without an accident and only four minor mishaps.

Coart Defends Plan For Sweetheart Vote; Sports Ed. Blasted

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 134. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

• More On Coart's Plan

Editor, The Guardsman:

Perhaps my plan for the coming Sweetheart contest should be more specific and clear. Due to the fact that my term in office is relatively new, and I am slowly but surely learning the "ropes," it is rather hard to formulate a new idea which will be agreeable to everyone, especially when an election is concerned. The plan I have proposed has been carefully weighed by myself and a few of the students here in school. That advantages of my plan over other plans similar to that of last term are as follows: most girls have a feeling that to put themselves up for a contest would make them appear conceited and "stuck on themselves," therefore, I believe that all the "talent" is not presented for the men to vote upon; secondly, the idea of selecting a girl by a photograph is out of the question in my mind. A girl could go to a professional photographer and, while she might have some beauty, the photographer could do her more justice than she deserves. Her personality could not be judged by a photograph. One idea of my plan is to eliminate the sponsoring of a girl by an organization, thus, eliminating the great margin of votes that have separated the winner from her runner-ups, as has been the case in the past.

These are some of the most important factors regarding the coming election and around them I have tried to build a fair contest to select the Sophomore Sweetheart.

Thank you for offering your suggestion and I assure you and the students that the contest will be held with the thought of fairness and equality towards each girl who will be selected by my committee.

Respectfully yours,
George Coart

• No Fellow Student

Editor, The Guardsman:

Perhaps this should be addressed to the Sports Editor of The Guardsman for it is really to him this pan (not fan) letter is intended.

Really, Mr. Cothran (I cannot call you "fellow student" for you show no signs of a student—much less a "fellow"), do you ever investigate any matter before sitting down at your typewriter and RAM-

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

ARE you sitting pretty? By this odd question we mean, not your financial standing, nor your course at school, but your posture! Why is it that when someone mentions posture we, the guilty, slouch away mumbling, "aw, they don't mean me—I walk like a million." (Yes, like a million other sloppy Sues.)

While at college, students more or less acquire a sloppy appearance what with "Sloppy Joe" sweaters—sizes too big, heavy, flat shoes, and glamour bobs. Somehow from such an appearance comes a slow, slouchy walk. Of course, the hill from the gymnasium to the science building is no help to our would-be graceful walk, we think. But, believe it or not, college authorities say that the hill really is good for posture, especially for hips, in the reduction line.

GOOD POSTURE NECESSARY

Good sitting and standing positions are necessary in the business world. Who wants a secretary, receptionist, or saleswoman who walks with her shoulders holding up her chin, and her general figure resembling a question mark. The answer is obvious, no one!

Wouldn't a salesgirl who holds her head up (not her nose) and stands erect be a much better advertisement for an expensive gown than the aforementioned question mark women? Goodness yes, a prospective buyer would think to herself that she might be just as beautiful and striking as the model (even if she were in her 40's and tipped the scale at a high ante) and buy the gown.

The same policy holds for the business office. An executive doesn't want to amble into his office and see his secretary literally hanging over the typewriter, and beating the keys with her nose. No, he wants to see a neat, erect woman sitting at his typewriter. Appearance counts, and with it efficiency reaches a higher level. Did you ever hit a hundred a minute slouching over the typewriter and sitting on the edge of the chair? No, neither have we.

MORE ACTION, PLEASE

Although most of your habits are supposed to have been formed by now, posture is one that can yet be corrected. It is never too late to change, but the earlier you start the better. There are magazines for women, health magazines and columns written by executives and doctors, and even the radio, that give advice and exercises that should improve posture.

Instead of letting you put it off any longer, the physical education department for women is preparing a class, which meets once a week, in which you will learn exercises to improve your sitting and standing positions—and your figure. The exercises will be given, and all you have to do is do them. If you want results—it's up to you.

The Little Foxes . . . box office figures climb dizzily

Today's Spectator was written by Doug Johnson

DEPENDABLE only in her versatility, Bette Davis, who has run the gamut of histrionic roles, adds another triumph to her long list of realistic performances as Regina Giddens in The Little Foxes.

We've seen her as a hardened woman of the streets, a giddy little debutante, and as a queen. In each instance we saw her name in the cast and completely forgot about her. When Bette Davis takes a part she becomes the character she is portraying.

In Sam Goldwyn's The Little Foxes she becomes a character unbelievably avaricious, unreasonable in her malign furies, fantastic in her shrewdness and ruthlessness, and to say she does it well is an understatement.

Herbert Marshall is excellent as the bed-ridden husband, cursed by heart disease and hounded till his death by the agate-eyed, bitter tongued Regina.

Imported from Broadway to take the part of the shrewd, merciless son is Dan Duryea, who inserts a certain wiley malice into his every action that gives the impression that everything he does is for his own selfish advantage.

NEWCOMER ADDS PATHOS

Teresa Wright, a newcomer, who takes the pathetic role of Bette Davis' young daughter buffeted between the instinctive goodness of her own character and the cold cruelty of her mother's, adds pathos to the drama and her acting should win her a permanent niche in Hollywood.

Patricia Collinge as the spindly old aunt, a descendant of an honorable, old southern family, fills her part splendidly. Her acting somtimes puts that chokey feeling in your throat.

The settings and the costumes do nothing to add to the glamour of actors or the actresses. All the props are copied from the trashy, ornate mode common around 1900, and though ugly, good photography prevents them from clashing with the acting at any time. Goldwyn does not sacrifice exactness for the esthetic which is a point a great many other producers might take heed of and follow with advantage.

NO FAKED-IN SPIRITUALS

What little music there was throughout the picture was appropriate and in good taste. We noticed none of the noisy negro spiritual singing and hand waving that is so common in other movies with southern settings. This faked-in blatancy was completely left out of The Little Foxes. True, there were a few choruses here and there, but they served only as a background and did more in the way of softening the drama than providing an actual musical motif.

Director William Wyler managed to have his starkest drama take place in comparatively plain surroundings. Bette Davis' lines to her already dying husband in the dull, grey walled hallway of the otherwise ornate mansion were a fitting example.

"You're going to die . . . I hope you die," spits Miss Davis, and nothing could be more convincing than her cold glittering eyes set in a mask of reasonless hate and the vibrant fury in her voice.

Made originally for the prestige of the Goldwyn Studios and not primarily for a money maker, The Little Foxes should make box office figures climb to a dizzy height. A story with the power and the mood created in The Little Foxes and with Bette Davis in the leading role could obtain no other result.

FRED SANBORN AND STOOGE PERFORM

The stage show at the Golden Gate is a little better than average this week. Fred Sanborn and his stooges who handed out so many laughs at the Follies Bergere on Treasure Island repeats his mirthful performance. Elizabeth Martin of "Meet the People" fame does her impersonations with gusto and made several people grin while we were there. The perennial O'Neil glamor girls waltz around a bit and there are a few dogs that show remarkable intelligence on the stage and who make more money than we do.

THE college is going to play host to the Salinas football team on October 31, or at least try at it. After sitting on the cold, cold ground through the entire period of the game, there will, no doubt, be a minor epidemic of influenza around. At least, with it being played on the campus, there will be no excuse for not attending the game.

Now enrolled here are 10 students from Central and South America. One of them from Chile, Fernando Contreras, has exchanged homes and countries with a student from Mission High School who wanted to study in South America. Contreras lives at the other student's home here in the city, and the other student lives at Contreras' home in Chile. The idea hinges on Pan-American friendliness.

Seen for the first time since last May were students sitting around the college on steps and on the ground studying for midterms. John Selig, political science instructor, commented that students used to sit on the ground a long time ago. They probably used to learn a lot more in those days, too.

There has been some discussion about concerning the choosing of the Soph Sweetheart. Why don't the men get more attention? It would be really amusing to find out what the women of the college would choose for the ideal male. And then it would be interesting to measure the sudden expansion of his cranium.

Some enterprising student might make himself a small fortune by opening a shoe-shining stand to cater to those who have walked up to the college from the "K" line.

Last Wednesday a student was seen hobbling along on crutches obviously trying to get up to the college. A Municipal bus going down that street stopped a few feet from the student. The driver stuck his head out the window and shouted "Want a ride?" The student hobbled on without answering.

Your College Presents . . . Glimpses Of Our Musical Enthusiasts

The cartoon above shows various phases in the music department from the entertainment furnished by the talent bureau, a sponsored affair, to the voice and singing classes.

By Iwanna Hayworth

MUSIC enthusiasts are found the world over, and our college is no exception. In the music department, which has been included in the college's given courses since its establishment, are found a great percentage of music lovers and majors.

Interestingly enough, one of the group under this heading, the A Cappella Choir, finds a great many students who are anxious to be numbered on its rolls. When the choir was first organized the first semester of the college's career, it was rather difficult to find students who knew what it was or wished to become a part of it. According to Flossita Badger, choir instructor, it was almost necessary to go out and solicit enrollees into the group. When first begun, it was everyone's general consensus that it would be a mediocre affair, therefore, surprise reigned high when it turned out so excellently.

As membership in the choir has increased so much in the past few years and the results of their work so pleasing and well known, invitations come in from all over the state; however, in order not to make too great a strain on the members, only invitations coming in from a reasonable distance are accepted. Transportation to these engagements is furnished either by the students themselves, or buses are chartered at the college's expense to transport them to and from the place of engagement.

PREREQUISITES

For those students who might wish to become a member of the choir, the requirements are few. An audition is necessary, and the prospective student should have at least a slight knowledge of music, that is, sight music, and voice pitch and quality.

At the present time, the choir has three hours of practice weekly in the especially prepared music room on the second floor. Perhaps some of the students have wondered where the choir, and other singing classes were held, and the mystery is solved in learning that this room is built soundproof so as to avoid any disturbance of other classes.

Other groups which are along the same line as the A Cappella Choir are the Men's Chorus, and the College Chorus.

INSTRUMENTAL INSTRUCTION LACKING

Various attempts have been made at different times to start a college orchestra; however, until now there have been no facilities for instrumental instruction. Last semester's band marked the first instrumental type of instruction of the college. The band was instructed then by Madison Devlin of Lowell High, and he returned to the college the other day to organize the band for this semester. However, he will not remain to instruct the members, but the organization will be student-run. Going back again to possibilities for a college orchestra, according to Miss Badger, there may be one next semester. This will be a big step in the advancement of the music courses, as the orchestra will be able to play for different student functions and rallies.

"WOULD-BE" CASTING OFFICE

Starting last Tuesday, auditions were held for students interested in becoming a part of the talent bureau. This organization is also sponsored by Miss Badger. In this, there are no restrictions on the type of talent which students possess. "There are great opportunities for anyone who is just 'waiting' for that big break to come. Besides performing at college rallies, and other functions, there is a splendid opportunity for these students to get bookings at outside places. This

Eisan Missed In Cal Game; Kicking Greatest Asset

MYSTERY SOLVED!

When Coach Lee Eisan, of the college football team, was not on the bench at the University of California frosh game countless busy-bodies around the campus took it upon themselves to condemn Eisan. No steps were taken, however, to delve deeper into the matter and discover why he was not present.

It so happens that Eisan, being a well-liked football official on this Pacific Coast, is sought after to officiate a number of contests each year. Long before the 1941 schedule of the Rams had been drawn up, Eisan had been contracted to referee a game in Washington on Friday night, October 3, and was therefore unable to be present when his team engaged the Cal frosh the following afternoon. President Archibald Cloud advised Eisan to live up to his fine reputation as a man and an official, and, incidentally, his contract.

PROGRESS

At the opening of the present football season the squad of the Red and White consisted of a small handful of veteran performers and a great majority of green, inexperienced hopefuls. Throughout the practice season, and up until the present time, the recruits have been developing their natural, inherent abilities. Now they appear ready to begin rolling forward. In the first four games, against San Francisco State, Los Angeles City College, Cal Frosh, and Stockton Junior College, these new men have shown steady and noticeable improvement, game by game, over their previous efforts.

NICE

One department that the Rams have consistently excelled in, so far this season, is kicking, or punting, to be more explicit. Two of the men on the squad, one a lineman, and one a halfback, have handled the kicking chores for Eisan. Temple Davies, the halfback, does the punting when he is in the lineup. Augie Kalnen, giant tackle, takes over when Davies leaves the field of combat. Their average was particularly impressive during the Cal frosh debacle, when the pair booted nine punts for a total of 358 yards, or an average of 40 yards per kick—and from the line of scrimmage.

BUDDY, CAN YOU SPARE A DIME?

Last Friday night, the game in Stockton found a greatly improved Eisan-machine functioning on all of its eleven cylinders. Utilizing a varied attack, featuring a Terzian to Ekdall pass combination, the Rams put over two touchdowns only to have the officials intercede. The first time, the college right guard was claimed to be offside on the play. Seems funny though, because on that particular play he pulls out of the line to lead interference. The second time, the referee, gripped by the intense excitement of th play, accidentally blew his whistle . . . Tush, Tush!

Women's Athletics

Members Of Hockey Club Will Attend Tournament Next Saturday To Play Round Robin

Members of the Women's Athletic Association hockey club will attend a tournament at Berkeley, Saturday, October 18, on the University of California campus, according to Aileen Kinkel, hockey instructor.

Team members making the trip will play round-robin games with teams from other colleges and universities including Mills, Stanford, and California and several junior colleges and high schools throughout the Bay Area, Miss Kinkel said.

Demonstrations Given

Games will be played from 9 to 11 a. m. with several noted coaches and referees giving demonstrations of the game, followed by open discussion.

This is one of a series of tournaments planned at a recent convention of WAA advisers and club presidents, to enable students in the various activities to learn more of the game, engage in competitive games, and meet women from other colleges.

"Hockey is a comparatively new sport for women," Miss Kinkel said, "and its popularity is growing in the West. Eastern colleges have been quite successful with the sport, and it is hoped that western students will accept it as a regular sport soon."

Riding Clinic At Mills

A riding clinic at Mills College, Saturday, November 1, is the next date planned by the association. All WAA members or interested riding students are eligible to attend this clinic, Laurine Bergin, riding instructor, announced. Exhibitions of horses, and of riding will be given, and students wishing to ride and have their riding criticized by experienced riders are welcome to do so.

Tennis club members are spending their Tuesday and Thursday afternoon classes playing off a series of single and double tournaments, Jean Peterson, manager of the club, said. Elimination in both classes will take place first, followed by the finals.

Fall Track Becomes Routine For Members

Continuing in much the same fashion as in the past few weeks, fall track has become a routine for virtually everyone on the squad, and whatever kinks there were, are beginning to disappear.

The twice weekly drills consist of calisthenics, which include push-ups and the various other exercises, laps around the track, practicing starts, and every athlete learning the fundamentals of his respective event. In this way the trackmen keep in top condition, as well as improving on some of their weaker points.

Machine In Oakland

During each practice session, everyone does his work in a much determined manner, and, as Coach Russ Sweet said, "There's nothing new, they just do the same thing every practice."

Concerning the grading machine that he expected to have sometime last week, and which will level the track and remove all the excess weeds from the field, Sweet said, "The Eaton and Smith machine is in Oakland at the present time and we have no idea when we'll get it, but as soon as it arrives we will be able to use it."

Entire Track Squad

The following is a list of all the men that are out for fall track:

Catholic University, Washington, D. C., possesses the largest collegiate campus in the District of Columbia—more than 150 acres.

Women's Posture Class Begins Friday

Because many of the students in the college have improper posture habits that can be easily corrected, the Women's Physical Education department is beginning a posture class on Friday at 12 noon, Bertha Keller, chairman of the Physical Education Department, revealed last week.

The class will be conducted by Laurine Bergin in the women's gymnasium, but appointments may be made for personal supervision, or advice with either Miss Keller or Mrs. Bergin.

Last semester a similar class was held which was very successful, so it was decided to continue the same class this semester, Miss Keller said. Last year's class met once weekly for nearly six months, so it is possible that this class will follow the same policy.

Exercises Given

"So many women are handicapped in the business world by poor posture, it seems advisable to do something about this condition before the women leave school," Miss Keller pointed out. "On Friday when the class meets, the students will be given exercises which they should do by themselves during the week. One class weekly can do very little for the posture as a whole, but the outside exercises, performed regularly, will help greatly.

Students Checked

"Students will be checked on sitting, standing and walking positions, and then be given corrective exercises to remedy these weak points," she added.

Women who cannot attend this class but who would like to improve their posture should engage in such activities as swimming, archery, and dancing, as they strengthen muscles and tend to improve posture in general.

Ram Splashers To Face Olympic Club Reserves

Because of a sudden change in schedules, the first water polo contest between the mermen of the college, and the splashers from the University of California was not played as recently planned, Coach Allan Eisan announced.

The first tussle that the college men have scheduled, however, is the two-game meet with the Olympic Club Reserves, which will be played on Wednesday, October 22, and Friday, October 24. The other match is with the Stanford Freshmen, on Monday, October 27.

Few Games Scheduled

"I had our manager, Don Rush, write to the other colleges around the Bay Region, but so far we have received negative replies with the exception of the above mentioned Olympic Club, and the Stanford Freshmen," Eisan said.

Squad Small

Although the water polo squad is small, Eisan said, it will be improving as the season rolls on. This being the first semester that this sport has entered the college, many students know very little about it, and consequently, the squad is small, but as the semester continues, the boys should, and will, make a creditable showing of themselves, Eisan concluded.

With the team continuing to work out with the advanced swimming class at the Jefferson High School pool, they are getting some actual experience as to the fundamentals, and finer points of water polo.

The following is a list of the boys that are on the squad this semester: Maurice Richardson, Warren Kleist, Bill Hickey, Phil De Lano, Don Barton, Don Grannis, Tom Calahan, Howard Schuff, Bill Loskutoff, and Jim Duncan.

Intramural

Second Round Of Basketball Set For Today

This afternoon in the men's gymnasium at 3:15 p.m., the second round of the intramural basketball tournament will be staged, Jack Brady, faculty adviser announced.

Again, as in the first round, six games are scheduled in today's competition. Following is the schedule for today and for Thursday, October 16.

Today—3:15—
Unknowns vs. Tri Epsilon
Spartans vs. Blitz Boys
All-Americans vs. Newman Club

4:15—
Alpha Delta Epsilon vs. Rabbits
Rifle Club vs. Goats
Japanese Students vs. Phi Lambda Epsilon

Thursday—3:15—
Unknowns vs. Blitz Boys
Tri Epsilon vs. Newman Club
Spartans vs. Rabbits

4:15—
All-Americans vs. Goats
Alpha Delta Epsilon vs. Phi Lambda Epsilon
Rifle Club vs. Japanese Students

A total of 10 quintets answered to the call of the opening whistle last week, with only two teams losing by forfeit. Teams winning by forfeiture were the All-Americans, defending champions for two successive semesters, and the Spartans, a new entry in intramural activities.

Newman Club Victorious

In the opening contest, Tri Epsilon defeated the Rifle Club by a score of 30 to 20. Outstanding performances were given by Herb Jensen and Bob Kennedy for the winners.

Apparently having an easy time in conquering its foe, the Newman Club turned in an impressive 64 to 44 triumph over the Phi Lambda Epsilon squad. Paced by Jack Batiaf and Bob Cavender, the Newman Club was never threatened seriously at any moment during the encounter.

Possessing a squad which is not as strong as last semester, the Goats won in an overtime thriller from the Rabbits, 47 to 42. Leading all the way until the final minute, the Rabbits proved no match against the strong offensive attack unleashed by the Goats in the remaining minutes. In a hectic overtime period, the Goats won as easily as they chose.

The remaining game found the Japanese Students winning over the Blitz Boys, 37 to 34.

Rivalry Displayed

With the high spirit and intense rivalry displayed in the games last week, the tournament has developed added interest because of the fact that fewer teams have entered this semester. This means less games forfeited and makes possible a more evenly matched league.

Stressing the fact that one defeat does not eliminate a squad from further competition, Brady made it known that every squad has to play 11 games until the tournament is completed. However, if a squad forfeits two games, that quintet is automatically disqualified from further play.

Rifle Club Led By Pack And Reichert, Promising

Pre-season outlook for the college rifle team is very promising, with old and new members alike turning in good scores, according to Jim Juri, president of the rifle club.

Homer Pack and Bob Riechert are leading the shooters at the present time with an average in the high eighties, while Juri and Myron Pierce are just a few points below. The rest of the team is developing very rapidly and all scores are improving with each practice.

An average of 180 out of 200 must be maintained for consideration for a position on the team. Scores are taken by the shooting averages of four positions—prone, sitting, kneeling and standing.

The college team has led the field in the State Gallery Shoot for the past two years and it is out to retain the trophy again this year. With present progress, Juri reports that "we are virtually certain of placing in one of the top three places at the end of the league matches."

A poetry scholarship has been established at Middlebury College's Bread Loaf School of English by Robert Frost, famed New England poet.

Referee Costs Rams Score In Tiger Cub Game; 0 To 0 Rings With Hollow Sound

By Nick Barbarotto

Displaying the best brand of football shown by them this season, the college gridiron eleven gave all the possible breaks to Stockton Junior College, had two touchdowns called back, and emerged from the first conference tilt with a tie score, 0 to 0.

The worst of the bad breaks against the Rams, and the one that hurt the most, came in the third quarter, a referee's error that never should have happened. After Bill Wada had returned a Stockton punt 9 yards to the Tiger Cubs' 36 yard line, two line plays netted nothing. On third down Al "Duke" Drake lateralled to Turk Terzian who fumbled, recovered, and, with the aid of some nice blocking, side-stepped his way down the sideline for a supposed touchdown.

Slight Error

The play was called back and the ref explained, "I blew the whistle too soon, but I can't do anything about it now." The Rams had to be content with that!

Confusion followed, which included the swarming of Ram players around the officials, and the protest of Coach Lee Eisan. All was for naught, however, because the decision remained unchanged.

Ram Stonewall Defense

Although the Tiger Cubs had the statistical edge, the game was by no means theirs. They failed to penetrate inside the Ram 25 yard line throughout the night, most of their yardage coming in their own territory, while the Red and White continually threatened to score. When the situation became serious, the Ram line tightened and nary a yard could be gained through it.

Standouts for the Rams included Terzian, Art Ekdall, and Pat Castellano in the backfield, and Bill Brown, Bob Hufnagle, Dutch Danielson, Jim McGowan, in the line. Temp Davies shone with his kicking and blocking.

Improved Rams Show Neat Passing Attack

By Bob Marcus

Rising to greater heights with lightning like aerial thrusts into the right flat zone and down the extreme middle, the Rams showed marked improvement in their passing attack over all previous encounters.

. . . Turk Terzian, diminutive halfback, had ample time to get his passes away, and, as a result, threw perfect strikes to halfbacks Art Ekdall and Lou Vasquez.

. . . Although reaching pay dirt on two occasions for touchdowns, both were nullified, once because of a penalty, and the other time by a freak miscue made by Referee Bob La Rue.

. . . Having the ball on the Stockton 16 yard line, Terzian passed complete to Vasquez, who fought his way down the sidelines for a touchdown, but on the play, the headlinesman ruled that the Rams were offside.

. . . The boner of the night came in the third quarter with the Rams driving toward the Cub goal, having the ball on the Stockton 37 yard line. Duke Drake received the ball up close, turned and wheeled, throwing a lateral pass to Terzian, who momentairly bobbled the ball, but recovered in time to race down the sidelines to a touchdown. On the play, however, La Rue had blown his whistle accidentally, thinking that the ball was dead when Terzian dropped the lateral. In a heated argument among the many Ram players, La Rue explained that he had to call the play back, because when a couple of Stockton players had heard the whistle, they thought the play to be suspended, and ultimately stopped chasing Terzian.

. . . Playing a bangup game at center was Dutch Danielson, who roamed far and wide into the secondary to intercept two Stockton passes at a time when the Cubs were on a march. Danielson not only backed up the line in excellent fashion, but along with Bob Hoffman, Ram right tackle, were the only 60 minute men in the game.

College Waits In Ready Anticipation Of AMS Bouts

With the college students waiting for the coming Associated Men Students' boxing matches with great anticipation, and the dates for the fight program rapidly nearing completion, the outlook is bright for the coming fight show this semester.

Many of the students will remember the exciting bouts of a year ago which was one of the best boxing carnivals ever put on.

The feature boxing exhibition of that evening was the "grudge fight" between Al Spieller and Dick Wilson, which was awarded to Wilson on a TKO in the second round when Spieller suffered a cut over his left eye, and was unable to continue, but many thought that it was overshadowed by the fight between two hard-hitting 145er's, Warren Grant and Nick Marota, who had the crowd standing from the first round till the final one, and which saw the two boys putting up a terrific slugfest, and saw Marota spouting "claret" before the end of the first round.

Thus, this semester, Jim Jensen also has some fine boxers returning, and with the boys working out every day and rounding into fine shape, the outlook for the AMS bouts this season is very bright.

Jensen stated that no boxer will be allowed to enter the bouts unless he has trained thoroughly for it, and not just punched a bag for about a week, expecting to enter.

Business

Two Courses Open New Sections Starting Monday

The business division is organizing new classes in Business 70a, business English, and in Business 75a, beginning shorthand; Ward M. Nichols, acting chairman of the division, announced last week.

There will be two Business 70a classes, one meeting at 10 a.m. daily, the other at 11 a.m. daily. The Business 75a class will meet from 1 to 3 daily. These classes will begin next Monday.

Nichols said that new students will be accepted in the following business courses at the present time and will receive credit according to the quantity and quality of their work:

Business 58, Accounting Practice.
Business 59, Office Practice.
Business 60, Beginning Typing.
Business 61, Intermediate Typing.
Business 62, Advanced Typing.
Business 63, Special Typing.
Business 64, Personal Typing.
Business 67, Machine Calculation.
Business 68, Office Machines.
Business 70b, Business English.
Business 75b, Stenography.
Business 76b, Advanced Stenography.
Business 85, Principles of Insurance.
Business 89, Consumer Insurance.
Business 95, Introduction to Modern Business Problems.

Students who have any questions about these courses should see the individual instructor or Ward Nichols. New students should start in these classes beginning next Monday.

More Civil Service Jobs Announced

Additional competitive civil service examinations for which students of the college may qualify have been received from the Civil Service Commission by Lloyd D. Luckmann, college civil service instructor.

A position for which some students might qualify for is that of junior foreman of laborers, and laborers. One year's experience is required for the positions paying $1200 per annum. The examination for these jobs are open until further notice, according to Luckmann.

Firefighter for the United States Quartermaster department will be taken until Wednesday, October 22. A year's experience is required for the position paying $1500 per annum.

Mimeographers Wanted

Another examination for which some student might qualify is for the position of under-mimeograph operator. The requirements state that the applicant must have at least three months full time paid experience. Applications will be received until Thursday, October 16. The job pays $1200 a year.

Mechanics helpers with pay ranging from 62 to 82 cents an hour are also wanted by the civil service. The place of employment is at San Diego, California.

Business Student Jobs Open

Third semester business students who have had 18 months experience may apply for the positions of junior storekeeper and timekeeper. Pay ranges from $1250 to $2000 a year.

Aeronautics students, Luckmann declared, might be able to qualify for the position of helper trainee at Moffett Field, California. Applications for examination for this position will be accepted until Friday, October 24.

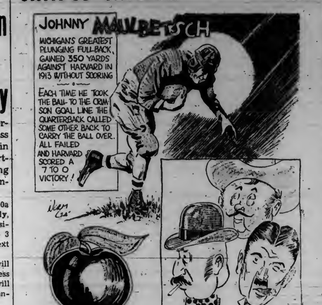
bling. The same Webster you speak of, unwilling to define, investigate—to ascertain by careful inquiry; search, examine. So, do you ascertain by careful inquiry whether the tripe you print in your column is true, or do you predict it to be the infallible truth. . . .

First of all: "Thumbing through the college catalogue"; is that ALL you have to do?



Secondly: In answer to your question of officiating techniques. This, for your information means, officiating at basketball games. The women learn how to do it, and no doubt they do better at it than you could do yourself.

Thirdly: Restricted activity is not a Devil's Island; nor a concentration camp. Students are not placed there by a instructor unless there is a doctor's order, stating that the women is physically unable to take part in such strenous or even unstrenous activities. Certainly there are several of the mighty masculine gender who cannot go out for football, who are physically handicapped in some way so they are unable to play the roughest, toughest games. Well, what do they do? Sit at home and knit? No, they attend school, just like you do, and probably get more out of it, too. Do you pan them, NO! Pick on the women, they won't fight back (you think). Back to the point, however, there are women in school who are taking the toughest courses, but who because of doctor's orders are not allowed to take any activity. Restricted Activity is for them, they rest, relax, and are physically better off after their semester in school, than if they were themselves out learning how to bat a birdie over a net.

I'll just skip the last paragraph for I trust you are included in the members of the younger-degeneration-of-today club. Oh, yes, I'll admit the play on words is cute, clever in fact, but why not use it in some other way.

AWS

Reception Committee For Teas For High School Girls Named

Reception committee members have been announced for the Associated Women Students' tea, Tuesday, October 28, honoring high school seniors, according to Betty Fox, president of the AWS.

In charge of the committee will be Gloria Olivi, Betty MacKillop, and Jean Harrold. Members of the committee are Antoinette Compagno, Ruth Dahlgan, Lois Steinhart, Muriel Jacobson, Geraldine Magee, Bernice Milat, Dorothy Ann Kraul, Beatrice Sanguinetti, Marie Soehner, and Nancy Nagle.

Tea Leads Series

The tea will be the first in a series given honoring senior women from San Francisco high schools to acquaint the graduates with the college and students. Miss Fox pointed out. About 25 graduates from each school will be invited, the students being picked by the clubs advisor.

Lowell, Washington, and Lincoln high schools will be the first schools to be entertained, and the others will follow at a later date, Miss Fox added. As so many affairs are held for seniors during the final weeks of the semester it was decided to have these teas earlier this year, and avoid the "graduation rush."

Tour Planned

"We plan to have each member of the reception committee take two of three seniors on a tour of the building, showing them the library, classrooms, and laboratories," Miss Fox said.

Additional committee members are Madeline Ardinali, Eleanor Coleman, Barbara Stewart, Fern Rominger, Marie Strube, Danna Meyers, Jacquelin Blum, Fleeta Alexander, Betty Rost, Phyllis Burley, Virginia Franz, Sally Nelson, Peggy O'Neil, Barbara Stahman, Pat Brand.

Book Exchange Money Held At Bank Until Friday Only

Friday will be the last day money will be given for books at the book exchange, Michael Zarchin, college treasurer, announced today.

"The bank is open from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.," Zarchin said, "and students may purchase car tickets during that time only. Also Associated Student cards may still be purchased at the bank."

Round-Table Discussion With U.C. For Debaters

The college debating team will have its first activity of the semester Saturday, October 18, when it will participate in a round table discussion at the University of California, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, college debating coach.

Robert McCaffrey and Jacqueline Blair will represent the college. Topic of the discussion will be the present war situation, Luckmann declared.

No definite date has been arranged for the Northern California Junior College Debating Society convention, which according to Luckmann is to be held at the college within the next two weeks.

The college will play host to a group of seven northern California junior colleges. Luncheon will be served by the college. The afternoon's program will consist of debating and impromptu speaking. The convention will decide on a schedule of debate and will choose subjects for debate throughout the coming semester.

The University of Kansas has instituted a three-year program by which most students can complete their courses before becoming eligible for military service at the age of 21.

Hotel Division

Price Increase Leads To Higher Student Payment

Because of the rising costs of food, students working in the college cafeteria for their lunch will now be given scrip amounting to 30 cents instead of the 25 cents in scrip that they had been receiving, Hilda Watson, chairman of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, announced recently.

This will enable the students to purchase the same lunches that they had eaten prior to the rise in cafeteria prices, Mrs. Watson explained.

To save paper and labor and thus pass on the saving to its patrons, the cafeteria has discontinued the mimeographing of the daily menu. The menu will be written on a large blackboard nailed on the cafeteria wall where everyone can see it.

Hotel Greeters Here Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening, October 15, the local group of the Hotel Greeters of America will meet with the hotel and restaurant division for dinner. Sanford Gates, president of the hotel and restaurant division group, has charge of the program.

The paint technology division will hold a dinner, to which all members of their advisory committee have been invited, on Monday, October 20. Both these dinners will be held in the main cafeteria.

Lloyd Tilton, who graduated from the hotel division last June, is now working as an information clerk in the Palace Hotel, Mrs. Watson said.

Two Graduates In Army

Mrs. Watson has received news of two more graduates of the hotel and restaurant division who have joined the United States Army. Tom Caswell, who graduated last June, is now a lieutenant in the U. S. Army Air Corps. He recently sailed at the hotel and restaurant division's office on his way to Manila where he will be stationed.

Carl Rutledge, a recent graduate, is now a sergeant in the Army. He is in this city on leave from Fort Sheriden, Wyoming.

Freshmen Prove World Is Small

That old adage "what a small world this is" was proved true last week during freshman interviews held by Margaret Dougherty, college dean of women.

It seems that Miss Dougherty invited all incoming students to come and get acquainted with her during their first week of school. The interviews were not formal as the word implies, but informal talks wherein the dean learned the interests of the new students, found out if they had any suggestions which would benefit the college as a whole or the students, and asked from what school or town the student came (this was really the first question asked).

Anyway to get back to the point, Miss Dougherty was "becoming acquainted" with one of her new students of the other morning, and with the woman what school she came from. The woman replied that she was from out of town—from Chicago to be exact, and named the college she had graduated from.

Miss Dougherty was elated! thrilled! and jubilant! For earlier in the summer she had visited Chicago, and the alma mater of the girl now in her office. She had met the principal and felt really at home in the school. Little did she realize at the time that she would have one of the same principal's best students when she got home to her own little college. Now, isn't it a small world, after all?

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Members Get New Request To Sign-up As Coaches; Service To Start Tuesday

A further call to Alpha Gamma Sigma members to sign up for coaching service was issued by Alice Cooper, faculty adviser of the group, today.

Stressing the fact that there are still a number of students in the organization who have not signed up for the coaching service of the group, Miss Cooper made it known that a lack of coaches existed in certain subjects, but the addition of several more names would remedy the existing deficit.

In dire need of a physic's coach, Miss Cooper has appealed to college instructors for aid in selecting various student tutors. Applicants for coaching need not necessarily be members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, according to Miss Cooper, and names turned in by instructors may meet this requirement.

Students To Arrange Own Times

Since there is no official study hall open to students who will be coached by the Alpha Gamma Sigma group, meetings between coach and student will be at their own time and place, group officials revealed today.

Instruction in the various subjects for deficient students is slated to begin October 21 and continue through until Christmas vacation.

Foreign Students To Be Aided

A further call sounded by Miss Cooper for various students, probably from the Alpha Gamma Sigma group, to aid foreign students in attendance at the college, was also made known in her announcement of today.

The coming social meeting of the organization will be held October 22, in the college cafeteria at 4 o'clock, with a program of entertainment and refreshments. The meeting will also be the last date for club pin orders to be taken, it was revealed by Miss Cooper.

Library

Faculty Forms Best Seller Club

To give faculty members a chance to read new books while they are new, the library has reorganized the faculty best seller's club, according to Marcus Skarstedt, librarian.

The club devotes itself to reading best sellers as selected by the library. The faculty members buy the books themselves, and then circulate the books among the members, so that all books are kept busy all the time, and each person receives the opportunity to read each new book.

The object of the best sellers club is to encourage the faculty members to utilize their spare time by reading the new books as they are published.

At the close of the year and school semester, the books are distributed among the faculty members so that at the beginning of the year, new books can be purchased.

The club was organized last semester and has gradually grown so that at the present it boasts of approximately 30 members. "It was renewed again this semester because of current faculty interest in new and best selling books and promises to be a great success," Skarstedt stated.

AMS Wants Barn Dance Location Suggestions

Students with suggestions for a favorable place to hold a barn dance are asked by Don Jensen, Associated Men Students' president, to report to the Associated Students office.

"The present date of the AMS barn dance is February 10, but that is subject to change," Jensen said. "That is the only date on which we could obtain the Alvarado Barn and the committee and myself thought this the best location for the affair," Jensen continued.

The AMS boxing matches are rescheduled to be held on Monday, December 8, at the Civic Auditorium Bowl, San Francisco. That date was set with no disapproval so far, and plans for the event are getting under way, Jensen revealed. Both these events are semi-annual AMS affairs and are looked forward to by all college members.

Employment

Occupational Survey Now Ready For Student Use

Results of an occupational survey conducted by Joseph A. Amori have been compiled and are now available to any interested member of the Associated Students. The survey was made during the fall registration and included 2500 students. In addition to the questionnaire used, Amori conducted a brief interview with each student.

Almost 60 per cent of the men and women now enrolled in college worked at least part of the summer, according to the survey. Varied amounts were earned but a majority made either between 100 and 125 dollars during the summer, or somewhere between 150 and 175 dollars.

The way these jobs were secured were for the most part different, but more students seemed to receive jobs through application with firms than any other way. The California State Employment Office accounted for the next largest group placed. According to the surveys at least five enrollees secured as much as 1,000 dollars over the vacation period.

Interest In Part Time Work Shown

Interest in part-time jobs was another phase of the questionnaire. Over 65 per cent of the enrolling students either had part-time jobs or desired one.

Only a little more than four percent were uncertain as to whether they did or did not want to work and go to school as well.

The questionnaire shows nearly half the college students' fathers are skilled workmen. Next largest group represented are unskilled workers.

Few Mothers Working

Mothers of the college's students are largely (77%) housewives. A number (10%) were classed as skilled workers and the rest fell into even smaller groups.

Exact and complete figures and percentages may be secured by request at the placement bureau.

Faculty Education Problem Committee In Five Groups

To give each member a chance to study the particular educational problem in which he is most interested, the Educational Problems Committee of the Faculty Association has been divided into five sub-committees, John Ross, chairman of the committee, announced recently.

Each member of the committee was sent a questionnaire asking him to list the two educational problems that he would prefer to study, Ross explained. From the questionnaire answers, each committee member was placed in one of the five sub-committees.

As yet, these sub-committees are not fully organized. Each one will meet in the near future to elect a chairman and start its semester's work.

These sub-committees will work independent of each other. In a few months they will meet together and each one will report on its progress in its field.

The following is a list of the five sub-committees of the Educational Problems Committee:

1. Committee for guidance, counseling and placement.
2. Committee to study high school-junior college relationships.
3. Committee to transmit teaching aids and techniques.
4. Committee to study integration of curricula, spirit, recreation and schedule.
5. Committee on terminal work.

Hill Parking Violations Hit All-Time Low

Parking violations on the south hill but an all time low this week, with no noticeable cases of hillside parking according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"What violations did occur will be handled as individual cases, and do not reflect upon any large group of drivers," Browne said.

South hill parking had long been a problem of the administration and evoked a hazard. Stressing the fallacy of such a procedure, Browne campaigned against the hillside parking, and as a final gesture he installed parking signs as a warning against parking in that area.

The case of south hill parking was almost closed by administration and student leaders this week, with increased student cooperation in the parking venture.

Frosh "Apollo" To Rival Soph's Queen This Semester

Mammoth preparations are being made by the low frosh class officers for the election of a freshman apollo, to rival the high sophomore queen.

Final date for election has not been set yet, but, according to Margaret McMahon, low frosh vice-president, the affair will be a stupendous one.

Members of each organization of the college are to hand in the name of a candidate from that group. The judges for the contest will then cut the list of nominees down to four or six he-men, and finally the freshmen women will elect their apollo.

Judges for the affair will be Eloise Windfeldt, last semester's soph queen, Harry Hassloop, Associated Student president, and the class officers, President Bing Kirk, Miss McMahon and Carmel Cole, secretary.

AMS Plans Military Course For Reserve Officers

BATON ROUGE, LA.—(ACP)—A language course in military German is offered military students of Louisiana State University for the first time this year.

Dr. Robert T. Clark, acting head of LSU's department of Germanic languages, expressed belief cadets in the University's reserve officers training corps will find the instruction useful as a means of studying official German military reports.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

WHEN a man finally achieves success in his chosen line of endeavor, it is only natural that he have enemies, and if not enemies, then at least opponents. Such is the case in politics at any rate.

Now, Mr. Roosevelt may have enemies, but that is not known. However, he does have opposition, and that is known.

The most loyal opposition, which is loyal in that it sticks by its guns while the ship is slowly sinking, keeps hammering away all the time. But it is like a battle between a battlewagon and a fishing smack, something resembling open season on jackrabbits.

The most loyal opposition claims that this country is being driven towards war. They offer facts which in their own minds supply conclusive proof of their assertions. They make speeches and are booed here and cheered there. But the boos are more prevalent—and they are much louder —which does not necessarily go to prove that they are emitted by the majority of the demonstrators.

All in all, politics is having a wonderful time; and big, grown-up men spend much of their energy making mud pies to be thrown at some dissenter.

It's difficult to ferret out the true facts of any-ette these days. Mr. Roosevelt's opposition claims to have done this. If so it is a most remarkable feat and deserves applause—which it won't get whether it has or has not unraveled the mess. There are tough times for any opposition. Even Hitler's opposition. And a sort of merry-go-round effect is gained because everybody is somebody else's opposition. Little children aren't the only ones who get dizzy riding on a merry-go-round.

As to the facts offered up to the gods of public opinion by the President's loyal dissenters — well, take your choice. There are certainly some juicy little items being thrown about today, and carelessly, too.

On the one hand, here is a little item that has not been thrown about too much. Oh, it has been discussed here and there, and it has had its day or two of prominence, but otherwise it's almost a secret.

According to the International News Service (from New York), strange things are going on. From the sounds of this news release, it would seem that there is a prestidigitator loose in the crowd. Perhaps that is not the word. Deceiver may be a more fitting appelation. Here are the facts.

On September 19 last, a freighter, Pink Star, owned by the government of the United States, supposedly, was sunk by German sea raiders.

There was quite a flurry over the matter. The same old stunt—1914 variety of "they can't do that to us" stuff. Well, it isn't right for the Germans to run around sinking our ships, if they are our ships. That's where the INS release comes into the picture.

George Kelland of Montreal, one of the twenty survivors who were brought to New York from Iceland on a Navy transport, claims that things were extremely "cockeyed" at first.

The Pink Star was formerly a Norwegian vessel. It was seized by our government and turned over to the Maritime Commission.

Kelland claims that it was flying a Panamanian flag and was traveling armed in a British convoy. He further states that it was only one of five that were sunk.

But listen to this! The survivor relates how he was given signs to nail up in the chartroom and in the cap-

Carnival Trouble

Probable Success Of Proposed Venture Hinges On Interest Of College Clubs

To provide the needed "spirit transfusion" for college carnival day, the proposition will be brought before next week's CAB meeting, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee.

"If the college clubs agree to cooperate with the committee in promoting college carnival day, there is no reason why the occasion shouldn't go over with a bang," Lindemann said.

Clubs Desired For Booths

The committee hopes to have each college organization sponsor a booth at the carnival. As these booths will provide the main attraction, the backing of the clubs will be necessary, according to the committee. Prizes will be offered for the most spectacular side show, or the most original booth.

Still to be decided by the committee is a suitable site for the carnival. The committee has debated using the college cafe for the day long carnival. This plan may be rejected because of the time it would take to arrange the booths, necessitating discontinuance of cafe service for at least a day. The men's gymnasium has been considered and according to the committee, it is there that the carnival will probably be held.

If the program is accepted, students will have the day to deck themselves out in circus costumes and compete for prizes to be awarded to the person wearing the most spectacular costume.

"The committee has sought steadily to provide a few traditions for the college campus," Lindemann pointed out. "If this affair is as big a success as it should be, it will become an annual affair."

Hello Walk Plaque Ready

The plaque for Hello Walk will be on display in one of the display windows, according to Bill Postal, college finance chairman and member of the committee. The plaque, bearing the inscription, "Friendly company shortens the walk;" will be of bronze color, rectangular in shape, and approximately nine by eleven inches in width and length.

The plaque will be on display until workmen can be obtained to place it before the flag pole in the rear court.

Registrar

Advisers Meet Students Oct. 21 To Distribute First Midterm Grades

With the exception of four, all advisers have received permanent rooms in which to meet with their advisees October 21 at 11 o'clock for the purpose of distributing grades, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar at the college, announced Wednesday.

All college classes will be dismissed at that hour to allow students to attend these meetings, Miss Learnard said, and warned all students to be present.

The following Friday, according to the college catalog and the registrar's office, is the last day students may drop courses without penalty. Drop slips may be secured from the registrar's office, and must have instructor's and adviser's signatures.

Following is the list of adviser's rooms which will be permanent meeting places for their respective advisees at later mid-term meetings:

Petitions For Graduation Must Be Filed Immediately

Students wishing to graduate next January but whose names do not appear in the list of prospective graduates are advised by the registrar's office to file their petitions immediately. This procedure was suggested as important because it may prevent a last minute rush of petitions.

The registrar has expressed the hope that a complete list of graduates to be will soon be available. Prompt adherence to the above request will make this possible.

Modesto Trip Set Tonight

At least 170 tickets for the football train excursion to Modesto this afternoon must be sold by noon today or a special train cannot be obtained, according to Rally Commissioner Steve Mohorovich.

The cost per student is $2.35, Mohorovich promises that sufficient cars will be available and that a recreation car will be included for dancing and entertainment.

Interest Promotion!

"We are planning this excursion to promote general interest in the football team and special interest in the battle with Modesto tonight," Mohorovich said.

Students may meet the train in San Francisco at the Ferry Building at

Administration Refuses Trip Responsibility

Editor's Note: The Guardsman willingly publishes the following statement from Dean Edwin C. Browne on the train excursion to Modesto:

"The Modesto excursion is not in accordance with the policy of the administration, and in no way will the junior college or the administration be held responsible for anything which might occur on the trip.

"Anyone going on this trip does so on his own responsibility."

3:30 p.m. this afternoon. The train may be boarded at Oakland at the 16th Street Station at 4:20, and at Berkeley at 4:30 p.m.

"Hep" Leaders Going Too

Jean Walsh and Jean Peterson, the new "hep" women yell leaders will accompany the yell leaders on the trip.

The train will leave Modesto at 10:35 p.m. for all points north.

Two New Courses Opened By Business Division

Ward M. Nichols, acting chairman of the business division, has announced that there will be two new business classes open to the students who are able to pass the necessary requirements.

The two new additions to the series of courses designed to equip the student with the necessary knowledge to hold a position in a modern office are Business 75a and Business 70a.

These courses will be open next Monday in addition to several other classes in business subjects. The other courses include: office practice, machine calculations and consumer insurance.

College Building

Board Approves Parking Lot, Gym Bleachers

Inspection of the physical properties of the college by Richard E. Doyle, Board of Education member, resulted in action to install bleachers in the men's gym and to construct a parking lot in the south hill area, according to an announcement made by President Archibald J. Cloud today.

Commissioner Doyle, Friday inspected the college grounds, commented upon the inadequacy of parking facilities, and offered a possible solution, which he prepared and offered to the Board of Education at its meeting last Tuesday.

Doyle Offers Solution

The solution offered by Commissioner Doyle dealt with the building of a circular roadway in the rear of the college, with an entrance on the south side of the college and an exit on the north, intersecting Phelan Avenue in both places. When the roadway is completed, it will be paved, and will solve the problem of rainy weather parking, as well as the congested condition of Phelan Avenue.

Diagonal Parking Permitted

Provisions of the proposal favor construction of a roadway large enough to permit diagonal parking. Estimated cost of construction will be about $20,000, according to President Cloud.

Bleachers to be installed in the men's gymnasium are folding and will accommodate 2,000 spectators, according to the adopted plans. These should run into no difficulties of government defense priorities, college authorities said, since the bleachers are available locally.

Bleachers Provide Rally Spot

Installation of the bleachers will overcome one of the main problems confronting student activities. Louis Conlan, coordinator of educational management here, pointed out that the gymnasium has long been for a place to hold student assemblies and rallies.

Although the bleachers will provide adequate facilities for some athletic events," he said, "they will be most appreciated for future Associated Student meetings."

Settlement of the bleacher problem followed action on the part of Commissioner Doyle directly after his inspection as representative of the school department authorities.

Plans Laid For Frosh Dance At War Memorial Oct. 24

Completion of plans for the forthcoming high freshman dance was announced this week by social committee chairman Pat Niemeyer.

Under present conditions in the various hotels, the dance is to be held in the War Memorial Opera House, Friday, October 24, from 9 to 12 p.m.

The dance is to be semi-formal and music will be supplied by Charles Cavelli and his nine piece orchestra. Cavelli features a style similar to Tommy Dorsey's and although he has never played for any college affair, he is the favorite of the fraternities of California and Stanford.

Admission to the affair will be by one Associated Students card per couple.

Although the dance is given in honor of the high freshman class all students of the college are invited to attend.

As in the past the social committee urged that no corsages be worn. Neville Smith, high frosh president, expressed the desire that members of the freshman class would do their part to make the dance a great success.

There are many other activities planned for the class, Smith added, the first being a class picnic. Details will be announced at a later date.

Today Last Time To Get Book Exchange Returns

Today is the last day to collect money at the bank for books sold at the Women's Service Society book exchange, Violet Butler, president of the WSS announced Wednesday.

There is nearly $60 left unsalled for in the college bank, Miss Butler said, and there are quite a few books also to be returned.

Seven Stalwarts Search For Campus Snow White

IT has been definitely decided by Sophomore President George Coart that a cozy coterie of seven little men will be granted the transcendent honors of selecting the initial corps of glamour girls from which will be chosen the college Snow White or Sophomore Sweetheart.

The opinion that this initial selection committee would be unsatisfactory and obviously prejudiced as expressed in The Guardsman last Tuesday, October 7 remains unchanged.

Men are already clamoring for appointment on this "SS" division. Don't ask why; we all know that it's a juicy position fraught with power of the I'll-get-you-a-screen-test sort.

So it seems that the initial group of 21 women will consist of the three top interests in the troublous lives of the seven little men.

Do we want our Snow White selected in this fashion?

It might happen that the real scoop of college cream might not be an acquaintance of our "SS" men.

There is still time to alter this anomalous situation.

Comptroller

Government Tax Affects Many Associated Student Activities

With the reception of a bulletin from the Internal Revenue Department the comptroller's office has prepared to put into effect a new 10 per cent tax on all entertainment to which admission is charged.

This tax will be paid on the ratio of the general admission paid to any event. This means that if the general admission to a dance is $1.00 there will be a tax of ten cents payable. If there is a special admission for students of fifty cents, the tax on that admission will still be ten cents.

Officials, Service Men Exempt

There will be no exemptions to the tax except municipal officials or for service men in uniform. Heretofore all church benefits have been tax free but with the installation of the new law they, and all other benefits will be taxable. Even those private organizations who have entertainments for their members will have to turn over ten per cent to the government.

In the past the High Soph Formal has been exempt but now, if the admission is $1.25, there will be a tax imposed on 12 cents. This is to be paid from the admission, not plus the admission price.

Other Taxable Events

Other occasions which will probably be taxed are the Beta Phi Beta social affair, the Beta Tau dance, the Newman Club breakfast, and of course the sophomore formal.

Under discussion is the argument as to whether the Associated Students will have to pay back taxes on the entertainment given with a student body card. If this goes through it will cost the Associated Students about $400.

College Women Fete High Girls At AWS Tea

Seniors from Lowell, Washington and Lincoln High Schools will be honored at a tea Tuesday, October 28, in Room 158, according to Betty Fox, president of the Associated Women Students.

The tea will be the first in a series of several informal affairs to acquaint the seniors of high schools with the college, Miss Fox pointed out.

"There will be no special entertainment planned for the afternoon," Miss Fox said. "Refreshments provided by the Home Economics Department and the tour of the building will compensate for this."

Committee members were announced last week and are to be under the leadership of Gloria Olivi, Betty MacKillop, Jean Harrold, and Miss Fox.

Milton J. Polissar To Speak At UCLA

Milton J. Polissar, well recognized American authority on the Theory of Liquids, and an instructor of chemistry here, has been invited to the University of California at Los Angeles this week-end to speak before a group of scientists on Liquids.

Polissar has had over 10 papers on this subject published in scientific periodicals such as the Journal of American Chemical Society and the Journal of Physical Chemistry.

Teaching Methods Well-Known

His methods of teaching chemistry have attracted much attention throughout the state of California, and because of this he has been invited to discuss the subject before the various professors from the southern part of the state.

Polissar Addresses Colleges

In addition to his talk at the university, Dr. Polissar will speak at a select number of the larger junior colleges.

In view of the fact that this is the first time that any junior college chemistry instructor has been invited to Southern California to discuss the teaching of chemistry, Dr. Polissar has shown that the college's reputation as a teaching institution is growing.

Community Chest

Appeal Voiced For Greater Aid To Meet Additional Burdens

By Jack Robinson

The Community Chest of San Francisco has again voiced its appeal for aid from the people of the Bay Area. This year more than ever the Chest recognizes a definite need for the help of everyone who is able to give some aid, no matter how small.

Few people realize that one in every six looks to the Community Chest for aid. The 82 Chest agencies assist more than 115,000 people during the year. In spite of the increased employment through the Bay Area the demands on private welfare organizations are greater than last year. Problems that have heretofore been minor ones are now major issues and they must be faced and overcome. These problems the Chest names as follows:

1. The prices of food, medical supplies, and other equipment are mounting and probably will continue to rise.
2. Newcomers to the Bay Area are looking for defense jobs and must be aided until they are able to obtain them.
3. Additional need for work with underprivileged children is recognized.

In conjunction with the third of these reasons is the fact that with proper aid and living conditions the amount of juvenile delinquency can be cut down. This combined with the counselling system of the public schools the Chest believes will bring the problem down to a minimum.

"San Francisco Junior College in the past has held a position among the top three in the San Francisco school system for response to the annual Community Chest appeal," Lloyd Luckmann, faculty representative, said.

Women To Elect Apollo While Men Choose Sweetheart

The freshman Apollo has a date to the high sophomore formal, Saturday, December 13, although no one yet knows who his date is.

It has been decided, according to freshman president Bing Kirk, that Apollo shall have the honor of escorting the sophomore queen to the dance.

Election Timed With Soph's

Women of the college will choose their ideal freshman male at about the same time as the men will be selecting the high sophomore class sweetheart, using the same number of judges and very nearly the same rules. Apollo will be elected a few days before the Associated Men Students' fights and will be introduced at that event.

Meanwhile, new application cards have been printed in an effort to promote interest in the coming sweetheart election, which will take place from December 2 to 13, George Coart, president of the high sophomore class announced Tuesday.

Cards Announce Candidacy

The cards, Coart said, are about three by two inches with the words "You have been selected as a candidate for the Sweetheart's Contest of San Francisco Junior College."

A blank line is left on which the candidate's name will place her name. Printed also on the cards is a large red heart with the printed words above super-imposed over it.

St. Mary's Sends Challenge To College Debate Team

In a letter to Lloyd Luckmann, acting college debate director, St. Mary's College invited the college team to debate the subject, "Resolved: that the Federal Government should regulate labor unions by law."

With the date tentatively set for 6 o'clock, Thursday, October 23, the team hopes to add another victory to its collection.

Although this debate is not one of the official Northern California Junior College Debating Society's matches, Luckmann believes it will be one of great interest.

The team has also received a challenge from Modesto Junior College. The date for this match has not been definitely set, but it has been suggested that it be held on a Monday afternoon in the near future.

The subject has been left open to the San Francisco team. The method of debate will be more or less of the open forum type with the speaker supporting the discussion and both colleges debating at will.

The plans for the Northern California Debate conference at this college are still indefinite.

A Sequel And . . .

Labor's Enemy

IN the discussion of labor with a capital "L" last Tuesday, it was brought out that the present power of the labor leader is too sweet to relinquish, even at times when the modern Attila's bloody band devastates Europe and Russia and threatens the life and loves of every citizen of civilization.

Labor should know by now that the will to win is a minor battle salient now, that the cry of courage on a young man's lips does not soften the treads of the tank.

Machines, machines, and more machines win wars. Each strike—justified, or not—seriously impairs our war effort.

Twenty-eight strikes involving 35,000 men were in progress at the first of this week, and strike settlements are currently falling behind new refusals to work. Don't let that relatively small figure of 35,000 men fool you; a few hundred workers in a small factory manufacturing a key material may halt production in the largest plant. And if the national strike offensive is too distant, LOOK AT SAN FRANCISCO!

The selfish, glaringly personal power politics of two men are the basis of a large number of strikes. These are euphemistically termed jurisdictional disputes. Let us call them some of the most opprobrious curses of the contemporary American scene. Let them represent notorious economic and social waste in peace time, and the addition of threats to national safety and unity in war time.

* * * *

Observe what The San Francisco News states in one of its many fair and intelligent editorials in regard to power politics and imposition on the commonwealth:

"There are two important facts about the possession of great power—two great dangers. One is that power feeds on power, and the lust for more power is an inescapable one. The other is that the possession of power inevitably and inescapably carries with it a responsibility equal to the power possessed. The surest way to lose power is to abuse it. Industrialists of 'the public be damned' type found that out, and labor should take warning.

"What the public will has bestowed it can also take away.

"The record of organized labor in recent years —in the years of this sudden shift in the balance of power—does not give one any reassurance that labor officials generally have grasped those simple truths.

"Organized labor has never had such power as it possesses today . . . Organized labor has never had such opportunities for genuine statesmanship—or the need for such statesmanship—as it has today.

"Persisted in, a course of reckless irresponsibility can have but one end. A public revulsion will set in, and all that working men and women have gained, all that organized labor has gained, will be swept away. Labor's enemy today is not capital—labor's enemy is itself."

* * * *

Apparent, exigent now is a renaissance of the fundamental ideals of labor with a small "l." Since the trust placed in labor has been defaulted, government regulation, wanted or not, must step on the scene. Let us see labor controlled by TWO-WAY legislation that will define its relation to business and the public, and the relations of those bodies to labor.

The Sherman Anti-Trust Act and its ramifications neither ravaged American business nor democracy. The same must follow with two-fisted labor control. National defense has forced the issue. Labor as a sacred cow must be no more. The belief that labor is peculiarly immune from government and private redress must be no more.

The greatest enemy of labor has been itself as personified by the selfish labor leader.

car was packed with workers and shoppers. A young lady boarded the car with a small bundle. Said small bundle had wide, blue eyes and a big smile exhibiting two teeth. The young mother was tired and she showed it. A soldier standing next to her "kitchee-cooed" the package under the chin and offered to hold it. She surveyed him coldly for a fraction of a second, then smiled and handed over Junior. While baby was biting a gold button, mother had a chance to straighten her tired shoulders and rest her arms.

Came the soldier's time to get off. He tapped the civilian next to him, indicating mother and baby with a single nod. The civilian resignedly folded his paper and the bundle was transferred from khaki to business suit without a word being spoken.

San Francisco's atmosphere has been analyzed in millions of flowery words. One thing the analysts forgot. They raked through history, described the bridges, sang eulogies of golden sunsets, and composed poems about the Golden Gate. But, the essence of San Francisco's atmosphere is the friendly spirit of the San Franciscan.

AT SHUTES AT THE BEACH

a meek little man with enormous bifocals paid his dime and got behind the wheel of a scooter car. Around and around he sped, slamming into any luckless scooter that crossed his path. While we watched, he spent $1 riding the scooter. Finally he got out of his car and left the arena with a satisfied smile on his face. Seeing us looking at him quizically, he approached, opening the conversation by asking for a match.

"I saw you watching me and I guess you think I'm nuts," he said apologetically. "You see, my wife's a back-seat driver. I can't go around a curve without her screaming in my ear. It's 'Herman, you went through that light. Herman, look out, you'll dent a fender!' It's been like that for 20 years. I got so I couldn't stand it any more. I had to do something."

He pointed to the Scooter Arena. "That," he said proudly, "was MY show."

IN A BATH TUB,

somewhere in a science laboratory, there is an old man who just lies and soaks and never says a word. He is very well preserved for his age, and his hair, though snow white, is always well groomed.

Why is the old man taking a bath, you ask? He isn't bathing. He is very dead. We have never seen any one quite so dead. Perhaps some day he will be a skeleton.

Already in this medical laboratory there are two skeletons. They too once reposed in bath tubs. One dark night when the wind was crooning dirges around the building, we were looking in on a research experiment, and we heard the skeletons start to rustle.

The old man in the tub lifted his head slowly and murmured,

"Quiet, you guys, you wouldn't be there if you had any guts."

• Keep Wolf From Dances
Editor, The Guardsman:

The stag line at the mixer dances is the only complaint I have against these affairs. As a cure for this, I would like to suggest that all the men attending these dances unaccompanied by a girl, femme, skirt, or what not, be charged the nominal fee of 10 cents, which money will be used to buy new records and so forth. This idea has worked in several other colleges that were plagued with this evil.

Yours for bigger and better mixers without the wolves,

Hopeful.

• Missing Records
Editor, The Guardsman:

In one of the first editions of the paper a story was run about the college record supply. Apparently, it had disappeared, and so an orchestra was used for the first mixer. Several other mixers are being planned this semester and music is important. What kind will there be? Have the records been found, or are they still missing?

M. M. S.

• Old System Boosted
Editor, The Guardsman:

Why all the fuss about the Soph Sweetheart? For several years—twice a year—a soph sweetheart has been elected with pros and cons from members of student body, but there always is a certain percentage of "beefers."

From the woman's angle, an impartial woman not interested in being queen, I'd say let the women volunteer. Generally if they are interested enough they will come to the office and admit it. If not, they aren't too interested.

Again, an election board composed of several men students would possibly bring in these women—the ones who are afraid, or too bashful to go in and admit to the officers that they want to run for queen. Don't the officers running for student offices admit it to someone. If they are afraid—then they aren't the students for office.

Unfortunately I have no better method of election. But perhaps a collaboration could be made with both Mr. Hyman's and Mr. Coart's plans. Both sound logical. The only difference—one favors the women, the other the men to pick the eligibles.

If no agreement can be found—how about the method used previously.

Impartial.

FEM FADS . . .
by Nancy

THE future certainly is far from looking dim, but the present, as far as intercollegiate social activities go, is practically a black-out. Looking through the calendar of coming events for this semester we see many dances, semi-formal, sport, and formal, being planned. But none scheduled for the next week or two. Column writing tends to become stereotyped when there are no events coming up where women's costumes can be featured. Because, of course, one of women's greatest interests is clothes.

However, if you'll bear with us this time perhaps the blue fairy will descend on the earth and spring forth with some new ideas in attire.

Maybe the same blue fairy would invent along with her new ideas of clothing, some new uniform to replace the well-worn one of sweater, skirt, and classic shirt for campus wear. These really are getting tiresome. If you've looked around your classroom all you'll see are the same sweaters, shirts, and sweaters. The only variety being the color, and an occasional ingenious woman who happens to be wearing a dress.

COPY-CATS

Many of this season's clothes were originally designed for the men. The classic white shirt spoken of above was considered so comfortable and neat by the men that the women couldn't let them keep it—so had it copied. And look where it is now. Made of rayon, silk, broadcloth—with long or short sleeves and worn by women everywhere whether in college, high school, or the business world.

While on the subject of men's clothing—well, originally the men's anyway — have you seen any of those boxy flannel jackets copied from a small boy's jacket? They are very tailored with large patch pockets, and saddle stitching on the collar. Unlike most jackets these are loose, not form-fitting as before. Perhaps they can be bought a size or so too big, like cardigans, or else they are just naturally cut larger than usual.

Sweaters, sweaters everywhere, could well be sung in this school for they really are everywhere. For again—a sweater design that comes out of the man's wardrobe. Those V-necks like our brother wore two or three years ago, are now quite the thing, for campus wear. Especially with white collars peeking out. Some designer must have had a "designing" daughter who decided that everything "pappy" designed she would turn over to her sorority sisters so they could have the latest fashions.

ADDENDA

Incidentally, if you are going to the game tomorrow or tonight don't forget your warmest coat. Several times during this football season the weather has been deceiving and resulted in cases of influenza, colds and so forth. If you have a coat you can always take it off if it gets too warm, but you can't put one on if it isn't there.

Smilin' Through . . . years fail to dim its pathos and charm

ONE of our earliest and fondest recollections of the cinema was the viewing of a poignant, tender drama called Smilin' Through way back some 10 years ago.

The memory is still a strong one. We recall the throat-choking pathos, the charm, the emotional appeal of that earlier success. We recall suffering with the screen characters Frederic March and Norma Shearer as they struggled and fought toward happiness while the lovely strains of Smilin' Through formed a musical background for a delicate tapestry.

Here it is 1941 and Smilin' Through is with us again, be-decked now in lavish technicolor and music, brought to life with the best advanatges of technical progress since that earlier version. It's a new Smilin' Through, a weaker filming than the March-Shearer production, but still the old fragile, compassionate story that will probably live forever because of its basic tenderness.

STORY HOLDS OLD "PUNCH"

The warm sentimental story that provided a play for Jane Cowl some two decades ago is the big punch of the modern interpretation. Several defects hinder the film's continuity. The integral strength and beauty of the story help surmount the difficulty of weak acting and slow-paced production.

The story should be a familiar one to all theater-goers, thanks to its many presentations before audiences. Well-to-do English girl Kathleen (Jeanette MacDonald) meets an American doughboy (Gene Raymond) in England during the first World War. The girl's aged uncle (Brian Aherne) discovers the infatuation and immediately forbids the girl to see the American again. As he explains to Kathleeen why he possesses such grim bitterness, the camera fades into the past and focuses on his unhappy love affair.

On his wedding day, tragedy struck when the drunken rival suitor for his sweetheart's hand charged into the church and shot his bride-to-be. The uncle was left with memories and the ethereal personality of his lost love. The murderer of his sweetheart was the father of the American youth. Thus the uncle shifts his burden of vengeful remorse on the head of the American son, and in so doing breaks Kathleen's heart.

There is a bitter-sweet ending that disentangles the web of conflicting lives satisfactorily. But throughout its length there are plentiful opportunities to permit those tear-ducts to function.

SINGING CONTRIBUTION SUPERB

Miss Jeanette MacDonald portrays the role of Kathleen and is magnificent in her vocal numbers and red-haired beauty. However, Miss MacDonald suffers when acting forte comes to the fore. Norma Shearer's performance still haunts the premises and detracts from Miss MacDonald's work. She does satisfactorily on the whole and there is no denying the glorious warmth of her voice in a series of grand numbers. Never have we heard such melodic presentations of such songs as Drink To Me Only With Thine Eyes, The Kerry Dancers, Smilin' Through, There's A Long Long Trail A Winding, A Little Love, A Little Kiss, and others.

MALE STARS GIVE FAIR PERFORMANCES

Brian Aherne, Gene Raymond, and Ian Hunter complete the quartet of leading stars in the small, compact cast. Mr. Aherne did shaky work as the bitter old uncle. His "old man" was an obvious Mr. Aherne in make-up. Gene Raymond fares a little better as the American soldier. He performs sincerely and simply and is generally competent although his character is inevitably colorless. Hunter is excellent as the genial cleric.

Smilin' Through is for the sentimental, the lovers of immortal romance and particularly the ladies. It is a glorious Technicolor haven in a world of noise and strife. Despite its shortcomings, it remains good entertainment.

This department is loathe to condescend to the realm of the fashion column, but the women are getting so much publicity and the men none, that it seems something should be done. But rapidly.

Instead of the usual fashion parade, we will turn this digression to a more practical purpose. Namely what the well dressed picket will be wearing this month. Fair to organized labor is a striking ensemble of a black denim cap (au francaise), perfectly matched with an exquisite topcoat of red canvas. Appropriate with this ensemble are either a pair of two-week old shirt collar grey or a pair of midnight-colored picket slacks. For the complement we suggest a few sprays of eau de old-socks.

Seen along Ocean Avenue a few days ago were a few reasons for the tired condition of some students. These pinball games require a lot of attention and energy. One poor fellow nearly collapsed after a strenuous encounter with one of these teasers of the machine-age. He flunked a course because he spent so much time trying to beat the game. "If I'd only won a couple of games, it wouldn't have been so bad," was his statement.

Diogenes might have been proud of the student who picked up two paper dollars lying in front of the cashier's box in the cafeteria. The story of Diogenes living in a bathtub and searching in broad daylight with a lantern for an honest man, has been denied in some circles. Diogenes once saw two men standing in a public square, and called out "Hey, you two men." The men approached the old character. Whereupon, holding his famous lantern to their startled faces, said in stentorian tones, "You are not men."

Your College Presents . . . Advertising Art: A Career For Enterprising Students

By Iwanna Hayworth

THIS semester marked the development of another one of the terminal courses in the college in the form of Advertising Art. The instructor for this group, William Eckert, was, until the present semester, at Samuel Gompers Trade School.

Besides the regular lay-out work, students are given instruction in designing ads, cut-out drawings, making of signs and other art work in this field, students are designing some very interesting display designs to be used as publicity outside of the school. The advanced students are working on definite projects which have been sent to the college by outside firms for the students to do. To illustrate the employment possibilities which this class will offer, Eckert said that he had placed at least four artists from last year in advertising agencies. The idea is, if possible, to place these students in agencies. One of these fellows has become production manager, which is the technical side of advertising art; while another has just finished illustrating some books on Aviation.

FIVE HOURS DAILY

Majors in advertising art are with Eckert five hours daily. The 8 o'clock students do lettering principally, and according to their instructor, they are doing very nicely. Brush lettering and commercial production lettering are taught in this class.

Quoting from Eckert, "Muller thinks the best ads must have the head of a pretty girl, however, advertising art covers a much more serious field than that."

One of the future plans for the class, is to work on competition posters, such as murals, and advertising illustrations. Students who wish to enter this national competition have a means of being in touch with the kind of work which professionals are doing. One such competition is that of Beaux Arts, institute of New York City, and is on murals.

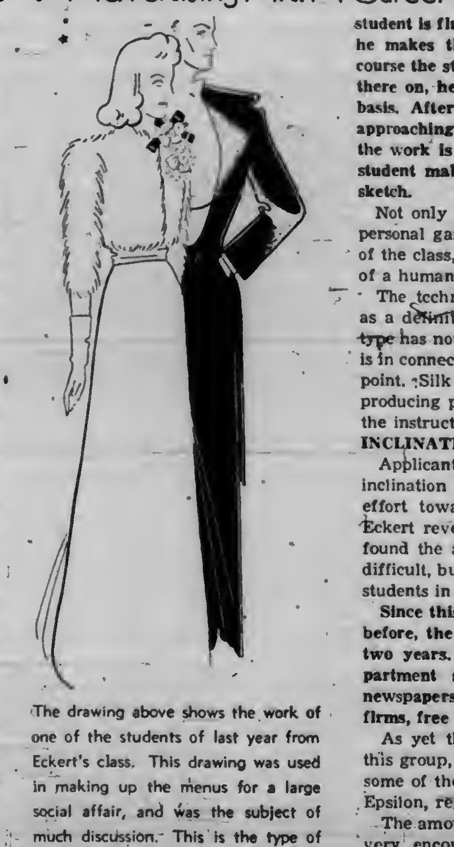
CLASS PROJECTS

One rather interesting and important part of the work of these art students is the class projects. Each student is first given a definite assignment, after which he makes the layout for the whole assignment. Of course the student starts with rough sketches, but from there on, he is trained to follow up on a professional basis. After the layout is completed, the procedure of approaching the art director and submitting and selling the work is then taught. The following semester, the student makes a finished art work out of the rough sketch.

Not only for class work, but for the student's own personal gain, they are asked to do drawings outside of the class, and this should be, preferably, something of a human interest.

The technique of hair brush work is being taught as a definite portion of the course. A course of this type has not been taught in San Francisco before, that is in connection with schools from a commercial standpoint. Silk screen process work, and methods of reproducing posters in colorature, are also highlights of the instruction given.

INCLINATION TOWARD ART NEEDED



Applicants for the course should have at least an inclination toward art and be willing to devote outside effort toward arriving at their objective, however, Eckert revealed that he has had a few students who found the art sketching and finished art work rather difficult, but the imagination and other ability of these students in designing the ads helped them to succeed.

Since this course is terminal, as has been mentioned before, the students should be able to complete it in two years. The employment possibilities are in department stores, art services, advertising agencies, newspapers, printing firms, theaters, silk screen process firms, free lance art service, and numerous others.

As yet there has not been an art club formed for this group, but according to Eckert, there are perhaps some of the students are members of the Alpha Delta Epsilon, regular art club.

The amount of interest shown in the course has been very encouraging, Eckert said, and there is every reason to have confidence in its success.

Tuesday, the Peace Officer division will be featured.

The drawing above shows the work of one of the students of last year from Eckert's class. This drawing was used in making up the menus for a large social affair, and was the subject of much discussion. This is the type of work which the students of the advertising art department specialize in.

Rams Or Brooklyn Dodgers; College Midget Amuck

PAGING DUROCHER

The matter of seasons, mainly the difference between Spring and Fall, showed its effect in class attendance at the college last Monday. ~~If Spring were to take the place of Fall,~~ some 41 students, together with the entire football squad and coaching staff, would still be in Baxter Stadium on the College of Pacific campus at Stockton. The Ram team would still be on the Stockton Tiger Cubs' 45 yard line, grouped around referee Bob Larue, who would probably be horizontal by this late date. The gridiron would be literally covered with pop bottles, and the supporters of the Red and White would never again be able to look a soft drink in the face. Coach Lee Eisan (especially if San Francisco were Brooklyn) would have been shouting "We wuz robbed!" so long and so loud that he would be unable to coax even a whisper from his taut vocal chords. All of these things would have come to pass, had Spring been Fall and, in natural sequence, baseball football, so shoddy and disrupting was the decision Larue handed down when "Turk" Terzian took a lateral from "Duke" Drake and raced 40-odd yards to a touchdown.

IF IN DOUBT

One of the primary differences between football and baseball is the argumentary, or disputative factor, commonly known as "beefing." Football very seldom, if ever, includes a good, old-fashioned beefing session. Baseball, on the other hand, presents the mostest and bestest in beefing. On any close play, a baseball manager will walk out to the umpire and proceed to give the "ump" a piece of his mind. It is interesting to note that these same managers end the season borrowing mind from the players. On a disputable decision, not only the manager, but the entire roster of the team, sometimes accompanied by a handful of the more adventurous fans, will snort, paw the ground a couple of times, and then charge across the diamond to flay the umpire (verbally in most cases) for hours on end. If, however, a manager ever came across a decision as unfair as "Larue's Folly," there is no telling to what ends he might go. . . Come to think of it, Jack Larue, the cinemactor, usually plays the part of a villian.

VAGUE RUMOR DEPARTMENT

Last Friday evening, so the rumor goes, one of the college's more patriotic fiends slunk, brush in hand, onto the Stockton Junior College campus to paint the town red. This young desperado was the cartoonist's picture of a college freshman—five feet and seven inches tall, 101 pounds complete in overcoat, and bespectacled. As he performed his foul deed, one of the campus guards walked up and began watching over the saboteur's shoulder. Arising to leave his despicable work, the midget nearly bumped into the silent spectator. "Hello," meaningly said the athlete. "Hello," said the culprit, beginning to shake audibly as he visioned his just reward. "Football game tonight, huh?" replied the athlete as he walked away.

Intramural

Entries Due For Cross Country Now

All students wishing to enter the intramural cross country run, Friday, October 31, should contact Russ Sweet, college track coach, in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser announced this week.

No entry blanks are necessary to compete in the event, but all cinder-men should give their names to Sweet as soon as possible.

No student will be allowed to compete unless he has passed the required medical examination and has trained two weeks prior for the four and a half mile grind.

Second Week Completed

As yet, the course has not been designated, but the event will take place at halftime during the Salinas Junior College and Ram football encounter to be played on the college practice field, Brady said.

Rapidly attaining additional interest than that of last semester, the basketball tournament completed its second week of competition yesterday.

Four Teams Tied

Four teams were deadlocked for first place, considerably closer than the race of last spring.

In the games last week, the Newman Club retained its undefeated status by winning an easy decision over the Rifle Club, 66 to 34. Led again by Jack Batiaf and Jack Koster, who played his first game, the Newman Club quintet led from start to finish.

Goats Win, 52 To 35

The Goats, paced by Ed Lapuyade, romped to a 52 to 35 triumph over the Phi Lambda Epsilon quintet. This was the second successive victory for the Goats, runnerup in the tournament last semester.

Once again led by Jack Hare, who injured his finger in the second half, the All Americans, defending champions, continued their string of victories in an easy 45 to 10 victory over Tri Epsilon. Only standout for the losers was Herb Jensen, who performed notably on rebound shots.

The final game of the day saw the Rabbits defeating the Japanese Students 46 to 22.

Following are the standings to date:

Intramural Basketball Standings Listed To Oct. 13

	Won	Lost
Newman Club	2	0
Goats	2	0
All Americans	2	0
Spartans	2	0
Tri Epsilon	1	1
Japanese Students	1	1
Rabbits	1	1
Blitz Boys	1	1
Phi Lambda Epsilon	0	2
Rifle Club	0	2
Unknowns	0	2
Alpha Delta Epsilon	0	2

Two Teams Disqualified

Because of non-appearance in two games, the Unknowns and Alpha Delta Epsilon have been disqualified from further play. Teams who were scheduled to play these squads will automatically draw a bye.

At the conclusion of the tournament, an All Intramural squad will be chosen, Brady said. All the teams will select an all-opponent team, which will be given to Brady, and from that, the squad will be named.

A game then will be played between the first team and the winners of the tournament. However, if any member of the All Star squad is named from the winning quintet, his place will be taken by a member of the second All Star squad.

Last semester, the All Star squad was selected by Brady, who was assisted by the intramural board. However, only a first team was chosen, and an honorable mention list was named instead of selecting a second squad.

Of the first five, only two members of that squad have returned again for intramural honors this semester. The players are Ed Cassidy, from the Newman Club, and Jack Hare, from the All Americans.

The Dartmouth College seal has been in use since 1773, when it was presented to the college by George Jaffrey, a trustee.

Women's Athletics

Many Activities Planned For Tourney Week During Christmas

Tourney week dates are being planned for some time before Christmas by the Women's Athletic Association officers and will be announced next week, according to Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA.

Included in the week's events will be swimming, ice skating, archery and bowling demonstrations, badminton and tennis matches, and basketball and softball games, Miss Kraul said.

Tourney Week Set Aside

"We hope to have the week before Christmas set aside as Tourney Week," Miss Kraul announced, "as there are generally 10 or 12 weeks of sports activity during the semester, and the last few weeks are left with very little activity to enable the women to study for final examinations."

WAA members were warned by Miss Kraul about the health eligibility requirement, which requires a physical recheck for students participating in WAA activities. This requirement must be fulfilled before the end of the month or the women will be ineligible for WAA membership and the chenille awarded for activity participation at the banquet climaxing Tourney Week.

Field Day Postponed

Postponement of the field day for high school women until the spring semester was also announced by Miss Kraul. This measure was taken because it is hoped that by spring, grass will have replaced the burned brush now surrounding the gymnasium.

Last year field day was canceled both semesters because of the influenza epidemic and because of the heavy rains during the last semester.

We are hoping, Miss Kraul commented, that in the future, no further postponements of field day will be necessitated because of physical aspects, of either the students or the grounds.

Swimming club members are preparing for the splash party with colleges from other parts of the Bay Area, which will be held Saturday, November 8, at the Y.W.C.A., according to Ruth Hobson, swimming manager. Plans are being made but nothing definite has been decided upon, Miss Hobson said.

Skaters Bemoan Loss Of Star

By Ed Coffin

If tragic moaning is heard creeping forth from the sanctum of the college Ice Skating Club, students are warned not to be unduly alarmed. It is only the members of the club weeping over the loss of its star skaters, who have retired from the college for one reason or another.

Cruel fate hath stepped in to remove such outstanding skaters as Bill Hart, Ed Bodel, Bob Maxwell, Bob Anderson and Viola Miles from the club's midst.

Hart has joined the Shipstad and Johnson Ice Follies and is the only former member who will continue with his skating, while Bodel and Maxwell have been claimed by defense positions, and Anderson and Miss Miles have passed on to other institutions of learning.

But not all is anguish for the club members, for they are finding solace in the fact that two of their champions are still among those present.

Peggy Egan, California State Novice Champion and club publicity manager, and President Inge Lubahn, performer in last year's Ice-Travaganza, are back this year, the latter having introduced some wonderful new ideas for the production of a giant carnival this year.

Great hopes are also being vested in some new additions to the organization.

So, alas, all may not be lost in the grip of tragedy which has, for the time being, overshadowed the pleasant thoughts of the ice skating club members.

Slow Progress In Boxing Caused By Eliminations

With the eliminations of contestants for the coming intramural bouts, and nothing definite planned as to the boxing schedule, boxing is progressing slowly, Coach Jim Jensen announced.

"I am doing all I can to get to every boy who's out for boxing, but there are so many, that I can't talk personally to all of them as I would like to," Jensen said. There are only 10 to 15 in the police training classes on Monday and Wednesday at 1 o'clock, but in the regular boxing classes on Mondays and Wednesdays at 2 o'clock there are between 40 to 50.

The boxers are rounding into better shape with each practice session, and by the time the intramurals roll around, they should be in the pink of condition.

"An extensive training period must be taken by every fighter planning to enter the coming intramural bouts, and no one will be allowed to participate if he has not been training for a certain length of time.

Mayer Gives Bowling Team Demonstration At Meeting

Members of the Women's Athletic Association bowling team were given a demonstration by Ora Mayer, 1935 All-Events Champion of the American Bowling Congress, last Wednesday at the regular meeting of the club, Gracine Lowe, bowling club manager, revealed last week.

"Because many of the club members are beginners, Mayer demonstrated foot positions, approach, and correct form for bowlers," Miss Lowe pointed out, "and following these instructions he threw some trick balls. One trick he used was crossing his arms and throwing two balls in such a way that they crossed midway down the alley and knocked down the two side pins."

Mayer is considered one of the top flight pinmen in America today, Miss Lowe said, and scored 2,022, the third highest mark established at the American Bowling Congress in 1935.

Since the 1935 ABC Congress, Mayer, who is a veteran and well-known bowler in San Francisco pin circles, has been bowling in and around his home area, occasionally taking time to enter competition.

Close Contest Expected As Much Improved Ram Gridders Face Modesto's "T" Formation Tonight

With confidence restored by the work shown against Stockton Junior College last Friday, Coach Lee Eisan takes his Ram gridders south today to face the Buccaneers from Modesto Junior College in a game which has all the earmarks of another close tussle. Kickoff time is slated for 8 p.m.

The college eleven will be out for its first win since the 7 to 6 defeat of San Francisco State College at the beginning of the season, and, according to Eisan, the chances are a little better than even. The Rams showed a definite up-rise against the Tiger Cubs and Eisan believes that they will reach their peak in tonight's contest.

With two touchdowns called back and two more thrown away, the Stockton fray should easily have been the Ram's, and, should spirit and determination have any semblance on tonight's game, they are going out to avenge against the Modesto Pirates.

Close Game Promised

If comparison scores have anything to do with the outcome of the game, it promises to be a nip-and-tuck affair. San Mateo Junior College trounced the Gators from State, 26 to 0, while the college just managed to eke out a 7 to 6 win, which shows that San Mateo was three touchdowns better against the Ram rivals than were the Rams.

San Mateo, however, defeated Modesto by two touchdowns and a field goal, 17 to 0, and, although the past has shown that comparing scores has no bearing at all on a football game, in which anything can happen, it merely points out that the game will be close and that both teams are evenly matched.

Pirate Line Big

Comparing last week's play with the previous games, Eisan said, "We were a much improved team than when we played Los Angeles City College and the California Freshmen, but there is still room for improvement. Our kicking was good, our pass defense better, but our blocking was still off. When there's a hole in the line, the secondary isn't taken out, and when the secondary is taken out, there's no hole in the line. We'll have to start putting things together," he continued, "and the line has to get in and block harder.

Our season ends in the middle of November, which leaves us with about 14 practices left, and the players will have to come through with some sensational plays. As yet we haven't made an exceptionally long run or completed a difficult pass. Things like that count and you can't win games without them."

Modesto boasts a big, heavy, and powerful line with three exceptional backfield men behind it. Coach Fred Earle employs the modern T formation in his Modesto's attack, with quarterback Lou Bronzan and left half Ed Johnson operating with plenty of speed and deception. At fullback is hard-hitting Chuck Coker, who is said to have terrific power down the middle.

Squad Improves

Many of the Rams came through with brilliant performances against Stockton and plan to do the same against the Modesto outfit. Especially noticeable was the work of the team as a unit. They appeared organized for the first time since the beginning of the season.

Pat Castellano, playing his first game since returning to college, was a stone wall backing up the line and showed some fine blocking on offense. Art Ekdall came to light as a

Bronzan Leads Pirate Offense

Highly publicized by the Stanford University Indians, Pacific Coast and Rose Bowl champions, and the Chicago Bears, champion professional eleven, the "T" formation will be the form of attack planned by the Modesto Junior College squad tonight.

. . . Key man in the Pirate offense is Lou Bronzan, quarterback, who will call signals plus all the faking, which is vitally important in making the famous "T" work to perfection.

. . . The Modesto squad will wear royal blue and white uniforms. Jerseys will be blue in front and white in the back. Sleeves will be blue with three white stripes on the upper fore-arm. The moleskins will also be blue, and the headgears white.

. . . . Returning to the Modesto eleven within the last two weeks, Chuck Coker, rugged 210-pound fullback, and the squad's chief kicker, flirted with offers from Southern California, but found none of them to his satisfaction.

. . . One of the strongest positions on the Ram squad is at the end positions, with Ed Cassidy, performing notably with punt coverage, Jim McGowan, playing great defensive ball, and Bob Jones, the surprise package, who developed fast, enabling him to start in the game with Stockton last week.

. . . Fruitlessly attempting sharp reverse plays since the State game, the backfield has been hampered by the inability of the line to hold. Only an improved passing attack in the Stockton game kept the Rams a menace during the game.

. . . Backing up the line in true fashion was Pat Castellano and Dutch Danielson, Castellano particularly on running plays and Danielson on passes. With Don Reese not making the trip and Red Giavla out with an injured toe, Danielson remained in the game the entire distance.

. . . Frank Molina, the Pleasanton flash, tried desperately to catch a touchdown pass thrown by Turk Terzian, but running at high speed and trying to outrun the secondary, Molina had the ball momentarily, with the pigskin dropping harmlessly in the end zone the last minute.

Soccer Team Underdog Against San Francisco U.

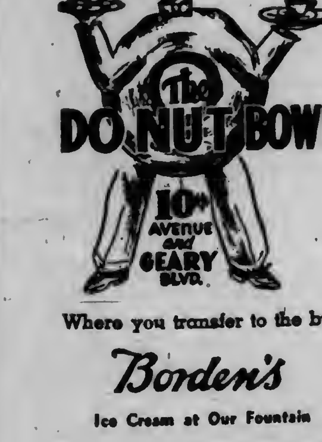
When the college soccer team meets an undefeated University of San Francisco squad tomorrow on the Ram field at 10 a. m., it will be a decided underdog.

The Dons have come along extremely well in practice sessions this season, and last week held a highly touted Stanford group to a scoreless tie. This tie greatly increased the Don stock and marked it as a team to beat, for the Indians are rated as having one of the finest aggregations on the Coast.

On the other hand, the Rams have proved, thus far, to be no pushovers. They rolled over a fine California Aggie squad, 2-0, two weeks ago, and were extremely stubborn in yielding a 5-0 game to the Golden Bears of the University of California last week.

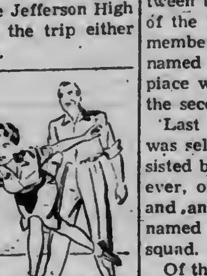
This last game was much closer than the score indicates. All of the Bear points were garnered in the opening quarter. At this point the Rams tightened their defenses, and played excellent ball to hold California scoreless the rest of the way.

The Ram coach, Jim Jensen, is very well pleased with the way his charges are shaping up. Although he does not predict that the boys will finish the season without dropping another contest, he is confident that a good season is in store for the college team.



Water Polo Prospects Brighten Ram Hopes

With a schedule finally being worked out for the college's new sport, water polo, the outlook for the squad is bright, Coach Allan Elsan announced this week.



The water polo manager, Don Rush, has written to many colleges, but only two teams have answered, those being a double-header with the Olympic Club Reserves on Wednesday, October 22, and Friday, October 24. The other game is with the Stanford Freshmen on Monday, October 27.

"The University of California might take on the college splashers sometime in the future, but the date, time, and place is not definite," Don Rush said.

The members of the team have been practicing with the advanced swimming class at the Jefferson High School pool, making the trip either by automobile or bus.

Honor Society's Student Coaching Aid Plan Spreads

San Jose State College To Put System In Effect

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Any student of the college who finds certain subjects too difficult for his understanding is to have the advantage of special coaching under the guidance of Alpha Gamma Sigma, college scholastic society, according to Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser to the group.

The service was inaugurated at the college last semester, but did not attain the full support of the students and had a hard time surviving. The society, however, feels that it is a worthy service and has given much aid to students in the past, consequently, it has taken up the practice again this semester.

No Charge For Coaching

Coaching is conducted entirely without charge and includes most of the courses in the college curriculum. Some of those subjects included last semester where Latin, German, English, Spanish, chemistry, physics, botany, astronomy, sociology, and mathematics.

Coaching has already begun this semester, but coaches and students needing aid may still sign up. Room 187 is open all day for sign-ups. Students and coaches are requested to leave their names, telephone numbers and the subjects in which they are interested. Membership in the society is not required for the coaches.

Social Reception Next Wednesday

All regular and temporary members of Alpha Gamma Sigma will be honored at a social reception in the college cafeteria next Wednesday, between 4 and 5 p. m.

Miss Cooper also announced that all regular members of the society will be able to order their Alpha Gamma Sigma pins until October 22 at the bank. A small deposit is required for such an order.

Officers for the present semester were elected at the business meeting of the group last week. The newly elected president is Lee Harmon; Bernice Strube, vice-president; Clifford Bauer, treasurer; and Barbara Stahmann, secretary.

Chin Captures Honors In Poetry Contest

Wilson Chin, college student, was the only local winning entrant in the recent poetry contest conducted by the Scribblers Club of Santa Monica Junior College, Alice G. Cooper, English instructor, said this week.

Chin's contribution was a short poem entitled "Courage" and was published in the book, "First The Blade," sponsored by the organization of the Intercollegiate Fellowship of Creative Arts, established 14 years ago.

The contest, conducted every summer, is open to all undergraduates in California colleges or junior colleges, and is conducted only in the State of California.

Poems were judged on various themes such as patriotism, humor, religion, and nature. The best poem contributed from nearly 700 entries was judged to be "The Miracle of Dunkirk" by Margaret E. Yale of the Santa Monica Rotary Club and received first place.

fine pass catcher, taking two of "Turk" Terzian's tosses for 21 and 25 yards, as well as blocking with more efficiency. Coach Elsan was pleased with the fine kicking of Temple Davies, who has established himself as one of the best punters in the junior college loop. As usual, Terzian, Bob Hoffman, and Bob Hufnagle played a good, all-around game.

Rams Favored

Concerning the game at Modesto, Elsan said, "We haven't seen Modesto play but from their record they don't look as strong as they usually are. We'll try to break into the win column for a change, and I think we might come through."

Which, coming from Elsan, means that the Rams are probably set to score a couple of touchdowns.

The following are the probable starting lineups:

Rams	Position	Buccaneers
McGowan	LER	Bailey
Souza	LTR	Dauben
Brown	LGR	Menlinga
Danielson	C	Daggs
Hufnagle	RGL	Anooshian
Hoffman	RTL	Brush
Jones	REL	Ghelotte
Terzian	Q	Bronzan
Urbano	LHR	McLaughlin
Ekdall	RHL	Johnson
Castellano	F	Coker

Forum Club Discusses Poetry This Evening

Discussion of student written poetry will be the principal business confronting members of the Forum Club at their meeting held this evening at the home of Dorothy Mercer, faculty adviser of the group.

"It is planned to submit student contributions, as well as material by well known poets, unsigned, for the members' and authors' comment. Should any student contributions be judged worthy, they will be held and published in the Forum Magazine next semester," Miss Mercer said.

Contributions which have not been turned into Miss Mercer by tonight's meeting may be turned in at the meeting which is slated to begin at Miss Mercer's home, 2251 Jackson Street, at 8 p. m.

Frederick Bracher, John Gerstung, William Goss are the other faculty advisers to the Forum group and Forum Magazine. Late poetry contributions may also be turned in to them.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 121, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Astronomy Club . . . Students interested in astronomy are invited to attend the meeting of the Astronomy Club held every Monday evening in the college conservatory at 7:30 p. m.

● Home Economics Association . . . A tea will be given at the home of Claire Cuneo, faculty adviser, Thursday, October 23, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Members are asked to sign up before October 22 in Room 158 or 108.

● Newman Club . . . Communion and breakfast to be held Sunday, October 19. Mass will be at St. Mary's Cathedral, 9:30 a. m. Breakfast at the Hotel Whitcomb—75 cents. Consult club bulletin boards or any member for further details. The regular meeting will be held at Sacred Heart, Monday night, October 20.

● Omicron Phi Pi . . . The Effect of Neutrality Upon Our Entrance Into the Present Conflict has been announced as the central discussion topic for the next meeting of Omicron Phi Pi, economics honor society, on Tuesday, October 28, by Michael Zarchin, adviser to the group.

tain's quarters which read: This ship is the property of the United States. More than this there wasn't even a United States crew on the boat.

Following the sinking the survivors were taken to an English Army camp in Iceland and thence to New York by the U. S. Navy, which certainly gets around nowadays.

This means that a loud wail was put up by some Americans because a Norwegian ship, armed and traveling in a British convoy, and being operated by a non-American crew, was sunk in the course of the war.

From now on the loyal opposition need only point to one incident and their opposition should hang its head in shame.

Aptitude Tests To Determine Job Selection

Students will be chosen for Christmas work basically on results of aptitude tests prepared especially for the occasion, Joseph A. Amori, college employment director, revealed today.

The exact content of these tests has not yet been compiled, Amori said, but they will be of both a mechanical and intellectual nature.

Tests Ascertain Talent

The object of the tests is to ascertain in just what field the individual student is more fitted to work. Applicants for Christmas work are not required to be experienced or have a great knowledge of any particular trade or profession, Amori explained, so the tests will be brief, and cover only general subjects.

Collaborating with Amori in the preparation of these tests, is Harold Leuenberger, director of the college bureau.

Radical Departure From Past

This radical departure from past practices was, Amori continued, upon the suggestions of a group of employers who hire the bulk of holiday workers. In the past men and women have been placed in occupations wholly unsuitable to their natural abilities, and have had trouble in holding their positions.

All applications for Christmas work must be handed in this week if possible. This is important as employers all require a preliminary training period for which they pay regular wages and conduct at the students' convenience.

In applying for work of this type, Amori added, all students should state their preference, and an effort will be made to place them in this sort of position.

Library Has Valuable Map Collection

One of the largest and most complete collections of maps belonging to junior colleges is available at the college library, according to Marcus Skarstedt, librarian.

Among the hundreds of maps are many of European make which cannot be replaced at any price. These have been manufactured by Justus Perthes, a noted mapmaker at Gotha, Germany. Considering present world conditions most of the maps are up-to-date.

Maps in the collection range in size from small maps to wall maps seven or eight feet long. All have been carefully chosen and most of them are backed with linen and mounted on sticks to preserve them and facilitate their use in geography, history and political science classes.

The library staff is now engaged in cataloging and classifying maps to make them more useful to the college.

More Students Wanted To Plan November Mixer

Plans are underway for the next mixer dance, to be held sometime in November, Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman, said this week.

More students to work on a dance committee are wanted by Miss Niemeyer to assist her regular committee. About 15 or 20 members from each class are needed. Students interested should report to the Associated Students' office in Room 169, Miss Niemeyer said.

Student Opinion Surveys

AUSTIN, TEXAS—Regarding the war, campus opinion is again today shown on the pessimistic side.

Step by step, we hear every day, the United States is getting closer to war. The nation's youth, many of whom are already in the service of the country, look on apprehensively. College men mark time in the classroom, awaiting their future call to the draft army. Bull session topic number-one is this: "Will we have to fight Germany again? When?"

But modern war has taken a new twist. Few countries have officially "declared war" recently. Others, and especially the United States, appear to be fighting economically and diplomatically without the actual shooting of guns.

Does college opinion hold that our aid to Britain and other democracies, our attitude toward Germany, in effect constitutes "war"? To bring campus thought into focus on a nationwide basis Student Opinion Surveys of America presented this question to a sampling of the enrollment: "Would you say that the United States is in effect already at war with Germany?"

The result:

YES said	76 per cent
NO said	24 per cent

(Only 1.3 per cent said they had no opinion on this issue.)

Three-quarters is a heavy majority and leaves no doubt as to the tenor of student opinion regarding our current part in the European conflict. This is not to say, however, that American students want to go to war. In numerous polls Student Opinion Surveys has found college youth favors doing all we can to stay out. A few months ago a majority disagreed with the general public (Gallup poll) in saying that it is more important to try to keep out of war than to help England, at the risk of being involved.

But this latest survey again brings out the rather pessimistic attitude expressed last month: that a slight majority believe the U. S. will eventually have to fight.

Sectionally, opinion on whether we are in effect already at war with Germany divided quite uniformly:

	Yes	No
New England	78%	22%
Middle Atlantic	68	32
East Central	81	19
West Central	85	15
Southern	77	23
Far West	72	28

Paint Technology

Lecture Series To Start Next Monday Evening

Beginning Monday evening, October 20, at 8 p.m., a series of free lectures on the important phases of the paint industry will be given here at the college in honor of the employees of the paint industry of the bay area.

The first meeting will feature two lectures, The Romance of Paints, by W. P. Fuller Brawner, production manager of the W. P. Fuller Company, and History of the Paint Industry by Hal R. Harlan, instructor of paint technology here at the college.

Other lectures have been planned at two-week intervals throughout the winter months.

A get-acquainted dinner will be served in the college cafeteria at 6 p. m. for those who wish to attend. Price will be 75 cents. A short tour of the college building will be another feature of the evening.

Lectures Arrow will discuss such subjects as war, substitutes and the industry, new synthetic resins and their uses, and solvents and thinners.

Selections For Men's Chorus Close This Week

Since this will be the final week in which applications for the men's chorus will be accepted, students interested were urged by Charles McKiernan, director of the group, to enroll immediately.

Voices of tenor range are urgently needed but all candidates are welcome. Late registrants will be expected to work independently to cover the material already in production.

Applicants should attend the class meeting in Room 200 Tuesday and Thursday at 12 o'clock, or see McKiernan in Room 249 Monday, Wednesday, or Friday at 2 o'clock.

Appeal To Judiciary May Regain Student Card

Students who have had their Associated Student cards confiscated for any reason whatsoever and who declare them back should appeal to the Judiciary Committee in the Associated Students' office, Charlie Howe, chairman of the committee, announced today.

"Cards are still being taken at dances and football games. For your own safety don't lend your cards out," Howe warned.

College Pilot Training Courses Prepare Students For Flight Instruction Jobs

"There is a tremendous demand for army flight instructors at the present time, and the four courses which the college offers in that field gradually lead to that post," Major George D. Richards, instructor of Civil Pilot Training at the college, said Monday.

"Four courses comprise the complete year and three months necessary to receive an instructor's rating and a commercial pilot's license," Richards continued. "The primary course consists of 35 to 40 hours of flying in light planes in which the trainee is taught elementary maneuvering and the civil air regulations; this course leads to a private pilot's license.

"The secondary course teaches acrobatics and navigation, the latter of which is being taught at the present time," continued Richards.

The third course included the cross-country course. Pilots are taught radio navigation for use in cross-country flying.

"The commercial refresher course, which is the last one, gives the trainee his commercial pilot's license and makes him eligible to be an army instructor," Richards explained.

University of Minnesota students are heavier, healthier and taller than they were a decade ago, but they have 10 per cent more tooth decay.

Vol. XIII TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1941 No. 12

By Francis Chrisman

SOMETHING has to be done! It's a pretty kettle of fish all right, and something just has to be done. The great trouble in this war is that one side is being held back by tradition. And you know what side, too.

Now, when the bother is some petty, out of the way war—like, say the Boar War in Africa—or a minor fracas such as the revolt of about 13 of a couple of dozen colonies, well, tradition can hold its own. Tea and crumpets may continue as they have for decades past and nobody will even care.

THE REAL THING—NOW!

But those aforementioned incidents were only two-reelers of the back yard or strictly personal variety. This little masterpiece now in production is a full-fledged double feature with all the bank night and bingo trimmings. And the audience is composed of other than members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The whole concept changes when the fighting neighbors begin fighting on your front steps. Especially if the rougher of the two antagonists happens to break a few of your windows with his poorly aimed missiles. Yes, it's a pretty kettle of fish. The fish are fighting and our handsome parlor composes a part of the kettle.

It isn't even a neighborhood battle. The boys from the next block have joined up with the aggressor and promise to take on the meek spectator as soon as they kayo their present opponent.

A COMPLEX AND A RETURN

But what the boys from up the next block don't know is that the meek spectator has a Joe Palooka complex. And that complex is about to assert itself in definite proportions. But that's drifting away from the subject of tradition. (And our English instructor, bless her heart, tells us to stick to the same old stuff until you come to the gory end.)

The first tradition to be met and conquered before any victory may be anticipated is that of who is to do the fighting. Heretofore there were always a few hundred thousand vagabonds willing to risk their neck for the royal British Crown.

A communique several months ago stated that the Aussies were defending their position as gallantly as had their fathers before them. That has to stop. It's only a case of the employer pitching in with the employee. No. 2—TEA AND CRUMPETS

The second tradition to rear its ugly head in this contest is the previously mentioned tea and crumpets belief. It is better known in America as the pause that refreshes. The only trouble here is that somebody is going to be blown out of his boots if he doesn't stop refreshing and get down to actual and necessary business.

Number three on this unprecedented list is the anti-blood, sand and tears outlook. To speak of it as a call for rationalism would be apt. When Mr. Churchill rose up on his haunches and howled to the English Parliament that drivel about blood, sand and tears he was appealing to the irrational sentiments of too many Englishmen. It would have been more truthful to have said that he was offering them nothing but pay, pay, and pay.

But Mr. Churchill is a born orator (for which congratulations) and the people are subject to Mr. Barnum's quip. So then, there must be a drastic change in this department.

PAY AND PAY—WHO?

Closely allighned with the previous call of pay, pay, pay is that of who, who, who. This is another tradition. The Englishman pays and reaps the rewards—the trusting friend also pays and gets not even the promise of a reward. (To say nothing of repayment.)

Now that we've arranged for the other aged holdovers let's get to work on this last one. This is the easiest one yet. All we have to do is to extract a promise of war aims and of anticipated future adjustments. Of course it's like trying to get apple cider from a lemon but with all these modern inventions it can be done.

That's about all of the important troubles. We've got a war to win. Let's not allow our accepted and eternal allies to dilly-dally all over the field while somebody else runs down the sidelines for a score.

If we cut out all this foolishness we can get the old flying wedge into working order and come up with a win. It happened exactly like that in 1918. Let's save the tea and pink ribbons for the victory parade.

Registrar

Students Meet Advisers Today At 11 O'clock

All students will meet their advisers in rooms specified at 11 a.m. today, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. Purpose of the meeting is twofold—to allow arrangement of hours for consultation between student and advisers where necessary, and to distribute notices of deficiencies where they may have been incurred.

Classes scheduled for that hour, Miss Learnard said, will not be held, for it is imperative that there be full attendance at the student-adviser meetings.

Friday, October 24, Miss Learnard warned, is the last day that students may withdraw from a course without penalty. Beyond that time, any student exceeding his number of absences or failing to take out a properly signed leave of absence will automatically receive a grade of F.

Drop slips, which must contain both instructor's and adviser's signatures, are available in the registrar's office, but Miss Learnard emphasized the fact that they must be turned in to that office by 5 p.m. next Friday.

Semi Formal Friday At Veterans

Scheduled for this Friday evening in the auditorium of the War Memorial Veterans Building, the high freshman dance will feature the music of George Cavelli and his orchestra, Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman, announced today.

Highlight of the evening will be the presentation of Neville Smith, Eloise Windfelt, and George Allan, high freshman officers.

Admission to the dance will be one Associated Student card per couple. An identification committee will be on hand to inspect all cards, Miss Niemeyer warned.

The dance is to be semi-formal and the social committee stressed the point that no corsages should be worn.

Miss Windfelt, class vice-president, expressed the hope that even though the high freshman dance was open to the entire Associated Students, the members of the high frosh class would do all within their power to make the affair a success.

Coart Restates His Belief In Queen Plan

In reply to the editorial in Friday's Guardsman, George Coart issued the following statement:

"Every man is considered innocent until proved guilty, yet certain members of this campus continue to condemn me and my system for choosing the sophomore sweetheart before I have been given the chance to prove its worth. I have complete confidence that the plan will be a great success, and may even be used in future semesters."

The seven men who will make up the committee responsible for finding the contestants, have been chosen, but their identification will be kept a secret until all application cards have been distributed.

"I vouch for the fairness and honesty of each of these men," Coart said, "I know they will carry out their duties honestly and effectively."

When questioned about the election of a rival King by members of the freshman class, Coart stated: "If the students of the campus approve of the plan, and cooperate in the choosing of the King, I will be only too glad to give Bing Kirk, freshman president, all the help I can."

In conclusion, Coart said, "I only hope that I can continue to carry out my original plans. I never dreamed that it would cause so much discussion. I believe the plan will work and that as long as I remain sophomore president I will do all in my power to make sure that the plan goes through, and that the sophomore sweetheart is picked fairly."

Wider Scholarship Interest Is Goal

To sponsor a wider interest in scholarship, and to increase interest in academic activity will be the main goal of scholastic council this semester, according to Dick Manning, president.

Manning is to be assisted in his duties by Jean Spencer and Marshall Hyde, and Alice Cooper will continue as faculty adviser.

To date a meeting has not been held, but Manning assured that this semester the scholastic council's schedule will be a busy one. Details of the first meeting and future plans will be announced at a later date.

Any students having suggestions for furthering the interest in scholastic activities on the campus, should submit them, and their suggestions and ideas will be gratefully appreciated, Manning said.

Highlight of the council's schedule for the semester will be the selection of the student most deserving of the perpetual scholastic trophy which is awarded each year to the outstanding graduate.

Only graduating students, taking university parallel and carrying not less than fourteen and a half units are eligible.

The applicant must be a member of the Associated Students.

Mary Frances Malone, Associated Students' president for the Spring 1941 semester received the first trophy.

Six Pilot Trainees Complete Solo Flights

Six students who are taking part in Civil Pilot Training have completed their solo flights at Belmont, Major George D. Richards announced recently.

These students are Dave Bridges, Ted Condo, Dick Carpenter, Robert Jurs, Stanley Ward and Dave Wilson. The future pilots took these flights in 220-horsepower Waco open cockpit biplanes.

One Hour Rally Friday; Classes May Be Dismissed

To get up pre-game spirit for the college's gridiron battle with Sacramento, there will be a one-hour rally at noon Friday, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, announced this week.

Official word of dismissal of classes for the rally was not forthcoming Friday because neither the program nor the rally schedules has as yet been submitted for clearance through the registrar's office.

The rally will include songs by Frank Isola, Pat Brand and Eloise Windfelt, former sophomore sweetheart. Other entertainment is still being planned, and this rally will probably be the best one of the semester, Mohorovich added.

Five Dollars Between Guardsman Staff And Million Dollar Lady

By Ed Lopez

Fate dealt the male members of The Guardsman staff a cruel blow late last week, and many a reporter today is tearing his hair and reaching his brain in vain for a solution to the situation.

Vicki Lang, songstress with George Cavelli's orchestra (slated to play at the high frosh dance this Friday) is the cause celebre.

It seems that a circular, containing background about Cavelli and his orchestra, and also containing a very, very attractive photograph of Miss Lang was sent to The Guardsman.

Members of the staff were elated over Miss Lang, and were looking forward to her appearance at the dance.

"Just her being there," quirped one scribe, "is enough for me. I don't care if she can sing or not."

Things were running smoothly until the high freshman dance committee announced that Miss Lang would not be included with the orchestra, because she costs five dollars extra!

Having already previewed the outstanding attributes of Miss Lang, (that is all except her voice) Guardsman reporters and staff heads were ready to rally to the cause.

But then five dollars is five dollars, and more like five hundred to a newshound, so the proposed fund collapsed before it had begun.

Aesthetism may not be dead, though, at the dance. Contributions to the five dollar goal will be accepted up to tomorrow noon in The Guardsman and Associated Student offices.

Work On Bleachers, Parking Lot Under Way In 30 Days

To Mud And Slush --- Aloha

Stands To Seat 2000 In Gym; Costs $12,000

Construction is slated to begin on bleachers for the men's gymnasium in 30 days, according to an announcement made by Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management.

The bleachers will be constructed in the men's gym only and will seat about 2,000 students, at a cost of about $12,000. They will be of the accordian type, lying flat against the walls when not in use. All four sides of the gymnasium will have sets of the bleachers which can be operated by just one person. The ends will be equipped with sections containing six rows of seats, while the side sections will provide 11 rows of seats.

The resolution has been passed by the Board of Education and has yet to go through the hands of the purchasing department. The construction will have to be started soon, so as to avoid the complications of priorities. The two companies who will submit the bids have at the present time the necessary material to complete the job. These bids will be submitted as soon as the estimates can be made.

It may be noted that the main purpose of the installation of the bleachers is not only to provide a suitable place to hold various games but to provide a place where the Associated Students can hold rallies and assemblies.

Board of Education and college administration officials last week agreed that scenes like this shown above shall not again happen here. They have promised construction of a parking lot to begin within 30 days.

This picture is typical of the parking facilties that have prevailed since the college moved to Balboa Park.

Welfare Committee

Floriculture Group Backs Carnival Day; Full Support To Be Sought

Support of the proposed college carnival day will be sought at next week's meeting of the Club Advisory Board, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the welfare committee.

"We have been assured of the support of the Floriculture Club and a few other societies already," Lindemann said. "At the CAB meeting we will have all the organization leaders together. The carnival day idea will be put before them as a group.

"If they are enthusiastic, carnival day will become a tradition. If not, the idea will be just another good plan that died from lack of support," Lindemann explained.

Idea Unanimously Favored

The entire committee has been unanimously in favor of the idea, according to Lindemann.

"It would be a shame to see carnival day collapse and be forgotten," Bill Postal, college finance chairman and committee member, said. "The committee has spent long hours of really hard work in the formulation of plans for the event."

Costumes, Prizes Promised

Carnival day would be one day set aside for a college festival, according to Lindemann. Students would be expected to wear costumes and prizes would be awarded for the most original costume. Prizes would be obtainable at each booth.

The committee planned to have the talent bureau provide entertainment.

Tradition Hoped For

"Though we naturally expected to make a small profit from carnival day, the main plan is to provide a colorful tradition for the college," Lindemann said.

The committee plans to use either the college cafe or the men's gymnasium as a site for the festivities. This problem will be worked out when and if the committee gets the "go" signal from the college organizations.

AWS Women Hostesses Next Tuesday At High School Tea

Letters are being sent to all members of the Associated Women Students' reception committee for the tea on Tuesday, October 28, according to Betty Fox, president of the group, to remind the women that they have been chosen to act as hostesses for the event sponsored by the AWS for the senior women of local high schools.

Twenty-five seniors from each high school, Lowell, Lincoln, and Washington, will be entertained at this affair, which will be held in Room 158 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. Miss Fox pointed out, and the other schools will be honored later on in the semester.

"Reception committee members," Miss Fox said, "will take two or three of the senior women on a tour of the building, see that they meet some of the college students, and are well taken care of for the afternoon."

Refreshments will be served by the Home Economics Department, added Miss Fox.

Large Roadway With Diagonal Parking Seen

Actual construction of the first part of the college parking lot is expected to begin in about 30 days, President Archibald J. Cloud said last week.

A committee, including President Cloud, John F. Brady, Chief Deputy Superintendent; Richard Doyle, Commissioner of the Board of Education; Harry H. Hansen, Superintendent of Building and Grounds, and Dodge Steedy, City Architect, met last Wednesday to plan the construction and the probable cost of construction. The cost was impossible to determine because the limits of construction that will be undertaken are at present unknown.

Completion Promised Before Rains

The parking area will probably be finished by the beginning of the rainy season. The entrance will be concentrated from the South end of the horse-shoe drive in front of the college. This new development will be paved throughout and will provide a parking place for both instructors and students.

The announcement of the start of plans to begin construction on the new development has brought to conclusion the demands of students who, in the past, have found the present parking system a sea of mud in rainy weather.

Diagonal parking strips are expected to be marked off on this paved roadbed, Lindemann, chairman of the Student Welfare Committee, said. This should relieve the parking problem along Phelan Avenue, if not totally eliminate it, he believes.

Welfare Group Aided

The Welfare Committee has been steadily behind the movement of a parking lot for college car owners, and recently has concentrated its efforts along that line.

Arterial foot paths will lead from the parking space to the rear court and the ground around Hello Walk will also be repaired with steps to replace some of the grades adjacent to the walk, Lindemann said.

President Cloud is investigating the possibilities of grading the ground surrounding the tennis courts and including the hot houses.

"We will add about 25 acres to the present campus," he said. "Through this purchase we would be in possession of the hot houses behind the gymnasium buildings and the tennis courts," President Cloud pointed out. As we only have one hot house at the present time, more facilities for the floriculture classes are needed, and the purchase of this ground will be sought as soon as possible. The matter must go before the board," he pointed out, "but immediate developments along this line cannot be promised."

Alpha Gamma Sigma To Aid In Carnival Plan

The officers and members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma wish to express their desires to pledge full support to Bob Lindemann and the college carnival.

Plans are already being made and will be acted upon by the members at the next regular meeting, Wednesday, October 22 at 4 p.m.

Lee Harmon,
Alpha Gamma Sigma president

Clubs Must Renew Charters By Next Friday

College organizations whose application for charter renewal are not received by Friday, October 24, will be suspended, following the Club Advisory Board meeting held on that date, Francis Goetz, CAB president, warned last Friday.

Every effort should be made to get club applications this week, Goetz explained, to allow sufficient time for examination by the membership committee.

Apply For Re-Recognition

New clubs and organizations which have previously lost active membership in the club board, must file application, and the latter in order to gain good standing must go through a probational period of two semesters, Goetz said.

Last semester 35 clubs were granted charters by the CAB, and only two were suspended. Suspension is the loss of all recognition and publicity for the group concerned.

List Will Be Published

A complete list of organizations recognized by the CAB will be published at a later date.

This semester the CAB will attempt a more active schedule of events than in previous terms, Goetz said. At present there are plans for a dance for the members of the Associated Students. In this way we hope to introduce the CAB and its functions to the students.

Linked With Welfare

Other activities of the semester include Lolo Sullivan, president; James McGill, vice-president; Fleeta Alexander, secretary; Stella Miranda, treasurer; Jakie Blair, CAB representative, and Ed Lopez, publicity manager.

The next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, October 22, at 2 o'clock on the front stairs.

Old Fashioned Melodrama Planned By Campus Players

Members of the Campus Players, college dramatic organization, definitely decided at their meeting Wednesday, October 15, to present an old fashioned melodrama, and an olio of the Gay Ninety era.

The presentation will be free of charge and will be given for members of the Associated Students in the near future.

Other activities for the semester include various one-act plays and skits, to be given as entertainment at other organization affairs.

Carol Helbing, member of the drama group, is the author of the melodrama, and other members are now working on the individual acts to be presented in the olio.

Officers of the group include Dolores Sullivan, president; James McGill, vice-president; Fleeta Alexander, secretary; Stella Miranda, treasurer; Jakie Blair, CAB representative, and Ed Lopez, publicity manager.

The next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, October 22, at 2 o'clock on the front stairs.

Parking Lot – Bleachers

Forward Steps

GENERAL appreciation is in order for the actions of the college administration and the Board of Education in solving two of the most immediate problems on the campus. A parking lot to relieve the distressing parking conditions in wet weather and collapsible bleachers in the men's gymnasium to provide opportunities for real student assemblies are the successful results of long periods of study and planning on the part of each of the groups.

The possibility of acquiring bleachers for basketball games and student rallies and assemblies was first announced by The Guardsman in February of this year when President Cloud said that the Board of Education was seriously investigating buying the collapsible grandstands. These bleachers are of a comparatively new type and are in popular vogue at several colleges and junior colleges in California. Complete costs are expected to run about $10,000.

That attendance and spirit at assemblies will rise sharply through these new acquisitions seems virtually assured. An hour or so of standing for a student gathering is not conducive to the best of either spirit or attendance.

No one who has ever attempted to find parking space in the rainy season needs to be convinced of the efficacy or worth of a parking lot. Present plans place its site in the area of the south hill. The board has advised the college that the lot will be ready for use before the rainy season sets in. By that, we assume completion by the latter part of December.

In March of this year, The Guardsman devoted a front page to an editorial exposition of the intolerable parking facilities in wet weather. Highly descriptive pictures showed that after jam-parked Phelan Avenue, the only parking recourses of drivers were the veritable mud pits on either side of the science building. Copies of this issue were specially mailed to Board of Education members.

Commissioner Richard E. Doyle of the board was conducted on an inspection tour of the physical properties of the campus by President Cloud Tuesday. Commissioner Doyle's visit found expression in the announcement by the board that the two projects were to be launched immediately.

Other campus expansion in the form of additional buildings has come to a halt because of defense priorities on construction material. Plans for other units are and have been ready at the office of Architect Timothy Pflueger. A survey of the national scene would seem to indicate that the ban will not be lifted for some time. New dwellings, for example, may not be constructed in excess of $6,000 in order to conserve precious materials.

Two significant steps of advancement in the history of the college have been realized, though. The college administrative force and the Board of Education merit hearty acclaim from the Associated Students.

Signatures Required

A LETTER in today's Ram's Horn column brings out an important feature concerning missives, or shall we say missiles, to the editor.

The writer is upset because so few letters are signed by the author, rather, such signatures as "Disgusted," "Forlorn," etc. Real names, not pseudonyms are what the writer would have.

It has been the general policy of The Guardsman to print only properly signed letters; however, if the writer so indicates, we have withheld his name and substituted a pseudonym. We feel that this last procedure is valid in many cases.

We are repeating the above policy this semester, so, sign your letters, if you want to see them published.

Editorials and signed contributions in The Guardsman reflect the opinions of the writer; they make no claim to represent official student or college opinion. All unsigned editorials are by the editor.

Shots At ...RAMdom

RADIO brings us the World Series, the fights, and conference football. And perhaps some of you heard that appendix over KSFO last Wednesday night. The surgical scizzors snapped like castinets and the doctor almost crooned:

"Dum de dum, now I'm sliceing into the peritoneum, la de ah de da."

The announcer's tenie, throaty voice came in from the background.

"The doctor leads with a suture to the mesentery and follows with a beautiful blood clamp on the secum. He's feeling the patient out, now."

And then we hear the jovial tones of the interne's hearty theme song. Sung to the tune of the Beer Barrel Polka, it goes, ——

"Roll out the body."

We heard about one case that bled to death during station identification.

HYMIE SPINBAUM runs a shooting gallery down at the beach concessions. Hymie is a pretty good Joe, and we hang around his gallery to hear the latest reports. He has story about a soldier that he swears is true.

The rookie walked like one of the millions who make their living off the good earth. He grudgingly dropped a quarter, picked up a gun, aimed grimly down the barrel and squeezed the trigger.

The .22 went "paff." The little, white duck he was aiming at continued serenely on its way, turning up its tail derisively at the end of the pool. The soldier laid down his gun and walked away. Hymie ran after him to tell him he had 14 more shots coming to him.

"Be a waste of amynition, brother," drawled the soldier, "sordin' to tha rools of the war games, thet's a daid duck."

"GIVE ME

a Scotch coke," requested the student stepping up to the soda fountain in the cafe. He slapped a nickle down on the counter and turned to grin expansively at his little chumbuddy who waited at a table.

"Scotch coke?" we mumbled. "Here? How long's this been going on?"

The student got his Scotch coke. A five-cent one with two straws.

DOWN AT

railroad yards where the binele stiffs congregate to hop the passing freights we saw a sad scene. A ragged bum was sitting in the door of an empty freight car, saying good-bye to his pals. They were throwing confetti and serpentine. One of the hobos was crying quite bitterly on the shoulder of a woman that was his wife.

"Mathilda," he sobbed, "Our little boy is leaving us."

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

Pseudonyms; New Plan Proposed For Soph Contest

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 154. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

● Dignity Threatened?
Editor, The Guardsman:

If correspondents with the editors of "True Summer" and "Love" magazines sign their letters with moving pseudonyms like "Broken-hearted" or "Just a little wall-flower," they have at least the excuse that their pseudonyms are in conformity with the general intellectual level of these magazines.

But I believe that it is entirely beyond the dignity of a college newspaper to have letters to the editor signed with absurdities like "Frustrated," "Exhausted," or "Just a little Freshman," etc.

Besides, a letter contained the best common sense suggestion or criticism, loses very pretense of seriousness, if its author does not show the courage of his convictions by signing with his real name.

Very respectfully yours,
Peter Mark.

● Court's Plan Opposed
Editor, The Guardsman:

Before I speak, I would like to apologize humbly to Mr. George Coert because I am going to oppose his plan for the Sophomore Sweetheart election. I greatly regret to say that his plans will be rather unfair for reasons stated in a former issue of The Guardsman, especially on the point that the choice of the candidate will not be from the opinions or tastes of the student body as a whole but of seven specific men which may not truly represent the students.

Upon these grounds, I would like to offer some suggestions which, of course, will not be perfect, nor will it be agreeable to everyone, but its acceptance or refusal may be decided upon by the student body.

The plan is as follows: Any woman desiring to be a candidate shall apply for a petition. These petitions should be signed by a required number of students and returned to the office before a certain date. The general election may then be based upon these petitions.

From the point of view of the student, these women will not appear to be conceited or "stuck on themselves" as Mr. Coart stated, but they will be loved all the more for their initiative and school spirit. Any woman who is not aggressive enough to apply for a petition could not be expected to reign as Sophomore Sweetheart efficiently, therefore this type of a Sweetheart will be eliminated by the adoption of this plan.

If it is required to limit the number of candidates, take the number of votes received by the two highest candidates.

Your College Presents . . . Cheezit! Da Cops!

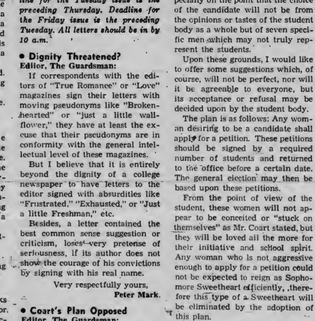
By Ivanna Hayworth

ALTHOUGH the peace officer training course has been in the college curriculum for two years, this semester marks the beginning of quite a number of new courses in this line of work.

One such course, which teaches these students a lot more in the fine art of defending themselves, is Juijitsu.

Students who are enrolled in the gunnery division of the department are at the present time working with pistols. They are given instruction and practice with different firearms and the care and use of these implements are taught.

In criminal investigation, the prospective cops make use of the lie detector, and learn to investigate various types of crimes.



EMPLOYMENT NOT GUARANTEED

Although this course offers no positive guarantee of employment for those who participate in it, there is every possibility that employment can be found in some phase of the peace officers' work, such as, the city police, straight guard duty, defense guards, customs patrol, Federal Bureau of Investigation, deputy sheriffs, and many others. Two students, who were with this group last semester, have been placed in excellent positions. One of them is now in the FBI, and the other is in the Hercules Powder Company as the chief guard.

FEATURING POLICE LAB

One of the latest additions in the technological curriculum of this department is the peace officers' laboratory course with its newly installed, up-to-the-minute laboratory. This is probably the only pre-service police laboratory within a higher institution of learning in the country.

The main feature of this course is to teach potential policemen and criminologists the much-needed technique of microscopic analization in this field.

Pictured above are Benjamine Pavone and some of his students in the classroom where Pavone is giving instruction in unsnarling intersection problems which will confront the prospective "traffic cop."

Examples of work done in the laboratory by trained students is the identification of textile fibers. If fibers taken from the scene of the crime can be identified, the guilt or innocence of the accused may be more easily established. Blood analysis is another important factor in police work. These potential policemen must be able to determine animal and human blood. According to Benjamin Pavone, in enarge of the department, blood, which is bound to appear in crimes, is one of the hardest things to erase.

Molding and casting of footprints is another feature of the course. This is used in every type of crime from house breaking to kidnapping.

One of the most important devices in modern police work is the use of ultra violet ray, this being used to bring out invisible writing of letters and added to this the testing of the validity of documents, bonds, and other important papers. When any paper is held to this light, all erasures or scratches made on it will become readable.

The comparison microscope which is used to establish ownership of guns and tools when these tools are shown.

In the peace officers' practice, actual work on the job is emphasized. These policemen-to-be learn how to patrol a beat effectively and how to act on the beat. How to handle people and situations is also emphasized, and this, it seems, is very important.

REGULATIONS

In addition to regular college entrance regulations, students interested in this course must fulfill the following requirements: sound physical condition, character references, which by the way, means that a clearance of all police records would be required. The other requirements—age, sex and citizenship—means that the enrollment is limited to male citizens of the United States, and the age requirement for police officers in communities where employment will be sought at the end of training at the

LAST week a new fall edition of a fashion magazine featured shoes, and from this came an idea—why not feature them here for once.

Although saddle shoes are just about accepted everywhere as the official shoe for collegiennes, every once in a while college women feel like "celebrating" and wearing a sandal, or pump for dress. Of course, this is acceptable. In fact it is more or less required. For instance, with a new ultra-smart velveteen suit, saddles would be definitely out of place. A pair of black patent strip or opera pumps would add much to the outfit. Sandals are good looking and, incidentally, are supposed to make your ankles look smaller—so if you have or think you have large ankle bones, try a high-heeled sandal. The strap is the reducing agent so any strapped shoe will do the same thing.

Before we get any further into the shoe question comes a grave question. Should or should not a tall woman wear high heels? Many women say no, because they feel that the man feel smaller than the woman, especially if they dance often. But, on the other hand, fashion experts say emphatically "yes," by all means, if you like high heels, wear them. For one reason, they add more to the dignity and sophisticationof a tall woman, a more graceful walk may be acquired with high heels, and a woman, if she is tall, does not look like she is hiding her height when she has on high heels, as she does with lower ones.

NO MORE FLATS

Incidentally, heels, not necessarily French heels, but cuban or medium heels add much more to your walk than "flats" do. In fact, some of the schools in the city now require the women students to wear shoes with a heel, and forbid flats simply because the stride that develops when they are worn constantly.

There seems to be very little discussion on the subject of what footwear to wear to college because most of the students here seem to have solved any problems which may have arisen, and are well shod. Saddles, which have been "in" since 1934, are still the favorite with mocassins, of saddle leather, running close second.

Under the title "shoes for every walk of life" play shoes, seen last summer made of fabric, were featured only this fall made of suede and leather, in all colors—black, brown, red, green and blue. These are decorated solely with bob nails and have the revived wedge heel. The idea is to get several pairs of the same style and wear them throughout the day. For work, or college wear, you wear a black or brown pair, and for dinner or dancing the same style shoe made of a different color, perhaps dyed to match the outfit. Personality, obviously, don't have high heels, so the advocates of low heels for women may wear these, and look very dashing.

saddles still being worn in spite of all the designers who are wearing themselves out trying to design a shoe that will revolutionize collegiennes' shoe wardrobes.

You'll Never Get Rich . . . but the producers may with this film

ONCE upon a time, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers starred in a series of gay, melodic musicals that set box-offices humming and customers wild with pleasure. There were such memorable things as Flying Down To Rio, Carefree, Follow The Fleet, Roberta, and others.

The resultant split between the team of Astaire-Rogers played havoc with the male half in particular although Miss Rogers has not suffered to any degree. Mr. Astaire has, and his last few pictures have fought vainly to recapture that old spell of musical glamour, the old statatic whip of brilliant dance ensembles, the sparkle of flying feet.

LATEST FILM RATES WELL

Astaire's latest, You'll Never Get Rich, in which he co-stars with Rita Hayworth, comes closest to attaining that end of any of his recent screen appearances. It comes close, but only in comparison with his other recent efforts (remember Second Chorus). Astaire has still a long way to go before he can reincarnate that old popularity, that old effortless skill that catapulted him to the top. You'll Never Get Rich may well be the springboard to attain that end.

It's a pleasant, inoffensive little story full of spontaneous humor and clever situations. A tranquil thread of plot nicely combines the elements of music, comedy, and dancing into a unisonant whole. The plot places no excess strain on anyone's mentality; neither will it inspire with its sublimation of theme.

It is safe to call You'll Never Get Rich a breather in the midst of some heavy drama of ebullient force that has captured the screen of late; it's a very attractive "breather."

SMALL BUDGET EVIDENT

The film, despite its imposing cast, was evidently produced on a low budget. There is a noticeable lack of large sets and dance props usually synonymous with Astaire musicals. Comic values and ingratiating performances by the principals help surmount this difficulty, however.

Astaire has good material with which to re-develop his old personality, and takes advantage of every situation. Astaire portrays a Broadway stage director working under the producer-ship of Robert Benchley. Benchley is quite a ladies-man, much to his wife's distraction. He purchases a bracelet for his current favorite, Rita Hayworth, one of the chorus dancers. When wife subsequently learns of the bracelet, Benchley desperately alibies Astaire into ownership of the bracelet and the presenter of the gift to Rita. Thus Astaire innocently becomes involved with Rita and her fiance, John Hubbard.

When the draft catches Astaire, who should be his immediate superior but rival John. And then Benchley, in order to utilize the services of his drafted star-manager, transports the entire company to camp for a soldier's performance. Complications follow thick and fast.

NICE WORK BY CAST

Naturally light and frothy in vein, the film holds together nicely, thanks to deft manipulation by cast and director Sidney Lanfield. Astaire has the musical side of the program fails to help much with the exception of Astaire's new tap routines which are on the sensational side. Cole Porter's songs have had an off-day with this musical score. Only one of his six numbers rates particular mention, this being So Near And Yet So Far, sung in Astaire's quavering treble.

Miss Hayworth, Benchley, and Hubbard are ably in the other leading roles with Rita displaying some elegant terpsichorean steps. But it's Astaire's show all the way with able support from double-talk Cliff Nazarro.

You'll Never Get Rich won't win any awards, but it stands as satisfactory, light entertainment.

Cabbages & Kings

DON'T be disillusioned to the effect that that activity in the field at the front of the building is the foundation for a football stadium. In reality, it is nothing but the foundation for a storehouse to be used by the Public Utilities Commission. Wonder what the motorcycle fiends are going to do when they find their favorite rumpus ground gone?

• • • •

It looks as if the national defense effort has taken a toll on the cabbage field on Phelan Avenue. Last semester, the field was plowed faithfully nearly every day. Now it seems to have been left to shift for itself. Perhaps some Cincinnatus will return to the plow and keep the cabbages sprouting.

More on etiquette: One student, who gave up his seat on the bus for the first time in his life, complained that on the day of his magnanimous deed, his generosity was overshadowed. He gave in detail the account of how he got on the bus and took his seat. An old lady got on the bus and stood right beside him. He kept seated for three blocks until staring eyes pried him from his seat. He stood up and offered the old lady his seat with an articulate gesture, when some sweet, young, conceited thing flopped right into the place with a "Tanks, kid."

The college seems to be taking on an international aspect. Last Tuesday three students of the college spoke at the Olympic Club's Breakfast Club. A novel thing about the matter, is that all three of them came from three corners of the earth. Victor di Suvero from China; Henry Silversmith, from Germany; and John Higgen, an American, born in Mexico. They each gave a 10-minute talk (at 7:45 in the morning, brrrrr) on the aspects of junior college educations.

If seems that students are not the only parking offenders. The other day, one of the instructors had her car serviced. The garage mechanic drove the car up on the incline at the south side of the building and left it there. Dean Browne, seeing the car there, ordered it tagged. The instructor heard of the fate that awaited and went on a mad dash to reach the car before the police arrived to tag it. Yes, the police lost the race.

RAMblings

College Shinkickers Lose; Rams Reverse Function

By Bill Cothran

NOT TOO LUCKY

One of the most disheartening methods of losing any athletic contest is to drop a close, well-contested game through the medium of a sensational play. What then, of the college soccer team when they were defeated by the University of California varsity by the score of 5 to 0? Four of the five digits were amassed in the opening quarter, and the fifth score was gained soon after the beginning of the second period of play. Out of the five markers, four were booted in from approximately 30 yards out. For the benefit of the uninitiated (who make up a large majority of any typical collegiate gathering), a 30-yard goal in soccer is comparable to an 85-yard breakaway in football, or, in other words, one of those "one a season" plays. Expected, under average circumstances, to react in a negative manner, the Ram soccermen have responded in an encouraging way, by coming up full of the old vim and vigor, which makes for victory.

BACKFIELD GYRATIONS

At the beginning of this here football season, the Ram gridders, who work under the supervision of Head Coach Lee Eisan, were unable to make a reverse click. Timing was way off in the backfield, and the line was not providing adequate protection. In the game against Stockton the reverses began to bud; and in last week's scrimmage against the Treasure Island Naval Base team, these self-same reverses blossomed forth into potency. Yards, and not a few, were consistently knocked off on reverse plays which were so well screened that at times it was virtually an impossibility to tell which back was carrying the ball. Definite improvement was also forthcoming in the kicking department—namely, pass defense. Although a great number of passes were completed against them, the receivers were being downed for short gains—if any. At one spot in the scrimmage, which was a rugged affair, Billy Wada, diminutive tail back, picked a Treasure Island pass out of the ozone and carried it back 55 yards to ring up a hypothetical six-point tally.

HILL AND DALE

Come October 31, during the half-time intermission of the college football game against Salinas, from 20 to 30 practice-hardened runners will toe their marks and take off over a four-and-one-half mile intramural cross-country course. Approximately 25 minutes later, most of these men will begin crossing the finish line. A few will develop cramps, or other physical disabilities, during the course of the race. A few more, in all probability, will simply find the going too tough for them. Here is one sport where not only physical condition and stamina is put to a stiff test, but also where the winner, and all of the other runners, must possess a goodly quota of good, old-fashioned guts—mere intestinal fortitude will not suffice.

Fall Track

Cross Country Practice Starts; Varied Diet Plays Strict Role

By Nick Barbarotto

Beginning last Monday and continuing for another two weeks, the fall trackmen have discarded their track spikes and donned tennis shoes in order to practice for the four and one-half mile cross-country run, according to Coach Russ Sweet.

The intramural cross-country will take place between halves of the Ram-Salinas Junior College football game, which will be played on the college football field October 31. Sweet expects some 20 or 30 men to enter next month, compared to the eight or ten that entered last semester.

"The race will start on the track," Sweet explained, "and continue up and down the campus hills for four and one-half miles and end back on the track."

The men should be in top condition for the event, especially if they have been following the diet that is posted daily on the back of the men's gymnasium. Coach Sweet hasn't forgotten a thing, the diet applying to the tall and thin, short and fat, as well as the tall and fat or the short and thin.

The diet on the gymnasium bulletin board calls for four parts carbohydrates to every one part of fat, for the simple reason that carbohydrates are the most easily digested foods and burn in the body with a quick hot fire. The fats, on the other hand, burn more slowly and are much harder to digest.

Just to make sure that all the trackmen would know which foods were carbohydrates and which were fats, a list was posted for their benefit.

Should they desire a carbohydrate food, the chief source is from bread, cereals, fruits, vegetables, syrup, sugars, honey, jams, jellies, and home-made eandy, providing it is free from nuts and high cream or butter.

If a fat is desired, the chief source is from butter, cream, ice cream, bacon, cheese, rich milk, rare yolk, fat meat, salt pork, nuts, and various vegetable oil dressings.

The calorie requirement for the day varies according to the age, weight, and type of activity. The average college varsity athlete needs between 3,000 and 4,000 calories per day, depending upon the strenuousness of training.

At the end of the training diet came the following instruction: "Be conscious of the foods that you take into your system so that you may be at your highest point of efficiency, either on the track or field. Training for any sport faithfully pays big dividends to you in the matter of health."

Women's Athletics

Classes Planned On Rainy Days This Semester

Women students having physical education classes on a rainy day will report to rooms in the science building instead of the gymnasium, Bertha Keller, chairman of the women's physical education department, revealed recently.

"Last semester," Miss Keller said, "many women caught colds coming down the hill to the gymnasium to report to class, but this semester we hope to remedy the situation by having women stay in the building to report for their activity."

Lectures Given

Roll will be taken, and lectures and discussion about the activity will take place. Several of the rooms have provisions for movies, so films concerning the activity will be shown, Miss Keller pointed out.

Students are reminded, however, that only when it is actually raining do they report to these rooms. When the fields or courts are wet and the rain is not falling they report to the gymnasium for roll and indoor programs. Further announcements concerning rainy day programs will be found on the bulletin board, she said.

Many Activities Planned

Monday and Wednesday classes meet in the north wing of the cafeteria; dancing is held in the north wing of the cafeteria; archery, dancing in Room 59; exercise therapy and rest meet in Room 345; freshman activity and archery in Room 49; archery in Room 113; badminton and tennis in Room 205.

Tuesday and Thursday freshman classes meet in Room 204; badminton, Room 133; badminton in Room 140; tennis, restricted in Room 113; tennis and archery in Room 133; fencing and tennis in Room 113; Tuesday and Wednesday tennis class at 12 noon in Room 345.

Eliminations In Tennis Matches Now In Progress

Women's Athletic Association members taking part in the tennis matches, should watch the bulletin board for the time of their matches, according to Pat Mooney, tennis club manager.

"Singles and doubles elimination matches are now in progress," Miss Mooney said, "and may be played off on Tuesdays or Thursdays at 2 p.m. or by arranging with the instructor. Students wishing to enter the club and the matches may play in places other than the courts. Racquets and balls are provided by the club for students wishing them," she added.

The matches now being held are in preparation for the December 6 play day, which will be held at San Mateo Junior College, Miss Mooney pointed out.

Swimming club members are preparing for the splash party with other colleges to be held Saturday, November 8 at the YWCA, Ruth Hobson, manager of the club announced.

"Swimmers from other schools will be invited to attend," she explained, "and events will be held in which all present may take part, such as races for form and speed."

All women students of the college are invited to attend the swimming meet, whether they swim or not, and the luncheon afterwards.

Rifleers Sharpen Sights For Coming Competition

Taking up most of their practice time with getting kinks out of their trigger fingers and sharpening up their shooting eyes, members of the college rifle team are fast rounding into shape for the coming rifle season.

Several new fellows have joined the club and, along with some of the old members, are averaging around 190 consistently, according to Club President Jim Juri.

Practice sessions are continuing through Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 9 a. m. until 12 noon, and membership is still open to students with a fair shooting eye.

Juri has high hopes of retaining several of the titles garnered by last year's marksmen. The team is setting out mainly with one main purpose this year, that of keeping the fine trophy that now lies in the show case in the front hall of the science building.

Intramural

Basketball Heads Program For Third Straight Week

For the third consecutive week, basketball will headline the intramural program, as four games are scheduled for today's competition, Jack Brady, faculty adviser, announced.

Games scheduled for this afternoon will be played in the Men's Gymnasium at 3:15 and 4:15, in the following order:

3:15 p. m.

Blitz Boys vs. Rabbits
Tri Epsilon vs. Goats
Newman Club bye

4:15 p. m.

Spartans vs. Phi Lambda Epsilon
All Americans vs. Japanese Students Rifle Club bye

Highlight of last week's play was the hotly contested tussle between the All Americans, defending champions, and the Newman Club, who finished third last semester.

All-Americans Defeated

The final outcome of the game found the Newman Club defeating the All-Americans by a score of 54 to 43. Up until this encounter, the defending champions were unbeaten in league play, as well as playoff games, since the intramural program started two semesters ago.

Off to a quick start, by employing a fast breaking attack, which found Jack Koster, Jack Bataf, and Bob Roberts repeatedly breaking into the hole for set up shots, the Newmans swung into an early lead and were ahead at half time, 28 to 16, a lead which they never relinquished.

Newmans Solve Defense

In an attempt to halt this avalanche of field goals, the defending champions, desperate at this stage, changed their man for man defense to a set zone. The zone momentarily worked until Bob Cavender, bearded guard, found the range for long successive field goals, breaking the morale of the champs.

At this juncture, the Newman Club appeared clear standouts as favorites to replace the All-Americans as champions for this semester.

Goals Defeat Rifters

Closely following behind the footsteps of the Newman Club, the Goats won a close 50 to 43 decision over the Rifle Club to remain in the undefeated bracket.

Phi Lambda Epsilon defeated the Japanese Students 30 to 31, as their superior height advantage overshadowed the fast break of the Japanese quintet.

The final contest found the Spartans, also undefeated, remain so, by winning from the Blitz Boys, 27 to 23.

Entries Due Today

All students wishing to enter the cross country run to be held Friday, October 31, should contact Russ Sweet, college track coach today as no entry blanks are necessary, Brady said. All entries must be given to Sweet by today, October 21, for every entry has to pass the required medical examination and train at least 10 days prior to the event.

Swimming, one of the many intramural activities planned for this semester, is scheduled to take place Friday, November 21. No entry blanks are required, but all students wishing to compete should contact Al Eisan, swimming coach.

Water Polo Team To Play Four Games This Semester

Because of the fact that many of the other colleges around the Bay Region have no water polo teams, our college water polo squad will play only four games this semester.

"We had hoped to have a full schedule of ever eight games this year, but due to unforeseen conditions, we will only have four contests this season," Coach Al Eisan said.

The four games that we will play are with Stanford, Olympic Club Reserves, and perhaps California. Two games will be played with the Olympic Club Reserves on Wednesday, October 22, and Friday, October 24. The Stanford tilt will be on Monday, October 27. The California contest is still in the offing, but Coach Eisan is hopeful as to the outcome.

There are about 15 students out for water polo who are practicing at the Jefferson High School pool, and if everything goes as it is planned, this number will be doubled by next semester, and in all probability, a larger schedule will be on hand.

"Water polo is new in many of the other colleges as it is in this college, and they are probably having conditions that we are experiencing, but as the students of the college learn, head, and see more of the sport, it should be one of our major activities by next semester," Eisan said.

Soccer

Rams Meet San Mateo Here Tomorrow

In its second home game of the season, the college soccer squad will collide with the San Mateo Junior College Bulldogs tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on the Ram campus.

The Rams have displayed splendid team work so far this year, with no outstanding individuals looming on the horizon as yet.

Jensen Pleased

Coach Jim Jensen is extremely pleased with the brand of ball his charges have presented in their three previous starts. The Red and White squad has won one and dropped one up to date, the third game, last Saturday with the University of San Francisco, being played after The Guardsman deadline.

Tight defensive play has been the feature of the Jensen aggregation, except for one quarter of the second game. This let-down came in the opening conto of the Ram-California University fray, when the Rams gave up five goals. From that time, through the rest of the game, the Bears were stopped cold and finally won, 5-0.

Rams Defeat Aggies

The week previous, the college team captured a 2-0 thriller from a strong California Aggie group.

The Rams have a hard schedule this year, playing two games within the next five days, hosting San Mateo tomorrow and then invading San Francisco State Saturday. They have drawn a bye for a week from Saturday, which is the mid-way point on their slate.

Men Students Must Take Physical Examination

All men students, whether taking physical education or not, are required to take a physical examination this semester, Jack Brady, physical education instructor, announced.

A list of names whose records are not on file will be placed on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium and in the science building this Friday, October 31.

No passing grade in physical education will be given unless this requirement is fulfilled, Brady said.

The doctor is in his gym office every afternoon from 1 to 3 except Friday. However, he is in his office Friday mornings.

AMS Bouts This Semester Expected To Be Best Ever

If rumors are correct, the annual Associated Men Students' boxing show this semester will be one of the best the college students have seen in many a day.

Jim Jensen, the new boxing coach, said "the men are slowly rounding into condition and are taking it easy, with light workouts and sparring sessions. The less talented boxers are being taught the imporatnt points of fundamentals, a move which always has been the basis, and foundation of any sport, while the fighters who have been in battle are sparring with each other."

This semester, such men as Dave Hunicke, a classy 165 pounder; Duke Drake, a powerful heavyweight who holds the division's golden crown on his shoulders, and Bryant Finch, a 175-pound contender; Ken Ludlem, also in the 165-pound class; and George Chew, a 145 pounder.

With such men as these, and with quite a number of boxers that are not do well known, the AMS intramurals and the finals this semester promise to be one of the greatest the college has had to date, Jensen concluded.

An Abraham Lincoln room containing more than 1,000 items of Lincolniana was recently opened in the William L. Clements Library at the University of Michigan.

Rams Give Bucs Tough Battle

By Bob Marcus

Entering their second conference game as pre-game favorites, the Rams met devastating defeat at the hands of the Modesto Pirates, supposedly the weak sister of the Northern California Junior College Conference.

. . . The famous "T" formation was almost used to perfection by the Modestoans, as the plays varied from wide end sweeps to long passes, as well as quick opening plays through the middle of the Ram line enabling the halfbacks to break clear in the secondary.

. . . On defense, Coach Fred Earle's squad used a 6-3-2 setup, which hampered the Rams' offensive game during the first half, but was overpowered during the latter part of the contest.

. . . With the ball on the Ram one yard line, the first Modesto score came when Lou Bronzan went over on a quarterback sneak, a play Frankie Albert, Stanford star, is noted for.

. . . The pigskin used during the game had two black stripes painted on the ends.

. . . The Modestoans off their performance, appear to be a dark horse for winning the conference championship.

. . . Although the "T" worked perfectly during the first half, Coach Lee Eisan switched his defense from a 6-2-2-1 to a 5-3-2-1, stopping the Pirate offense to a standstill in the second half, except for the prayer pass which connected for a touchdown.

. . . Only injuries of the game were minor, as Pat Castellano strained his back, and Bob Hufnagle, injured his leg. However, both boys returned to the game later in the evening.

Modesto Greets Homecoming Crowd With Impressive 19 To 7 Victory Over Rams

By Nick Barbarotto

Modesto's "T" formation worked to perfection last Friday night and, before a large home crowd, enabled the Buccaneers to trounce the highly favored college gridders, 19 to 7.

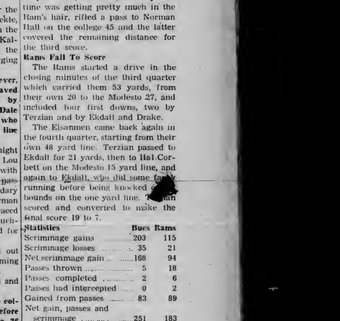
The Modestoans wasted no time in starting the fireworks and before the game was five minutes old, had registered six points on the scoreboard. Pirate tallies followed in both the second and third quarters, and it wasn't until the final period that Rams managed to put over a touchdown of their own.

A Ram fumble on the first running play of the game was recovered by Modesto on the Red and White's 37 yard line, from which point they proceeded to score a touchdown.

Bucs Beat Clock

The Buccaneers marched 59 yards on nine plays to their second score, which came just one minute before the end of the first half. Starting on their own 41, Modesto sent fleet-footed Dale McLaughlin on an 18 yard gallop to the Ram's 41, where a penalty moved the ball to the 36 yard line. Gains of two, four, seven, and ten yards carried the ball to the ten yard line and gave the Pirates a first down at that spot. They lost two yards to the twelve, made four to the eight, and on third down Bronzan passed to Milton Dambacher, who was all by himself in the end zone, for the touchdown.

Soon after the start of the third quarter, Modesto added another touchdown on a pass play that covered 75 yards. With the ball on the 25 yard line, Bronzan, who by this time was getting pretty much in the Ram's hair, rifled a pass to Norman Hall on the college 45 and the latter covered the remaining distance for the third score.



Rams Fail To Score

The Rams started a drive in the closing minutes of the third quarter which carried them 53 yards, from their own 20 to the Modesto 27, and included four first downs, two by Terzian and by Ekdall and Drake.

The Bloomers came back again in the fourth quarter, starting from their own 48 yard line. Terzian passed to Ekdall for 24 yards, then to Hal Corbett on the Modesto 13 yard line, and again to Ekdall, who did some fine running before being knocked out of bounds on the one yard line. Drake scored and converted to make the final score 19 to 7.

'Let's Maintain Past Record' --- Luckmann

In line with maintaining the college among the top three for contributions to the Community Chest, Lloyd Luckmann, chairman of the faculty association contribution plan, again asked that all of the faculty and as many students as possible cooperate.

Speaking at various affairs and socials, the 90 adherents of the plan are encouraging contributions, and are giving the true conditions that exist in parts of the city. They are informing the public that, according to statements of the Community Chest, one person out of every six applies to one of the 82 agencies of the Community Chest for aid. As a result it is essential that everyone give what he can.

"More than ever before, the Chest is in need of funds," Luckmann said, "and all donations will be very gratefully received by them." He added that it made no difference how large or small the amount might be.

The contributions are entirely voluntary and may be made through Luckmann in Room 222.

Amori Sees Increase In Post Office Jobs

Placement in post office jobs this year will greatly exceed that of past holiday seasons, Joseph A. Amori, college employment director, announced last Friday.

In addition to positions in San Francisco post offices, openings in Oakland branches will be made available by the assistant postmaster at Oakland. East Bay applicants will be selected in the same manner as San Francisco residents.

Selection of applicants for these jobs will, for the first time, be made on the basis of the results of aptitude tests being conducted at the college by Harold Leuenberger, director of the testing bureau to determine agility and mechanical skills. Students will be booked for the tests every 15 minutes.

The validity of the examinations, according to Leuenberger, is higher than that of any others of this type. Seventy-five applicants have already been tested, Amori announced.

Allman Watercolors Still On Exhibit At Legion

Still on exhibit at the Palace of the Legion of Honor are the water color works of Richard M. Allman, college art instructor.

Allman, in conjunction with Edward Johanson, eminent California landscape painter, has been given an entire gallery for his display. Allman's paintings consist of landscape scenes between San Francisco and Rio Del Mar.

This is not the first exhibit which Allman has had in the Legion of Honor. Several years ago Allman showed some of his works in a similar exhibit. His paintings have also been shown throughout the country in various art museums.

American Education Week

College Will Observe Week With Radio Assembly Featuring Warden Duffy

As the college's contribution to American Education Week, an assembly-radio broadcast will be presented over the college public address system some time during the week, Alden W. Smith, director of students activities, announced Friday.

Guidance Problems With Delinquents will be the theme of the broadcast, Smith said, and among the speakers will be Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison, and Assemblyman James H. Phillips, president of California Prison Association and originator of the Youth Correction Authority Act.

Passage Of Bill Significant

According to former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, passage of Phillips' act was the most significant piece of legislature dealing with youth since the installation of the Juvenile Court. It provided for a youth authority with the duty of receiving all young people, 23 years of age or younger, who had been convicted of a public offense, and investigating the cause of their delinquency and determining how they should be dealt with.

Some who were physically ill would be provided with medical treatment. Others, who were mentally ill would be committed to proper institutions. Many would serve at forestry camps, road camps, farms. In the future a large per cent will be placed in the new Boys' Town to be established in California. In most cases, incorrigibles will be sentenced to San Quentin.

This provision is an important advancement over the old method of sending all young offenders to San Quentin irrespective of individual differences. Chances of rehabilitation were small when young impressionables were placed in a penitentiary with hardened criminals to learn a criminal "trade."

Bill Originated From Study

The law which provides this guidance for delinquents originated from a study made by the American Law Institute and was taken over by Phillips, sponsored by him and passed by the legislature. The law has been recommended to the other 47 states but California has taken the initiative under the leadership of Phillips. Its success in California will be watched keenly by other states to determine whether it is worthy of emulation.

Phillips and Duffy will participate in an informal discussion of the problem of investigating the cause of crime and rehabilitating youth for society. Radio production classes will present a skit based on the same topic. The script has been prepared by the script writing class.

Participants in the program include President A. J. Cloud, who will introduce the guests; Clarence Aitman, student participator; Marie Weller, radio production instructor, and Smith.

The date of the program will be announced later.

Kay Kyser Awards To 17, 19 Year Olds

CHAPEL HILL, N.C.—(ACP)—A 17-year-old North Carolina boy who has made amazing progress since he began playing a piano at the age of five, and a 19-year-old North Dakota girl who already has won many honors in writing and acting, have been selected as recipients of the first Kay Kyser scholarships in music and drama recently established at the University of North Carolina.

The winners are Elaine Lucille Berg, Grand Forks, N.D., and John O'Steen, Kinston, N.C.

Established last June through the Kay Kyser foundation, which has been endowed by the famous Tar Heel band leader, a U.N.C. graduate who organized his first band here, the awards are based on character, scholarship, leadership, achievements and promise of future distinction. They provide tuition, room, and board for one year.

Information further clarifying the whole peace officers training course may be found in this semester's catalogue, or the instructors for the course are John Gaddy, Beverley Pasqueletti, Thomas O'Neill, and Pavone, who can possibly further enlighten those interested.

Friday the Pre-Nursing program will be featured.

Low Sophomores

Most Distinctive Dance Promised November 18

Announcing it as "the most distinctive dance of the year," Jim Duryea, class secretary, urged all students to attend the low sophomore dance at the Scottish Rite Auditorium on Tuesday, November 18.

"Finally the date has been definitely set and the orchestra has been named, as preparations are being made to make this dance one which will stand out in the memory of everyone who attends it," Duryea said.

Music will be supplied by Warren Ringen, who is noted for his collegiate music.

All students are invited to the dance, but the low sophomore class students are urged to make it a "must" on their social calendar. The evening will be one of one surprise after another, Duryea promised, naming the whole affair as one of the biggest of the college semester.

Another definite date is that of the Roller Skate to be held in Pacific City on December 5. This is another low sophomore event to which the whole Associated Student organization is invited. Admission to both of these events is by Associated Student card.

High Soph Formal Site Kept Secret

Four members of the high sophomore formal committee accompanied President George Coart on an investigation tour of another possible place for the dance, December 13, last week. Members of the committee were Mary Stevens, Jean Sheehan, Lois Steinhart, and Ed Coffin.

It was unanimously decided by the group that the new location (name not to be revealed at this time), would be a much more ideal site for the formal. The place inspected has a somewhat larger dance floor than the California Country Club, tentative location. Besides the larger floor, it has a more pleasant atmosphere and extremely nicer surroundings, Coart said.

The club has been spoken for, and, after final arrangements have been concluded, the name and further details will be announced.

The committee of judges for the sophomore sweetheart has been selected by Coart. Names, however, will be withheld until late in November when the contest will begin.

Orchestra auditions are still being held by the students in charge of the dance preparations, and a verdict should be given soon.

Talent Bureau Auditions May Be Reopened Soon

If enough interest is shown in the matter, there is a possibility that the talent bureau auditions will be reopened for a short time in the near future, according to Irwin Cohen, student manager of the bureau.

"The response to calls for more students to audition for the talent bureau has been great, but more novelty numbers are needed," Cohen explained.

"We've auditioned quite a number of singers, but we would like to get more specialties — comedians, and such," he added.

The talent bureau board will file the records of each auditioned student. When a specific type of talent is required, arrangements may be made by the groups or organizations through the talent bureau.

Medill Offers New Program In Education, Journalism

EVANSTON, ILL.—(ACP)—A cooperative arrangement between the school of education and Medill school of journalism at Northwestern University, first of its kind in American educational circles, goes into effect this fall, providing a joint-degree program enabling students to receive their bachelor's degree in education at the end of the fourth year and their master's degree in journalism at the end of the fifth.

The new plan supplements a teachers' sequence offered by Medill in which students may receive the master's degree by coming through the college of liberal arts. The new joint-degree program permits a stronger background in education.

Students in the new program remain in the school of education for their first three years. They transfer to journalism for their fourth and fifth years but receive their bachelor's degree from the school of education at the end of the fourth.

Honor Society Reception Tomorrow; Student Aid Begins

Coaching

Coaching service for any student of the college who desires it has been made possible through the Alpha Gamma Sigma, college scholastic society, Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser of the group, announced this week.

This free coaching of various subjects has begun already, and any student who feels that this service would be of value to him should come into Room 187 and sign up, she said, and added that students may also participate in the coaching even if they are not members of the society.

This idea of a coaching service, made possible by members of this society, was inaugurated in the college last semester, but its success was not too pronounced, Miss Cooper said. This was probably due to the fact that the whole system being a new idea which would naturally take time to work out to perfection.

San Jose State is using this college as a model for similar coaching service by their Alpha Gamma Sigma, Miss Cooper added. "I am sure that this semester we will have the success which we are striving for."

A Cappella Choir Auditions For Smaller Vocal Groups

A Cappella Choir activities recently have been restricted to auditioning students for the smaller ensembles which the choir will soon organize, according to Flossits Badger, music instructor.

"These smaller groups will probably be a women's trio, a men's quartet, a mixed quartet, and any other desirable combinations, she explained.

"Our season does not really get into full swing until later in the semester," she added.

The next A Cappella Choir activity will be the program for the Convention of Women's Clubs at the Western Women's Club on Friday, October 31.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 124, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Nu Epsilon Sigma . . . General meeting, Wednesday, October 22, 7:30 p. m., Room 136 at the college. Interesting movies will be shown. Refreshments.

● Radio Club . . . Interested students invited to attend on Tuesday, October 21, Room 46. Future meetings will include movies on radio, instruction for ham operators. A transmitter and two short wave receivers available for use of club.

● Forester's Fraternity . . . Meeting Wednesday, October 22, at 4 p. m., Room 322. Plans for hike to be discussed. Members urged to attend.

● Home Economics Association . . . A tea will be given at the home of Claire Cuneo, faculty adviser, Thursday, October 23, from 3 to 5 o'clock. Members are asked to sign up before October 22 in Room 158 or 108.

● Campus Players . . . Meeting on front steps of the college at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, October 22. Time to be used as workshop period. Regular meeting to be held same day at 3 p. m. in Room 237. Members urged to attend.

Faculty Association

Educational Problem Group Organizing

Members and sub-committee members of the Educational Problems Committee, sponsored by the college faculty association, are beginning to organize for their investigation into the problems of students, according to Ward Nichols, faculty head of the association.

Five sub-committees have been formed by members of the general group, and each is to investigate a separate phase of the student problems.

Committees Not Absolute

These committees are not absolute. Any member of the faculty, whether on the Educational Problems Committee or not, may attend these meetings. Suggestions by other instructors will be welcome at any time, and should be made to respective sub-committee chairmen: Phyllis Haley, Counseling, Guidance and Placement Committee; Phebe Ward, Integration Committee; Don Perham, Terminal Committee; John Gerstung, Teaching Techniques Committee, and Lloyd Luckmann, High School Relations Committee.

Meeting Held Soon

John Ross, committee chairman, expects that a meeting of the sub-committees will be held soon, in preparation for the general meeting, which will be held around November 17. At this time reports will be given and discussed.

President Archibald J. Cloud reported that the administration encourages the formation of education problems committees and has in the past not only accepted, but acted upon the recommendation.

'Back To Farm' Mixer Set For November By Low Sophs

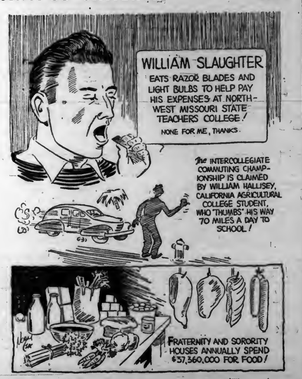
With Back to the Farm Day as the theme, the Low Sophomore class has offered to sponsor a mixer dance sometime in November, according to Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman.

To create an atmosphere for the occasion, the men of the college will be asked to wear jeans and loud shirts, and the women to wear gingham dresses. Part of the dancing program would be taken up with schottishes, square dances, and other types of folk dances.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

All Alpha Gamma Sigma members are to be honored at a social reception to be held tomorrow between 4 and 5 p.m. in the college cafeteria to permit old members to welcome new ones, announced Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser.

All members of the college scholastic honor society will be able to order their pins at the bank until Thursday, Miss Cooper added.



Miss Cooper noted, however, that a small deposit would be required on making the order.

At commencement exercises next June each member who has earned a permanent membership in the society shall receive a gold pin, while the pins available now are only for non-permanent members in good standing.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

DO you know where Iceland is located on the map of the world? If you don't, or think that maybe you do in a round-about way, run to the nearest atlas, or its equivalent and learn the truth. The chances are that you will be greatly surprised.

You will probably be surprised because of what you have come to (or been led to) believe regarding the United States Navy and the waters about Iceland.

There has been a great and odious noise raised by the press and Washington politicians because some of our ships have been attacked and sunk in these waters. But after consulting the nearest map the question of what were we doing there in the first place arises.

(This is not to say that our ships should be sunk; neither is it to imply that it is not objectionable, to say the least, to attack American merchantmen or warships on the high seas, to which every nation save those at war have a peaceful right.)

ARE WE OUT OF BOUNDS?

But these ships of ours that get into trouble up Iceland way are surely overstepping the limits of sensible boundaries when they go as far north. When the President said that we would protect the waters about our continent he was applauded by those who knew that a nation must protect its immediate realm of influence.

Iceland is an island more than 1500 miles from the shores of the United States. Surely the two or three hundred mile zone can not apply here.

It is an island which is only 500 miles from the British Isles. If we are supposed to guard and patrol Iceland we might as well guard and patrol England at the same time.

WHY ARE WE THERE?

Now, why are we around Iceland anyway? Well, for one very good and valid reason. We are convoying supplies to Great Britain. We may not be permitted to do this by law or promulgation—but obviously we are doing it.

Even taking the fact that we are convoying into consideration, and disregarding whether or not it is legal or sponsored, there is no reason to howl and incite our friends to declare war.

We are helping England as our people wish to help her and as she wishes to be helped: We are an ally of a nation at war and we are not at war. We are fighting for our future security and we are paying a comparatively small price compared with the price that is being paid and has been paid by other countries that opposed Hitler.

We hold an enviable position in this present world. Nothing should be done to threaten that position. War with Germany, caused because of Icelandic incidents, would do so.

"WAR IS HELL"—
AND SILLY, TOO

War with Hitler would cost us more men and ships and money than we are liable to lose for the next ten years, or fifty years, with the setup that now prevails. War with Hitler would necessitate an outright invitation to the Nazis to sink every American vessel and kill every American soldier or sailor that they saw. And we would have no comeback save to do the same. That's silly. We're better the way things are.

Now, however, we cloak ourselves as a non-belligerent. We are quasi-neutrality, but pseudo-neutral at the same time—and vice versa. We can scream and holler at Hitler for his atrocities upon our shipping and still find our conscience only a little murkey.

Insofar as fighting a war goes, we are fighting the war in the cheapest possible manner. In the manner we may fight with power, and well. We may win at a minimum. And that ain't hay, either.

WE ALL LIKE TO WIN

It must be realized that this is no tea party, attended by the typical drawing room crowd, that we are playing around with. The Germans desire complete victory even more than do the English. (The propagandists have been working on them longer.) And they mean to have it, too.

When you have a dangerous man in a tight spot it isn't up to you to find a way out for him. Much less is it up to you to help him out of his predicament. If the U. S. tries to get funny and inaugurate some chances that's exactly what will happen.

Hitler is behind a huge cylindrical sphere of the eighth numerical extension. He may run all over Europe but he can't get out. He's stuck and it's up to us to tighten his boundaries until he is squeezed into submission. We're doing it—let's not stop.

High Frosh Class Honored Tonight With Semi-Formal

Labeled officially the High Freshman Dance, the semester's second semi-formal dance will swing into rhythm tonight to the music of George Cavalli and his orchestra.

Held in the War Memorial Veterans Auditorium, the affair will honor the high freshman class. Dancing will be from 9 until 12 o'clock.

Cavalli, known as the Smiling Maestro, specializes in music styled in the Tommy Dorsey manner, ranging from sweet to swing. He has never played for an affair of this college before, but is well noted for his season at the Larkspur Rose Bowl a few years ago. He has also played at many fraternity dances at the University of California and Stanford.

Although the dance is in honor of the high freshman class, all members of the Associated Students are invited to attend, Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman, announced. Admission will be one Associated Student card per couple.

Freshman Officers

Highlight of the evening will be the introduction of the freshman officers, Neville Smith, president; Eloise Windell, vice-president, and Margaret Allan, secretary.

Miss Niemeyer warned that there would be an identification committee at the door to confiscate all student cards that might be lent or borrowed. All offenders will be brought before the Judiciary Committee and their cases will be dealt with.

Back To Tradition

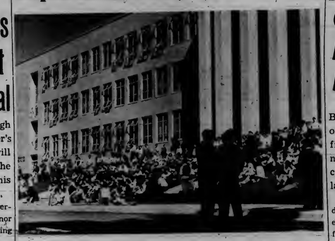
This is the first dance in some time to be held at the Veterans Auditorium. Miss Niemeyer pointed out, and marks a return to the traditional semesters ago of scheduling class dances at the auditorium.

Freshman officers stressed the hope that members of the high frosh class would do their part to make the dance a success, since the affair is in their honor.

The social committee announced that no corsages are to be worn.

NYA Jobs Open To Students In Several Special Fields

Openings for office workers, typists, stenographers, and students with some technical experience in sciences, particularly the biological sciences and chemistry, are still available through NYA, Claude T. Silva, college NYA director, announced Wednesday.



At this time, NYA rolls are usually closed since most of the positions offered have been filled and funds provided by the administration are largely exhausted.

Those in need of the work, however, who for some reason have not yet applied, should not hesitate, Silva feels, since a few jobs are still available.

Every effort will be made to place applicants, particularly in the specialized type of work mentioned, Silva promised.

At the same time Silva warned students now holding NYA jobs in the college that the next deadline for time cards is Monday, November 3, and that they must be properly filled out and signed.

So successful was the first "step rally" preceding the California Freshman game as photographed above, Commissioner Steve Mohorovich has arranged for the same site for the full hour rally today.

Rally

All Classes Dismissed At Noon Today For Pre-Game Program

All 12 o'clock classes will be excused today to allow students to attend a one hour pre-game rally to be held in the front of the building, Registrar J. Paul Mohr announced Wednesday.

The rally is being held for the purpose of arousing spirit in the college's gridiron clash with Sacramento on Saturday night.

Rally Commissioner Steve Mohorovich promised that this rally would be the biggest and best of the semester.

Entertainment Featured

The entertainment will include songs, skits, and music. Frank Isola will sing two songs, Mary Lobig will whistle, and Ed Coffin and Jack Robinson will give a skit.

There will also be a surprise guest speaker who is known by all students. The A Cappella Choir will close the rally with the singing of the school hymn.

Expect Biz Turnout

Expecting the biggest turnout of the semester at this rally, Mohorovich requested that students arrive at the rally as soon as possible and stand in a compact group.

If it rains Friday, the rally will probably be held in the women's gymnasium, Mohorovich said.

Rooting Section Desired

Mel Steele, head yell leader, said that he would like to see an organized rooting section at the game Saturday night with only students of the college participating.

After the game, there will be a barbecue on the pitcher's mound at the stadium. All are invited to attend it, Steele said.

The women yell leaders, June Walsh and Jean Peterson, will be at the rally all decked out in white, Steele declared.

Between halves at the game, Boots, a trick dog, will perform for the crowd.

'The Only Man In Her Life'

The instructor was calmly delivering his lecture. The class was just as calmly absorbing it.

This peaceful equilibrium was shattered when the instructor's eyes darted to the rear of the room and he intoned:

"Mr. — —, why did you move your seat to the back of the room?"

As one, the class turned to see Mr. — — and a young lady seated in solitary bliss in the back row.

Not one for hesitation, Mr. — — gave forth with an answer in a double quick time.

"But, she was all alone there in the back row!"

When the tumult had died down, and when the last glow of group recognition had faded from the faces of the solitary pair, the instructor, not to be outdone in a comeback, quietly admonished the young lady:

"But—as long as you're in my class, I want to be the only man in your life."

And the peaceful equilibrium was resumed.

CAB

Charters Not Renewed To BeSuspended

Following the Club Advisory Board meeting today, all college organizations that have failed to file applications for charter renewal are to be suspended, Francis Goetz, president, announced last Wednesday.

Applications will be accepted today, but clubs should submit them early enough to allow sufficient time for examination by the membership committee, Goetz added.

New Clubs Need Applications

New clubs, as well as organizations which have lost recognition in the club board, must file application. Suspension is the loss of all recognition and publicity for the group concerned.

"In fact, Goetz said, "as far as the club board is concerned, a suspended organization doesn't exist."

Thirty-five organizations were recognized by the CAB last semester, with only two being suspended.

This term, the CAB will strive for a 100 per cent enrollment of all organizations. Every club should strive to be represented at today's meeting, Goetz said, as important matters are to be discussed.

Lindemann Speaks Today

Bob Lindemann, welfare committee chairman, will speak today on his recent plans for a carnival day.

It is hoped that all representatives will gain the aid of their respective organizations in helping Lindemann's plan find the success it so richly deserves, Goetz said.

George Neilson, editor of the Cabby, CAB periodical, announced that copies of the Cabby will be obtainable at the meeting today.

A complete list of recognized organizations will be published at a later date.

Today Last Day To Drop Courses, Alter Programs

Today will be the last day that students will be permitted to drop courses, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced Wednesday.

Miss Learnard warned students not to wait if they planned to drop one or more courses. "A last-minute rush can be avoided if students will co-operate," she said.

Miss Learnard also urged seniors who expect to graduate in the January class to file their petitions immediately.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Coaching Service Support Improves

Much better student support is being given the Alpha Gamma Sigma coaching service this year than in previous years, according to Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser to the honor society.

More coaches and students needing aid have signed up so far, Miss Cooper reports, than at any time since the inauguration of the project several semesters ago, and a definitely successful year seems to be in the offing.

No Physics Coach

Only one thing is lacking at this time, the availability of a physics coach, but Miss Cooper feels certain that this post will be filled in the very near future.

Coaching has already begun in the many courses with which students of the college have found difficulty.

Since there is no official study hall open to students who will be coached by the Alpha Gamma Sigma group, meetings between the coach and student will be at their own time and place.

Gratifying Response Felt

The coaching service has not received full support from the Associated Students in the past, but the society has felt a definite need of such a service and is gratified with the response this semester.

Virtues of the service were recently recognized by representatives of San Jose State College, who visited Miss Cooper a week ago and, after a thorough investigation, adopted the plan for their institution, where they have put it into immediate practice.

Talent Auditions Show Variety Number Shortage

Talent bureau auditions have been completed, but any student who wishes to be available for entertaining purposes may arrange with the talent bureau board for an audition, according to Irwin Cohen, bureau student manager.

"We especially want to encourage students who can do specialty numbers," he explained.

"We've auditioned quite a number of singers and musicians, but there is a shortage of variety numbers," Cohen said.

Any student who is talented, however, Cohen still urges to make an appointment with Instructors Flossita Badger, or Wesley Muscio, talent bureau advisers.

Now that the auditions have been completed, Cohen promised that the talent bureau board will begin to file the name of each student auditioned.

Aeronautics

Government Official Sends Two Central American Youths Here For Civilian Pilot Training

Of four Central American youths chosen to receive Civil Pilot Training in the Western United States, two will receive instruction at this college, it was revealed today by Harry D. Bell, Civil Aeronautics Authority official.

Bell, ground supervisor and representative of the Civilian Pilot Training Service, paid a visit to the college early this week to discuss the vital matter with President Archibald J. Cloud and Major George D. Richards, college aeronautics instructor.

Four In Sixth Region

A number of men will be trained throughout the United States, but only four have been selected to be trained within the sixth region, which includes several western states.

The two men selected to enter the college aeronautic students are Alfred Toriello of Guatemala, and Ernesto Daglio of El Salvador.

The training will cover a period of nine months and will include primary, secondary, cross-country, and instructor training. Each man will have, upon completion of the course, 72 hours ground, and from 40 to 45 hours, to his credit.

Train For Commercial Licenses

Each will be eligible for his commercial licenses, and will also receive instructor and cross-country permits.

They will then return to their home to carry on their training among other students.

State Department Backs Venture

The State Department, rather than the Department of Commerce, is supplying the funds to enable these men the opportunity to train here in the aeronautics course.

Both men will live ordinary civilian lives while receiving their training. There will be no restrictions on their private lives, Bell said.

Soph Formal

Beresford Club Chosen As Site

That the Beresford Country Club would definitely be the site for the high sophomore formal, Saturday, December 13, was announced this week by class President George Coart.

"Four members of the dance committee, Lois Steinhart, Mary Stephens, Jean Sheehan and Ed Coffin, and I," Coart reports, conducted a thorough investigation of the Beresford Club a week ago and unanimously agreed that it is much more ideal than the previous selection, the California Country Club.

Accommodations For 400

"The new site, which is located just off the El Camino Real highway, this side of San Mateo, has dancing accommodations for more than 400 people, and includes a beautiful veranda, the most up-to-date furnishings and a completely congenial atmosphere," Coart said.

Except for a few minor details, plans are now complete for high sophomore week, the last week of classes before Christmas vacation. Selection of an orchestra is the only unarranged item concerning the formal, which will climax the week's festivities. Coart is certain, however, that this will be attended to very soon.

Auditions Still Conducted

Auditions are still to be conducted by the committee, which includes, besides those aforementioned, Ward Schwartzman, Dick Naftaly and Myron Du Bain. One orchestra is definitely being sought by the group, and if it is available all will be in readiness for the crowning event of upper class week.

Plans for the breakfast, which traditionally follows the dance at some exclusive place, are beginning to shape. A place has not been engaged for the meal as yet, and suggestions by the students will be welcomed.

Secrecy Shrouds Seven Soph Stalwarts

Queen Selectors 'Disclosed Later'

By Ed Coffin

Shrouding in mystery the names of the seven men who will select the initial corps of glamour girls, from which will come the Sophomore Sweetheart, George Coart, high sophomore president, is continuing with his original plan for the election of the queen.

When questioned as to who his seven stalwarts are, Coart only states "their names will be disclosed in due time."

The only information that has leaked out thus far is that athletes, artists, and photographers of the college are included on the secret group. Coart is certain that his committee will be capable of choosing the "cream of the crop" when the time comes.

Loving Cup!

A beautiful loving cup, approximately 15 inches in height, is expected to be presented to the queen, at the dance, for her permanent possession. It will be engraved accordingly, and will stand as a lasting memory of the honor accorded her by the men of the college.

She will also have the honor of attending the formal with the low from Apollo, who will be elected in a corresponding manner.

Sweetheart Runner-Up

The runner-up to the Sweetheart will be widely acclaimed by the class and will receive a bid to the dance. Decorative application cards,

This may look like blind man's bluff, but it's really Staff Artist Les Krames' conception of the Seven Secret Stalwarts searching for a Soph Sweetheart.

Unclaimed Exchange Books To Go To Library

Although the Women's Service Society book exchange has been closed for two weeks there are still several dollars in the bank remaining unclaimed, according to Violet Butler, president of the group.

"Books which are unclaimed will be kept for two more weeks, and after that period will be donated to the library for reference work," Miss Butler said.

While the exchange was opened, Miss Butler points out, $627 was received from selling books.

Child-Scale Minds

Create Damage

CHILD-SCALE minds in adult bodies offer the only explanation for the demolition record in the cafeteria thus far this semester.

The hotel division, the first of this week, reported the destruction of four tables and six chairs, all of which had to undergo expensive repairs. Current price levels place the value of these tables at $30 with doubt existing as to replacement owing to priority restrictions.

Monday a table was damaged beyond repair because of students sitting on it. Perhaps the people responsible shouldn't be censured too sharply; environment has much to do with one's personal habits. Perhaps a seated position on a dining table is second nature to them. Queerer eating customs have been recorded; however, it is not grossly unfair to expect all students at the college to possess a modicum of civilization's veneer. That one eats at, not sits on a table should be a section of that veneer.

Whether or not the malefactors are mentally or socially competent, cafeteria officials state that unless this breakage and general unseemly conduct is curtailed, present studying and recreation privileges in the cafeteria may be curtailed.

In other words, it is the old question of the irresponsible few forcing the denial of benefits to the many.

It seems incredible that horseplay should descend to such destruction of property in the college cafeteria. Joviality is certainly acceptable; but when furniture is actually broken, there is every right to demand a turnabout of behavior and to enforce that demand. Punitive discipline is no compliment to the collective intellect of a college.

What Price Football

FOOTBALL, one of this country's largest and most commercialized sports, is represented as holding its favored position in the collegiate world because of a character building influence—not for any ulterior motives.

Theoretically, the financial revenue which major teams gross for their respective alma maters is supposed to be held relatively unimportant, and is coincidental. Major universities annually pay a five-figure salary to the head football coach to insure proper training for the young gentlemen who are indulging in this sport.

Bulbous graduates and yelping undergraduate students do not particularly care whether they are represented by a winning team, as long as "the boys" are playing under a gentleman. However, it has been proved that good character builders produce winning teams . . . or else!

Will Connolly, writer for the San Francisco Chronicle, related a stirring incident in last Sunday's edition which perfectly illustrates the perfect art of character building.

"In the eleventh hour, the Bears began to throw passes off the hand. Al Derian, the Poly High kid, threw one which Gordon barely missed. For a reason obscure to us, Iverson and Newquist piled on Gordon, Jr., and began to pummel him in the face while he was flat on his back.

We are convinced the display of knuckles was not of Gordon's making, for he was out of the play when the Webfoots charged him.

The officials and players from both benches separated the belligerents. It was an exciting climax to an otherwise dull exhibition of football."

Connolly, from his distant vantage point, was unable to see just what happened. Gordon, falling in the mud, had a speck of dirt on his face. Iverson and Newquist, notable for their well-developed characters, took upon themselves the job of removing the errant dirt, as was evinced by the total absence of a penalty on the play. GENTLEMEN!

Shots At ...RAMdom

PERHAPS,

some of you opera goers were puzzled about that scattered bit of applause that fluttered around the balcony in the middle of the Te Deum in Tosca the other night. Here's the story behind it.

Seated next to us was a chubby little man, bearing the unmistakable stamp of the hen-pecked husband, dejectedly snoozing.

On the stage the chorus paused for a quick gasp. Chapel bells rang. The chubby little man echoed the note with a resonant snore.

A broad-beamed, militant looking woman next to him gave him a neat elbow just under the floating rib and rasped,

"Hector!"

"Phuggle," murmured Hector, "oh, yes, dear, two no trump, er, let me off at Hugo Street."

Then realizing where he was, but still in a daze, he looked apologetically at his wife and mumbled,

"Sorry, Gumdrop, I must have dozed."

Then he stood up and started clapping and shouting, "Encore."

So, that's the reason for the applause in the middle of Te Deum. If you don't care, don't read the story above.

BEHIND

a huge tome entitled Statistical Almanac of North America, the little man in the shiny bifocals sat tensed over the library table. Occasionally he'd raise his head and whistle tonelessly. We'd all look at him enquiringly, but he'd just bury his rather anemic dial in the book again and bore into his statistics like an ant eater.

Then from his pocket he took about half a pound of paper and covered each sheet on both sides with figures, formulae, and algebraic equations. He stopped and looked off into space with a dazed expression blanking his pale pan.

"'Smatter, Einstein," asked the student next to us, "get a wrong number?"

"Never mind the flippancy, young man," reproached the statistical wizard, "if my figures are correct, every time I breathe a man dies."

The student looked at him pityingly.

"That's tough. Why don't you chew gum?"

YOU KNOW

how crowded the 8 o'clock bus is. At Forrest Hill Station a young lady jammed herself into the tangled mass of swaying legs, arms and school books and started to search desperately for her car fare. The student next to her started to look vaguely alarmed as if something were troubling him.

"I beg your pardon, may I pay your fare?" he begged.

She gave him an icy stare.

"I don't even know you. I've got my own nickel," she retorted.

She went on searching futilely. The young man began to fidget nervously. Finally he could stand it no longer. He held out a nickel.

"Will you PLEASE take this," he implored, "That's the third time you've unbuttoned my suspenders."

• The American Way

Editor, The Guardsman:

There seems to be some dispute as to who will choose the Soph sweetheart.

Mr. Coart has "assumed" authority to select a bunch of "super Romeos" to do the selecting. Are these Romeos any more qualified or privileged than the rest of the men of the college?

Mr. Coart is not representing the soph class in attempting this dictator method of selection. Let's go about with the selection of soph sweetheart in the American way. If Coart refuses to represent the will of the students he has sworn to represent, let us recall him from his office. Our college is no place for dirty methods.

I think Mr. Hyman has a much more legitimate plan.

Fair play D. C.

Editor's Note: While your support of The Guardsman's stand in the sweetheart question is appreciated, let is be finally stated here that at no time has this paper assailed George Coart or doubted his qualifications for office.

We do, again, agree with your sentiments on the "super Romeos." Natural, and thoroughly human frailities must necessarily preclude objectivity on the part of the Seven Secret Stalwarts.

• Thank You Mr. Mark

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the last edition of the paper Peter Mark, apparently a student at the college, wrote and requested that after this signatures be required on Ram's Horn letters. Mr. Mark's suggestion was put into immediate effect, for on the same page there appeared an editorial repeating the suppressed policy of the paper—that of printing only signed letters.

This is a very good idea if only because the letter seems to lose its force or "oomph" when signed with a silly pseudonym such as "rebellious," or "indignant Frosh," and so forth.

Thank you, Mr. Mark, for your suggestion, let's hope it is carried out.

FEM FADS . . .

A HEATED discussion was held before one of the classes last week to try and decide just what semi-formal really meant. One woman said that it meant a long dress, with perhaps long sleeves or a jacket, another said it meant, not long but street length dresses, crepes, velvets, or even wools.

As so many women had different opinions of this word, we decided to do a little sleuthing on the side and find out just what the high freshmen expected their women friends to wear to the dance. Semi-formal might mean just anything, but according to authorities this time it means a dressy date dress, a long dinner gown, or formal.

Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman, is wearing a red, bright red, crepe street length dress with an accordion pleated skirt, and long sleeves. As red always looks well on brunettes, Miss Niemeyer should be quite striking.

"Mimi," Grover, low sophomore, will be seen at the dance with a "splashy" print on a white background. With this dress, "Mimi" will wear dubonnet shoes and carry a bag of the same color. To keep out the cold October wind she will wear a fur jacket.

WHAT'S SEMI-FORMAL?

Don't think that just because all the outfits mentioned above are short dresses, you can't wear your new dinner gown. Certainly not! Remember the decision concerning the defintion. Originally the definition meant long dresses, but not formal attire, with gloves and all that sort of thing.

Some women, however, decided they didn't like the longer dresses, or had previous engagements and needed a shorter skirt—and so forth—until gradually both types of dress are accepted. Unfortunately, on our wat-cha-gonna-wear-to-the-dance tour we found no one who was stepping out in the longer gown. There are undoubtedly many, but apparently we just don't bump into the right people.

BUT THEY'RE SO-O-O GRACEFUL

However, don't let this stop you if you want to wear a long dress, you just do it, they are much more graceful looking, and oh they look so nice.

If the weather remains windy and slightly on the coolish side, some sort of a coat will be needed. A fur jacket, as Miss Grover wears, would be just right for warmth, and looks.

As there are many styles of dress coats this season no one should have trouble with this part of her outfit. Dark wool coats with fur collars, and fur hats are new and becoming. Over the week-end we saw a bright red wool coat, princess style, and very plain, but with a hat and muff made of leopard.

FUR STAGES A COMEBACK

Fur muffs and hats are another fall comeback. They were comparatively new last winter and seem to be more popular this year. Try one with your last year's dress or coat, and whee — transformation!

Sergeant York . . . Hollywood produces a masterpiece

FEW pictures have been able to capture the undefinable essence of Americanism; it is a difficult mood to create on narrow strips of celluloid no matter how varied the technique or how novel the plot.

Usual Hollywood procedure in the past in its capricious attempts to formulate portraits a la Americanna has been the utilization of our armed forces as props for stilted regeneration themes in which either James Cagney or Dick Powell struggled through trite versions of "hell and high water" to eventually emerge chastized amid a glorious, ostentatious burst of waving flags and exaggerated chauvinism. These so-called service features with hoary blatant tones have constituted the glamour city's only quest into the heart of America. The long awaited exception has at last arrived.

PICTURE PERSONIFIES AMERICA

Sergeant York, a masterpiece of motion picture production, is one of the few pictures to actually confine on the screen an expression of the vivacity that has made America what it is, an expression of integral faith in the glory of soil, of rugged individualism, of hope and beauty.

Here is no panorama of marching feet and blaring band, no sweep of mechanized infantry or sea-rolling cruisers; this is a simple tale of a simple man, Alvin C. York, Tennessee farmer and his path through the bewilderment of internal doubt and external war. It is the tale of a living man, a tale re-enacting true events and situations since most of the material was selected from York's own diary. Proximity to the truth adds vivid power in this case to a superb film from Jesse Lasky, Hal B. Wallis, producers; and Howard Hawkes, director.

There is tremendous drama in the conflict that raged within York's soul. From a wild, hard-drinking, fist-swinging mountain hellion, he was suddenly transformed into a quiet, peace-loving man by a savage flash of lightning that knocked him unconscious and wrecked his gun just as he prepared to kill a man. The bolt from heaven staggered York's slowly-functioning reasoning powers and he "got religion" at last as his patient pastor Rosier Pile had predicted. From this abrupt birth of religious faith, York was immediately plunged into the truculent holocaust of the first World War. At first a conscientious objector because of his newly-acquired religious convictions, York faced tremendous mental strife. Ultimately, he went to France, performed gallantly under fire, executed a most unbelievable coup by individually capturing 132 German prisoners, and returned to his mountain valley and his sweetheart, Gracie Williams, famed and acclaimed.

FILM NEVER EXAGGERATES

All this is told in egregious pictorial fashion, moving with fluid beauty. The script never once verges on the over-exaggerated, the discordance of disproportionate emotionalism, the flag-waving infringements of propaganda. Washington investigating committees take note.

Rather, Director Hawkes has steered his material clear of the pitfalls of theatrical falsity, over-attenuated dramatic effect. With a sincere, simple method of straight-forward presentation, Hawkes has evolved a film verging on the eloquent.

As York, Gary Cooper surpasses all other screen efforts. No one else could have played the role, and that is the supreme compliment for Mr. Cooper's fine shaded performance of a man in the throes of character transition. Joan Leslie is in briefly as York's sweetheart Gracie and is completely ingratiating. Tremendous support is rendered by Walter Brennan as the kindly pastor, George Tobias as a trench-buddy, and Margaret Wycherly in a throbbing taunt bit as Ma York, grimy, inarticulate but inordinately proud of her boy.

Sergeant York deserves all the awards it will undoubtedly win.

Your College Presents . . . Uncle Sam Needs 30,000 Nurses

By Iwanna Hayworth

IN Manhattan, several wards of the new Tribore Hospital for tuberculosis have been standing empty since January—there are not enough nurses to run them. In the Midwest some hospitals have closed entire wings, although patients are clamoring for admittance—they do not have enough nurses.

"This shortage of nurses," said Surgeon-General Thomas Parran "is a definite menace to U. S. health. At least 30,000 more nurses are needed right now for the Army, Navy, hospitals, and public health work in rural areas." The reasons for this shortage are, government health funds have greatly expanded State health programs, thus providing more nurses with jobs. At the present time more people can afford to go to hospitals than ever before.

To help train these nurses, Congress appropriated $1,250,000 last July. Some of this money will be used to train 2,000 new high-school graduates in the regular three-year course. The rest will go toward post-graduate work.

(The preceding information was gathered from an article in Time magazine of two weeks ago.)

TRAIN FOR SPECIAL SCHOOLS

The pre-nursing curriculum of this college is especially designed for students who are preparing for further hospital training. In fact, it is made up of those students who plan to go directly into training at various nurses' training schools.

The requirements which various nursing schools extend are quite varied. Those schools of the University of California and of Stanford University are the "toughest" to enter. The tendency of most training schools at the present time is to require a more academic training.

In listing a few of the required courses, physiology may first be named. Study therein is made of the principles involved in human anatomy and physiology. The course just mentioned is classified as the general college course, and the university parallel is one which takes up the study of systems of the body. There is also a course in bacteriology in which students are taught fundamentals of bacteriology and phases of work pertaining to it.

SOCIOLOGY REQUIRED

Interestingly enough for those participating, sociology is included in these required courses for the pre-nursing students. In this, students are given analysis of social institutions and cultural basis of civilization.

In the home economics department is found a unit of their work also, in which dialetical fundamentals are taught. Of course, philosophy and chemistry cannot be eliminated in the mentioning of the required courses.

Although the pre-nursing curriculum is designed and organized so that students may complete their work at the college in two years, however, some students remain only one year. It is generally preferred by the training schools that the two years of work be completed.

ENROLLMENT INCREASES

According to one of the instructors in this division, there is steadily an increase of enrollment each semester. Since the beginning of the course, three years ago, it has developed from a 6-unit one-year course to an 8-unit two-year course.

This increase may also be attributed to the national defense program as has been stated before, as many of the graduates are going to Army and Navy bases as staff nurses.

Nu Epsilon Sigma, pre-nursing club, has its meetings twice monthly. One of these is a business, the other, social. This semester the members plan to have speakers at all business meetings. All women who are interested in the pre-nursing field are welcome to become a part of the group. One of the members of the club stated that membership came from all parts of the Bay Area.

WITH the parking lot now on the way, four wheeled contrivances resembling automobiles will have a place to rest their weary parts. Last semester the parking situation was at the height of its confusion. People were being called from class to get their cars out of the way for trucks, and a couple of times cars slid down the side of the hill on their own volition hastened by the soggy, wet ground.

Dean Edwin C. Browne, in charge of the parking situation around here, one day called a police squad car to tag the violators. A member of the executive council, well up on law and rhetoric, was given a ticket. He became so indignant about it that he began to use profanity on the policeman. He refused to be intimidated by a badge and a pair of flat feet. He stood on his constitutional rights and as a result was nearly taken for a ride to the Hall of Justice.

A letter was received by The Guardsman a week ago about the excess of unaccompanied gentlemen at the mixer dances. These wolves, as they are called in the parlance for the dance hall, seem to be frightening some of the more sweet young things from the activities around the college. A mixer dance would not be a mixer dance without a few sad and lonely faces looking at the women. In fact, we think that if it were not for these wolves, the dances would be very unsuccessful from the feminine standpoint.

Intramural

Entries Accepted Now For Softball And Volleyball

Entries for the intramural volleyball and softball tournaments are now being accepted in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser, announced this week.

All entry blanks should be handed in quickly as possible, for, as yet, the schedule of these events has not been determined.

In accordance with the weather situation, volleyball will be the first activity planned if rain prevails, and softball, if the weather is enjoyable enough to allow the tournament to be staged, Brady said.

Six-man teams will be allowed to compete in the volleyball tournament, while the regulation 10-man squad shall compete in the softball league.

Only Two Awards Given

This semester, however, only first and second place awards will be distributed, as to the three awards issued last spring to the first three teams.

Last semester's winner in the volleyball league, the Newman Club, will defend their laurels with another strong squad, potential of winning the league as easily as last semester. Heading the roster are Jack Koster, Bob Cavender, Don Tobin, and Lou Vasquez. Only player missing is George Mossler, clearly the bulwark of the Newman Club offensive strategy.

Rams To Entertain Sacramento Tomorrow Night At Seals; Still Shooting For Second Victory

Still trying for their second victory of the season, Coach Lee Eisan and the Ram football squad play host to Sacramento Junior College tomorrow night at Seals Stadium with kickoff at 8 p.m.

Defeated last week by a Modesto team that was rated the underdog against them, the Eisanmen go against the Panthers with a record of one victory, three defeats and one tie. Sacramento, however, defeated Salinas Junior College 7 to 6, and received a dumping by the strong Pasadena eleven. Their games against Moffat Field and the Sacramento Athletic Club were not reported.

Game Rated a Toss-Up

Coach Hack Applequist of the Panthers brings a team to San Francisco that has had its ups and downs. Appearing good at times and bad at others, tomorrow night's contest is rated a toss-up, with the team getting the breaks coming out on top.

Likewise, the Rams have been playing both good and bad ball throughout the season. Virtually outclassed by every team in the first half, the Red and White have managed to come back in the final two quarters to outplay every opponent, definitely proving that they are a strong second half team.

Against Modesto the Rams started to move too late, and, despite the fact they had the Buccaneers backed against their own goal line for most of the fourth quarter, the gun brought a stop to whatever damage they could have done.

Tackling Was Ragged

Looking back to the Modesto fray, Eisan said, "We improved in the second half, but our tackling was ragged throughout, especially in the backfield. Our line showed a lot of im-

Rejuvenated Rams To Meet Menlo Tomorrow; Third Game In Week

By Ed Coffin

With its stock greatly improved by virtue of a 1 to 1 tie with the University of San Francisco, the college soccer team is somewhat optimistic in its attitude toward the Menlo contest tomorrow on the latter's field at 10 a.m., according to Coach Jim Jensen.

The Rams will be playing their third game in seven days, having tied a touted Don squad last Saturday and met a string San Mateo team two days ago.

Menlo Regarded Threat

Not much is known of the Menlo aggregation as yet, but Jensen is regarding it as a definite threat. It is reported to be a strong group, and always has a few tricks in its bag that might spell doom to a too optimistic opponent.

The Rams have been hitting at a strong clip this year, with one win, one defeat and one tie. The tie with the Dons has been the highlight of the college play so far. San Francisco had previously tied Stanford, one of the finest teams on the Pacific Coast, and had beaten a favored Olympic Club group.

Three Stand Out

Tom Woods, Bill Schriakoff and Ted Theodus have shown up particularly well for the Red and White, with Theodus heading the point-making department with two goals.

Jensen was somewhat dissatisfied with the first-half performance of his boys last Saturday, but was greatly relieved with their last-half comeback. They counted one goal and barely missed two others, which would have put the game on ice. They did, however, play excellent defensive ball almost throughout, keeping the powerful Dons in check and limiting them to their one goal in the initial canto.

Rams, Panthers Defend Laurels

Although down in the ruck of the conference standings this season, the Rams and the Sacramento Panthers are still the defending co-champions of the conference.

The capital city squad is coached by Hack Applequist, former All-American guard from the University of Washington Huskies.

Frank Molina, right halfback, will be lost from the squad within a week, for he will be inducted into the Army on November 2.

Unveiled for the first time this season, an end round play was used, with Jim McGowan and Ed Cassidy, the principal ball carriers.

The only player on the college squad to warrant All-Conference mention to date is Bob Hoffman, who has been a bulwark on the right side of the line.

Ablest long-distance passer on the eleven is Duke Drake, who is capable of heaving the pigskin out over the 60-yard mark.

In an attempt to bolster the faltering ground attack of the squad, Eisan has given the Rams several new plays during the week. One in particular, is where the fullback takes the ball, in this case Drake, who charges into the center of the line, handing the ball to the guard, who in turn laterals to a halfback, making it possible for him to circle the end or pass.

In a scrimmage session with the Treasure Island Naval Base squad last week, the Rams faced Al Nauman, tailback on last year's squad, and Marshall Leong, who was slated to hold down the fullback berth, but joined the Coast Guard.

Reverses were working fairly consistently in last Friday's Modesto encounter, mainly because of the halfbacks who were taking them. Art Ekdall, in particular, was overcoming a disparaging lack of adequate blocking protection and knocking out a plus average for yards gained from scrimmage. As soon as the line becomes coordinated with the backfield, the reverses will become potent.

Larue Attempts Atonement; Shinkickers Bounce Back

"Dear Lee:

"Just a note to thank you for your fine sportsmanship Friday night after I pulled the 'boner.' I know some coaches who would have been very unreasonable in such a situation.

"I still don't know why I blew the whistle, but I did and I am certainly very sorry it happened. No doubt your boys feel that they were robbed of the game. Please give them my sincere regrets regarding the situation.

"See you in Modesto Friday night.

"Sincerely,
"Bob Larue"

Although Larue's letter will not change the situation, it certainly will provide the ointment to soothe the wound. It would have been very easy for him to call a penalty after he inadvertently blew the whistle, thereby changing the entire complexion of the incident and clearing himself of any possible censure.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION

One of the college football players, speaking with regard to the game at Modesto, declared that the rooters were so sotto voiced that he was unable to hear them while he was sitting on the bench directly beneath them. One of the cheer leaders, on the other hand, said that the organized rooting at Modesto was some of the finest that he has ever heard the supporters of the Red and White put forth. Were you there, and if so, what do you think?

IMPROVEMENT

The Ram soccer squad, bouncing back from a defeat at the hands of the University of California, showed a definite improvement last Saturday, when they locked horns in a 1 to 1 deadlock with the University of San Francisco Dons. Previous to their meeting with the Rams, the Dons had not only vanquished the Olympic Club squad, but had also held the Stanford Indians to a tie. Both the Indians and the men of the Winged O are rated strong aggregations. This week end the college team will come up against Menlo, still another well-ranked unit.

EVIL FOREBODINGS

For their last, and what appears to be their toughest, game of the season, the Rams will come up against the Bulldogs of San Mateo Junior College at Seals Stadium on the night of November 14. Not only are the Bulldogs undefeated and untied, but they are also unscored upon up until now. San Mateo trampled over San Francisco State to the tune of 26 to 0, and kept Modesto backed up against their own goal line while easily dispensing of the Buccaneer defense.

Water Polo Team To Face Olympic Club Tonight

With its first game taken care of, the water polo squad will go out to again battle the Olympic Club Reserves at the club's home pool tonight, which is located at Post and Mason streets, with the contest scheduled to start at 8 o'clock.

Students wishing to see the college's new sport in action may gain admission to the game with Associated Student card.

The next contest will be against the Stanford Indians, on Monday, October 27, and in all probability the game will be held in the Stanford pool.

The team of seven men will be picked from among Maurice Richardson, Bill Hickey, Phil De Lano, Howard Schuff, Don Grannis, Jim Duncan, Don Barton, Tom Caliahan, and Warren Kleist, who are practicing with the advanced swimming class at the Jefferson High School pool.

The water ballet, together with races and novelty numbers, will compose the day's program in which 10 entrants from six colleges throughout the area will participate.

Crlenkovich Exhibition

Members of the swimming team competing for the college are Thelma Soo Hoo, Mary Elizabeth Schmitz, Stella Miranda, and Estelle Willmatt. In addition to the above program, it is possible that Helen Crlenkovich may give a diving demonstration, Miss Kinkel said.

Ruth Hobson has been appointed general chairman and has appointed Elma Oddstead and Janice Berch to assist her. Any WAA member interested in serving on committees such as the entertainment or invitation committee is urged by Miss Hobson to leave her name in the WAA box in the women's gymnasium.

General Splash Concludes Events

Women, whether WAA members or not, wishing to attend the event should also leave their names in the box, Miss Kinkel warned, if they wish to swim in the general splash event and attend the luncheon and entertainment afterward.

Three bowling dates have been scheduled, according to Gracine Lowe, club manager. Wednesday, October 29, bowling with the women members of the faculty; Wednesday, November 5, with the San Mateo Junior College bowling team, and Wednesday, November 26, with the women members of the faculty.

American Education Week

College Radio Assembly On Youth Guidence Nov. 10

Featuring guidance problems with delinquents as its theme, the assembly-radio broadcast to be presented Monday, November 10, at 11 o'clock over the college public address system, will represent observance by the college of American Education Week, November 9 to 15, Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, revealed Wednesday.

Prominent guest speakers will include Assemblyman James H. Phillips, president of the California Prison Association and sponsor of the recently legislated act to provide rehabilitation for young offenders. Phillips' bill, passed last month, Smith remarked, was a most significant piece of legislation and has been widely publicized.

Warden Clinton Duffy will also speak in the informal discussion on the timely problem of delinquency, to be conducted by Clarence Ashman, student participator.

In addition to the discussion, a skit on the same topic will be presented by radio production classes, under the direction of Marie Weller, radio instructor. The script, now in production, is being prepared by the script writing class, Miss Weller said.

College Debaters Face St. Mary's Team

Answering the challenge of St. Mary's College to debate on the subject, resolved "that the United States Government Should Control by Law All Labor Unions," the San Francisco Junior College team will meet the Gael debating team on October 29 at the La Salle Lounge at 8 p.m.

The San Francisco team will debate the negative side of the argument. The debate last week at California was decided a tie.

The San Francisco College received a challenge to debate Stanford University on the same subject as the one with St. Mary's.

The exact date for this debate has not as yet been decided but the team is looking forward to it, Lloyd Luckmann, one of the debate coaches, said.

The teams for these debates have not as yet been selected.

AMS

Social Plans Take Shape

Plans for the Associated Men Students' boxing matches and barn dance on December 5 and January 10 respectively, are beginning to take shape, according to Don Jensen, AMS president.

The boxing matches which will be held in the Coliseum Bowl, will match some of the best boxers in the college in each weight division, Jensen confirmed. The contestants will be chosen by means of elimination bouts in the intramural campaign which will start later in the semester.

No orchestra has been chosen for the barn dance as yet but auditions will be held some time in the near future, Jensen said.

Professor MacDonald Lectures Monday Night

Professor Austin F. MacDonald, Ph.D., of the Department of Political Science, University of California, will deliver a lecture on "Argentina" at 8:15 Monday night in the auditorium of the University of San Francisco.

The admission to the lecture is free. This is the second in a series of public lectures entitled Hispanic America being presented by the University of San Francisco on Monday evenings at 8:15 o'clock.

Art

College May Join Hotaling Show Sunday

Invitations to college art students to display their works at a special art exhibit to be held in Hotaling Place have been sent by a committee in charge of the exhibit, according to Richard M. Allman, college art instructor. Hotaling Place is located between Montgomery and Sansome streets in San Francisco.

Every type of art from water colors to sculpturing will be on display. Dancing and refreshments are included in the program of the exhibit which will start at 10 a.m. on Sunday, October 26, and continue until midnight.

Several students displayed their works at a similar exhibit which was held last year and it met with approval, according to Allman. The exhibit will be open to the public and there will be no admission charge.

Paint Lecture Series Opened At Evening Meet

Speaking before a capacity crowd of 90 persons at the first Paint Technology lecture, W. P. Fuller Brauner and Hal Harlan Monday night opened the first series of lectures at the college.

The Monday evening discussion held at the college is the first in a series of lectures that will feature the paint industry, and will feature notable speakers connected with that industry. The meetings are open to the general public, and students who may be interested.

extremely tight defense. The only time that their defense has slipped below par was in the opening quarter with the California Bears. The Bears took advantage of this to kick through five points, but were stopped cold after that, winning by a 5 to 0 score.

The complete roster is as follows: Irving Bowker, Rene Conteras, Paul De Natale, Bryant Finch, George Gluck, Manuel Isaacs, Ben Brinksy, John Lazar, Joe Mahoney, Valerian Penkoff, Bill Schriakoff, Gene Suaccl, Bud Waddington, Tom Woods, Faud Zeilback, Ted Theodus, Vic Karpenko, Don Jensen, Bill Beaton, and Robert Rebholtz.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Astronomy Club . . . Students interested in astronomy are invited to attend the meeting of the Astronomy Club held every Monday evening in the college conservatory at 7:30 p.m.

● Omicron Phi Pi . . . A discussion of the Neutrality Act will be the theme of the next meeting of the Omicron Phi Pi which is to be held at the home of its adviser, Michael Zarchin, 295 Urbano Drive, next Tuesday evening.

Those who haven't been initiated yet should be there. A representative to the Club Advisory Board will be appointed also at this meeting.

● Sigma Delta Pi . . . The first meeting of the Sigma Delta Pi, Jewish students fraternity, was held on October 20 at the home of its adviser, Michael Zarchin. Elections were held and the following officers elected: president, Stanley Rosenthal; vice-president, Norman Applebaum; secretary, Henry Silversmith, and treasurer, Armand Cohn.

As there were 10 members present, it was decided to ask for a charter in the Club Advisory Board. Irwin Cohen was appointed CAB representative until more elections are held.

The next meeting will be held Monday, October 27, at 295 Urbano Drive.

● WAA Rifle Club . . . This afternoon the WAA rifle team has invited the men's rifle team to bowl at Lincoln Bowl on Geary and 6th Avenue. Those attending should be at the alley between 4:30 and 4:45.

Eisanmen Face Weakening By Loss Of Men From Squad; Quarterback Molina Drafted

provement, however. Augie Kalnen came through with a fine performance and I expect him to be one of the best linemen on the field tomorrow night."

Eisan was thinking about the hard luck his Rams have been encountering throughout the year, as well as that which they will be forced to face in the future.

"First, we lost two of our three fullbacks, Bob Christen and Bud McKinnon," the Ram mentor said, "and we had to change our backfield. Then we were left with one center when Don Reese got hurt in an auto accident and had to quit for the season, and Ed Giovia was out with an infected toe. Izzy Urbano can't get in the condition to play his best because he has been working nights in Vallejo, and after tomorrow night's game we will lose a few more."

Squad Losses Veterans

The few more Eisan was referring to are Bob Hufnagle, Frank Molina, and Dick Souza. Hufnagle will go into the Naval Reserve Air Corps and will probably be playing his last game against the Panthers. Molina's draft number was called and he will report on November 2, leaving tomorrow's game his last and a slight possibility of playing against Salinas Junior College on October 31.

At the request of his father that he give up football, Souza will not be able to play for the remainder of the season and will probably not even be in a suit for the Capital City men.

With the loss of these men, Coach Eisan has a reason to have problems on his mind. He will be forced to face Salinas, Pasadena, and San Mateo with only a skeleton of his original first string.

McFarland Gets Chance

Merle McFarland, whom Eisan describes as a good guard but who had the misfortune of playing at the same time as Bill Brown and Hufnagle, will undoubtedly step into Hufnagle's position. McFarland has been playing good ball the times he was in action, and will get his first real opportunity to show his ability.

Jack Madrano, who has been hampered by injuries since the beginning of the season, is finally in top condition and Eisan expects him to come through with a fine game tomorrow. Giovia's toe is almost normal again, and Eisan plans to have him relieve Dutch Danielson, who was forced to play 60 minutes in the last two games, when the latter needs a rest.

With Temple Davies and Kalnen, probably two of the finest kickers in the junior college league, doing the punting, the Ram coach expects to keep Sacramento in their own territory for most of the night.

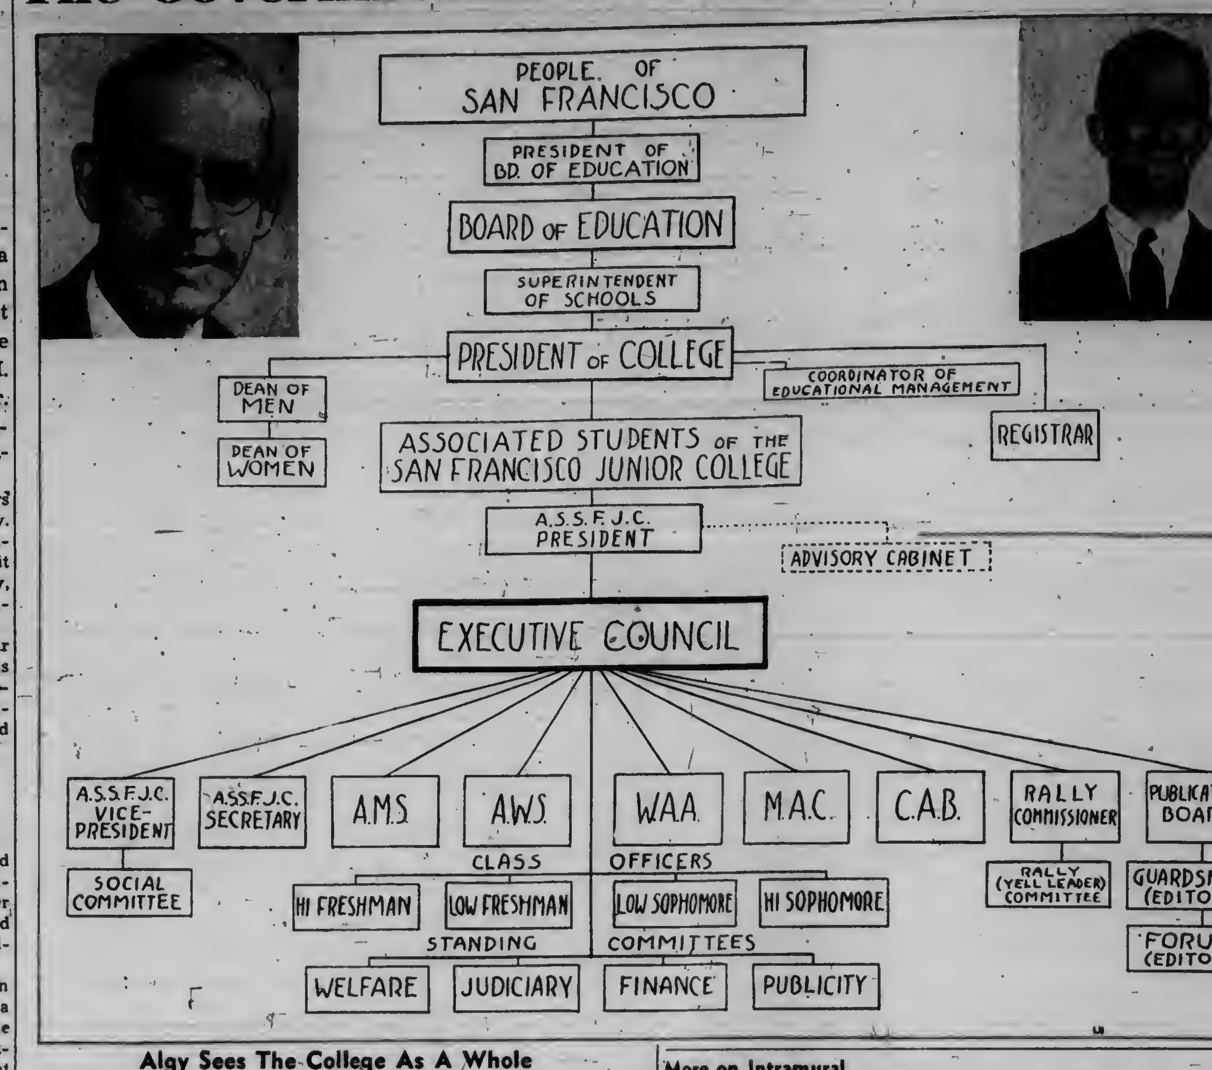
Ekdall To Carry Load

Art Ekdall showed signs of some fancy running against Modesto, as well as some fine pass catching, and is depended upon to carry much of the load against the Panthers. Al "Duke" Drake, who is playing football for the first time this season, started his first game against Modesto and came through in fine fashion. Much is expected of him in the future.

Probably the most underrated player on the squad is tackle Bob Hoffman. Hoffman has been playing more consistently than any other member and is constantly breaking up opponent's plays. According to Eisan, he has been improving in every game and should be the best tackle in the conference by the end of the season.

Regarding the Sacramento fray, in which victory for the Rams is far from impossible, Eisan said, "We haven't scouted them so we don't know anything about their team, but we made up a lot of new plays this week and we're going to play a wide-open game."

Tricky Plays For Rams



Which means that the Rams, desperate for a victory, will start using lots of passes and tricky plays, in hopes that one of them will send either Turk Terzian, Art Ekdall, or Pat Castellano on a touchdown gallop.

Ram starters will be Bob Jones and Jim McGowan at ends, Kalnen and Hoffman at tackles, Hufnagle and Brown at guards, and Danielson at center. In the backfield, Terbian will start at quarterback, Ekdall at left half, either Madrano or Davies at right half, and Castellano or Drake at the fullback position.

The Governmental Network Of A College

Algy Sees The College As A Whole

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

FOR the past few weeks, Algernon J. College—he's the "average guy" who cuts a class once in a while and gets about a C average—and The Editor have been huddling over The Editor's desk engaged in some warm discussions on the college. We're going to publish the most interesting portions of these conversations twice-weekly in The Guardsman.

Material aplenty for this first article was unleashed when Algy noticed on our desk the original drawing by Staff Artist Louise Horne of the diagram printed above.

"Phew," he exclaimed, "pretty complicated stuff, isn't it?"

"Not at all," we said, "this is part of an attempt to make the general governmental framework of the college a bit clearer to the Associated Students."

"Frankly," he returned, "it doesn't help me much; besides, what's this framework to me? I'm busy dodging cinch notices."

Student interest in student affairs is a rather important subject with us, so we asked Algy to sit down. He had to be "shown."

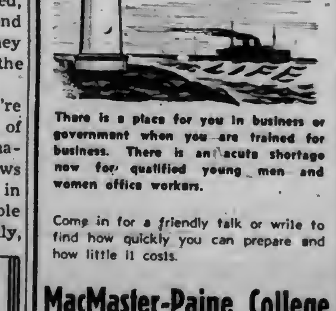
The conversation began. "A great proportion of educators rightly feel that getting an A in English is not the sole aim in college life. There are many other things just as important, if not more so. Getting into the swing of college affairs and politics and realizing certain responsibilities as a member of a self-governing student body association are just two points we shall mention for the moment."

"But exactly where do I enter the picture?" Algy broke in.

"We're coming to that. We feel that a greater knowledge of the inner workings of the college will stimulate a greater spirit and enthusiasm for it in you and the other members of the Associated Students. For instance, you wouldn't get half the kick from a football game if you didn't know one formation from another or what was the particular job of each player.

"If we can make each student feel that he is an integral part of something bigger than himself, that is, make him an active cog in the 'big wheel,' not just an idling gear; if we can do this, we shall have accomplished a basic aim of our project."

Still rather dubious, Algy guessed that there was something in that.



"What's this, though?" he asked, "from this diagram, the people stand at top of the pile; it looks like they could control anything we do at the college."

"Quite right, Algy. Now you're bringing up a fundamental part of our democracy—the rule of the majority of the people. This chart shows two instances of that rule. First, in the city of San Francisco, the people control the school system. Naturally, they must have representatives act for them—in this case the Board of Education. Second, in the student government system, the Associated Students collectively have basic control of student affairs, but they also vest their powers in a smaller group—the Executive Council.

"This chart plainly shows the breakdown of authority common to most governmental arrangements. Briefly sketched, authority begins with the people of San Francisco who place their powers in the Board of Education. As a link between the Board and the president of the college is the Superintendent of Schools. Unlike junior and senior high schools (with which this college is technically classed) which are supervised by special deputy superintendents and departmental officials, this college is independent of any control but that of the Superintendent of Schools, who is now Major Joseph P. Nourse. The direct personal contact between the college and the superintendent is the president of the college, Archibald J. Cloud. It is he with whom general control of the Associated Students rests. The Associated Students find expression in the Executive Council, the direct governing body of the students themselves.

"Next Tuesday, Algy, we shall start to discuss each of these main divisions independently."

student who failed to sign up previously, should see Russ Sweet, track coach. It is doubtful, however, whether a late entry will be allowed to run the gruelling distance. All contestants are required to take a medical examination and train at least 10 days prior to the event.

Three medals will be awarded, gold to the winner, silver to the runnerup, and bronze to the third runner.

Approaching the halfway mark, the basketball tournament completed its third round of competition yesterday, with two weeks of play yet remaining on the schedule.

Three Squads Tied

To date, three teams are tied for first place, namely the Newman Club, Goats, and the Spartans. Highlight game of last week was the second consecutive loss by the All Americans to the Goats, who previously were defeated by the Newman Club.

With four games remaining, it is strictly a toss-up to determine the ultimate winner at this juncture of proceedings.

Following are the standings up to October 17:

	W	L
Newman Club	4	0
Goats	4	0
Spartans	4	0
All Americans	2	2
Rabbits	2	2
Tri Epsilon	2	2

Examination Required

In compliance with the intramural program, every participant is required to take a medical examination, Brady announced. Failure to comply with this regulation will prevent any participant from receiving an intramural award. No special examination is necessary, as the examination a person received when entering college will fill the requirement. A list of those who do not have medical records will be posted on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium, Brady said.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

IT'S been cold lately. Quite unusual for San Francisco, and the Bay Region. But it's getting cold, very cold, in other parts of the world too. And nobody is complaining. In fact, in other parts of the world where it is getting cold, very cold, the people are happy about the whole thing.

Some of these warm blooded Los Angelans who have been wailing about our present climate should see how the Russians are reacting to the rain and snow in their communistic country. Brother there is joy today in Stalin land!

THE HAPPY LIST

There are several different nationalities happy because winter has arrived. They may be placed in individual classes as follows:

First of all the Russians are rejoicing. You'd rejoice too if Hitler had been on your trail for a few months and was coming to the end of his present piece of rope. The only trouble with this setup is the fact that when spring once more begins to brighten up the Russian plains Hitler and his boys will begin all over again to brighten up on their own account.

And there just isn't any comparison between the Nazi type of brightness and the natural contribution. However the people of Russia will be able to entrench themselves in the next several months and perhaps prepare for a concerted effort when the snows melt. Things are looking much better in the USSR these days.

THOSE EXUBERANT ENGLISH

Secondly the allies of the big battered bear, the British, are happy these days. The English leaders in particular are overjoyed. There had been some fear that Stalin and his fellows wouldn't be able to hold out. As things now stand there is yet hope.

Then too, there has been some agitation for a thrust by the British forces into German held territory. The leaders of the English people didn't think the time was ripe, or they were frightened to death by their opponent's reputation, so they were against a second BEF at the moment.

But things are different now. Because the snows are here, and because Germany is being stalled or held at bay by the gallant Soviet gentlemen, the armies of England and her brothers from beyond the seas need not worry about an invasion of the continent.

Naturally if the weather is too rugged for the Nazis what is the sense of an invasion? This is true, but it also shows the respect that is held for the Hitler war machine, deserved or otherwise.

This little winter lull, complete with all the trimmings, will give England a chance to stock up on the needed war vitamins. Then perhaps they too will be better able to fight next year.

ALL IS NOT ROSY

However, as in the case of the Communist dilemna, there is a shadow ever hovering over the Island optimism. That cloud is the Nazi manufacturing ability. By next year the Germans will probably be more able to carry on the war than the Allies. They have more productive capacity. So all is not rosy, no matter what anybody tells you.

Number three on the happy people list includes the United States and her many complexities. There are two separate groups of happy gentry today. All this is because of winter.

The isolationists are contented because now we stay out of actual troop involvement a little longer. The involvementists are happy because they can now devote their entire energies to whipping the people into a war frenzy; for they don't have to bother so much with aiding Britain until the skies become clearer.

A MORE SERIOUS ASPECT!

One more happy group should be added to this list—and seriously. It is composed of those who are glad that winter has come, and are glad for only one reason—thousands of men now have a few more months of life because of the whim of nature. These are the only sensible, honorable human beings left in the world today.

IT'S AN HISTORICAL WINTER

So, despite the wailings of the warm-blooded Los Angeles type, winter for the 1941 season brings almost universal hope and rejoicing. It is a winter that may go down in history as the turning point, in one direction or another, of this sanguinary struggle.

Now men are looking beyond winter, planning the deaths of those they have never seen, and hoping for victory. But until this well-welcomed winter has passed men are going to live in anticipation of the death soon to follow.

AWS

Tea For High School Women Today At 3:30

The first of a series of teas for graduating women from Lincoln, Washington, and Lowell high schools will take place this afternoon in Room 158 from 3:30 to 5 p.m., according to Betty Fox, president of the Associated Women Students.

This is the first tea of this type this semester, but several others will follow until all city high schools are entertained.

No Special Entertainment

Although there will be no special entertainment for the day, a tour of the building and refreshments provided by the Home Economics Department will compensate for this, Miss Fox said.

Miss Fox requested all women on this committee be in Room 158 before 3:30 this afternoon so that they may get their instructions, and be ready for any early arrivals.

Future Dates Indefinite

Dates of future AWS affairs, Miss Fox explained, are indefinite until the next meeting is held, when plans will be made for future events to take place this semester.

The AWS has already held in collaboration with the Women's Athletic Association, a barbecue at Sigmund Stern Grove and a tea for new students during orientation week.

NYA Time Cards Due No Later Than Friday, Oct. 31

NYA time cards for this month must be turned in not later than Friday, October 31, Claude T. Silva, college administration director, emphasized today.

Ordinarily, the closing date for the work period falls on the second of the month. Since the second of November will be Sunday, and the first a Saturday, the closing date this month is set for Friday. NYA workers are warned to present their cards not later than Friday.

Silva requested that as many as possible bring their cards to the office Thursday to facilitate his work in checking them for errors, adding, and signing them.

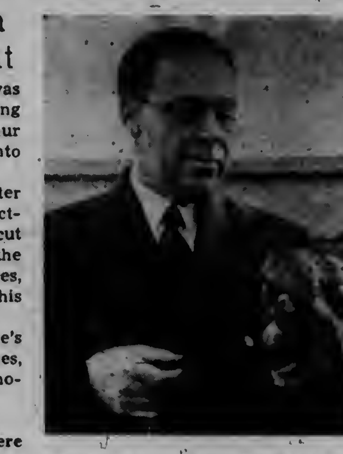
Geologic Marvels Revealed By Instructor

George L. Green Gets Own Exhibit

Long ago when the earth was cooling in the muggy mists arising from oozing marshes, a dinosaur some 20 feet in length stepped into a mud puddle.

About 3,000,000 years later George L. Green, geology instructor, walked up the Connecticut River Valley and picked up the tracks, brought them back in pieces, and cemented them together for his geology students to study.

Along with this mighty reptile's prints appear a set of smaller ones, "perhaps those of a young dinosaur," Green conjectures.



Bird Theory Repudiated

"Since prints of dinosaurs were usually those left only by the hind feet, scientists thought at first that they were left by large birds. This theory was repudiated because scientists have since found that there could not have been birds on earth at that time," Green explained.

He has traveled much to add to his collection of fossils and relics of the prehistoric world. In Oklahoma, Green found the ball of a socket joint that belonged to a brontosaurus at least 70 feet long.

"The hip bone of this reptile was six feet high," Green said.

In the jungles of Mexico's Yucatan where the ancient Mayas founded their civilization, Green found the remnants of black and green jade beads, worn by some Mayan maiden sacrificed at the sacred well of Chichen Itsa.

A real geologist at heart, George L. Green has traveled over a good portion of the Western Hemisphere (under the old definitions) collecting innumerable fascinating geologic specimens.

Girl Thrown In Well

"Every year," Green explained, "the Mayan chieftains called a colorful festival, decking themselves in gaudy, feathered robes. After much ceremony and primitive pomp, the most beautiful maiden in the village was chosen. She was born in the sacred well and thrown in to appease the rain god. Her beads were removed from her, cracked, and thrown in after her."

Relics Of Mayan Rituals Found

Green believes the jade beads he possesses to be the relics of one of these ceremonies. The Carnegie Foundation possesses many skulls of these maidens and even some of the cloth that they were clothed in. The cloth was preserved in an ancient perfume, the secret of which has never been discovered.

So, you see, choosing a Sophomore Sweetheart is basically the same idea the Mayas had some 2,000,000 years ago. And the rainy season's coming. And "Balboa Lake" will be rising.

Man Jumps In Well

"Incidentally," Green added, "Richard Haliburton jumped into this same well. Afterward, he got hold of a Mr. Rice, a friend of mine who is a chicle company representative in Mexico. With Rice as a witness, he jumped in again."

Green's geology class has members among the Pick and Hammer club who take field trips to obtain mineral specimens. At present they are engaged in collecting specimens from all the counties within convenient traveling distance of the college.

The specimens now in display in the show window in the south entrance of the college are from Lake County around the Middletown and Borax Lake region.

Lecture Series

Educators Unite To Gain Sympathetic Understanding Of Pan-American Peoples

By Bob Cuthbertson

In line with governmental agencies promoting Pan American relations, prominent educators of the bay area have united in a series of lectures to promote Hispanic solidarity.

Realizing the need for a sympathetic understanding between the Americas, five notable educators from various bay area colleges have banded together to offer a series of Monday night lectures at 8:15 p.m. at the University of San Francisco, in an effort to explain the situation confronting the Americas.

Dunne Opened Series

Opening the lectures series at the San Francisco University, Father Peter Dunne of that institution spoke on the country of Mexico, outlining the part played by the past and present administrations of that country, and their part in the drama of American solidarity.

Austin F. MacDonald, University of California political science professor, last evening spoke upon the present conditions in Argentina. Included in Macdonald's lecture were two motion pictures, By Air to Argentina, and the Incas of Peru. Macdonald has just returned from a trip to that country.

Luckmann Chairmans Meet

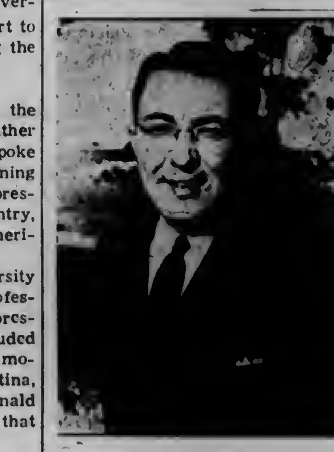
Under the chairmanship of Lloyd Luckmann, of this college, the remaining lectures in the series are scheduled to feature educational heads from the University of California, Stanford, and the San Francisco State College.

"The policy of the group," according to Chairman Luckmann, "is to promote understanding in the Americas, and the good neighbor policy."

"We need the South American's point of view to understand him and to fight a common enemy," said John Selig, college political science instructor, when questioned on the lecture series.

According to Luckmann and Selig, the present day teaching of South American affairs has not been adequate to meet the demands of interested students. Many schools throughout the country do not include such a course in their curriculums.

College Has Complete Study



"San Francisco Junior College, however," said Selig, "is one of the few colleges to feature an almost complete course on Hispanic relations and history." Important courses cited by Selig, which are scheduled to inform and promote understanding in South and Central America, included Economic Relations of the Americas, taught by William Goss, and Governments of the Americas, under the supervision of Selig. Including studies of present day problems, the courses mentioned by Selig are beneficial in the promotion of hemispheric understanding.

Luckmann, citing one example of our ignorance in understanding of the South and Central Americas, stated that many people of this country are wholly ignorant of the fact that the chief language of Brazil is Portuguese, and not Spanish as is popularly supposed. "Such misunderstandings as these," said Luckmann, "should be remedied, if Pan American understanding is to be promoted."

Three Lectures Remain

The remaining lectures to be presented at the University of San Francisco, according to Luckmann, will

Former Editor

Len Gross Named Aide To NBC Executive

Len Gross, Guardsman editor during the spring and fall semesters of 1940, was last week, named as assistant to Jennings Pierce, director of public service for the National Broadcasting Company's Western Division.

Gross was promoted to his new position from the NBC Guest Relations Staff. He has been with the company for about 10 months.

To Aid In Production, Announcing

He will aid Pierce in general matters of program production, writing, and contact work. Announcing experience with Kenneth Gapen, of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in presenting the morning Western Agriculture programs on KPO and the Red Network will also be included.

One of the two Guardsman editors to serve for a year, Gross carried The Guardsman to its second all-American award in the fall semester of 1940.

Named In President's Award

Active also in student government and affairs, the President's Award for 1940 was granted to Gross along with Mary Frances Malone, the first woman to act as Associated Student president.

The President's Award is an annually-bestowed honor to one man and one woman who have proved themselves to be outstanding in character, service, and ability.

Coincidental with Gross' promotion, Philip Ryder, another graduate of this college, was added to the NBC's mail-messenger department.

Christmas Jobs

Training Required For Work During Holidays

At least six hours training will be required of all students who wish to work in department stores during the Christmas season, stated Joseph A. Amori, college placement director.

Arrangements he added, have been made to provide this instruction free of charge to all interested students.

Because of the increased amount of Christmas workers and the shortage of full time employees, large stores find it practically impossible to devote time enough to sufficiently train students for holiday work, explained Amori. As a solution, he continued, a course in sales and wrapping, conducted by experienced instructors, has been organized which will provide the necessary training in six to eight hours of concentrated work.

The classes are free and will be conducted in sessions of one to two hours at the convenience of the individual students, Amori said.

Only those who complete this course will be placed in department stores, he added, but as the classes will be limited, all applications must be made at the college employment office this week. Classes will start November 1.

College Carnival

Success Hinges On CAB Ruling

Long life or sudden death for the proposed college carnival day will depend upon the verdict to be rendered by the Club Advisory Board sometime this week, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee.

"If the Club Advisory Board is enthusiastic, carnival day will become a tradition. If not it will die from lack of support," said Lindemann.

"Although we have been assured of the support of a few college societies already, without the CAB's approval the whole affair will fall through.

One Day For Festival

The idea, which was submitted to Lindemann by Bill Summer, is to set one day of the semester aside for a college festival. Students would be expected to wear costumes and prizes would be awarded for the most original costume. There would also be booths to be run by various organizations of the college. Site for the festivities would be either the college cafe or the men's gymnasium.

Collapse Would Be Shame

"It would be a shame to see carnival day collapse and be forgotten," Bill Postal, college finance chairman and committee member, said. "The committee has spent long hours of really hard work in the formulation of plans for the event."

The Welfare Committee at present consists of Lindemann as chairman; Virginia Ovenshire, vice-chairman; Florence Heffernan, Jo Ann Hall, Postal, Ugo Jacuzzi, Larry Coker and Steve Mohorovich.

College Choir Activities Officially Start Oct. 31

A Cappella Choir activities for the semester will officially begin on Friday, October 31, when the Choir will present a program to the Association of Women's Clubs Convention at the Western Women's Club, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

Included on the program will be Hodie Christus Natus Est, by Willan; Beautiful Savior, a twelfth century crusaders hymn, arranged by Christiansen; Turn Ye to Me, a Scotch Folk Song, arranged by Cain; Waltzing Matilda, an Australian Folk Song, arranged by Wood, and Ballad of the Trees, and the Master, by Matthews.

Of late, A Cappella Choir activities have been restricted to the auditioning of Choir members interested in being in smaller ensembles.

"This is not yet in a very advanced stage, but as far as I can tell these groups will probably be a women's trio, a men's quartet, mixed quartets, and other desirable combinations," said Miss Badger.

Committee Trouble

Publicity Faces Three Problems

Lack of photographic facilities, finances, and time are the reasons why internal publicity at the college has fallen off, George Coart, publicity director, revealed Thursday.

"A statement was made earlier this semester, by myself," Coart reminded, "that promised photographs at the end of every week which would depict the fore-going week's highlights. However, we find that this is impossible because of lack of funds and photographic materials.

"Also, those large signs which were promised for every rally may also appear to be missing," he added. "The reason for this is that due to the architecture of the college we are unable to post signs for fear of injuring the surface or halls of the building. Time means a great deal to us also, and that is just what we haven't got."

These challenges will be met however by posting smaller signs in some of the rooms which will publicize events, Coart emphasized. In the past these small signs have helped greatly, he added.

New Course Shows German Cultural Civilization

German 1lb, a new course dealing with culture and civilization of the German people from the Reformation to the present day, will be offered to students after October 28.

General college credit for one unit, for the last half of the semester will be given. The class will meet Tuesday and Thursday at 9 o'clock. No text will be required. Applicants should be Eric Mueller in Room 342 Monday, Wednesday or Friday.

American Education Week

Problem Of Juvenile Delinquency Stressed In Broadcast Next Week

That 36 per cent of the 4,445 inmates of San Quentin Prison are under the age of 24 gives significance to the problem of youth guidance. This subject will highlight the radio assembly broadcast, Monday, November 10, observing American Education Week, according to Clarence Ashman, student participator in the broadcast.

Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison, and James H. Phillips, sponsor of the Youth Correction Authority Act which provides for segregation of incorrigibles from those young offenders who can be rehabilitated, will show in an informal discussion what California has accomplished in solving guidance problems with delinquents, Ashman explained.

Chief Justice Praises Plan

According to former Chief Justice Charles Evan Hughes, Phillips' bill, passed September, 1941, is the most important piece of legislation concerning youth since the installation of the juvenile court.

The bill provides for three men recommended by the legislature and appointed by the governor to take control over convicted persons under 23 years of age. Duties of the authority, according to Ashman, is to determine the offender's background and his capacity to reform, to give him a thorough medical, psychological, social and psychiatric examination to find out why he is a law breaker.

Criminal Treated Scientifically

The criminal, Ashman emphasized, is treated scientifically. He is recommended to a state trade school, or an institution for the feeble-minded or the insane, or to a forestry camp. In some cases he is given probation. Beyond this, Ashman continued, the Authority decides from time to time whether the delinquent is responding to this treatment, whether he should be released, allowed a further limited degree of liberty, or maintained in strict custody.

As a part of the broadcast, a situation involving a typical juvenile delinquent will be dramatized by radio production classes.

That Apollo!

Committee of 7 Women Who Will Choose 'The King' Not Known

It seems that this is a season for mysteries, for, besides the cloud of darkness surrounding the seven stalwart men who will elect the Sophomore Sweetheart, a shroud of secrecy has enveloped the names of seven women who will elect the low freshman class' Apollo.

Bing Kirk, low frosh president, is very uninformative when questioned about Apollo. His only word had been that his plans are complete, that his committee is picked and that everything is in readiness for the election.

He adds, however, that each member of his group has come from a different field of activity around the college, and is very representative. He feels that his seven stalwart women will be capable of selecting the "cream of the crop" when the time is at hand.

His plan of election is in almost exact accordance with that of George Coart and his Sophomore Sweetheart election.

Apollo, the woman's ideal man, will, however, be elected in advance of the sweetheart. He will be chosen some time in November, directly preceding the Associated Men Students' fights, at which event he will be introduced.

Apollo, it has been set forth, will have the pleasure of escorting the Sweetheart to the soph formal.

He will receive a bid to the dance, and, although he will get no engraved loving cup, he will be acclaimed by all, wherever he goes, adored by the women and envied by the men.

Graduation Not Held Until June—Registrar

Though this semester closes on January 28 graduation exercises will not be held until June 5, thus the members of the fall class of '41 will be graduated from the War Memorial Opera House with members of the spring class of '41, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

The following is an additional list of graduates as announced by the registrar's office:

Francisco Aguilar, Howard Carle, Sanford Cohn, Kenneth Copenhagen, Donald Field, Margaret Halonen, Betty Healy, Anne Held, Noboru Hideshia, Borrie Hyman, Felix Justus, Dorotha Jorgensem, Hubert Lauerman, John Madocks, Mule McFarlane, Richard Naftaly, Robert Nishi, William Parks, Margaret Phelps, Albert Podeste, George Ratje, John Ricohermoso, William Rybensky, George Sinitzin, Tadayoshi Sugiyama, William Sumner, Takeshi Kusano, Francis Threlfall, Dorothy Thurmond, Thomas Woods, Stanley Young.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Coaching Laude

ALPHA GAMMA SIGMA, the college honor society, now definitely stands as a really valuable student organization in the college offering tangible evidence of its worth. The society has always played a noteworthy role through its sponsorship of several scholarships and as an incentive to scholastic betterment; but with the successful launching of a coaching program this semester, it has come into its own, so to speak.

Free coaching service to the general student body was begun last semester, but, like most growing things, the venture did not receive the notice and confidence it deserved. Few students took advantage of the coaching offers.

With the beginning of this semester, Alice C. Cooper, the group's very conscientious adviser, and the new body of student officers, took up the work of the previous semester. General organization was improved, support of the membership proved heartening, full co-operation from it was promised, and valuable publicity in The Guardsman was gladly provided.

Now, through the efforts of Miss Cooper, the officers, and members, the coaching aid service is functioning successfully. Demand by students for the service is, in some cases, taxing the supply of the society. Just two weeks ago a representative from San Jose State College journeyed here to gain information about the Alpha Gamma Sigma coaching system that a similar institution might be inaugurated in his college.

This event alone is cause for pride not only from the society but from the whole college. It is one more instance of the growing recognition that alert, progressive student activities and curriculum "firsts" have accorded the college throughout the nation. The leadership in country-wide collegiate press competition that The Guardsman has consistently maintained, the many unique terminal courses, and recent acknowledgment of the college by the Civilian Aeronautics Authority—even these few items point to a college that has no acquaintance with provincialism or lassitude.

The fundamental theory of the coaching aid service is a good one, and the system should not be looked upon as a last resort for the supposedly "slow student." The student that comes for aid in chemistry may be able to run circles around his coach when it comes to, say, political science. So, no student should suffer any qualms about applying for aid to the society, if anything, the student who does apply manifests a sincere desire to improve himself and should be applauded.

Though it has been emphasized in the news columns of this paper, let it be noted again that this service is absolutely free. No remuneration is at all considered by the coaches.

To those students who were disconcerted by last week's cinch notices, perhaps an easy solution lies with the Alpha Gamma Sigma coaching service.

Good Will Act

News that two students from "South of the Rio Grande" are to receive Civilian Pilot Training at this college as a good will gesture of the United States should be highly gratifying to the college and especially to Maj. George D. Richards, flight training instructor.

As was pointed out in the above editorial, this move is another example of the ever-widening sphere of influence being achieved by the college.

The act of the Civil Aeronautics Authority in selecting this college as one of two in the Western states to train youths from the Hispanic countries is also tacit testimony to the excellent work of Maj. Richards in turning out capable pilots so important to this country.

Shots At ...RAMdom

in the city that was, when Market Street was slowly building up from an avenue of trade shops and huckster carts, and the Barbary Coast was a festering ulcer of vice on the Embarcadero, Alicia Petroni married Antone Petrucci. Antone was the owner of a lateen-rigged fishing boat, when there used to be a wharf about a mile and a half past Fleischacker's Zoo.

In the city that is, an old lady in long black skirts, walking, tall and straight as a ramrod with the help of an ebony cane, may sometimes be seen strolling up Market Street. She is Mrs. Petrucci and she lives "in a room."

Quite a few people think she's "a bit queer," because she's never been quite able to believe that it was her Tony that the tide left on the dirty beach by the old Cliff House, so many years ago. Sometimes she rides down to the beach, "to get a little salt air." She sits in the sand and stares out to sea with the vision of a tiny, orange sail bobbing in the swell before her eyes.

Mrs. Petrucci might walk up to you some day and start talking to you. Don't walk away. She'll tell all about old San Francisco and her Tony, who was "the best damn fisherman" on the Coast . . . "before he went away."

THERE'S A

barber shop on Market Street that has fought a long battle with the union. Pickets used to march in an endless parade before it because it charged too little and stayed open too long. It still stays open too long and charges too little, but the pickets have gone. The proprietor has a little sign in his window saying, "We think .50 is enough, don't you?" The last time we saw this sign somone had been playing tricks. Right under that sign was another neatly painted placard. It said, "For you, bud, it's TOO much."

HE WAS

one of those big, genial men who wear chalk striped suits and loud ties. The kind that talks loudly and has a habit of slapping you on the back and telling you how much he likes you. One of those guys, see?

He came late to church last Sunday and clumped noisily down the aisle, coughed loudly, and thumped with a sigh into the pew.

The collection basket was passing slowly through the crowd, borne by a solemn individual who smiled condescendingly at the tinkle of nickels dropped by pudgy children and beamed at the large, coarse notes dropped by the well-wishing pillars of the church. The collection basket came to the pew of our noisy friend. All smiles and conviviality, he smiled at his pew mates and dipped his hand into his pocket.

"That's all right, folks," he beamed, "I'll take care of this."

"WE

must be getting closer to the city," said the farmer to his wife. "We're hitting more people."

• Conceited Men?
Editor, The Guardsman:

This epistle is to request that you examine personally any disillusioned freshman who would consider participating in a beauty contest, which, after all, is what this Apollo business amounts to. Chances are you'll find his halo fits too tight.

Election of a Sophomore Sweetheart is a worthy tradition, to be sure, but enough of such exhibitionism is sufficient. Too much is juvenile and, to many people, slightly repulsive.

Why not let our so-called Apollos show themselves on the gridiron and limit Sweetheart Contests to the fair sex.

Another Heckler.

• Disregard of Library Rule
Editor, The Guardsman:

As you know, in most college and university libraries the use of the library is subject to a good many restrictions. These usually take the form of a lot of semi-legal regulations and elaborate and complicated routines which must be observed by anyone desiring to make use of the library. Usually, too, the student is denied access to the book collection itself, and when he leaves the library is subjected to an examination of his person, which in some cases is merely a cursory inspection but in others an actual "frisking" for the detection of uncharged library books.

In these respects our own college library is different, now isn't it? Our students are everywhere in the library. They may enjoy to the utmost the educational benefits that derive from actual and direct contact with books as they stand on the shelves; and they may do so without any formalities beyond those of order and good taste. The only 'rule" the library seeks to impose—and its desirability ought to be quite apparent to everyone—is that every book must be charged out at the desk before it is taken from the library. This rule, I am happy to say, is respected by the very great majority of our students.

There are some, however, who show no regard for the rule—enough of them to create quite a serious library problem. Maybe a very few of these are light-fingered gentry such as clutter up every large assemblage: but I feel sure that most are simply careless or unknowing or both. They ought to be responsive to counsel. Maybe they can be informed of the havoc

ALL dressed up and no where to go? We hope not! But in case you have someplace to go, here are some ideas of what to dress up in.

It's smart to be in the red, especially with a new bright red date dress. As proof that dirndl's are still in, a new red one is featured in rayon crepe with a big jeweled pin at the neck, just above a gathered yoke. This year the dirndl is longer and the gathering begins a few inches below the waist line.

Another red comes with pleats on a peplum, and more pleats still running from the shoulder to the top of a plain yoke.

FASHION CAMOUFLAGE

History repeats itself, and so do fashions, for in again this fall are tunic dresses. Some are the real McCoy, but others are camouflaged by the use of cartridge pleats below the hip line, instead of a real tunic. Adding a peplum to a plain dress will also give the desired effect.

Do you like pleats? It's a good thing if you do and a misfortune if you don't because everything is pleated this year. Here camouflaging comes in again, for many of the so-called pleats are left unpressed, which is a help if you haven't a personal maid to keep every pleat in perfect condition. After one wearing, they have a way of getting that mussed-up, slept-in look.

EYE IT, TRY IT

If you are a two-piece addict, perhaps an outfit such as a very full velveteen skirt and a frilly blouse or a brilliant colored jersey skirt and blouse would be of interest. If you go for the latter, try long, droopy jewelry and a turban —then see what happens. No, really, we have no idea but it sounds intriguing.

Before getting off the subject of devastating date dresses, how about the brown and white print we stared at ecstatically the other day. It was a big and bold print, but, mind you, not too big nor too bold. To offset the brown it has a tiny band of white along the elbow-length sleeves, and another band lining the V-neck. There also are two large pockets to put Kleenex in.

'Tis rumored that the wearer made the dress herself, so don't think that the sewing machine is something that went out with the horse and buggy. If it did, it is staging a quick come-back. So better drag out your machine and see what you can cook up, or rather stitch up, for your next big date.

NAN SEES . . .

ear-rings with off-the-face hair-dos. And here is a pair for you with a taste for quaintness—oval silhouettes, black against white.

Again if you like ear-rings, and don't think they aren't being worn, take a gander about for that new New York miss who adorns her auditory epithelium with enamel daisys with several petals missing. Perhaps she tried a love-me-love-me-not problem, and before she finished the daisy had turned to enamel. Anyway, they are cute.

Spectator . . .

Looking Backwards . . . season highlights and dismal lowlights

TODAY, The Spectator takes a brief pause for breath and attempts a comprehensive analysis of what the entertainment world has brought us during the first quarter of Fall 1941, utilizing a summary of motion picture and theatrical reviews to date.

Thirteen ambitious productions of varied scope and trend have passed surveyance so far with eight receiving a commending nod, five shrinking under a cross-fire blast of indignation.

EIGHT RECOMMENDED TO DATE

An eight out of 13 average is quite well for an entertainment profession that concentrates on quantity, not quality. Hollywood's stock has soared highward in the past month, however, with the release of two pictures that literally glow with superiority. We'll go so far as to say The Little Foxes and Sergeant York are the finest pieces of cinema art to emerge from the studios in the last three years. Sergeant York, in particular, is immense. It has human interest galore and Americanism personified in every reel. It is the top film of the year to date. The Little Foxes romps closely behind but suffers slightly because of its grim, sordid, evil theme. Beauty may emerge even from the gloomy depths of tragedy and The Little Foxes has rare glimpses of rare charm despite its plot.

Other top films were Hold Back The Dawn and Lydia, both rich in dramatic wealth. Strangely, all four films rating the extraordinary mantle, have been relentless character studies. In sequence, we were given portraits of a Tennessee hillbilly, a shrewd relentless grasping woman, a debonaire charming European gigolo and finally a matured woman gazing wistfully back on her four loves. Gary Cooper, Bette Davis, Charles Boyer, and Merle Oberon were the principals involved and of the four, we'll give Cooper and Davis our nod for top performances.

NEW WINE DISAPPOINTS

Most disappointing picture has been the Franz Schubert opus, New Wine. Here was drama that through its sublimation to music sank into obscurity.

Worst picture of the period was the super-glamourized version of Belle Starr, Zanuck's Technicolor bust.

Pictures that almost hit the bottom were Lady Be Good, My Life With Caroline and A Yank In the R.A.F.

Most puzzling cinematic enigma of the year was Major Barbara. A good production with fine casting, the film was a trifle vague in developing Shaw's basic philosophy clearly. Thus there was a considerable ambiguity at the conclusion that put Major Barbara in the in-between class. We'll give the Shaw opus honorable mention.

Best direction . . . Howard Hawkes for Sergeant York followed by Bill Wyler for Little Foxes.

RELIGION TRANSITION SHINES

Best film scene . . . the subtle series of transition sequences in Sergeant York in which Gary Cooper as York "get religion" and ponders the riddle of war vs. the Bible.

Worst scene . . . the death scene of Gene Tierney in Belle Starr. Crudely done, it stretched and begged for pathos but fell flat.

Best stage play of the fall season to date . . . The Male Animal closely followed by Mambas' Daughters which was seen too late for review.

The Male Animal was a brilliant comedy that sparkled with wit and jest. Mamba's Daughters was a splendid vehicle in which a fine actress, Ethel Waters, weaved a beautiful spell with her performing.

Best supporting role in either film or stage production . . . anyone of the supporting cast in The Little Foxes.

IT SEEMS that the academic average of the college has improved over what it was last semester. There were fewer cinches given out than in the past. Perhaps this turn for the better can be attributed to the fact that there are fewer students enrolled than last semester.

The semi-annual art show in Hotaling Place, will have two watercolors entered by Richard Allman, college art instructor. Allman has had his paintings hung in prominent galleries around the country. He has two now on exhibition at the Palace of the Legion of Honor. George Sinitzin, college art student, will also enter some watercolors in the exhibit. This art show last year was some get-together. Artists were to be seen wandering around the streets, paintings under arm, at daybreak.

Seen along Monterey Boulevard is a sign reading "Free Dump For Clean Dirt." Obviously put there by some optimist who still had faith in human nature. A hard thing to find nowadays.

The landscape around this part of the city certainly has a forlorn and forgotten look. In fact it looks as if it were the practicing ground for an apprentice pyromaniac. In reality, it was burned by the San Francisco Fire Department to prevent the possibility of a fire later on. The fire department burns grass free of charge. So, if you want your back yard burned, don't hesitate, perhaps they might oblige with a hair singe if business is bad.

There has been rumors floating around about the starting of a date bureau for the lonely hearts around the college. At the University of California the date bureau is going frantic in search of men for the poor, forgotten co-eds. The ration of enrollment here is three to two in favor of the men. Perhaps it would be a good idea, at least it would keep the boys off the streets at night. Girls too, maybe.

* * *

With the bleachers on the way, it looks as if the college is developing towards the eventual campus that it will someday be. There are a few students who state that they will stay here long enough to see the proposed stadium and library built. There was once a fellow around here of the same ideas. He got to be such an institution that he was being pointed out to incoming students as the most prominent milestone in the shoe of education. If he had stayed here much longer he would have been installed with lights and air conditioning. He was reputed to have stayed here approximately seven semesters.

Your College Presents . . . Boy Scouts, Grown Now, Continue Their Training

By Iwanna Hayworth

IT MIGHT be interesting to start this column today with a bit of information gleaned from Nature Magazine on Progressive Forestry.

In part this article cites that a half-century anniversary in American forest conservation history is being observed this year. The first "forest reserve" was established in Wyoming 50 years ago, and the national forest system is this country's real achievement in conservation. This system has saved millions of acres of public domain timber and it has developed into the world's outstanding public forest enterprise.

The Joint Congressional Committee is working at the present time to put through a law which will regulate forest use under state laws. The idea is to outlaw forest destruction and require that timber cutting be done in such a way as to allow continuous production.

ILLUSTRATING TRAINING OF STUDENTS

Such is the training which the forestry majors of the college are undertaking. These students are learning how and when to conserve nature's gift to mankind. There are many fields which branch out of this department. Many students, upon termination of training, go into national forest work, such as rangers, fighting of fires, flood control, mining; others may prefer research fields of forestry, and still others may go in for the agricultural side of it and work in rural areas in all types of work from farming to aiding and instructing farmers in the terracing of their lands and conservation of the soil.

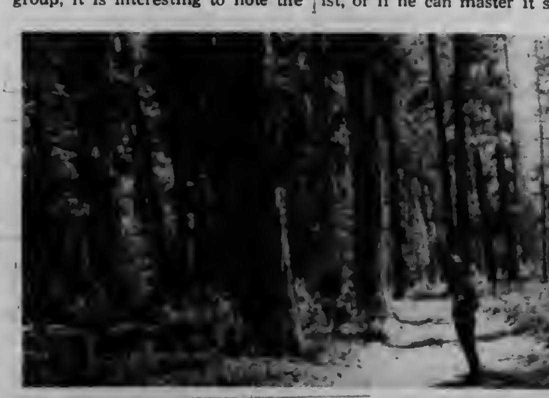
As to be expected, the forestry curriculum offered by the college since its organization, is preparatory to further training, in which case, students, after completing their work here, transfer to agricultural colleges elsewhere, such as the University of California at Davis, Oregon State, School of Forestry at Susanville, and many others.

FORMER BOY SCOUTS LIKE OPEN AIR

According to the adviser of this group, it is interesting to note the number of students in cosmopolitan areas who choose to take up this work. He maintained that, in part, it was probably thus chosen for the outdoor life which it offers.

Another illuminating item is the fact that almost every student who chooses forestry as a career was, as a boy, a Boy Scout, and has developed such a liking for the outdoors. The various collections of plant life and geological structures and the knowledge gained from them has and will prove invaluable to them.

REQUIRED COURSES



It seems that the mathematical phase of the required work in this field is the hardest for most students to master. If this subject comes easy to the potential naturalist, or if he can master it satisfactorily enough to get along, the rest of the required courses are not considered as difficult. Some of these courses are physics, chemistry, civil engineering, economics, and geology.

The last mentioned is very important in that the forester must have at least some knowledge about the soil and the geological structures found thereon. Many students who have had this training in geology but who need not specialize in it, take it up as a hobby. The laboratory sciences, which all must have but do not specialize in, lead to the research field of the natural sciences.

Organized by and for the interested students is the Forestry Fraternity. This group meets at least twice monthly and besides regular social meetings, they have speakers from the University of California, Stanford, other outlying schools, and sometimes a former student who gives talks illustrating the work which they are training for.

Going back again to social activities of the fraternity, the one really big affair of the semester is the dinner dance which they usually have somewhere in the East Bay. Other activities include hikes, field trips, etc.

Information concerning this department could be quite lengthy and much more in detail, but since only a limited space is allotted for these topics each issue, it's "30" for now, and Friday, the business department will be featured.

Shown above are several forest rangers in the midst of their daily work. Of course, this type of work is only a part of the training which the majors in the forestry department undertake.

RAMS DEFEAT PANTHERS

RAMblings
By Bill Cothran

Pasadena Contest Changed; Squad To Wear Jackets

WHEEEE

Members of the college grid squad who are to make the trek south to engage Pasadena Junior College's Panthers in the Rose Bowl will be in for an extra day of leisure. Head Coach Lee Eisan revealed last week that the encounter has been moved up one day, or from Friday, November 7 to Thursday, November 6. The Rose Bowl, scene of the fracas, has been made unavailable for the original date, so the story goes, due to a local program.

College students will have an opportunity to see just how dapper Eisan's boys will look as they arrive in the southland, when traveling jacket's are distributed on Tuesday, November 4, which is two days before the Rams entrain. The traveling jackets will probably be the same as last year, a natty red and white, two-tone satin job.

LATENT TALENT

A great (not Hollywood great—really great) athlete has been haunting the hallowed halls of this institution undiscovered. A great mystery surrounds the fact that no one has as yet discovered his genius, because, as is the case with some great athletes, he is definitely not the shy, self-conscious type. Recently, when queried regarding his talents, he was heard to say: "Whaddaya mean good? I'm colossal!" This semi-superman possesses marked ability in baseball, basketball, football, and especially tennis. This stupendous chap travels about under the nom de plume of "THE Cut-Rate Count of Castlemont."

MANEUVERS

The United States Army is not content to take Frank Molina from the camp of the Ram into the camp of Uncle Sam, but last Tuesday they had to send a representation from Fort Chronkhite to endeavor to "take" the entire squad of the Red and White. We are indeed behooved to report that, as seems to be the custom at Chronkhite, the soldiers were sent back with their "shavetails" tucked between their legs.

STILL ROLLING

The soccer squad, off of the showing against San Mateo Junior College last Wednesday, still appears to be showing improvement over early-season efforts. Last Wednesday they spotted the Bull Dogs a 3 to 1 lead at half time, and then came back to pull a 6 to 3 victory out of the fire. Johnny Lazar, veteran from last year, personally kicked three goals to lead the individual scoring column. Hope is still extant for a crack at the league championship.

Basketball Tournament Swings Into Final Two Weeks; Features Spartans All-Americans In Contest

Swinging into the final two weeks of competition, the basketball tournament will feature the intramural calendar again this week, with games scheduled for today and Thursday, Jack Brady, faculty adviser, disclosed.

The game holding the most interest today is the contest between the undefeated Spartans, and the fourth place All-Americans, champions for the past two semesters.

If defeated today, the All-Americans undoubtedly will lose any possibility of retaining their championship, which they have cherished since the intramural program was inaugurated.

True, the Spartans have defeated the weaker squads in the tournament, but today, are meeting a quintet possessing speed, a better than average defense, and a forward with a deadly shooting eye in Jack Hare. With a strong schedule still in sight, the Spartans must win today, or they too, will lose all chance of winning the crown.

Teams Undefeated

Although there are three squads remaining undefeated, the Newman Club, Goats, and Spartans, any quintet already losing two games, still has a mathematical chance of winning the third position. The three top squads still have to play each other, and, with the aid of a few upsets, any squad is capable of winning third place medals.

Following is the schedule for today and Thursday, October 30:

3:15 p.m.
Rabbits vs. Phi Lambda Epsilon
Newman Club vs. Japanese Students
4:15 p.m.
Blitz Boys vs. Rifle Club
Spartans vs. All-Americans
Thursday—3:15 p.m.
Goats vs. Japanese Students
Rabbits vs. Rifle Club
4:15 p.m.
Blitz Boys vs. All-Americans
Tri Epsilon vs. Spartans

Spartans Win, 33 to 31

Games last week found the Spartans winning a close 33 to 31 victory over the Phi Lambda Epsilon team, in a game which see-sawed back and forth until the final minute of the contest, when the Spartans sank a clincher to win the thriller.

The All-Americans defeated the Japanese Students 51 to 38, with Jack Hare scoring the majority of the points.

Remaining in the running for third place, the Rabbits triumphed against the Blitz Boys, 42 to 36, with Bob Cavanaugh leading the attack.

Race Set Next Friday

Next Friday, October 31, the cross country run will be staged, Russ Sweet, track coach announced. The two and one-quarter mile distance will start between halves of the Ram-Salinas football game scheduled to be played on the college practice field. The start and finish of the race will be on the practice field, rain or shine, Sweet said.

Favorite to win the race is Stuart Boles, who is expected to break the tape in near record time, but will be offered stiff competition from such notables as Don Hewitt, Norman Smith, and Clifford Wakefield.

Any of these cindermen may provide an upset and break the existing

Boxing

Pugilists Developing Fast For Intramurals

With workouts becoming tougher every day, boxers of the college are fast approaching peak condition for the coming intramural bouts, according to Jim Jensen, boxing instructor.

Many classy ringmen are developing under the experienced guidance of Jensen, and, with several returning from last year, this year's intramural and Associated Men Students smoker should be one of the best in the history of the college.

Progress has been slow up to this time, reports Jensen, as the men have devoted most of their time to getting the kinks out of their legs, improving their wind and polishing up on their timing.

Stars Returning

This semester will find such men as Dave Hunicke, a classy 165 pounder; Duke Drake, a rugged heavyweight and holder of the division's golden crown; Bryant Finch, a 176-pound contender; Ken Ludlem, also in the 165-pound class, and George Chew, who performs in the 145-pound division.

Jensen is finding some difficulty in reaching all of the men signed up for boxing this year. He has between 40 and 50 in his Monday and Wednesday afternoon boxing class and 10 to 15 more in his Monday and Wednesday police training class.

Training Necessary

He has issued strict orders that no fellow will be allowed to enter the ring unless he has gone through a strenuous training period. This is a safeguard against a permanent injury to a fellow that might happen if he was not in near perfect condition.

The bouts of last year's carnival are still being talked about in college boxing circles, because of the way in which the fighters went to work on each other. The most prominent of these long-to-be-remembered bouts was the "gruge clash" between Al Spieller and Dick Wilson. Wilson finally won in the second round by a TKO when his opponent was unable to continue because of a cut over his left eye that was bleeding profusely.

Grant In Slugfest

Many people, however, considered the Warren Grant-Nick Marota battle the best of the evening. These two 145-pounders had the crowd on its feet from the opening seconds to the closing ones, staging a terrific slugfest which saw the latter spouting blood before the end of the first round.

Soccer

Rams Catch San Mateans Score 6 to 3

By Jimmy Lee

Coming from behind with a beautiful piece of offensive playing, the Ram soccer squad rolled over a favored San Mateo team 6 to 3 at the Crocker Amazon playground last Wednesday afternoon.

Outstanding for the college squad was John Lazar, who scored three of the team's six points, and Valerian Penkoff, who accounted for two other goals, while Clarence Waddington kicked in the last digit.

Rams On Defensive

"The boys looked pretty bad in the first half, staying on the defensive almost entirely, while San Mateo took the offensive, and as the half-time score shows, we were behind, 3-1," Jensen said.

Jensen must have given the squad a pretty peppy talk in between halves, because by the end of the third period the score was 3-2 with San Mateo still holding the lead. By the fourth quarter the Rams had finally pushed into the lead which they held onto until the game ended with the college kickers on the long end of 6-3.

Jensen Satisfied

Coach Jensen was very pleased with the boys after the way in which they improved their game in the second half, and feels that they can beat any other team in the league. A boy who caught Jensen's eye was Bob Forrest for San Mateo, who scored all of San Mateo's points.

"We lost Rene Contreras and George Gluck because of their ineligibility, and also Ted Theodus, who is ineligible in all junior college games," Jensen said. He finished by saying that "if we play the brand of soccer that we played in the second half of the San Mateo tussle, we will undoubtedly win the league championship."

Rams' Slow Start

It will also be interesting to note that in all of the colege's games, the soccer team has always started very slowly and has been on the defensive throughout the entire first half, but when the second half got under way, the opposition found themselves playing an entirely different team.

This point of playing defensively in the first half, and offensively in the third period, can be seen in the California game, when the Bear squad scored all of its five points in the first period, but couldn't buy a point in the remaining periods.

Pasadena Game To Be Moved Up

The men's physical education department of the college revealed last Wednesday that football team's game against Pasadena Junior College has been postponed from Friday night, November 7, to Thursday night, November 6.

Postponement of the game, which is to be played in Pasadena, was forced by the Rose Bowl, scene of the encounter, being utilized for a local Pasadena civic function on the night of the 7th, college officials added.

Eisanmen Snap Lethargic Spell; Turk Terzian Plus Blocking Give 13-0 Score

By Bill Cothran

Rediscovering the formula for victory (Armand "Turk" Terzian plus blocking), a smoothly efficient Ram machine rolled over the Sacramento Junior College Panthers to the tune of 13 to 0 last Saturday night at Seals Stadium.

After kicking off to the Panthers, the Rams gained possession of the ball, and on their first offensive play of the evening sent Terzian through a gaping hole over tackle for a 46-yard gainer. A desperate shoestring tackle was all that kept Terzian from going the entire distance.

Score on Power

It was on a sustained drive for 60 yards, rather than a breakaway effort, that found Pat Castellano plunging over the goal line from one yard out to ring up six points, midway in the second period. Terzian missed the attempt at conversion.

Terzian sparked the drive, which was highlighted by perfection in the carrying out of offensive blocking assignments by the Ram forward wall.

The Rams were threatening again in the closing minutes of the second quarter. Billy Wada dropped a pass into the arms of Temp Davies on a play which carried 52 yards, from the Ram 40 to the Panther 8. On the next play, however, a pass from center which sailed over Wada's head ended the threat.

Interception Brings Second

Another score was chalked up for the Red and White when Art Ekdall intercepted a Sacramento pass on his own 34 and carried it to the Panther 32 before he was downed. Terzian went over right tackle on the next play, cut back, and negotiated the entire distance to pay dirt. This time Terzian made good the extra point.

Two of the college ends, Ed Cassidy and Bob Jones, put their heads together and nearly came up with six points. With the Sacramento tail back fading to pass, Jones broke through to down him. Cassidy caught the attempted pass and appeared to be in the clear. After three steps, however, Cassidy tripped and the scoring opportunity was gone.

While refusing to yield a scoring opportunity, the Rams were also rolling up a heavy statistical victory. Figures on net gain from passes and scrimmage favored the Rams 251 to 51.

Rams Overcome Jinx To Triumph

The Rams rose to unlimited heights against the Sacramento Panthers last Saturday to display the brand of football which Coach Lee Eisan has long been waiting for ever since the San Francisco State game.

. . . Although underdogs in this game, and rated to lose their second conference encounter, the college eleven unleashed a furious ground attack to keep the Panthers in their own territory most of the night, and virtually command every department of play.

. . . Not only were large holes opened in the Sacramento forward wall, but the few passes thrown were so neatly executed that everything the Rams attempted seemed to be the logical thing at the moment.

. . . Superior man on the field was Turk Terzian, who on the first running play of the game for the Rams, rambled from his own 20-yard line to the Sacramento 35, setting up the initial score for the squad. Later in the second half, Terzian raced 33 yards through a broken field to score the second touchdown unmolested. His running was by far the best individual effort staged during the game.

. . . Although hard hit for replacements, the squad exhibited more power than any game to date, mainly through the efforts of Glenn Smith, who played great ball at guard; Augie Kalnen, who with Ed Cassidy held up the brunt of the left side of the line; Bill Brown, who has been playing great ball all season, though not receiving much notice; and the usually consistent Bob Hoffman, who smeared many a play.

. . . This game marked the first time that the Rams have succeeded in crossing the opponent's goal line twice in a game.

. . . Temple Davies, repeatedly kept the Panthers back on their heels by his towering punts deep in the coffin corner. Davies, later in the contest, was on the receiving end of a flat pass thrown from the hands of Billy Wada, which gained 52 yards.

. . . With one victory, one tie, and one loss in conference play, the Rams still retain a mathematical chance of retaining their crown, which is now being bidded for by a strong, undefeated San Mateo eleven.

. . . In the dressing room at half-time, Jim MacGowan, regular left end, who was unable to play because of ill health listened to Coach Eisan's talk, as did Dick Souza, tackle, who was forced to hang up the moleskins for good, to find work.

. . . Most noteworthy improvement of all, besides the running game, was the blocking, which finally arrived, enabling the reverses and off-tackle plays to function properly.

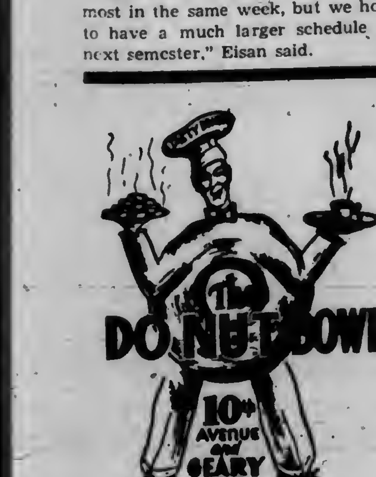
. . . Making the trip into the Bay Region along with the Panthers, was the 35-piece Sacramento band, which serenaded the small handful of gatherers who witnessed the game.

. . . Midway in the first half, a sprinkling of rain fell for about five minutes, but caused no hazard to the players' footing.

Water Polo

De Lano Stars In Ram Defeat By Olympics

Playing before a large crowd of enthusiastic spectators, the college water polo team went down in stubborn defeat before a powerful Olympic Club Reserve squad to the tune of 10 to 7 Wednesday, October 2, at the Club's pool on Post and Mason.



The contest was very close throughout, with the lead see-sawing back and forth all night.

"The boys looked good out there considering that this was the first game they have played," Coach Allan Eisan said. The outstanding men for the Ram splashers were Phil De Lano, who scored most of the goals, Warren Kleist, and Bill Hickey.

In speaking about the Winged "O" Reserves, Eisan said "They were very good, but they have had more experience than our boys." The Club Reserves have such outstanding swimmers as Bill Lucas, who swam for the Red and White last semester, Henry Paris, Don Bartlett, Spud Chandler, and Charley England.

One of the outstanding players for the Olympic Club, and who made a number of their goals, is Don Grannis, attendant of the college this semester.

"Our season starts and finishes almost in the same week, but we hope to have a much larger schedule by next semester," Eisan said.

Eight Bay Area Swimming Teams To Meet November 8

Eight swimming teams from various colleges throughout the Bay Area will participate in a swimming play day, Saturday, November 8, at the YWCA, according to Thelma Soo Hoo, manager of the Women's Athletic Association swimming team.

The day's program announced by Miss Soo Hoo, will consist of free style, backstroke, and breast stroke racing, selection of the swimmer with the best crawl form, a comic relay, in which one swimmer will race with an umbrella, and her teammate holding a ping pong ball in a teaspoon, a diving exhibition by Helen Crlenkovich, and a gay '90's aquadrama.

After the program there will be an open swim for all in attendance, Miss Soo Hoo pointed out, and a lunch in the Y cafeteria.

Any women of the college, whether WAA members or not, may attend the play day and join in the open swim after the program, Miss Soo Hoo said, but she advised all women who wish to attend to leave their names in the WAA box in the office of the gymnasium.

Twenty Students Invited To Attend Tennis Clinic

Twenty students have been invited to attend a tennis clinic sponsored by the National Tennis Commission of the National Section of Women Athletics, according to Pat Mooney, tennis club manager.

Women attending the clinic which will be held at the University of California campus Monday, November 3, from 2 to 5 p.m., are asked to leave their names with either Miss Mooney or in the WAA box in the women's gymnasium. Women wishing to attend the clinic need not be WAA members, Miss Mooney added.

Margaret Osborne, Pacific Coast champion and Dorothy Head, Washington and Oregon singles champion, will be present and give help to any women wishing it. There will be an opportunity for women to play, Miss Mooney pointed out.

Because the clinic takes place on a college day during college hours, an attempt will be made to excuse those out of class, Bertha Keller, chairman of the physical education department, said.

Campus Defense Turns Out Successfully

Confusion hit the college last Tuesday when reports came that the army men of Fort Cronkhite, armed with pigskin grenades, maneuvered their way on the campus in an attempt to gain possession of the football field and the men's gymnasium.

Word got to General Eisan a little too late, and, before he could gather his troops, the Chronkhite invaders made their way into the gym and changed into their battle uniforms.

Quickly General Eisan commanded his troops to get ready for action and halt any further advancement by the enemy, who by this time had made their way to the battle field.

The college defenders were quck to follow the Chronkhites to the field of combat in order to prevent any damage being done. They were met by the determined, confident, and exceptionally serious invaders, who had their anti-aircraft ready for whatever the college had to offer.

But sabotage hit the defenders when General Eisan learned that Privates Glenn Smith, Pat Castellano, Frank Molina, and Bob Hufnagle would be unable to appear in the defense of the campus. He quickly rushed substitutes to the front and the first bomb went off.

The college defenders got the first jump and with seemingly fast progress, had the Chronkhites retreating toward their goal line. Then it happened! Sergeant Turk Terzian exploded into the invader's end zone and registered six bullseyes for the college.

Back came the Chronkhite regiment, but advancement failed when they were met by a stubborn defense, and, before they could get into Ram territory, were forced to surrender the pigskin.

This time General Eisan decided to use an aerial attack, and, with Sergeant Terzian's bombs hitting their mark, the invaders retreated into their end zone for the second time and the college's total went to twelve.

At this point General Eisan shoved his second troop into the fray and again the Chronkhites were pushed back. With Lieutenants Bill Wada and Temple Davies leading the attack, the enemy was forced to retreat for the third time.

Things looked easy to General Eisan, who had the situation well in hand and reported to the hilltop that there need be no fear of the invaders ever reaching the building.

In went the third troop and before the Chronkhites could rearm and order more ammunition, they were back to their end zone and retreated a fourth time.

By this time the enemy was fairly battered and could afford little competition for the advancing campus defenders. After they were forced to retreat for the fifth time, they decided to wave a white flag and call it a day.

General Eisan and his shock troops, proud of their successful defense of the campus, gave the surrendered Chronkhites the right to a shower and sent them back home.

Heads bowed, the invaders left for Fort Chronkhite, disappointed at their unsuccessful attempt at invasion.

Community Chest

From Small Agency In 1922 Organization Grows To Huge Combination Of Aid-Groups

By Jack Robinson

In the present day of contributions for various organizations it may seem to John Public that he must reach into his pocket almost every day. Yet, if the Community Chest did not operate he would have 82 more contributions to make. The Chest is a combination of aid giving organizations who give help and comfort to those who are ineligible for aid from the county.

The first semblance of anything that appeared to resemble the modern Community Chest was seen on October 11, 1922 when the Council of Social and Health Agencies named A. B. C. Dohrmann chairman of the agency. This organization was constituted by representatives of all of the social, health, and welfare organizations in the city. From its small beginning the agency looked for government help but that help never came directly. At that time H. J. Maginnity, secretary of the agency made trips covering the Eastern part of the United States, studying the methods and organization of the 100 other Community Chests.

Reasons For Center

It was realized early that some center must be made for the various independent organizations so that they could function more helpfully to those who needed aid. The three main reasons that this union was necessary were:

1. The public was becoming annoyed at the number of requests that were being made.

2. There was no means to determine whether all of the agencies were reputable.

3. There was much waste in the distribution of the funds collected.

Purpose of Chest

It was in January of 1923 that the first San Francisco Community Chest drive was held. That drive collected $2,129,200.00. The purpose of the Chest was then and is today threefold.

1. To collect funds by voluntary contribution.

2. To distribute these funds to the proper organizations.

3. To analyze the methods and operations of each agency.

These analyzations showed whether two agencies were carrying on the same functions and if so how they could be merged. The foundations were laid and it was but a matter of time until the maximum of good could be done at a minimum of cost.

Men Students Require Medical Examinations

The following students do not have a medical examination on file in the Men's Gymnasium. It is a requirement that all men students, whether enrolled in Physical Education or not, have a medical examination by the school doctor. The doctor is in his office every afternoon except Friday from 1 to 3, and on Friday morning from 9 to 11. The doctor's office is in Rooms 114 and 117 in the Men's Gymnasium.

Additional Candidates Wanted For Men's Chorus

No response has been made to the request of Charles McKiernan for additional candidates for the Men's Chorus, McKiernan, instructor of the group announced Wednesday.

All types of voices are needed, particularly those of tenor range, according to McKiernan.

High Soph Formal

Breakfast Site, Orchestra Unnamed

A site for the high sophomore class breakfast, to follow the formal, December 13, and the selection of an orchestra remain as the only unfinished details for the climaxing evening of Sophomore Week, according to Class President George Coart.

With the Beresford Country Club now definitely reserved for the dance, the committee is turning its efforts to the breakfast and the music.

Something Novel Wanted

Nothing has been done, as yet, concerning the breakfast. Last year Fisherman's Grotto was used quite successfully, but "something new and something different" is desired for this year by the group in charge, which desired to make the 1941 formal and the breakfast the "best ever." Suggestions are requested from the students of the college, and will be accepted by any committee member: Mary Stephens, Jean Sheehan, Ward Swartzman, Dick Naftaly, Ed Coffin or Chairman Myron Du Bain, or class officers: Coart, Lois Stenhart or Charles Howe. Suggestions may also be taken to the student office, Room 169.

Five Bands Heard

Coart reports that the orchestra auditions have been continuing throughout the past two weeks. "So far, my committee and I," quoting Coart, "have heard five bands, but we have not found one completely satisfactory yet. One has a good trumpet section, one has a good saxaphone group, a third is much too 'hot,' a fourth has a fine vocalist and a fifth is somewhat 'corny.' We hope to strike a happy medium soon. In the meantime, however, we are still accepting suggestions from students as to bands."

Junior College Council Holds First Meeting Today

Establishment of policies and principles for the coming year will be the work of the Junior College Council of the college at its first meeting today, according to George Green, geology instructor, and president of the group.

"Our most important job this semester will be to work out a suitable program for American Education Week for the college," Green asserted. "Education Week will take place from November 9 to 16, so we have no time to waste," he said.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

• Bible Club . . . First meeting, October 30, in Room 208, at noon, to study the Bible, its histories, theme, and characters.

Everyone is welcome to come.

Dr. Skarstedt is sponsor for the group.

• Forester's Fraternity . . . Hike through Muir Woods, Sunday, November 2. Meeting at the bus depot at Fifth and Mission streets at 8 a.m. Bring a lunch. Bus fare will be fifty-five cents, round trip.

• HEA . . . Business meeting to be held Wednesday, October 30, at 12:45 in Room 158.

Initiation to be held at Sigmund Stern Grove, November 6, from 4:30 to 9 p.m.

• Omicron Phi Pi . . . The Neutrality Act, topic of discussion at the Omicron Phi Pi meeting, held at the home of Michael Zarchin, 295 Urbano Drive, tonight.

Non-initiated members urged to attend, Zarchin said. Club keys will be available in ten days. A representative for the Club Advisory Board will also be chosen tonight.

• Pi Mu Gamma . . . All members are urged to attend the next meeting, which will be held in Room 136, at 7:30 p.m., on October 28.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Kruger, noted Bacteriologist, speaking on "Influenza." He will also show a picture.

Convention

S. D. Shankland, Secretary Associated School Administrators, Visits College

For the purpose of determining the speakers and the probable meeting places for the convention of The American Association of School Administrators to be held here in February, S. D. Shankland, executive secretary of the organization is visiting San Francisco and the Bay Area.

While looking over the college with a party including President Archibald J. Cloud and J. Emmet Hayden, secretary of the San Francisco Convention & Tourist Bureau.

Shankland estimated that about 10,000 participants would be in San Francisco for the convention, and that it was primarily so that the executives of the Boards of Education could discuss the needs that were most urgent in the schools and colleges in their cities. The principal meetings will be held in the Veterans War Memorial Auditorium and hotels about the bay area. The convention will be held from Saturday, February 21 to Thursday, February 26. There will be about 300 speakers who will give their ideas and methods for better education.

Three Subjects Named

Some of the subjects that will be discussed are the forming of better and more unified relationships with the other countries of the Western Hemisphere, and the rehabilitation of children in the primary schools to the correct ways of health.

Also there will be a discussion on the problem of what to do about furthering the education of these men who are being released by the armed forces of the country.

Education-Plan Stated

It must be decided whether the National Youth Administration of the San Francisco Junior College will undertake this education program. When asked which he thought should have the opportunity, Shankland said, "decidely the Junior College should have it. They have the equipment and the faculty. The NYA schools are definitely a 'fly by night' affair."

As a prominent educator, Shankland voiced his opinion regarding the statement that the youth of America are not fully appreciating and attempting to keep democracy by saying, "it is not the students, it is some of the older people who are leading the youth astray."

Talent Bureau

Audition Chances Still Await Students

Talented students who failed to audition with the Talent Bureau are urged to communicate with Flossita Badger, Wesley Muscio, Talent Bureau Board advisers, or Irwin Cohen, student director of the project, immediately, stated Cohen.

There is especially a shortage of specialists, novelty numbers, comedians, and such," he commented.

Anyone who would like to be heard should see a member of the Talent Bureau Board, and give them the times at which they will be available for auditions.

City Council Names Cafe As Reception Tea Site

The Ingleside Taraval Coordinating Council has chosen the college cafeteria as the site of their reception tea for Deputy Superintendent of Schools Albert Graves on Monday, November 3, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

The reception will be divided into three half hour periods; the first being taken up with the tea, after which the guests will gather in Room 100 where they will hear talks by Graves and Archibald J. Cloud, college president. A tour of the building will be conducted during the last half hour.

That Missing Record Case Finally Over

By Emmanuel Hein

It was as simple as all that. The case of the missing phonograph records which has plagued the faculty and student administrators of the college has been solved and the credit goes to Aspasia Vasilatos, Associated Students secretary. And where were the records found? Why right in the very room where the mystery was being pondered.

To start at the beginning of the case it seems as if the rifle club borrowed the records last semester to use for one of their dances. The records were supposedly returned to their special cabinet in the supply room. Came the mixer dance which was held approximately a month ago. Miss Niemeyer, social committee chairman, sent down to the supply room for the 60 odd disks. Imagine the surprise and amazement of Miss Niemeyer when she learned of the loss.

After the mixer dance was over a determined search was started by the social committee. First the president of the rifle club, Jim Juri, was consulted. In revealing all he knew about the case Juri exempted the rifle club of any blame by revealing that the records were returned to the Associated Students office, Room 169, by a club member following the rifle club dance.

Where had the records gone from the Associated Students office?

After several weeks of fruitless search the Executive Council at a meeting held last Tuesday, appointed a committee whose one big purpose was to recover the lost disks. This bit of action on the part of the Ex Council prompted the aforementioned Miss Vasilatos to do a little snooping of her own.

Acting on the statement by Juri that the rifle club had returned the records to the Associated Student office, Miss Vasilatos thought of the possibility of the wax works still being some place on the office premises. Said deduction led the college's secretary on a thorough search through every drawer, closet, and cabinet.

And it was in one of these seldomly used cabinets that Miss Vasilatos gained reward for her integrity and perseverence, for lo and behold there were the long lost records, a little dusty but otherwise none the worse for their temporary retirement.

Staff Photographer Needed; Apply Room 134

In urgent need of a photographer, Borrie Hyman, Guardsman editor, sends out a request for anyone interested in the position of staff photographer. The photographer must have a synchronizing flash-gun with the camera and equipment to produce 8 by 10 enlargements. Any person interested should see Hyman in The Guardsman office, Room 134 on Wednesday or Friday of this week at 10 o'clock.

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

Algy Meets The Board Of Education

"NOW that we've taken a quick glimpse of the whole college, we get down to brass tacks, huh?"

Those were Algernon J. College's words as he and The Editor picked up last Friday's discussion on the relation of the college to the city and the breakdowns in authority in both the school system and the college itself.

"That's right," we replied, "from now on in our endeavor to acquaint you and the rest of the Associated Students with your college, we're going to select the main divisions diagrammed in last Friday's chart for separate treatment."

"That means that we start with the people of San Francisco," Algy said, remembering the chart.

"Not quite. We begin with the Board of Education, charted just below the people. We'll assume that the Board represents a condensation of public opinion in San Francisco; for, though all members are appointed by the city mayor, each appointee must be approved by the voters at a general election.

"And whether you want to know or not, Algy, the present board members are Philip Lee Bush, president; Richard E. Doyle, vice-president; Mrs. Lloyd Dinkelspiel; C. Harold Caulfield, Mrs. Edwin R. Sheldon, Frank Sykes; and Harold Christie.

"From the sneer on your face, I see you're going to ask where you fit into the Board of Education."

"Right the first time, said Algy. What has the board ever done for me?"

"You drive a car don't you, Algy? And if you're like us, that parking lot under construction will look pretty good on a rainy day."

"Oh, I get it," quipped Algy, the Board was responsible for that."

"You're right for the first time, too. The Board of Education is the supervising agency for all city public schools. All matters pertinent to the secondary school system—that includes this college—must pass through the Board of Education. Even recommendations from the Superintendent of Schools must be approved by the Board at its weekly meetings."

Algy grew serious for a moment. "Tell me," he said, "is this control good or bad for us at the college?"

That question took us off guard. It requires more than a one word answer.

"Many students, Algy," we began, "feel rather piqued by the Board's more or less inflexible financial policies. It has wreaked havoc with two specific college appointments, namely a paid office secretary for the Associated Students and a publicity director which the college vitally needs. It seems that one of the Board policies bans salaried positions financed by student funds. And it is possible that there are other disadvantages."

"You don't make the Board look very good," Algy smiled.

"It really isn't that bad, Algy. On the credit side we could start for instance with this college itself, and more recently, the parking lot and bleachers. Besides a certain control of student finances is not entirely undesirable. You know every requisition from this college for supplies and all financial transactions must pass through the auditor of the Board.

"There are other advantages not so readily discernible. I almost forgot, being under the aegis of the Board allows us about two weeks more of summer vacation."

"Maybe the Board isn't so bad after all," Algy said. "And I do see that I am indirectly affected by any action the Board might take with the college."

"Right, Algy, and this Friday we'll see what we can do with the college administration."

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

JOHN L. LEWIS, the CIO labor tycoon, took a verbal tongue-lashing last Monday evening that was the essence of epitomized candor.

Delivered by the President, and heard by probably millions of Americans, this stunning denunciation of John L's policy was only a passing remark in a speech of unprecedented extent and importance. Yet this is not the end of the furor to which those passing remarks referred.

Yes, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned Hitler and the Nazi expansionist doctrine; he mentioned the sinking of U.S. ships; he mentioned the infringement made upon American sea rights; he also mentioned Mr. Lewis.

This latter is something a bit new, the former topics are all old stuff insofar as the United States and her present and past history is concerned. They are the trite, but important, items of everyday speechmaking right now. Labor versus Roosevelt is unusual.

LABOR WAS CODDLED

Ever since the New Deal came into office on that memorable day so long ago, labor has been getting the breaks, and, in the long run, the best of things. It seems that the happy days of labor influence and priority are soon to pass.

It may be that they are passing but temporarily—it may be that this is the beginning of the end, and it may be that labor in this country is going to have to toe the mark in the future.

Roosevelt rode into power on the crest of a wave of working men. He gained in strength and popularity through the efforts and appreciation of the working men. And he has cemented that power and popularity with the consent and belief of the working men.

But there's a knife at labor's back ready to force it into submission. Frankie holds tightly onto the handle of that knife. What's more, the knife was a gift from the many unions to their benefactor.

All this does not speak too well for our commander-in-chief.

THINGS ARE NOT WHAT THEY SEEM

The actual facts, however, are not what they may seem. If ever labor deserved, and perhaps needed, a knife in the back—it is now, with full intent on the part of the wielder to use it to the best advantage. Why? For excellent reasons, to-wit:

Labor has found Adolph Hitler a benefactor and a detriment in an indirect manner. He has helped to make labor strong, for he has encouraged democracy here by destroying it over there. He has and is helping to make labor weak by necessitating supervised and governmentally controlled work in the effort to defeat him.

Labor admits that Hitler must be beaten, yet it refuses to cooperate to the best of its ability. The situation of labor in these United States is that of a small boy who has become hopelessly lost among the winding trails of a child's paradise and cannot return to a safe home because he has spent so much time appreciating the present that he was unable to consider the future.

GREAT AMERICAN TYRANNY!

Labor has been spoiled. In the past and at the present it dictates conditions and hours to employers, it defies the people of the country in a national effort, it mocks the powers of elected officers, it is law unto itself—a tyranny in America.

A tyranny in America! Exactly! No Ku Klux Klan ever rode more savagely, no Huey Long ever hoped so much for power, no uprising contrary to the majority belief has ever tried one-half so hard to convince the populace; few movements have been characterized by such brutality, stupidity, and simplicity of operation.

At a time when things have got to be done—labor won't do them. At a time when cooperation is needed—labor won't cooperate. At a time when all hands are needed and are demanded by majority opinion—labor would rather see the ship sink than move a single step so long as it means a sacrifice of labor power and prestige.

Does labor complain of a job shortage? Is there a case where wages are too low? What valid cause to strike at this critical moment?

If labor power expires through the medium of the knife-in-the-back it will certainly be labor's own fault. And labor's eulogy will be short and not so sweet.

Step Rally

Salinas Game Pep Fest Today At 12 Bar-ring Rain

Barring rain, there will be a 10-minute step rally today at 12 o'clock in preparation for the college football game with Salinas Junior College on the local field, according to Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner.

"The game will probably begin about 3 o'clock," Mohorovich announced.

Spectators Warned

Spectators are requested either to be seated on the hill overlooking the field or to stand well back from the sidelines, he added.

Mohorovich praised the attitude of the rooting section and expressed the hope that it would continue its good sportsmanship.

Rally Plans Made

"Plans are now being made for a joint rally with San Mateo Junior College," he revealed. "Our plan is to have any willing members of the college travel to San Mateo on Thursday, November 13, after which students from that college will come back up here on Friday, November 14, and stay for the rally and game on Saturday night. These plans are as yet very indefinite.

"Even though the plans may be indefinite at the current time," Mohorovich said, "I have hope that they will be carried out, for it is by such measures of good will that football spirit is built up."

Classes May Be Excused Today At Game Time

Classes from 2 o'clock on may be excused for the Salinas football game today if the instructors of those classes so desire, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, announced Wednesday.

"Students must consult their instructors with whom they have classes at 2 o'clock or after for permission to see the game," Mohr said. "We hope that the students will use the privilege granted them as an opportunity to attend the Salinas game and not as a chance to go home earlier than usual."

Mohr stressed the fact that classes are being excused only by those instructors who feel that the loss of one day's work will not hamper the semester's activities to any great degree.

Consideration Asked To Speed Check Room Work

Since rainy weather makes the work of attendants at the check room difficult, Claude T. Silva, college NYA director, emphasized that consideration on the part of students using the check room will not only be appreciated by the attendants, but will greatly add to the facility and speed of checking.

A shortage of coat hangers for the check room was reported by Silva who announced that contributions of hangers by students will be welcome.

In addition, Silva pointed out that the check room closes daily at 4:30 p.m. and that students who have not claimed their belongings by that time must wait till the following morning.

If necessary, he added, belongings may be obtained after 4:30 p.m. by consulting Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, or Margaret Dougherty, dean of women.

Nose For News Runs Afoul Tea And Cookies At AWS Reception

By Doug Johnson

A reporter bustled briskly into the sanctum sanctorum of President Cloud last Tuesday. Between his circled eyes a nose for news was quivering expectantly.

President Cloud was talking with a teacher from Lowell who'd brought 25 students to the college to the Associated Women Students' tea.

"What about that estimate of the cost of grading the parking lot?" inquired the reporter.

"Ah," President Cloud said. "Estimate."

"Yes," encouraged the reporter.

At this point things became a bit confused. He found himself walking out the door with a Miss Gow, who'd brought those 25 girls from Lowell High School to that tea.

He wound up eating cookies and gargling tea with a covey of high school girls. Balancing a plate of cookies, and a cup of tea is a feat he hasn't quite mastered. Talking at the same time and trying to write down facts in his news book with his teeth has made a nervous wreck of him.

Later he came staggering into The Guardsman office, fell at the feet of the editor.

"AWS tea," he gasped, "Girls, thousands of them . . . tea, cookies, Abraham Lincoln, George Washington, Lowell, girls, girls, all kinds of girls, all around me drinking tea."

His eyes rolled back in his head and he slowly expired. Something rolled out of his hand. It was a deadly little raisin cookie.

American Education Week

Radio Production Classes Prepare Script For Youth Aid Broadcast

Showing how a typical juvenile delinquent is handled by the famous Youth Correction Authority of California, in contrast to old methods, a dramatization is in preparation by radio production classes under the direction of Marie Weller, college radio instructor, as a feature of the radio assembly broadcast, Monday, November 10, observing American Education Week.

Assemblyman James H. Phillips, sponsor of the bill which seeks to provide segregation of incorrigibles from young offenders who can be rehabilitated, Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison; Alden W. Smith, director of student activities at the college; and student players will participate in the skit, Smith revealed.

Recommends Treatment

The program, according to Smith, will show how the authority, consisting of three men provided by the bill and recommended by the legislature, investigates the background of the young offender, determines the circumstances leading to his crime, and recommends appropriate treatment.

The method used by this authority, Smith pointed out, is a significant improvement over the old practice of sending all young criminals to San Quentin, irrespective of individual differences.

Might Be Emulated

California has been the first state to adopt this system of guidance, Smith explained, and its success here will be closely watched by the other 47 states to determine whether it is worthy of emulation.

Also participating in the broadcast will be President Archibald J. Cloud, who will introduce the guests and take part in the discussion, and Clarence Ashman, author of the skit.

Records Furnish Music At Coming Low Soph Mixer

Dancing "Off the Record" will be featured at the Low Sophomore mixer to be held in the woman's gym on Friday, November 14.

The mixer is described by Jim Duryea, secretary of the class, as "the best mixer ever held, because there will be boys there to dance." The mixer will be held to build spirit for the Low Soph dance to be held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland.

The records that will be used will be the latest and the best released, Duryea said.

High Sophs

Leaders Still Seek Orchestra

Still in quest of the best music available for the sophomore formal, Saturday, December 13, at the Beresford Country Club, George Coart, class president, announced that his dance committee is auditioning orchestras at the rate of three a week.

"The committee is working hard," Coart reports, "and is spending a lot of time in an effort to obtain a suitable band."

Four Bands Heard

The bands of Harry Diner, Gene Munday, a re-audition, Norman Carroli and Bert Whiting, another repeat hearing, have been heard this past week, according to Jean Sheehan, committee secretary.

Plans for the breakfast, which traditionally follows the formal at some exclusive place, are beginning to be formulated, the group reported, but no site has been chosen as yet. Students of the college are urged to hand in suggestions about a place for the breakfast.

Ideas Accepted

Ideas will be accepted at the student office, Room 169, or by any member of the committee, which includes, besides Coart and Miss Sheehan, Mary Stephens, Lois Steinhart, Ward Swartzman, Ed Coffin and Myron Du Bain, chairman.

A meeting for the sophomore class has been tentatively set for November 14 at 2 p.m. at which time plans for the dance, the breakfast, and sophomore week will be fully discussed.

Cafeteria To Feature Hallowe'en Motif Today

The college cafeteria will feature Hallowe'en salads, deserts and fountain specials today, Hilda Watson, chairman of the hotel and restaurant division, announced this week.

All these dishes will be designed in the Hallowe'en colors, orange and black.

Service Society To Send Unclaimed Books To Libe

Unclaimed books from the Women's Service Society book exchange will be sent to the library for reference work unless claimed within the next week, Violet Butler, president of the organization, announced recently.

Books have been available to their owners for nearly two months. As there is no room to store the books until next semester they will be confiscated, Miss Butler said.

There are still a few dollars in the bank, Miss Butler said, which should also be called for as soon as possible.

Campus Players

Old-Time Drama, Olio, Ready For December 5 Production

Friday, December 5, is the tentative date set by the Campus Players for their old fashioned melodrama and olio, to be presented to members of the Associated Students, Dolores Sullivan, president, said this week.

At present, members of the group are working on material to be used in the olio. Carol Helbing, author of the melodrama, and her committee, are rewriting and adding new ideas to the plot.

The program will consist of a short play, followed by the olio, which will consist of several acts of entertainment, characteristic of the Gay Ninety period, explained Miss Sullivan.

It has definitely been decided by the members of this organization, Miss Sullivan said, to support the welfare committee in its plans for a Carnival Day. Members have already decided to show a preview of the melodrama, or one of the skits from the olio.

Music

Talent Bureau Wants Student Specialty Acts

Another request is being made for students who can perform specialty numbers to audition for the talent bureau, according to Irwin Cohen, student director of the project.

"The response to our former announcements for additional singers and musicians was good, and so we want to advertise again for novelty numbers," he added.

Students Perform At School

Students auditioned by the talent bureau are filed as available talent for school functions and, possibly, for activities of outside organizations.

These groups may contact any sort of entertainers they desire through the talent bureau. Each student auditioned will have his name placed on file, thus the talent bureau will assume the duties of a casting office.

Need Novelty Numbers

Entertainers who do novelty numbers are urged to get in touch with Flossita Badger, Wesley Muscio, talent bureau advisers, or Cohen, and give them the times at which they are available for auditions.

"Some of the entertainment featured at the rally held for the Sacramento game was part of the student talent that has been auditioned for this organization," Cohen said. Urging more students of the college that may have talent of any kind to apply for an audition, Cohen pointed out that many opportunities for entertainment now exist.

Student Art Work Exhibited In Hotaling Place Show

College students who will display their works at the art exhibit sponsored by Hotaling Place next Sunday, November 2, are Earl Thollander and George Sinitzen, according to Richard M. Allman, college art instructor.

Hotaling Place, which is located between Sansome and Montgomery streets, had planned the art exhibit for last Sunday but unforeseen rain caused the postponement. If the weather is also inclement next Sunday the exhibit will be postponed permanently, Allman revealed.

Thollander and Sinitzen have entered several of their water color paintings. No prizes will be given for the best exhibits because of the non-competitive rule of Hotaling Place, Allman said. However, different types of art from wood-carving to sculpturing will be on display.

The exhibit will start at 10 a.m. and will not be concluded until midnight. At intermittent periods throughout the day refreshments will be served and a program which will include social dancing will be held for the benefit of the visitors, according to Allman. No admission will be charged and the exhibit is open to the general public.

Civil Service Jobs Open For Employment In Islands

Because of the demands of the national defense program, federal agencies in Hawaii have an urgent need for persons, who are qualified, to fill various civil service positions, Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor, announced this week.

Applications are being accepted now from persons who would be willing to accept employment in Honolulu or vicinity.

There are over 75 different types of jobs open at the present time. The majority of these jobs are paid by the hour, but some are paid by the year. To qualify for most of these positions, a person must be at least 20 years old, although there are a few open to persons more than 18 years of age.

The following is a list of some of these civil service positions open in Hawaii:

Aircraft welder, blacksmith, boxmaker, cook, driller, electrician, mechanic's helper, instrument maker, laundry assistant, molder, oiler, packer and crater, painter, radio mechanic, roofer, riveter and sheet metal worker.

Students who are interested in obtaining one of these positions should see Luckmann in his office, Room 22, immediately.

Club Advisory Board

Fourteen Clubs Fail To Ask New Charter; Twenty-One Apply; Three Want Approval

Only 21 of the 35 college clubs active in Club Advisory Board membership last semester have applied for renewal of their charters this semester, according to Francis Goetz, president of the board.

These clubs as listed by Goetz are as follows:

Alpha Delta Epsilon, college art society; Alpha Lambda Chi, women students' social organization; Beta Phi Beta, men students' social organization; Beta Tau, men's social organization; Campus Players; Chinese Students Club; Engineering Club; Horticulture Club; Hotel and Restaurant Society; Japanese Students Club; Kappa Phi which was Alpha Phi Omega; Newman Club; Nu Epsilon Sigma, pre-nursing curriculum group; Omicron Phi Pi, economic honor society; Phi Alpha Omega, men's organization; Phi Beta Rho, women's social organization; Pick and Hammer, geology students club; Pi Mu Gamma, pre-medical student group; Rifle and Pistol Club; Theta Tau, women's group, and Tri Epsilon, men's social organization.

Three Ask Recognition

Three new clubs applied for charters at the Friday meeting, however, Goetz said: Peace Officers, Phi Lambda Epsilon, and Sigma Delta Pi.

Clubs which have failed to apply for charter renewal are Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor association; Astronomical Society; Beta Chi, men students' social group; Block SF, men's block letter society; Forestry; Forum; Home Economics Association; Music Club; Peace Society; Phi Rho Pi, debating society; Physical Education and Recreation Majors' Club; Riding Club; Skating Club, and Women's Service Society which recently operated the student book exchange.

Clubs which have applied for charter renewal are now being considered for membership, Goetz said. The committee which will act on recognition of these clubs or suspension of those which have failed to apply for charter renewals is composed of Pat Ruf, chairman, Beverly Brown, George Nielson, George Coart, and Dolores Sullivan.

CAB May Drop Clubs

According to the Associated Students' constitution, the Club Advisory Board reviews all charter applications and recommends acceptance or suspension to the Executive Council for action. Clubs which have not met charter requirements, either by failure to abide by actual charter provisions or by failure to submit a charter application at all, have neither membership within the CAB nor any recognition by the Associated Student organization.

Extension of deadline for charter applications was not announced by Goetz in time for publication today, if it is under consideration at all.

Cabby Out Soon

Nielson promised a Cabby soon that will contain "club news, cartoons, and features of interest to every club."

Cabby is the single mimeographed publication at present distributed to a limited group under supervision of the Publications Board. Funds are provided through the Associated Students for its publication, though it is not a recognized publication of the college. Thus, according to constitutional provisions, material must be reviewed by the Publications Board before distribution.

AWS

Three High Schools On Next Tea List

Second in a series of "get acquainted" teas under the auspices of the Associated Women Students will be held within the next few weeks, Betty Fox, president of the AWS, said this week.

Seniors from Galileo, Commerce and Polytechnic high schools will be guests at the next tea, Miss Fox pointed out. Twenty-five seniors from each school will be invited to be chosen by their advisers.

Fashion Show Postponed

The fashion show which was planned to take place some time before the end of the semester has been indefinitely postponed because of unsettled conditions in the department stores, Miss Fox said, so possibly there will be no style show until next semester.

The first of the teas was held last Tuesday in Room 158 with nearly 100 women in attendance.

Tour Follows Tea

Following the tea, visiting high school seniors were conducted through the college, and were shown the various points of interest.

Since enthusiasm was so great at the first tea, women officers of the college moved to continue the tea series.

College A Cappella Choir Gives Return Engagement

A return engagement for the Trinity Methodist Church, at 16th and Market streets will be performed on Sunday, November 30, by the A Cappella Choir, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

"Last semester, the A Cappella Choir performed for the same organization, and they were so pleased with the program, that the choir was asked to return. This sort of request makes us especially pleased," commented Miss Badger.

The A Cappella Choir, in its class time, has been auditioning students for smaller ensembles to perform in place of the whole choir when such a group is wanted. The first of these groups to be organized is the men's quartet. Members of the quartet are Nat Hockenga, tenor; Pearce Davies, second tenor; Clarence Ashman, baritone, and Lenox Cinnamond, bass.

NYA Time Cards Due Today; Regulations Emphasized

NYA time cards for this month are due today, Claude T. Silva, college administration director, warned again, stressing that time must be figured according to regulations.

Today is the closing date for the work period, since November 2, ordinarily the closing date, falls on a Sunday.

Carnival Day

Club Board President Pledges Entire Support Of Organization

Announcement that the Club Advisory Board is enthusiastic about the carnival day proposed by the Welfare Committee, was made by Francis Goetz, chairman of the CAB, last Wednesday.

Entire support of the CAB is not yet assured until the representatives of the various college organizations making up the board have submitted their final reports to Goetz, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee.

Needs Support

"If we have the full approval of the CAB, carnival day may become a lasting college tradition; if not the whole affair will fall through," Lindemann explained.

"Although we have not as yet decided where the carnival could be held the main problem is to get the idea across to the students," Lindemann continued. He went on to say that one day of each semester would be set aside for carnival day.

Prizes Awarded

Students would be expected to wear costumes and prizes would be awarded for the most original costume. There would also be booths run by clubs of the college.

"The Welfare Committee has spent so many long hours of hard work in the formulation of plans of the carnival, it would be a shame to see the affair collapse and be forgotten," Bill Postal, committee member and col-

Progressive Theory Policy

Respect It

IN THE early part of this semester, a story appeared in The Guardsman with the heading "Students Rate Smug Pat On Back; Library Reports Minimum Book Loss." Marcus Skarstedt, the college librarian, said at that time that "fewer volumes are lost, strayed, or misplaced at this college than at probably any other college or university in the Bay Region."

By comparing the library regulations of this college with those of other colleges and universities, immediately may be seen the reason for pride in Skarstedt's statement of a month and a half ago; for restrictions in our library have been reduced to an absolute minimum. Such a policy naturally must be based upon confidence.

This trust in the student body has been abused, as Skarstedt clearly pointed out in the Ram's Horn Tuesday of this week. "Students Rate Smug Pat On Back" is certainly not the heading for this editorial.

Continued dishonesty or carelessness in taking books from the shelves without charging them out at the desk will leave only one course open to the library—the introduction of restrictions painful to the great majority of the students.

It may be a surprise to learn that actual "frisking" of students leaving the library is a part of the regulations in some institutions. In many, all books are on closed stacks, that is, the student is denied the privilege of browsing and must fill out a special form every time he wishes merely to look at a book.

This college knows freedom from these harsh, but perhaps necessary limitations. In return for this progressive policy, the librarian asks only that books be charged out at the loan desk when taken from the library.

We know that Skarstedt is reluctant to change his system, and that he will do so only as a last resort. A plea for discriminating use of the library imposes no hardship or inconvenience on anyone.

Very shortly The Guardsman would like to run another front page story on the library. The heading would read "Students Rate Extra Smug Pat On Back." The appearance of that story is in your hands.

Understanding First

MOST Americans are wholly in favor of the good-neighbor policy, but that is as far as most Americans go in supporting the policy—just a bland comment of approval.

Over and over again it has been emphasized, shouted that one of the preliminary steps in fostering this policy, making it more than a catch-word to arouse Hispanic American skepticism, is a sympathetic understanding of the peoples and countries that comprise the recipients of U. S. good-neighborliness. Incidentally, "sympathetic" in this sense knows nothing of the word "condescension."

The current lecture series on Hispanic America each Monday evening at the University of San Francisco offers a rare opportunity to build up background knowledge of the Hispanic countries.

Those privileged to hear Austin MacDonald of the University of California speak last Monday on Argentina must appreciate the value of the series for the novice in Hispanic American relations.

When Strangers Meet

THOUGH comment one way or another will be deferred for a time, we can't help speculating on the scene about a month hence when student officers will endeavor to convince, persuade, cajole, and demand that the victorious Soph Sweetheart and Frosh Apollo accompany one another to the Soph Formal as now planned.

We know we don't want to be on hand.

Shots At ...RAMdom

IN A MARKET

on Haight Street there's a portly gentleman who sells fish and poultry. One day we heard an elderly woman questioning him. She was large, double-chinned, and surveyed the world suspiciously through steel-rimmed glasses.

"You're an Eyetalian, ain't you?" she accused.

"Yes, mam," he answered, courteously.

"Do you like the Germans?"

"No, mam," he answered, getting a bit pink.

"The English?"

"No, mam," after a slight pause for reflection.

"Huh, who do you like, then?"

He paused again, a tiny frown screwing up his craggy eyebrows. The frown cleared away and he said:

"I like my friends, lady," he said quietly.

Admittedly, he quoted a little paragraph from the frontispiece of Louis Bromfield's The Rains Came, but we've never seen anyone answered so adequately, squelched so completely.

When race hatred starts leaking out of our radios and staring from our newspapers, think of this.

PINK

clouds. Green water with a faint orange wake that penciled from the descending sun that looked like a Japanese lantern on the horizon. Creamy surf tipped with orange. Car horns blaring faintly on the breeze. One car parked unobtrusively, overlooking the sea. Inside, two heads very close together.

We saw a little boy, all golden brown and husky, trudging out of the sand with his mother. He set down his bucket on the sidewalk and started to put on his shoes. His eyes slowly riveted themselves to the parked car. His lips started to move.

"One, two, three, four . . ."

He turned his chubby face wearing a quizzical expression.

"Mummy," he lisped, "why can't people stay under water that long?"

IN OAKLAND,

the little city on the wrong side of the bridge, three men were waiting for a train. They'd worn a path in the sidewalk to the entrance of the local elbow parlor. Occasionally they'd weave out to see if the train was coming.

"Ish three minutesh late," gargled one.

All three peered down the track dejectedly, turned and went back for "a quick one."

Again they came out, peered down the track and went back.

While they were gone the train came chugging up to the platform. The three men came dashing out. Two of them just managed to leap onto the observation platform. The other one sprawled dejectedly in the cinders.

He sat up and looked around him.

"Ish a funny world," he mused, "those two guys came to see me off."

• Desks In Room 46

Editor, The Guardsman:

Can you tell me what happened to the desks in Room 46? This room was formerly used as a study hall and is, I think, still needed by the students. Frequently at ten o'clock there are no seats in the library and there is no place else to study now.

"A Student."

Editor's Note: Because some new machinery has been added to the radio laboratory in Room 46, the desks had to be removed, consequently there will be no more desks on which students may study. However, during rainy weather only, Instructor Hollingsworth will allow students to come into Room 46 and use the counters and stools in the laboratory. As there is no other space available in the college at present, the desks will be stored until room can be found for them and an additional study hall.

• Is There A President?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Do we have an Associated Student president? During the first week of the semester everyone was in hot water because of the offices left vacant by the resignation of several Associated Student officers.

New appointments were made and the lucky persons were introduced at a rally. But now what has happened to these officers?

The only officers that are mentioned in The Guardsman are the Vice-President, who is head of the Social Committee, and the class presidents. The rest seem to be non-existent. Is there a president of the Associated Students, and if so, what does he do?

A. G.

Editor's Note: It is The Guardsman's oversight or Harry Haesloop's lack of publicity seeking that he, the Associated Students' thoroughly capable president, has not recently been mentioned by name in The Guardsman.

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

WITCHES, ghosts, and coal-black cats will be seen roaming the streets tonight, for it is Hallowe'en. If one goes in for reminiscing one sees in the dear days not beyond recall the parties where the ghosts dressed as skeletons, goblins, ghosts, and other gruesome characters that only Hallowe'en can bring forth.

Then the evenings spent in ducking for apples, trying to bite an apple tied to a string, and eating black and orange ice cream. An excursion was made around the neighborhood soaping windows, running tick-tack-toes on the same windows—providing a house could be found with no garage on the ground floor, and trick-or-treating.

'WAY BACK WHEN

Oh! Those were the good old days. Now what happens? There is no more of this and college students wish they were again in the age of short pants and pig tails.

Oh well, let's pretend for today that you're going to a party on Hallowe'en night, a masquerade party, of course, back in those ne'er to be forgotten days. What will you wear?

Weeks before the party, the problem of the costume arises. Susie is going as a ghost. That entails a sheet, either with a mask or with holes punched for eyes, nose and mouth.

MODERN DESIGN

A ghost gone modern might wear a white formal, with long white gloves, and a white head covering and a little whitening on the face. Grease paint can provide miraculous changes—changes you into a ghost or you into a movie actress, either one.

Dressing as a ghost is about as original as wearing a skirt and sweater to school, and so if someone happens to wish a more unique costume there are still many varieties to choose from. Like Heinz products—57 varieties (advt.).

WHICH IS WITCH?

With a black suit, or long black dress, and a tall, pointed hat the idea of a witch is successfully carried out. However, here again an original mind can do wonders. A modern, streamlined model with a slinky, black satin formal, the same tall, black hat, but with a long veil, and instead of the long, straight hair — a sky-high coiffure. The modern touch, you know. High heels, and perhaps a Chamberlain umbrella instead of the customary broomstick.

Around Hallowe'en time little red devils are seen in the streets at night, probably going to another party. So from them pops another costume idea. Why not dress as a devil? All in bright red, with high-heeled red slippers, another red hat with a veil, and for horns have two high, red feathers sticking atop the hat. A modern conception of a pitchfork is a stickler, so the wearer will have to think that up alone.

There are really many things that one can wear to a costume party. Clown outfits, movie star regalia, such as Charlie Chaplin's big shoes, and baggy suits, gay '90's dress, and even futuristic costumes. Of course, if there aren't any costume parties, you just can't dress up. But it was fun to dream, wasn't it?

Unholy Partners . . . but the picture has lots of holes

THIS department entertained the motion that gangsterism as a movie theme in "A" film production had long since been cast upon the junk-heap of discarded things.

The peaceful lull that gently carried us since 1934-1935 and those days of rip-snorting, biff and bam gangster opuses of the Cagney-Robinson vein has gently dissipated with the release of Unholy Partners, the latest Edward G. Robinson picture. Perhaps it was inevitable. Actors like Robinson and Edward Arnold must find screen vehicles; frantic script department officials can't pull consistent miracles out of their hats and find continuous roles of the Sea Wolf and Mr. Smith Goes To Washington caliber for the two. Thus the good old gangster vs. newspaper vs. police device is resurrected from the limbo of forgotten tales and we have another pleasant drama with sparkling dialogue that runs as follows: "take that you, you rat," or "keep your hands up or you'll get plugged," or "no, no don't shoot . . . what will me old lady do?" or "this is the show-down, brother; keep that gat on the table."

PLOT NEEDS A SHOT

Unholy Partners manages to evade most of the above trite phraseology, but as for actual story construction, the plot could well have taken some vitality shots or B-1 injections without appreciable harm. Like the proverbial puddle on the Sahara, the story just isn't.

Some fine acting on the part of the two main principals, Robinson and Edward Arnold, carries the picture along and lifts it out of the rut to an average level. Mr. Robinson has perfected his snarling little tough guy with a heart of gold to a consummate degree through any number of similar picture-roles; when one realizes how different the real Robinson is from his screen personality, true appreciation for his work rises. His Cory, tough, fighting editor of the New York paper, the Mercury, is dynamic pretending. Too bad it was wasted on such unspectacular material.

ARNOLD TOO HAS TECHNIQUE

Edward Arnold, his waist-line expanding like the Los Angeles city limits, is similar to Robinson in this respect. He has perfected the interpretation of the big, pompous, sinister, big-business man crook . . . the consummation of all things evil and detestable. He does it well, too, and individual scenes with Robinson shine.

That's all that can be said for the cast. The other principals include Laraine Day, William Orr, and Marsha Hunt. The latter pair come off O.K. with standard jobs but Miss Day takes quite a beating. As secretary-aide to Robinson, she appeared rather uncertain. Some shallow dialogue and woozy situations gave her no opportunity to show her unquestionable talent. Too bad they killed her off in the Kildaire series. Now she has no place to go. Better roles, and quick, is the only remedy for Miss Day.

NEWSPAPER CONFLICT PROVIDES STORY

The story of Unholy Partners in brief relates the bitter conflict between Robinson, the editor and his publisher-gangster Arnold. Both men spiff and spat over paper policy; Robinson desires a newspaper fighting corruption and crime; his boss Arnold naturally wants the paper to further his ill-gained policy of graft by subtle editorial suggestion, column work, etc. Naturally, a show-down finally comes and the fur begins to fly. Love interest of a meager sort is provided by Robinson and Miss Day, while another plot motivation is supplied by Orr as a reporter falling for Marsha Hunt, singer-friend of crook Arnold. Quite a nice taut little dish of dramatic hash.

Director Mervyn LeRoy piloted his film along with little inspiration. Evidently he relied upon his male stars to put the material over. Thus you'll find a fair gangster-melodrama with little highlight, any number of rough spots, good acting of an average script that was dated back in 1935. If that suits your movie taste, take the gal to see Unholy Partners.

The priorities and the present situation in Europe are really beginning to take their toll around here when the war interferes with the napkin situation in the cafeteria. To get along without straws is simply exasperating, but to struggle through without napkins is positively the last straw. Frederick the Great put buttons all along the sleeves of the uniforms of his army with the thought in mind of keeping the laundry bill down. The boys suffered from constant cases of sniffles. Perhaps they had better put tablecloths on the tables in the cafeteria.

Seen along Montgomery Street a few days ago was a rather dissolute looking old man making his way along. He had a bunch of pencils in his hand. He approached us and asked us if we could write; upon finding out that we could endorse a check without using the fingerprint or cross method, he gave forth with a sales talk that would have made Dale Carnegie envious. Finally we bought a pencil and struck up a conversation. He claimed to have known Jack London and George Sterling and many another writer who at one time lived around the Bay Region. In closing he said, "Thanks boys, think I'll go along and see if I can find anyone else who can write. You'll hear from me some day right up on top again." But he forgot to mention his name.

Your College Presents . . . Fundamental Requirements Make Job Getting Easy

By Iwanna Hayworth

ANY young man looking for employment need only survey his own talents and decide whether nature has endowed him with a tendency to do certain things better than others. The nature of his own aptitudes will help him decide the type of position which offers the likeliest employment, whether it be with a small concern or a large corporation, and his chance for advancement will depend entirely on him.

Students of the college have reason to be proud of the business department here. Besides offering complete business training in a number of fields, there is a group of general information courses offered, for example, investigation course, principles for organization management, salesmanship, and others. These help students to understand the various functions of the type of work of which they will become a part.

THREE R's IMPORTANT

The basic requirements for students who have finished their training and go out to apply for the desired position are well-rounded English vocabulary, correct arithmetic, correct spelling, and something which may seem a bit irrelevant, good handwriting.

Quoting the head of the business department: "If you have those fundamental requirements, getting the first job isn't nearly so hard."

In speaking of the business department, which has been included, as have many others, in the college curriculum since its organization, the courses offered here are specialized in different fields.

INSURANCE ILLUSTRATES

As an illustration of these specialized fields, insurance could very easily be a starting point. The typical preparation is that of office workers, such as, file clerks, typists, a minimum amount of bookkeeping, and office machines. Knowledge of economics, finance, law and salesmanship is also highly desirable for those majoring in insurance.

This program features an apprenticeship of one semester to a year for the practical experience in insurance offices, for which the students are accepted on their college work and upon the personnel test which the companies offer. Employment possibilities in this field are numerous.

Retail merchandising is for students who have as their goal not only selling but also a study in part of textiles.

BOOKKEEPER NOT AN ACCOUNTANT

A bit of information which might be enlightening is a clarification of the words bookkeeper and accountant. A bookkeeper has as his work the maintaining of public records, while an accountant is the one who designs the system under which these books are kept. Whereas a junior accountant rating usually requires four years of training, this course is so developed at the college that students can finish it in two years.

Instruction in the operation of business machines is not designed to train experts; however, students may take examinations for positions which are conducted by local calculating machine firms.

The various bulletins, mimeographed tests, outlines for instructors to use in their classes, bookplates, and like work are done by the students in the duplicating and mimeographing classes.

ALL QUALIFIED PLACE

"To date all properly qualified students have been placed in full-time positions in business offices"—taken from terminal catalogue with reference to the secretarial and clerical training.

This program is conducted on a two-year basis with special attention placed on shorthand, typing, filing, office practice, and other required essentials for this type of work.

Much more could be said about the department, about its development throughout the years since the organization, its plans, and other more interesting details.

The Astronomy Department will be featured on Tuesday.

So you wonder what this means do you? Well, it's Staff Artist Louise Horne's conception of the college business course with everything from bookkeeping to the business office appearing on the scene.

Riflers Fail To Sign Up; Urbano Gets Ossie Fagin

EIGHT MEN WANTED

The San Francisco Examiner recently printed a story concerned with the number of Americans who are interested in rifle, shotgun, and other fire arms. The Northwestern National Life Insurance Company has compiled a survey, from which the Examiner quoted statistics.

"There are more than 3,000 senior rifle clubs belonging to the National Rifle Association with a total membership of approximately 150,000 members. There are another 1,500 junior clubs which will qualify over 100,000 rifle shooters under the age of 19, during 1941. It is estimated that 1,500,000 riflemen have taken club courses of instruction in the past 15 years and they are available as instructors and coaches for home defense units."

The NNLIC statistics also reveal that 4,250,000 licenses are issued for shotgun shooting, and that we have from 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 Americans who can handle a rifle. Another 7,000,000 Americans are able to handle a shotgun.

Last semester, as old students will remember, the college rifle team captured first place in the State Gallery Championships, against such schools as the California Bears, the Stanford Indians, and other teams in their class.

Came this fall, Tom O'Neil, in his first semester as coach of the Red and White rifle team, expected to see an exceptional, if not record, sign up. Only eight men, a scant handful as compared to other competitive sports, are required for a rifle team. However, eight men have not yet signed up for the San Francisco Junior College's rifle team. Deprecating, isn't it?

THERE AIN'T NO JUSTICE

An extremely mild-mannered chap is Izzy Urbano, chubby handful of backfield man for the Rams. Urbano would not hurt a butterfly—unless it were inadvertent, so meek is he. Yet, Urbano, last Saturday night, while the Rams were battling the Sacramento Panthers, was ejected from the contest—that is, thrown out of the game.

It was during the second half, the third quarter to be exact, of Saturday night's orgy, that Urbano was forced into the role of "an innocent bystander"; therefore held guilty and bounced. A fight started between two of the players, with Urbano stepping into the role of mediator. The next thing that Urbano knew was that he was on the bench for the remainder of the game, and at the personal behest and request of the referee.

Swimming Program Includes Relay Races And Helen Crlenkovich Diving Exhibition

Decoration and reception committee members for the Women's Athletic Association swimming play day, Saturday, November 8 at the Y.W.C.A. have been announced by Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the organization.

Decoration committee members are Leona Smith, Jean Peterson, and Jean O'Donnell, while the reception committee members are Berta Reid, Pat Mooney, Helen Wood, Janice Berch, and Margaret Abbott.

The swimming program will include relay races, a gay '90's aquadrama, selection of the best swimming form, a diving exhibition by Helen Crlenkovich, and a free swim for all in attendance.

"We have invited ten representatives from each of the six colleges participating," Miss Kraul said. "Five swimmers for the competitive events, and the other five although not actually participating will enjoy the general swim concluding the program, and the luncheon and entertainment following."

This will be the first play day sponsored by the WAA this semester, Miss Kraul said, the dates being decided upon at a general meeting several weeks ago by members of all the WAA groups throughout the area. The next play day for all colleges sponsored by the college will be the archery matches during the latter part of April.

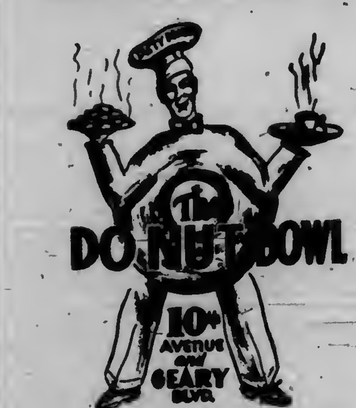
Equestrian School To Be Held At Mills Tomorrow

Equestrians wishing to improve their riding will be given an opportunity tomorrow at Mills College stables, according to Laurine Bergin, college riding instructor.

Experienced riders will be at hand to give advice and instruct any students in riding or jumping, Mrs. Bergin announced. In addition there will be demonstrations of riding tack, riding c[illegible] and showmanship.



"Stude[illegible]o wish to participate in the horse show at the end of the semester may find it beneficial to attend the show," Mrs. Bergin said. She requested that all students who are going to get in touch with her at the women's gymnasium today. Entrance fee will be one dollar and any men or women students of the college interested in riding may attend.

Celebrities To Be Present At Tennis Clinic Monday

Twenty college women have been invited to attend a tennis clinic on the Berkeley campus, Monday, November 3, from 2 to 5 p.m., according to Pat Mooney, tennis club manager.

Present at the clinic sponsored by the National Tennis Commission, will be Dorothy Head, Washington and Oregon singles champion; Margaret Osborne, Pacific Coast champion, and Tom Stowe, world famous tennis coach who will give demonstrations and instructions.

Women who wish to attend have been requested by Bertha Keller, chairman of the Women's Physical Education Department, to leave their names and the schedule of their Monday afternoon classes in the women's gymnasium so that they may be excused from the classes.

John Lazar Stars As Team Hands Menlo Outfit 4 To 1 Trouncing

Playing their usual defensive game in the first half, but to better advantage, the college soccer squad defeated a tough Menlo team by the score of 4-1, last Saturday, October 25, at Menlo's home field.

Coach Jim Jensen felt a little better on the team's showing, but, as he said after the game, "the boys will have to play much better ball if they want to beat San Francisco State on Saturday. Our boys play in spots, but if they hope to beat State they must play consistently, for the State varsity has a very good ball club this season."

Lazar Leading Scorer

Leading scorer for the college kickers is John Lazar, who tallied three points against San Mateo last week, and chalked up three more digits against Menlo Saturday. He is very close, if not leading the other soccer players in the entire Junior College league. The other point scorer against Menlo was Bill Waddington.

The score at the half time was 2-0 with the college squad on the long end, but as they had done in previous games, with the second half under way, the Rams went on the offense, and tallied two more points in short order.

May Win Title

Because of California's loss to San Mateo last Saturday, the college kickers now have a good chance for the title if they get by State, according to Jensen.

After the State tilt on Saturday, the squad will play San Jose on November 8, and then meet the strong Stanford Indians on November 22. A helpful bit of news came to Coach Jensen when it was learned that Ted Theodus, wingman on the squad, will be able to play against State. He has been ineligible for some of the other games.

College Boxers Training Daily For Intramurals

Concentrating on timing of punches and wind development, the college boxers are training daily for the intramural ring events which are slated to get under way about the middle of November, according to Coach Jim Jensen.

Jensen reports he is awaiting the close of the soccer season next month, so that he can devote all of his time to the men of the squared circle. At this time sparring and eliminations will begin in earnest.

In the meantime, however, the boxers have had but a few light sparring matches, and are "taking it easy."

Several fine fighters have reported for the training sessions, some of them experienced men, while others have had little or no actual ring experience before. All are coming along in good fashion, and promise one of the best Associated Men Students' smokers in the history of the college.

The experienced fighters, led by Dave Hunicke, are rapidly attaining their former sharpness and are certain to be in peak condition by the time actual competition rolls around. On the other hand, the greenlings are becoming educated in the ways of the ring, and should give some of the more advanced ringmen a good run for their money.

Ram Water Poloists End Season With Loss

Playing the best game of their three game schedule, the college water polo team was defeated 4-3 by the Olympic Club Reserves in a terrifically fought battle last Friday night, October 4, at the Olympic Club pool, Post and Mason.

The Rams led through the entire contest, until there were but 50 seconds left to play, when the Reserves pushed a point in to knot the score at 3-3. In the three minute overtime, with both squads slowly tiring, the "Winged-O" dropped another bucket in to put them out in front as the gun sounded, ending the game.

Outstanding for the Red and White were Bill Hickey, and Phil De Lano, who teamed up to score all the points for the college. De Lano tallied two digits, and Hickey counted the other one.

Defeated By Stanford

Due to the fact that the boys on the squad played such a tough game against the Club Reserves, they were defeated by a strong Stanford Frosh at the Indians' home pool, Monday night, October 7, by the score of 10-5 with the Rams on the short end. One reason given by Coach Allan Eisan for the poor showing of the team was "that the boys have been swimming too much lately, and were 'waterlogged'."

Those starring for the college squad were Phil De Lano, who scored three points, Don Bartlett with one, and Warren Kleist chalked up the other point.

Polo Season Completed

With these three games over, the season for the water polo team is completed. Due to the fact that many other colleges could not get a team to play our squad, only three games were scheduled.

"The main idea of the water polo team is to keep the boys swimming, and to increase their interest in the swimming team, who seem to have a very good squad this semester," Coach Allan Eisan said. Eisan concluded by saying, "that with such boys as Phil De Lano, Bill Hickey, Don Bartlett, and Warren Kleist now free to swim for the team, we should put the swimming squad on top."

Cross Country Race To Be Run This Afternoon

This afternoon at halftime between the Ram-Salinas gridiron encounter, the two and a quarter mile cross-country run will be held, Russ Sweet, college track coach, announced.

The race will start on the field promptly at the end of the first half, regardless of the weather situation, with the contestants running around the vicinity of the campus, and finishing on the field where the race originally began.

Three Medals Awarded

At the conclusion of the race, three medals will be awarded by Sweet. The winner will receive a gold medal, the runnerup a silver one, and the third contestant a bronze one.

Approximately 30 cindermen will start the long distance, and from these, only four are conceded any chance of winning the race.

Boles Looms As Favorite

At this moment, the logical choice appears to be Stuart Boles, who has made the best time in trial runs, but will be pressed hard by the remainder of the field. Boles will be out to break the record made by Don Venton, last semester's winner, who covered the distance in 12:43.

The second hot favorite among the many rail birds, is Ed Ellis, who lasted to be fourth last semester, and finished in the excellent time of 13:02.

Hewitt Conceded Chance

While many believe that the race will be between the two mentioned, the dark horse of the field may prove to be Don Hewitt, eighth placer last spring. Although his time was considerably slower than Venton and Ellis, Hewitt has improved to a point where he is on razor edge for the race, and undoubtedly will finish in the money.

Since nothing is known about the other contestants, anyone has a chance to upset the dope, and be a surprise winner, as no cinderman is a virtual cinch.

Basketball Near End

Yesterday, the fourth round of the basketball tournament was completed, with one week remaining on the schedule.

Highlight game to date on the schedule, was the thrilling tussle between the heretofore undefeated Newman Club and Goat quintets. The winner proved to be the Newman Club, 27 to 25, who, with the victory, remained undefeated along with the Spartans.

At no time during the game, did more than two points separate the evenly matched squads. The score at halftime was 16 to 15 in favor of the winners, due, mainly to the efforts of Jack Batiaf, who caged 12 points. The Goats were held to four field goals in the half, but were aided considerably by seven free throws, which kept them in constant pursuit of the Newmans.

Roberts Clinches Game

The second half was more hectic than the first, with both squads matching basket for basket until the final minute of play, which found the Newman Club leading by a scant point, 26 to 25. In a desperate attempt to get ball control, Bob Roberts, Newman forward was fouled in the act of shooting, and was awarded two free throws by Referee Jack Brady. Roberts promptly sank the first, and without hesitation, the Newman Club took the ball out of bounds at mid court and stalled the remaining 30 seconds.

With this victory, the Newman Club appears standout favorites to win the tournament provided they win their other games.

Newmans-Spartans Tied

Only the Spartans remain in the undefeated bracket with them, and are not figured to stop the fast-breaking attack of this squad.

With such stars as Batiaf, Jack Koster, Bob Roberts, Bert Action, and Bob Cavender, they possess an impregnable defense off which their fast-breaking offense functions.

Salinas Squad Is Underdog

By Bob Marcus

Considered one of the weaker teams in the conference race, the Salinas squad will enter the game as underdogs this afternoon when they face the vastly improving Rams.

This contest will mark the first time that a conference game has been played on the campus.

• • •

Chief threat in the Panther backfield appears to be halfbacks Charles Di Orio, and Stan Lisk. Di Orio is the squad's outstanding passer and along with Lisk, form one of the best pass combinations in the conference.

Colors of the Salinas eleven are maroon and gold.

Veteran center Dick Voris has proven himself an able line backer and pass defender, who has an uncanny way of breaking through the opponent's forward wall to block punts for Coach Tiny Hall's eleven.

Behind the scene activity before last week's game with Sacramento, was the removal of Hack Applequist, Sacramento coach, to a hospital when he became suddenly ill while en route on bus.

The Rams will be strengthened tonight with the return of Jim McGowan, who missed the Sacramento fracas.

Although known by many as Trot Trotsky, Augie Kalnen has requested that he be called by his right name.

Beaten 7 to 6 by Sacramento, Salinas is considered weaker than the Rams, as the college eleven swamped Sacramento 13 to 0.

• • •

Yesterday morning the two fellows seen lining the field for the game, were Turk Terzian, quarterback, and Lou Vasquez, right halfback.

With the reverses, shuffle passes, and off tackle smashes finally working to perfection, the Rams have shown promise from week to week until now they have finally reached their peak.

With two games remaining with Pasadena and San Mateo, victories over these squads would make the season a success, while defeats would prove dismal.

Rams Expected To Win Third Game; Improved Tackling, Signal Calling Bolster Eisan's, Team's Hopes

By Nick Barbarotto

With their second victory finally achieved, Coach Lee Eisan and the Ram gridders are favored to win their third game of the season this afternoon when they face the Salinas Junior College Panthers on the college football field at 2:15 o'clock.

Coach Eisan requested that it be emphasized that the scene of the battle will be on the college practice field adjoining the men's gymnasium, and, although their will be no seats, there will be adequate room for the spectators.

Rams On Upswing

In defeating Sacramento last Saturday, the Rams played their best football of the year, and, according to Eisan, are on the definite upswing and will be hard to beat from here on in.

"We were very much improved against Sacramento," said Eisan, "and our tackling was much better than it has been. Our signal calling," continued the Ram mentor, "was also the best we have received throughout the year and was one of the factors in the victory."

Comparison scores are never looked on with much seriousness, but if they were, today's encounter would be a dizzy affair to figure out. Salinas defeated Modesto, 7 to 0; Modesto trounced the Rams, 19 to 7; the Rams ran away with Sacramento, 13 to 0; and Sacramento defeated Salinas by a convert, 7 to 6, which forms just one big circle.

Salinas Good Outfit

Salinas' defeat at the hands of Sacramento didn't have any bearing on Coach Eisan's opinion of the maroon and gold. "Salinas has a darn good outfit," said Eisan, "as was shown when they beat Modesto."

The Panthers use a flanker with a man in motion continuously, and feature halfbacks Chuck Di Orio and Stan Lisk as their chief threats in the attack.

Lisk is exceptionally fast and is most important when used in the Panthers' reverse plays. He is rated by the lettuce country as being the best all around player on the squad.

Di Orio is the most outstanding passer on the Salinas squad and is expected to fill the campus air with many passes this afternoon.

Voris Outstanding

Dick Voris, who has been elected captain for many of the Panther games this season, is probably one of the outstanding centers in the conference. Besides being exceptionally alert as a line backer, Voris is a deadly blocker, good pass defender, and is rated as the most inspirational player on the squad.

Other Panther standouts are Dexter Lanois, described as another Cotton Warburton and who returned the opening kickoff 80 yards to a touchdown against Stockton; Mike Stewart, who has been shifted to guard from end, where his weight and speed is an added asset, and Richie Walter, triple threat fullback.

Rain Halts Practices

As to the outcome of this afternoon's contest, Eisan said, "We were slowed up in our practice this week because of the rain, but if we play like we did against Sacramento and iron out some of our weak points both on offense and defense, we'll probably beat Salinas."

Starters for the Rams, although still doubtful, will probably be Ed Cassidy and Bob Jones at ends, Augie Kalnen and Bob Hoffman at the tackles, Glenn Smith or Merle McFarland and Bill Brown at guards, and Dutch Danielsen at center, in the line.

Turk Terzian, Art Ekdall, Jack Medrano, and Pat Castellano will form the backfield combination.

Should Terzian, Ekdall, Smith, Castellano, and Kalnen, all of whom were outstanding against Sacramento, play as they did against the capital city men, Eisan believes that victory is in the college's grasp.

Race, Band During Half Time Of Game

Half-time activities for today's Ram-Salinas Junior College football game will be plentiful. The intramural cross-country two and a quarter mile race will be held with 30 entries ready to participate. The race will continue around the campus hills and end on the track before the beginning of the second half.

The colorful Salinas band with two majorettes and one drum major will also perform to the amusement of the spectators.

Hildebrand Presents Talk To Members November 5; Lecture Open To All

The Education of Gifted Students will be the topic of a lecture by Dr. J. H. Hildebrand, Dean of the College of Letters and Science at the University of California, to be given to Alpha Gamma Sigma members in Room 100, Wednesday, November 5, at 1 p. m., according to Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser to the group.

All regular or temporary members of the college scholastic society will be excused from classes for this meeting, which is the annual public meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma.

Dr. Hildebrand spoke at last year's meeting to a capacity audience, and was very well liked, Miss Cooper reported.

All Invited To Attend

Besides the society members, J. Paul Mohr, registrar, said that any one of the faculty or any interested student of the college is cordially invited to attend.

Coaching by the Alpha Gamma Sigma in almost all of the courses included in the college curriculum has begun, and many students are discovering the benefits of this system inaugurated by the society last year, Miss Cooper announced.

Coaches Still Needed

There are still not enough members of the group to act as coaches in the field of physics, chemistry and philosophy, and Miss Cooper has appealed to the faculty for suggestions of good students in these subjects. Students are to volunteer their services, upon recommendation of their instructors, as coaches to supplement the work of the members of Alpha Gamma Sigma.

The coaching service is entirely free of charge, and is open to any student of the college.

Military

College Counseling Service Started

Inauguration of a military counseling service in the college is the latest addition to student service, it was revealed today by college authorities.

Under the supervision of Beverly Pasqualetti, the newly formed organization will serve as a bureau for students desirous of information on the various branches of military service. Information on enlistments in the Marines, Navy, Army, or Air Corps may be obtained from Pasqualetti in Room 406 between the hours of 10 and 12 o'clock.

Stressing the fact that the new service does not provide enlistment in the services, Pasqualetti urged only students desiring information on enlistment to contact him.

Education Week Features Broadcast

Representing the college on an American Education Week broadcast at George Washington High School, Friday, November 14, Walter Bien, a graduate of that school, now a student at the college, will act as guest announcer, Marie Weller, radio instructor, said.

The program, according to Ernest J. Cummings, principal of George Washington High School, will be broadcast over the high school public address system, transmitted to Samuel Gomper's Trade School by telephone line, and heard by other schools with short wave receiving sets. Cummings also revealed that the broadcast is to be transcribed for release over the National Broadcasting Company Friday evening.

Hotel Division Requests Less Cafeteria Congestion

To relieve rainy day congestion in the college cafeteria, students should not stay in the cafeteria longer than necessary during the rush periods between the hours of eleven and one, Hilda Watson, chairman of the hotel and restaurant division, announced.

Mrs. Watson stressed the fact that students will not be permitted to move chairs and tables about in groupings which block traffic and thus add to the confusion and congestion.

Registrar J. Paul Mohr, recognizing the need for additional study space inside the building on rainy days, has set aside Room 47 for this purpose.

Low Sophomore Class Sponsors Mixer Dance

At a joint meeting of the Social Committee and the officers of the Low Sophomore class held yesterday afternoon, the Social Committee accepted the offer of the Low Sophomore class to sponsor the next mixer dance, according to Pat Niemeyer, social committee chairman.

The dance, which is scheduled for November 14 in the Women's Gymnasium from three to five p.m., will be the second mixer dance of the semester. As yet, the theme for the dance has not been selected by the Low Sophomore class.

Students will dance to the music of college records.

College Students Desired As Hosts, Hostesses

An invitation to college students to act as hosts and hostesses at a Hallowe'en party for Presidio soldiers, under auspices of the Marina Merchants Association, was extended today by John Butler, a member of the group.

Students desirous of attending are to be in the school yard of Marina Junior High School on the night of the party. Art Weidner and his 20 piece orchestra are slated to play for the affair.

Community Chest

Donations Supply Necessary Funds For Many Organizations

By Jack Robinson

No doubt in the process of digging down deep in his pocket to give to the Community Chest, John Q. Citizen has wondered just where that dollar goes. The Chest makes no secret of this, but it is surprising just how few people take the time or the trouble to find out.

The Community Chest of San Francisco is a combination of 82 agencies that give aid and comfort to thousands that are in want. The agencies serve all races and creeds without exception or discrimination.

Work Divided In Five Parts

The work of the Chest is divided into five main parts including the paid staff which is very small. It is the work of the agencies in these groups to distribute the contributions in the places that they are needed most. At the beginning of each year, each agency hands in a budget which gives the expenditures that they expect to make and how they expect to make them. The central Community Chest, contrary to popular belief, does not give aid. It acts as a giant clearing house for the contributions, and it aids the agencies by the use of its giant index system.

Most of Mr. Public's dollar goes to the Child Welfare Department. In fact, 25 cents goes to this branch. Served by this group are among others, The Children's Day Homes, Children's Aid, and the Children's Protective Society. This latter agency offers protection to children who have become the victims of cruelty, or other conditions beyond their control. The Society works in conjunction with the Juvenile Court in working out a solution to these problems.

Health Agencies Second

Next to receive 23.5 cents of John Q's dollar are the Health Agencies. Among these are Children's Hospital, University of California Hospital Out-Patient Department and various other hospitals and rest homes.

Next in line for a piece of Mr. Public's dollar are the Family Service, Protective & Coordinating Agencies who take the sum of 23.1 cents of the fast diminishing sum. To this branch of the Community Chest belong The Traveler's Aid of San Francisco, the Adjustment Bureau, and various Catholic organizations.

Following these three is the Youth Guidance and Group Work who almost finish John's dollar by taking 22.4 cents of it. It is this organization that gives a helping hand to those boys and girls that might otherwise roam the streets and for want of better things to do, add greatly to our already large crime list.

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

III. Algy Looks Behind Administrative Scenes

"TODAY, Algy, in our discussion of the college administration we're going to find out that the college is very fortunate in having a liberal chief administrator and that he, in turn, is fortunate in having highly capable people working under him."

"Prejudiced, aren't you?" rejoined Algy.

"We think you'll be prejudiced in this fashion, too, Algy, when you hear how President Archibald J. Cloud, the chief administrator, handles the reins of the college."

(Algy, if you've come in late, is a walking, heckling compendium of the average junior collegian.)

"First," Algy said, "who makes up this administrative force?"

"Well, we may include in that, after the President, Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne and Dean of Women Margaret Dougherty, Registrar J. Paul Mohr and his assistant, Mary Jane Learnard, Coordinator of Educational Management Louis G. Conlan, and Librarian Marcus Skarstedt.

"These people work with President Cloud under a system of real coordination. Many or most policies and actions in the college are a synthesis or fusion of thought and plan from each of the separate administrators and, in some case, faculty members. With himself as the coordinating unit, President Cloud delegates much authority in the college. Not only that, he follows this method to its logical conclusion and abstains almost entirely from intervening with the projects of those in whom he has conferred this authority."

"I see what you mean, I think, by 'logical conclusion'," mused Algy. "Because if he were to tell someone to do something and hang around supervising the job, that person would lose his sense of responsibility."

"You hit the $64 question that time, Algy! That's exactly it.

"While talking to President Cloud this week, he obligingly gave us a list of responsibilities directly pertaining to his office. They are leadership, which includes planning and policy-making; management of the physical plant; supervision of personnel; and direction of curriculum."

"That is a big order," breathed Algy.

"It is," we agreed, "and each phase is pursued, to quote President Cloud, 'to attain the main objective for which the college was created and is being operated, viz. to afford the most appropriate and effective educational opportunities to young men and women attending the college.'

"Each of these duties is definitely a 'big order.' For example, when discussing the work of personnel supervision and selection, President Cloud pointed to his file and indicated the presence of hundreds upon hundreds of applications for faculty positions. Choosing the best obtainable instructors from such large numbers of applicants is performed with a full sense of responsibility, and each new member is hired only after serious consultation by the President, his administrators, and faculty members who might be in a more advantageous position to judge technical qualifications.

"President Cloud is also constantly working to improve the physical properties of the college and to introduce new courses and to revitalize old courses."

"I know what a variety of courses we do have," said Algy, "by reading that column, Your College Presents, on the feature page."

"Next comes Registrar J. Paul Mohr. His office is in charge of entrance requirements, entrance, examinations—"

"You mean those tests I took when I started here, English A, aptitude, and all that," Algy broke in.

"Righto, and the office also keeps a check on your grades and your program.

"Mr. Mohr is a valued consultant of President Cloud, and, through his engineering background, was invaluable in the detailed planning of the college science building—a feature that never fails to arouse visitor comment.

"The two deans deal directly with the men and women of the college, and their offices are always open to the man or woman needing assistance in one way or another, such as housing or employment. Dean Browne, in particular, is a kind of 'trouble-shooter' in college, has a reputation for an encyclopedic knowledge of college and students affairs, and acts as counsellor interpreting policies and technicalities of school department rulings. Dean Dougherty, as adviser to the Associated Women Students, stands in similar relationship as general supervisor of women's activities, and is in addition counsellor for all social activities.

"Now we come to the man with a big title and a big job, Louis G. Conlan, coordinator of educational management. He manages what you might call the business side of the college, that is, all college equipment is arranged for through his office. For instance, he is busy right now in securing the bleachers for the gym as soon as possible. Though it may seem easy, Coordinator Conlan is kept busy clearing away the red-tape and simplifying the intricate machinery that surrounds most purchases in large organizations. He also supervises building and ground maintenance in conjunction with Edward H. Redford. Naturally, his advisory services play an important part in the administration."

"Marcus Skarstedt, the college librarian, is also a part of the administrative frame-work. Though he works to a certain degree apart from the main offices, he is nevertheless an integral part of the administration."

"Tell me," Algy interrupted, he was growing tired, "who watches student affairs?"

"It's about time we came to that, isn't it? Well, the Associated Student constitution places ultimate authority in the President of the college, and the President follows his delegation of authority in student affairs, too. He is a strong believer in learning by doing, which theory is useless if someone else does your work for you."

Next Tuesday, we'll talk about the history of the college.

The Philadelphia Academy of Science recently named a plant "Azalea Bakerae" in honor of Dr. W. B. Baker, professor of biology at Emory University, whose research identified it.

Defense Program

California State Guard With Observation Squadron Hold Meetings At College

In an effort to aid the national defense program, college officials today explained the part currently being played by this institution in co-operation with defense organization.

Working in conjunction with the California State Guard, the Third Aerial Observation Squadron, meeting at the college during the evening, is one of the contributions that the college has to offer to the defense movement.

Service Voluntary

Under the leadership of Major Frank Flynn, the organization is composed of men who are draft exempt either by age or defense employment. The men who have joined the squadron have done so at their own will, volunteering their services and purchasing their own uniforms.

This recently organized air arm of the California State Guard has regular meetings at the college, at which time a weekly study is made of the factors that confront the group in actual war conditions. Various courses offered to squadron members include a study of motors under the leadership of Larry Hall; a course in navigation led by Helge Albrekson, and photography taught by Bev Pasqualetti. An addition to the course at the beginning of the new year is scheduled to include a study of meteorology. All educational facilities offered at the college are under the direction of Major George Richards, Civil Pilot Training instructor.

To Fly In Airshow

A mustering in of the organization is slated to take place Sunday at the San Carlos Airport at 12 o'clock. At the noon time review the squadron will officially become a part of the California State Guard, and will participate in an air show. The Sunday ceremony is open to the public.

Further enlistments will be taken by the group, and may be obtained from Bev Pasqualetti or Major George Richards of the college.

Debating

Conference Set To Draw Up Schedule

With the announcement that a formal attempt to draw up a definite schedule for the debating team, Lloyd D. Luckmann, chairman of the Northern California Junior College Association, set the date for the conference at Thursday, Nov. 13.

The proposed conference will be open to all Northern California Junior Colleges and it is hoped by Luckmann that each college will be represented by a faculty moderator and three or four students. The conference will probably begin with a luncheon and continue through the afternoon.

"Heretofore, the debates have been arranged by hit or miss methods but now we hope to establish a definite schedule," Luckmann said. Other members of the committee are Faith Fraser, and Mason A. Johnston.

The college debate team met St. Mary's College debating team last Wednesday but to date this was the only meeting on the schedule.

Merchandise Classes Learn Hosiery Manufacturing

Stanley Hansen, a hosiery buyer for the White House, spoke this morning to students of retail merchandising classes, according to Virginia Gohn, business instructor.

Hansen outlined the processes involved in the manufacture of hosiery, its selling points, and the recent developments in that particular field.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

● Alpha Gamma Sigma . . . Meeting November 5, at 1 p.m. in Room 100. Dean Joel H. Hildebrand of the University of California, will speak on "The Education of the Gifted Student." All members are excused from classes to attend.

● Foresters Fraternity . . . Hike to Muir Woods Sunday, November 2. Meet at 5th and Mission streets at 8 a.m. Bus fare will be 55 cents round trip. Bring a lunch. In case of rain, the hike will be postponed.

New Books Added To Shelves; Wide Variety Present

More than 50 new books, most of which have been selected by members of the faculty, have been added to the library this week, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, said Wednesday.

Among recently arrived books, two of which Skarstedt considers of special interest are Who's Who In Latin America, and Speed and Fun With Figures. A volume which may be useful to faculty members is Audio-Visual Aids To Instruction. New fiction includes Sapphira and the Slave Girl by Willa Cather, and Fame Is the Spur, by Howard Spring.

Books of special interest to students enrolled in various fields of study are: American Business In a Changing World, The Management of Labor Relations, Music Appreciation For the Student, An Introduction To American Forestry, Applied Mathematics in Chemical Engineering, and Structural Design.

Three new books dealing with crafts are Practical Wood Carving Projects, Practical Pottery, and Block Prints, How To Make Them.

To keep posted on books of special significance being received by the library, Skarstedt suggested that students observe regularly the bulletin board outside the library upon which book jackets are posted, and the display racks in the library.

Emory University was the first college for men in Georgia to offer training for journalism.

Vol. XIII SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA—TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1941 No. 16

By Francis Chrisman

WHAT type of people inhabit this twentieth century world? Is there an all-inclusive answer to that question? May it be said that they are good or bad, ambitious or lazy, covetous or sharing, co-operative or selfish?

Certainly one definitely expressed formula would never represent the modern man. Ramifications and additions to that formula would make it a hodge-podge of vices and virtues far surpassing our present complicated ideas of human composition.

There are those well informed persons, spoken of with appellations of great length and ungodly orthography, whose stock in trade is the mental and physical make-up of human beings. They can tell you what is wrong if you are mentally or physically ill.

WHAT THEY CAN'T DO!

They can solve individual and group problems, but they can't change the nature, the inherent beliefs, the prejudices, the fears, the pride, nor the hates of their patients. If these are bad they cannot make them good again.

The only way for you to discover the type of people among whom you now live is to judge for yourself, basing your conclusions upon your own evidence and upon your own deductions.

Are men today afraid? Replacing the fears of a more peaceful age, the modern individual finds that the fear of today is a thousand times greater than any age-fear of the past. He fears for his liberty, for his future, for his family, for his home, for his country, and for other men.

AN UNCONSCIOUS GUIDE

His step in every direction is unconsciously guided by fears that are newer and more serious. Most of all he fears because he cannot understand a multitude of changes—he is not afraid of change itself, he is frightened because he cannot understand.

Today are men proud? Of what? of new inventions that kill with greater dexterity, of fierce national pride that requires the death of others upon a sacrificial altar of one's country, of the quickening tempo of more modern civilization which splits up families and superficially supplies the wants of ordinary people, of war and hate and fear and greed, of anything other than the hope of something different?

SOME BETTER THAN NONE

To be rational is to look upon a dark and dismal picture—to be irrational is to accept without conviction—to be stupid is to follow blindly.

So today men are irrational and stupid, they accept without conviction and they follow blindly—because they have found that a faulty pride is better than no pride at all. Pride men must have, sense they can do without.

Are men kind? Dismiss this with a another thought. Let's ask the haves; then let's ask the have-nots.

OF CO-OPERATION AND ASSISTANCE

Is co-operation and helpfulness a modern virtue? If ulterior motives are not taken into consideration this is the most helpful and co-operative world that could possibly exist. If we do consider ulterior designs we cannot overlook strikes, senseless competition, graft, lies, misrepresentation, frauds, wars, and all other kindred devices of this civilized life we lead. The helping hand is too often in the other fellow's pocket.

Are people happy? Happiness and contentment are the priceless attainments held up by the sponsors of each and every movement, whether it be "Ham and Eggs" or "peace at any price," as bribes for popular support. This is because they are the most coveted, most sought after, most desired, most highly prized, of any human accomplishment. Men seek them in personal gain and in philanthropic attempts of every kind.

There is a lack of these achievements in the world today. Men can find no respite from fear, no logical substitute for pride, nor for kindness or justice or co-operation.

All the virtues that make life a preferable commodity are lacking when we need them most. It would be correct to say that there would be no dearth if we did not need them. In other words, if there was no lack of the things we wish they would be too trite to desire. And there will always be some virtue worthy that we do not possess of attainment.

A PROFFERED SOLUTION

Therein lies a solution to the catastrophe of modern life. To regain hope it must be recreated. To establish justice it must be redetermined. To find pride it must be rediscovered.

Alpha Gamma Sigma

Dean Hildebrand Speaks At Meeting Of College Honor Society Tomorrow

Dr. J. H. Hildebrand, Dean of the College of Letters and Science of University of California, is slated to speak before Alpha Gamma Sigma members at a meeting to be held tomorrow in Room 100 at 1 p. m.

Speaking upon the subject The Education of Gifted Students, Dr. Hildebrand will outline the merits of a good education and its value in later years.

Temporary and regular members of the college scholastic council will be excused from classes tomorrow in order that they may attend the meeting, which is the annual public meeting of Alpha Gamma Sigma, according to J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

Meeting Open To Public

Not only members of the society are invited to attend the meeting, but any member of the faculty or student body that may be interested is urged to attend the affair.

"Dr. Hildebrand spoke at the last year meeting of the Alpha Gamma Sigma group and was very well liked," Miss Cooper, society adviser, said.

"Coaching services conducted by the honor group are currently under way," Miss Cooper said, "and students in need of coaching in any subject are urged to contact club members for aid in college studies."

Coaching A New Service

Inaugurated by the group last year, coaching service proved its worth last semester by aiding many students. Its value was recognized by San Jose State College when that school adopted the plan for immediate use at the San Jose institution.

Still in need of coaches to supervise student study habits, Alpha Gamma Sigma members have issued a call for any student to aid in coaching that feels he has the necessary ability.

More Coaches Needed

"Coaches in the fields of physics, chemistry, and philosophy are needed by the group at the present time, and any help that faculty members could give us in this matter would be appreciated," Miss Cooper said.

Coaching service is conducted free of charge by the scholastic group, and is open to any student of the college who feels he needs help in any subject.

Talent Bureau

Auditioning To Start Again

Because of added interest, talent bureau auditions will begin tomorrow at 3 p. m., in Room 200, Irwin Cohen, bureau student manager, announced recently.

Cohen urged talented students, especially those with specialty numbers to appear in Room 200 for auditions.

Need For Comedians Great

All entertainers are invited to be auditioned but the need for comedians, novelty and specialty numbers is great, Cohen explained.

Recordings are made of each audition and are filed so that when any specific type of talent is requested, arrangements may be made through the bureau for it.

Already this semester, two outside engagements have been filled by students auditioned by the bureau. However, most of the calls come from student organizations and for college functions.

Appointments Should Be Made

Students should make appointments with either Flossita Badger, Wesley Muscio, faculty advisers, or Cohen for auditions.

The purpose of the talent bureau is to furnish entertainment for various college events. The bureau also gets calls from outside the college for talent. It receives these outside calls from clubs and church groups.

Parking Lot

Actual Work On Proposed Site Begins

Actual surveyal of the proposed parking lot site will begin tomorrow, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar, who conducted T. L. Pflueger, architect who designed the college, and Dodge Riedy, city architect, over the grounds last Thursday.

"The board met Tuesday, October 28," Mohr said, "and Mr. Pflueger was authorized to prepare an estimate of the costs of grading and paving the crescent parking road."

Pflueger To Speed Work

Pflueger was chosen to provide the estimate to save time, as it was indicated that Riedy would have required at least two months to become acquainted with the campus and the problems of construction in this particular case," Mohr explained. "As Pflueger already had the plans drawn up, the board found it advisable to authorize him to provide the estimate," Mohr added.

The estimate will be sent to the board today and upon its approval the engineers will begin surveyal tomorrow. The drafting of the map will take about a week. Upon its completion it will be sent to Pflueger, who will have been preparing plans for the roadway in the meantime.

Appointment Saves Two Months

"Though there has been a little over a week's delay in negotiations, the authorization of Pflueger has actually saved about two months' time," Mohr pointed out.

After an estimate has been made and exact specifications drawn up, bidding will start between the several construction companies in San Francisco. The contract will go to the lowest bidder who is approved.

Plans Cover Two-Month Period

"The drawing up of plans, making of an estimate, completion of specifications and bidding should cover a period of about two months," Mohr said.

"As to how long it will take to finish the roadway once it has been started is hard to say," he added. "It depends entirely on the company which receives the bid."

Committee Workers Needed

Pat Niemeyer, vice-president and social committee chairman, issued a call today for 10 volunteers to work with the social committee.

Recruits should apply at the Associated Student office.

Students O.K. 'Queen' Plan, Ban Blind Date

By Ed Lopez

Surveys have been taken on every question and controversy that could present itself to the American people; they have ranged from presidential elections to "Do you eat Krackle Korn the Lone Strangers favorite breakfast food?"

Always the master of a situation, The Guardsman, not to be outdone, presents a survey taken on the college campus concerning the most discussed subjects of the day, George Coart's sophomore sweetheart system, and Freshman President Bing Kirk's plan for a campus king.

More than 500 students were asked to answer, "What do you think of Coart's plan for choosing the sophomore sweetheart?" and "Should there be a campus king?"

Fifty-two per cent of those questioned favor Coart's system, but the interesting fact that presented itself through the survey was, more than one-third of the students knew little or nothing about Coart's system. They had never heard about it before!

When asked if they read The Guardsman story (which has been running for the past four weeks) they answered, "Oh, I didn't bother with that."

Without a doubt, the students of this institution approve of the campus king, for in the second issue it was shown that 79 per cent of those questioned approved of the plan!

From all indications, the students do not believe, however, that the individual chosen should be doffed "King" or "Apollo." "Joe College" would be more appropriate. Another objection was that not only freshmen should be eligible for the honored position, but all men students of the college should be considered.

It was "thumbs-down" on the proposed date with the sophomore sweetheart. Very few students approved of this part of the plan.

(See editorial on page two.)

Classes Excused Armistice Day, Nov. 11—Registrar

All classes will be excused on Armistice Day, Tuesday, November 11, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

"There is a rumor going around that Monday, November 10, will also be a holiday, but as yet we have received no official confirmation from the Board of Education," Miss Learnard said.

CAB Charters

Negligent Organizations May File Renewals Up To Friday; 14 Clubs Have Yet To Respond

Applications of negligent organizations that failed to apply to the Club Advisory Board for charter renewals may still bring their applications before the membership committee this week, according to Francis Goetz, president.

Only 21 clubs out of the 35 active in the CAB applied for renewal of their charters, Goetz said.

Pat Ruf, chairman of the membership committee, announced that no complete list of club standings has been tabulated, but a list of clubs recognized and suspended by the board would be released at Fridays meeting.

Clubs that have failed to apply for charter renewals and that should do so during this week, according to Goetz, are as follows:

Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor association; Astronomical Society; Block SF, men's block letter society; Forestry; Forum; Home Economics Association; Music Club; Peace Society; Phi Rho Pi, debating society; Physical Education and Recreation Majors' Club; Riding Club; Skating Club, and Women's Service Society, which recently operated the student book exchange.

Faulty Applications Received

Many clubs applied for their charters, Miss Ruf stated, but failed to do it properly. These organizations stand in danger of suspension if they do not fill out their applications competely this week. They are the Music Club, Engineering Society, Beta Phi Beta, Omricon Phi Pi, and the Forum Club.

Three new clubs applied for charters at Friday's meeting, Goetz said. Peace Officers, opened to the police training students; Sigma Delta Pi, open to Jewish men students; and Phi Lambda Epsilon.

CAB Rules On Club

According to the Associated Students' constitution, the CAB reviews all charter applications and recommends acceptance or suspension to the Executive Council for action. Organizations that fail to renew charters after recognition by the council lose membership in the club board and all recognition by the Associated Students.

George Nielson, editor of the CAB periodical, Cabby, promised that Friday's edition will be far different from previous issues of the club magazine. It will feature cartoons, features, and club news, he said.

Pasadena Game

Student Leaders Go With Players

Leaving the station at 7 o'clock Thursday morning, November 6, the train which will carry the college football team to Pasadena for the game with Pasadena Junior College in the Rose Bowl that night, will also carry with it the president of the Associated Students, the yell leader, and about 50 students, according to Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner.

"We received a letter from Pasadena," Mohorovich revealed, "stating that there will be a dance after the game, at which refreshments will be served free of charge. A date bureau will furnish all lonely students with dates," he said.

Mohorovich expressed his belief that everyone will be sure to have a good time and that this event is one that no one should miss if he can possibly help it.

Jobs In East Bay Post Offices Open To Students

Employment in East Bay post offices for residents of Oakland and Berkeley is available this year for the first time to men students at the college, Joseph A. Amori, college placement director, announced today.

Applicants for these jobs must be citizens of the United States, at least 18 years of age, and must be willing to train for the work for a short period, Amori pointed out. Only male residents of Oakland and Berkeley will be considered, he emphasized.

Applications for sales and wrapping in department stores must be filled this week, Amori warned, since training required for this work will begin immediately. The placement office has already received calls from department stores for 150 workers.

Defense Conscious Women Now Puzzled By Bare Leg Problem

EAST LANSING, MICH—(ACP).—Patriotic co-eds who want leg appeal without "cheapening themselves" by going bare-legged are being urged to wear brightly-colored cotton stockings during the defense-made silk hosiery shortage.

Declaring that red, white and blue cotton stockings are the "rage" in the eastern collegiate set, Elizabeth Conrad, dean of women at Michigan State College, says she thinks it would be "wonderful" if college women all over America adopted them.

The middle-aged dean, long a foe of bare legs, appeals to the girls' patriotism in advocating the cotton hose.

"America needs the silk that American women put on their legs," she says. "Let's have the college women lead the way in this emergency by voluntarily wearing those lovely, long cotton stockings."

The problem of fashion should make little difference, the dean says. She points out that the cotton hosiery now is woven in "dressy old lace designs that remind one of the colorful gay '90's."

Although the dean emphasized that she doesn't dictate campus fashions, students have declared that her suggestions are highly regarded by campus governing bodies.

The idea, however, struck only a luke-warm response. Ellen Stegenga, pretty blond undergraduate, said: "I wouldn't be found dead in them. My patriotism doesn't go that far."

Margaret Jense, president of the Associated Women Students, said the dean's proposal would be discussed by the group. "I'd be for the idea," she said. "Besides, the gay colors might help some girls to have attention directed to their legs."

Ex-Council Votes Raise In Soph Budget, Formal

The college Executive Council last Thursday voted approval of a $65 increase in the high sophomore budget and agreed that the price of bids to the sophomore formal be raised to $1.50.

Action was taken upon the request of George Coart, high sophomore president, who declared that "the high soph dance should be superior to a high school formal, for after all, we are a college."

Requesting permission to obtain additional funds so that a "name band" might play at the semi-annual upper class formal, Coart expressed the belief that in this way the approaching dance would be the "best yet."

There was some hesitation on the part of the council to grant Coart's request, some members claiming that the amount involved was too great, others that a "name band" was not required.

Plans Made For Second AWS Tea For High School Women

Second in the series of teas given the Associated Women Students to honor senior high school women will be held later this month, or sometime in December at the college, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

"The first, which was held last Tuesday to honor seniors from Lincoln, Lowell and Washington fulfilled its purpose just as we wanted it to," stated Miss Fox. "It was meant to give the high school women an 'inside view' of the college, its students, and its faculty."

Which schools will be honored at the next tea is not yet definite, according to Margaret Dougherty, dean of women, but they will probably be Polytechnic, Galileo and Commerce.

The second tea will be conducted in much the same manner as was the first. Each school will be invited to send 25 women to represent it at the tea.

American Education Week

Widely Hailed Youth Act, Status Of S. F. Children, Themes For Two Radio Programs

For November 10

By Claire Leeds

The Youth Correction Authority Act, according to a report by the committee which sponsored it, constitutes a "progressive and effective step in solution of the problem of youth in crime." Significance of this act in rehabilitating young offenders will be the theme of the radio assembly broadcast next Monday, November 10, in observance of American Education Week.

Prominent guests who will participate in the program are Assemblyman James H. Phillips, author of the bill, and Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison.

Contrasting the scientific treatment of delinquents provided by the act against old methods, the fact-finding committee, of which Phillips was chairman, made the following statement in support of its recommendation:

Unclaimed Youth Sore Spot

"One of the weakest links in our penal and correctional system in California, in fact practically the missing link, is our failure to attempt to effectively reclaim the youth of our state who are convicted of public offenses.

Former System Deplorable

"In the past about all that California has done is to lodge them in over-crowded prisons and county jails, with little regard for their health, physical defects, habits, temperament, race, intelligence, or other physical or human factors, and expect them, without further care or attention, except that of confinement, to return to society better and more law-respecting citizens.

New Law To Restore Youth

"By enacting into law the proposal of the American Law Institute for a Youth Correction Authority, which has as its basic principle the protection of society by the restoration of reclaimable young men to good citizenship, California would take a long progressive and effective step forward toward the solution of the problem of 'youth in crime'."

In addition to a discussion of the Youth Correction Authority by Phillips, Duffy, President Archibald J. Cloud, Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, and Clarence Ashman, student participator, a dramatization showing how the Authority would handle the case of a typical delinquent will be presented by radio production classes, under the direction of Marie Weller, radio instructor.

For November 12

Discussing the topic San Francisco's Children—Are They Getting a Square Deal? seven prominent men and women will participate in a radio broadcast at the college, Wednesday, November 12, in observance of American Education Week, President Archibald J. Cloud announced last Friday.

Guests will include Reverend James O'Dowd, Superintendent of Parochial Schools; John F. Brady, Chief Deputy Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools; Dr. J. C. Geiger, Director of the Department of Public Health; Mrs. H. W. Thomas, Vice-President, Second District of the P.-T.A.; Mrs. Tadini Bacigalupi, Child Welfare Chairman of the San Francisco Center of the California League of Women Voters; Dr. Amos Christie of the University of California, Moderator, and Hon. Jesse C. Colman, Chairman, Citizens' Committee for the Observance of American Education Week. Colman will introduce the program.

These participants, according to President Cloud, are experts qualified to discuss education, public health, juvenile delinquency, parental guidance, character, spiritual development and other phases of the topic set forth.

Carnival Still Hangs On CAB Approval Vote

Next Friday's meeting of the Club Advisory Board will decide the fate of the carnival day proposed by the Welfare Committee, according to Bob Lindemann, welfare chairman.

"We can't do a thing about carnival day until the CAB has submitted its report at the meeting Friday," said Lindemann. "At the last meeting of the CAB the members were enthusiastic over our idea, but we still are not sure as to the final outcome of carnival day," he continued.

Carnival Needs CAB ruling

If the CAB approves the idea, Lindemann's next step will be to work out definite plans as to booths, concessions, a site, and a date for the festival. After definite plans have been worked out they will be submitted to faculty members for their approval.

Faculty Approval Not Known

"I am not sure just how the administration officers will react to the idea, but if we can set a well-prepared outline before them I think they will approve of carnival day," Lindemann continued.

Carnival day, Lindemann explained, would be one day set aside from each semester. Students would be expected to wear costumes, and awards would be given for the most original. The clubs of the college would operate booths and concessions, the profits of which would go to the club's own treasury.

"The co-operation which the students and college organizations give the carnival idea will become a college tradition, or fail entirely," Lindemann said.

L'Affaire Apollo

Consider Now

SUFFICIENT time has now elapsed for the Associated Students to realize what a pitiful farce is the whole plan for the selection of a low frosh Apollo.

From the publicity and student interest standpoints, the idea is a "natural." It makes good page one material. Everyone talks about it. One element, though, the really important one, has been neglected. No one, apparently, has stopped to consider the human question.

The originators of the plan speak glibly of the Apollo to be and the Soph Sweetheart to be, both of whom are to attend the Soph Formal together, but what of the two people who may assume these titles?

Speaking for the honor of the male portion of the college, it is to be hoped that the search of the Seven Stalwart Slyphs delegated to track down Apollo candidates meets with emphatic NOES from the victims. The design by which one woman, perhaps not the most worthy, is singled out for recognition because she happens, wholly by accident, to possess certain physical qualities that we term attractive is not met with the fullest approval here. Since the process is a traditional part of the American scene, it may as well be tolerated; but when that same process is applied to the other sex, one has every right to raise his eyebrows and wonder about man's claim to certain characteristics that may be epitomized as ruggedness.

If, by some chance, an Apollo is chosen, his introduction, as planned, at the Associated Men Students' fights should prove an interesting experience. Not completely enviable or congruous would be the position of the Apollo as he was introduced, freshly powdered, in the same ring where brawn-chested men are about to batter themselves for the delight of the blood-hungry spectators.

If, by some chance, Apollo survives this introduction, what of the match-making that is also on the agenda of the Apollo plan? Suppose our Snow White balks at the thought of going to the Soph Formal with Apollo? And who will have the task of convincing Snow White's No. 1 man that he shouldn't get excited over the affair — it's purely platonic, you know, and besides it's for the good of the college. Who knows, Apollo might even have some objections.

Any one of these eventualities is entirely possible. To have the plan collapse at the last moment would hardly be desirable and would nullify a lot of hard work, even though misguided. Reconsideration now to prevent an embarrassing failure in the future seems the wisest course.

Attention, Please

NEWS Item: Women students having physical education classes on a rainy day will report to rooms in the science building, instead of the gymnasium.

That is very nice for the ladies and will undoubtedly save numerous colds and other minor illnesses. But what of the poor maligned male when winter rains begin in earnest to pelt the winding path to the gymnasiums.

With such a wise move initiated for the feminine enrollees in physical education classes, would it not be wise and just to construct a similar scheme for the male contingency, many of whom must march down the hill when downpours of soaking rain practically forecast disaster only to check of a number, especially if the individual is enrolled in outside activities.

Many will smile at the problem and dismiss it with a careless statement that "man's so-called superiority will carry him through." To the poor student, however, who must trudge through mist and rain to the men's gym, a procedure similar to that entertained by the women would be indeed welcome. G. C., '42.

THERE'S A
friend of ours who spent the summer in Quebec on a house boat, fishing, doing a little hunting, and a lot of swimming. When he went up there he was a mere 97-pound weakling.

After two months in the wide, wide spaces, communing with nature, sleeping under the stars, and in short, living like a native, he returned, a 90-pound weakling.

But, he has a story about the two French-Canadian guides that he was renting the house boat from. One night they anchored on a sand bar and went to sleep. During the night the boat started to drift. One of the guides woke up.

"Pierre, Pierre," he shouted, "we're not here some more."

"No, by gar," Pierre replied, looking out the window, "we're 14 miles from here."

PERHAPS
you've read a column in this sheet by Bill Cothran. Not many people know Cothran's awful secret. He's a pin ball machine fiend. He knows the location of all the best machines from Ocean Avenue to South San Francisco. Cothran is well practiced in all the right shoulder movements, and he knows just how much tilt a machine will take without blinking out. He has the pin ball machine twitch. Sometimes while walking down the street his arms and shoulders start jerking spasmodically. Leading nerve specialists have been studying up on this malady. They have a theory that the only possible cure is riding in the 8 o'clock bus to the college. You can jerk all you want and people think you're only a pickpocket.

One night while Bill was kibitzing a pin ball game in the wilds of Market Street, a sleepy gentleman, who'd had "one over the eight," weaved into the establishment. He looked furtively around and inserted a nickel into a machine. It lit up. The gentleman gave the machine a tremendous wallop. The lights winked out again. The gentleman spun around to the attendant.

"Hey, I got a tilt on the first ball," he shouted.

The attendant gave him another nickel. The man looked at him slyly and dropped the nickel into his pocket.

"Aren't you going to play any more?" asked the attendant.

"What do you think I am, a sap?" replied the gentleman, smugly. "All I needed was car fare."

"Yes," he answered.

"Hmmm. Did I answer?"

RAM'S HORN

Mayan History; Apollo Deal Challenged

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 134. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

• 2,000,000 Years?
Editor, The Guardsman:

I enjoy reading The Guardsman, but the feature in last Tuesday's issue on the geological exhibit has made me a wee bit puzzled. The method by which these different collections are made is very interesting, but frankly, I'm wondering, were there Mayans around some 2,000,000 years ago?

If they were, I'm very willing to admit that I'm wrong again, and I shouldn't have brought it up, but please set me right.

George Wilson.

Editor's Note: We were going to keep that quiet. You are right, The Guardsman was in error. Competent archeologists placed the origin of the Mayan civilization during the fifth century.

• L'Affaire Apollo
Editor, The Guardsman:

Recent articles in the paper report that the honorable Frosh Apollo will have the pleasure of escorting the Sophomore Sweetheart to the Soph Formal. This is a marvelous idea. The king and queen should always go together. But what if the queen has some other knave whom she would prefer to go with. After all, the soph formal is the BIG event of the social calendar, isn't it? So why should the chosen damsel have to go with someone already picked out for her, and perhaps not a gentleman of her own choosing.

Again, the Apollo might have another lady fair whom he would much rather take to the dance. Really, I should worry about some other person's dates, but the idea just seems a trifle absurd to me.

• Come On In!
Editor, The Guardsman:

I rise to a point of order, if not downright grammatical accuracy and common sense. When is a postponement?

A brief note in your paper recently claimed that the Pasadena game was "postponed from Friday, November 7, to Thursday, November 6." I've heard of things being postponed, put off, held at a later date, and even called off entirely or indefinitely depending on the sincerity of the individual responsible. I've never heard of anything being postponed and then held at an earlier date.

FEM FADS . . .
by Nancy

THE rains came and brought with them a host of new fashions, that can be worn and very well, too. One colorful article of rain garb is the boot galosh that makes its appearance with the first sign of dew on the ground.

These boots are knee-length and come in white and colorful hues. This year they can be worn over shoes, whereas, before they were worn as shoes and when the weather took a turn for the good, the wearers sweltered in their high rubber boots. Don't let living in a city and being a woman stop you if you want to be a cowboy for there are rubber lariat boots, and riding boots. Lariat boots are similar to Gene Autry's or some other un-bona fide westerner in tooling and finish. The riding boots are rubber and come in brown. Any one of this trio would be ideally suited to the woman who has to traverse wet or muddy streets to get to the college or who takes a "K" car and follows the muddy path.

DOUBLE DUTY

Coats also have their places when rains fall. One very seldom sees a coat on a student during nice weather, because they are too hot. But when the weather loses its warmth and begins to get drippy—out come the coats. Particularly good are reversibles, which can do double duty. For one day there is a wool coat to wear with sport things, and the next day it takes on the appearance of a sturdy rain coat. This miraculous feat is performed by simply turning the coat inside out. Simple, isn't it?

If you don't go in for reversibles, gabardine rain coats are excellent substitutes. They generally come in tan (but there is a light blue one in the college) and are made with regular sport coat lines.

With these gabardine rain coats, students even get an urge to wear a hat. Some are gabardine, and keep the rain off coiffures. However, there are still those with Gypsy blood in their veins who wear bandanas—oiled silk and cloth ones. The oiled silk ones are best to keep your hair dry even if they don't do much to glamourize you. If you want to look fresh as a daisy in the rain, a cloth bandana will do much more for you.

NAN SEES . . .
rain equipment from head to toe making an entry into college life during the semester. However, Allah be praised, students won't have to swim down the hill to the gymnasium classes any more. "Women are getting soft in this modern age," physical education instructors cry out, but mostly because they have to leave their nice warm gymnasiums and walk up the hill in the rain to their students. Oh well, they probably figure that 1,500 women are too many to battle. Besides, who wants to teach a class that is all wet (with rain) and spends the whole hour trying to fix up a new hair-do, rather than batting a birdie or a ball over a net into the opponent's alley.

Spectator . . .
All That Money Can Buy . . . It's an excellent job

Today's Spectator was written by Doug Johnson

FIRE and brimstone, pathos and comedy are tied up in a neat bundle, labeled All That Money Can Buy, and served up by RKO, constituting the best entertainment package recently to come to Market Street.

The story, adapted from Benet's famous The Devil and Daniel Webster, deals with a bargain between James Craig as Jaber Stone, a New Hampshire farmer, and Walter Huston as an advocate of the Devil, called Mr. Scratch. Craig agrees to give up his soul to the Devil in seven years on the guarantee that he will have unlimited prosperity and good fortune. The scene is laid on and about an early New Hampshire farm.

Edward Arnold, as Daniel Webster, is also tormented by Scratch, but manages to ward him off and they come to a verbal battle before a ghostly jury at the end of the picture.

DOESN'T DISAPPOINT AUDIENCE

There have been many pictures in the past that centered around a supernatural plot, but William Dieterle, RKO director, who painted such fine pictures of Louis Pasteur and Emil Zola, managed to give the public one that doesn't make them laugh in the wrong places.

Walter Huston, as the Devil's advocate, did a marvelous piece of acting. He was sly, wheedling, malicious, domineering, brutal and subtle. With all this, he never once over-did his role. He appeared as a shabby New England farmer, who popped up at convenient times to aid Craig in gaining his fame and prosperity and finally to bring him before the Devil. True, he had an odd habit of making things disappear in flames occasionally, but his actions seemed to blend in with the setting and never detracted from the drama.

James Craig adequately displayed all the characteristics of a suddenly rich, back country farmer. His portrayal of the at first pious, then gradually growing power-drunk and money-hungry farmer was well done.

Anne Shirley, as his wife, plays the part of the faithful but uncertain wife of Craig excellently.

All That Money Can Buy couldn't have been a success without the unusual photographic effects obtained by Joseph August.

ATMOSPHERE IMPRESSIVE

The use of heavy oppressive cloud formations, gloomy, deserted fields interminable and shadowy, blurred figures of men long dead, all make up a foreboding atmosphere that is impressive without attempting to be horrifying.

The music was appropriate. One scene in particular when the blurred figures of men that look like ghosts but could be ordinary towns people dance stiffly in huge, shadowy ballrooms to the discordant strains of Humoresque.

Simone Simon dances among these spectral figures, whirling, cavorting, with the lifeless corpse of an old miser money lender. We've always been prejudiced in favor of Simone ever since she sang Viene Viene and wiggled her fingernails in a picture with Don Ameche. She does all right as the Devil's little help mate. She could have our soul, cheap.

GINNY SIMMS SINGS

On the stage the star attraction was Ginny Simms, whose husky voice rendered You and I in a fashion that had several bald men in the front row debating whether to jump right up on the stage or try to meet her at the stage door.

Anne Shirley made a very nice little talk. Edward Arnold plugged all his pictures.

Cass Daley, rubber-faced comedienne, was the highlight of the stage show. She sang a song about a little wash girl—"I Iron Till My Finger Hurts, It's Going to Drive Me Nuts," which, judging from her performance, shouldn't be a long drive.

ASTRONOMER Louis Berman is a persistent man. The other day carpenters were working in Room 100 installing a ventilation system. The hammers flew, people walked in and out measuring the blackboard, the atoms and molecules were racing around and bumping into each other. The sound waves of Berman's were dominated by those of the carpenter's hammer. Berman refused to throw in the proverbial towel. Berman realized his paradox after 22 minutes of raucous lecturing. It was a bad day. When Berman entered class, he passed unheeded the advice of students who urged him not to walk under the ladder by the door.

Now that the rains have begun, according to the weather man and the editor's rheumatism, it looks as if there might be another Balboa Lake. Last semester the lake was quite a landmark. All day long children played in it, characters could be seen walking around in the dirty mire with yardsticks, and people from the psychology classes took to sailing boats on it. Perhaps the water department, which originally owned this property, had the right idea when it chose the property as the site of a future reservoir.

People by nature have always had a particular interest in what the other fellow is doing. Especially are they interested in characters. They go slumming in the worst places, usually in groups with the purpose in mind of seeing some characters. But the best characters are not to be found always in the dives and dens of iniquity of San Francisco, sometimes they are right under your very nose (if it isn't too long to see under).

For instance, there is one delightful little man that walks around the halls asking friends if they have seen his keeper. If they reply "Yes," he pleads with them not to turn him in. "They don't understand me," he says.

Then there's one told to us by our friend in the library. One quiet day she was standing behind the counter, everything was serene and peaceful until some odd-looking person placidly walked up to her and said "I like poetry, do you like poetry? Will you write me a poem?"

Just two instances that go a little ways in proving that to find characters, you don't have to go slumming or read abnormal psychology books. Take a good look at the guy next to you!

Your College Presents . . . Star Gazing: U.S. Has Few Qualified Astronomers

By Iwanna Hayworth

WITHIN the 26-foot dome of the college observatory, war in Europe has dealt a bitter blow. The huge telescope originally in the plans for astronomical study is now in abeyance because the glasses used to make the lenses previously came from Germany. Now it is impossible to get these lenses, and even if it were, the defense priorities would prohibit its construction at the present time.

The dome itself is revolved by means of an electrical motor and the shutter slides open with the pressure of an electrical switch.

Since the observatory cannot be used until this giant telescope is completely installed, the Civil Aeronautics Division has taken over and use it now as their office.

COURSES COMPARABLE TO UNIVERSITY WORK

The courses offered by the astronomy department are of the same type and nature as those which are taught at the University of California and U.C.L.A. Besides being given for astronomy majors, for those who wish to take it, this course completes the necessary science requirements for further university work.

In the future, Louis Berman, head of the department, revealed that he hopes to be able to offer a purely cultural course in astronomy which will enable more students to learn something of the scientific study of the planets. This course will not be university parallel, but a general college course, he said.

According to Berman, math is the most important subject which must be taken by the majors in this division.

He further pointed out that there is a very good field in astronomy for women. There are quite a number of women astronomers who are now in connection with the Lick Observatory, which is, in turn, connected with the University of California.

LIMITED NUMBER OF ASTRONOMERS

Surprisingly enough, and this may not be a known fact, there are fewer than 1,000 astronomers in the United States at the present time. Men who are interested in this line of work either plan to teach or do scientific work in observatories.

The required length of time for those desiring to go into this field is at least seven years. This time includes the minimum of four years of university training and three more years needed to secure a Ph.D. Since astronomy is so highly exacting, it is necessary that educational institutions have only those instructors who are the best in their work.

The courses now included in this curriculum cover, navigation and nautical astronomy, description astronomy, observational, and practical astronomy for the surveyor.

Shown above is Louis Berman, of the college astronomy department, giving instruction to two of his students with the aid of celestial globes.

MODERN LABORATORY

The laboratory built for and used by the astronomy classes contains the very best of equipment, among which are the two smaller telescopes which are used in student study of the planets and other celestial bodies. Another valuable piece of equipment used by and for instruction is the helioscope (and this is a form of refracting telescope), used to observe movements of the sun. The astronomical transit is used in the determination of time by astronomers, and also in the possession of the department is a machine which photographs measurements of the stars.

An interesting feature of the course is the charts used for illustration and study. It is not known whether other colleges offer those in the course of study or not. These charts are made by NYA students in the college. Used along with them is the collection of around 1,000 lantern slides, and the different motion pictures which help explain the technical details of the course. "I definitely believe in having visual instruction for the students to aid them in conjunction with their work," Berman said.

Constellation charts and celestial globes are provided for student use in the laboratory.

Is It Really A Science! One Cannot Be Victorious

IS IT A SCIENCE?

Some of the college's gayer young blades, the instinct of self-exaltation strong within their narrow chests, have wedged themselves into their proper athletic niche. Daily, each time they have a free hour, they trek down the hill from the science hall, tramp through the dust (if winter—they slop through the mud) of the adjacent field, and emerge onto Ocean Avenue; from whence they settle into their element.

Throwing their various heads back, they eagerly sniff the breeze, and, circling several times, make their way to the nearest pin ball machine as accurately as any thoroughbred homing pigeon. The daily cycle has begun again.

Having assumed the proper position (both feet firmly planted, hands firmly gripping the lower corners of the machine, and shoulders hunched forward to provide an explosive leverage), they instruct an assistant to insert a nickel in the slot, and the battle has begun.

The machine zigs . . . he zags. . . . the machine zags . . . he zigs . . . the machine zigs again . . . this time he isn't fooled . . . he zigs too . . . but it is too late—the machine has tilted.

DISGUSTED DISSIPATE

Snarling with the fury of an amok native, he whirls swiftly and gathers his cohorts around him as he approaches the counter, behind which the timid proprietor quavers apprehensively.

"What kind of a game is this?" he roars in fury at the back of the counterman, who is executing an Italian advance. "I didn't even touch the durned thing, and it tilted—it tilted!"

Having released the dam from in front of his anger, the irked sucker traded a dime for two nickels and returned to the fight. After battling furiously for two and a half hours against the ebbing tides of fortune, the sucker finally came to a tradition-shattering decision, "You can't beat the pin ball machines."

STRANGE CREATURES

Whence come these strange creatures, with coated tongues in sallow cheeks, daily make the tiring (to them) trip to the pin ball players' mecca to make their questionable investments? Who are they?

They come from everywhere and nowhere—they spring up as if from the ground. They are members of the I. O. of P. B. G. P. & W, that rapidly dying clan. Known in full as the International Order of Pin Ball Game Players and Watchers. Long May They Wave!

Triangle Chenilles To Be Awarded Friday; Colleges Send Ten Representatives To Meet

Triangle chenilles will be awarded to fifteen women at the Women's Athletic Association council meeting, Friday, November 7, Bernice Strube, vice-president of the organization, revealed last week.

Awards were won during the last semester, but were not distributed at the Tourney Week banquet as formerly announced, Miss Strube said.

Present at the meeting will be the Red Peppers, an organization of WAA members who have won two or more awards for sports participation. The awards are given for health eligibility, active participation in some activity, and not more than two unexcused absences during the semester. After the first semester, small triangles are awarded with a symbol of the sport on them, to be attached to the chenille triangle.

"Any woman who wishes to help organize a band should also report to the meeting," Miss Strube pointed out, "so that practice may begin immediately."

Music will be furnished by the club, but players must have their own instruments.

Students wishing to attend the Women's Athletic Association swimming meet, Saturday, November 8, at the Y.W.C.A. are requested by Thelma SooHoo, swimming club manager, to sign up in the women's gymnasium before Friday noon.

Colleges participating in the meet will be Marin, Santa Rosa, San Mateo, Salinas, San Francisco State College, and San Jose State. Each college will send ten representatives, Miss SooHoo said, five to swim in the races and five for the general entertainment following.

Entertainment for the day will include relay races, comic relays, a diving exhibition, awards for best swimming form, and a water ballet.

Advanced swimming students taking part in the water ballet are Mary Elizabeth Schmitz, Stella Miranda, Estelle Willmatt, Dorothy Stahman and Miss SooHoo.

After the races, there will be an open swim for all members present, Miss SooHoo said, and then lunch will be served in the "Y" cafeteria with entertainment following. Luncheon will be 35 cents, she added.

Women Students Will Form Orchestra In WAA Program

Because of the recent controversy over a college band, the Women's Athletic Association has decided to form a band composed of women players, providing enough women who can play instruments are interested, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA revealed recently.

Players need not be members of the WAA to join, Miss Kraul said, but they should have their own instruments. If, however, there are some women who play but do not own an instrument, some arrangements may be made for them. Music will be furnished by the club, she said.

Any women musicians interested in helping to form a band should report to the council meeting Friday, November 7 at 4 p.m. in the women's gymnasium, Miss Kraul pointed out.

She added that the meeting this Friday was cancelled because business was all taken care of at the last meeting because of the adoption of parliamentary procedure.

Playdays Planned For Both Bowling And Riding Clubs

Play days have been planned for both bowling and riding clubs, according to Bertha Keller, adviser to the Women's Athletic Association. A bowling sport day will be held Wednesday, November 5, with the WAA bowling team from San Mateo Junior College, and the riding play day will be held the following Saturday in San Mateo.

Eight riders have been invited to the horse show, four from the advanced class and four from the intermediate class, Laurine Bergin, riding instructor, announced, and will take part in the exhibitions and competitions.

The bowling sportday is one of several planned by the WAA bowling club, and will include ten members from both the teams. Bowling with the college team will be Gracina Lowe and Dorothy Dodge, members of the team who recently scored 186 and 187, Miss Keller said.

Basketball Goes Into Final Week Today With Newman Club Leading; Preparation For Swimming Begins

Nearing completion after four successful weeks, the basketball tournament will swing into its final week of competition today, with five games scheduled in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, disclosed last week.

Taking the spotlight as the leading game of interest for today's program, is the contest slated between the undefeated Newman Club and the once defeated Spartans.

With eight victories chalked on their side of the ledger, the Newmans must come out of the fray victorious, or go into a three-way tie for first place along with the Spartans and Goats.

Spartans Upset

Upset last week by the defending champion All-American quintet, the Spartans will run onto the maple-wood boards as probable underdogs against their fast-breaking foes. Unless they fail to smooth out a ragged offense and defense, they will undoubtedly suffer their second consecutive loss.

Employing a tight, man for man defense and a lightning fast breaking offense, which finds Jack Koster, Jack Batiaf, and Bob Roberts repeatedly breaking into the hole for unmolested shots, the Newmans should continue their victory streak to nine games.

Rabbits At Peak Form

The other important game on today's program is the battle for third place between the Rabbits and All-Americans. Starting slowly, the Rabbits have reached a high peak for this game, but, strangely, remain slight underdogs to fall before the All-Americans.

Standings Of Intramural Basketball Quintets

Team	Won	Lost
Newman Club	8	0
Goats	7	1
Spartans	7	1
All Americans	6	2
Rabbits	6	2
Japanese Students	4	4
Blitz Boys	4	4
Phi Lambda Epsilon	4	4

A loss for either squad will eliminate them from any championship contention.

Following is the schedule for today and Thursday.

3:15 p. m.—
Phi Lambda Epsilon vs. Rifle Club
Goats vs. Alpha Delta Epsilon

4:15 p. m.—
Rabbits vs. All Americans
Newman Club vs. Spartans
Blitz Boys vs. Tri Epsilon

Thursday, 3:15 p. m.—
Japanese Students vs. Alpha Delta Epsilon
Phi Lambda Epsilon vs. All Americans

4:15 p. m.—
Goats vs. Spartans
Rabbits vs. Tri Epsilon
Newman Club vs. Blitz Boys

With only one team remaining undefeated, there is a vigorous battle being staged for second place between the Goats, Spartans, Rabbits, and All-Americans. If however, there is a tie at the conclusion of the tournament, a playoff will be held to decide the third place team.

The team winning the game will automatically finish second while the loser will receive the third place award.

Swimming Next Event

Preparing for the next intramural activity, swimming, Coach Al Eisan has begun to accept entries. Any person in the college is eligible to compete, including members of the swimming class.

The meet is set for November 28 at the Jefferson High School pool, with six events planned, including a relay race.

In the five individual events, medals will be awarded to the first three places, while only first place medals will be given in the relay.

All the medals which will be awarded to the various teams that have won places in the intramural program will be on display in the show case in the men's gymnasium next week, Brady said.

Rifle

Sharpshooters Meet Mission High Tonight

Having garnered a 914 to 906 win in the first match of the season last Monday, the college riflemen will meet the Mission High School team tonight at 7:30 on the Ram range.

Jim Juri, rifle club president and team head, pointed out that the high school is represented by a group of excellent marksmen, and that the Rams will have to do some good shooting to win.

The Rams barely beat the Independent Rifle squad earlier this week on the latter's range, pulling through only with some superior marksmanship with the last rounds of ammunition.

Iron Sight Guns Used

One thing that has distinguished the college riflemen in all of their matches, is that they have always used iron sight guns. Nearly every other team in the league in which the college competes uses telescopic sights.

Juri hopes that the team will place in at least two of the divisions that it did last year. "We have some excellent marksmen," Juri said, "but we don't have enough of them. In fact we don't have enough men on the squad."

Students Wanted

Membership on the rifle team is still open to the students. Rifle practices are held every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 9 a. m. to 12 noon on the college range in the basement of the science building. Any student may report there for a tryout.

Complete scores of last Monday's match were Ervin, 185, Reichart, 185, Juri, 182, Pierce, 182, Pack, 181, and Eisan, 157.

Skinner Sets New Record For Cross Country Event

Content to remain back on the early pace and engineering a sterling and determined stretch bid to win easily, Jim Skinner won the intramural cross country run last Friday afternoon.

Clocked in 12:21.3, Skinner's time was considerably faster than the winning time made by Don Venton, last year's winner, Venton's mark for the two and a quarter mile grind was 12:43.

Finishing second was Stuart Boles, who led practically the entire distance until the final lap where he was overtaken by Skinner, and barely lasted to nose out a fast closing Walter Thomson.

Run under rather adverse conditions because of the recent rains, the track was very heavy and made the footing treacherous, but, despite this, excellent time was made by the entire field of 10 starters.

At the conclusion of the race, medals were awarded to the first three men by Russ Sweet, college track coach.

Witnessed by the large gathering which attended the Ram-Salinas grid encounter, the race was held as an added attraction between halves of the game.

Soccer

Squad Drills Offensively; Theodus Back

Playing a purely defensive game in virtually every one of its previous contests, members of the college soccer squad have been sent through rigid drills that they may start chalking up points from the opening gun.

The squad has been scoring most of its points in the second half of the games, which is the reason why Coach Jim Jensen has ordered offensive practices.

Theodus Bolsters Defense

With the addition of Ted Theodus, wingman, who has been ineligible in most of the tilts thus far, the Ram's offense, as well as the defense, will be strengthened considerably. Theodus is a returning veteran from the 1940 squad and is expected to play the same type of game as he did during the last season.

The squad has grown to be quite large this season, with 17 members on the roster. In every game, the entire squad has seen action because Coach Jensen hopes to give every member a chance to display his true ability in actual competition.

Results Late

Because of The Guardsman deadline being last Thursday, the outcome of the Ram-San Francisco State game played Saturday, November 1, was unable to be printed. The story of the game, however, will appear in the Friday edition of the publication.

Before the State game Jensen said, "I hope and feel sure that the team will play an evenly balanced game against State, and, if they do, I'm almost certain that we can beat them."

He added, however, that the men would have to play consistently because the Gators have one of the best teams in the league this year.

Boxers' Training Vigorous For Intramural Fisticana

Members of the college boxing team are continuing with their short, daily workouts in the men's gymnasium, according to Coach Jim Jensen.

Light and heavy bag punching, road work and short sparring bouts make up the afternoon training routine of all ringmen who hope to participate in the college intramurals next month.

Jensen stressed the fact that no man will be allowed to enter a ring in actual competition unless he has kept faithfully to the training schedule.

Boxing eliminations will commence about the middle of November, and the Associated Men Students' smoker will take place next month also.

Jensen, who coaches the college soccer team, is awaiting the close of the soccer season, so that he can devote his full time to the boxing team, before he will allow the men to really start throwing left hooks and right crosses at each other.

By devoting all of his time to boxing, Jensen believes that he can get the men in better condition for the strenuous sport.

Greatly Improved Rams Run Rampant To Drown Salinas With Stormy 28 To 0 Deluge

By Nick Barbarotto

In a one-sided affair which found their opponents outplayed in every department of the game, the college football team, showing the type of football that Coach Lee Eisan knew they were capable of playing, last Friday swept over and trounced Salinas Junior College, 28 to 0.

The Rams had control of the game from the opening whistle to the final gun, played their best game of the season, and their blocking, especially by Art Ekdall, tackling, and signal calling were beyond reproach.

Mixing plays to perfection, forward, shovel, and lateral passes, end runs, tackle smashes, and tricky reverses, the Rams kept the Salinas outfit guessing throughout the game, and the score might well have been larger.

From the outset, Salinas was kept in its own territory, mainly by the kicking of Augie Kalnen and Temp Davies. It was Kalnen's punting that enabled the men of Eisan to score their first touchdown.

After one of Kalnen's kicks rolled out of bounds on the Salinas five yard line in the first quarter, the Panthers kicked to their own 34. From this point "Turk" Terzian passed to Ekdall, who carried the ball to the three. Terzian scored on fourth down from six inches out, but his attempt to convert was wide.

Davies, in the second quarter, kicked a towering 49 yard punt to the Panther 20 yard line, where a clipping penalty placed the ball on the five. On the second down, Salinas attempted to run the Ram left end, but Ekdall's smashing tackle dropped the ball carrier behind the goal line, and the college went into an 8 to 0 half time lead.

In the third period, Terzian took a punt on his own 34, ran to the 50, where he appeared to be stopped but broke loose from a mass of yellow jerseys and continued on to the Salinas 19 yard line. The return covered 44 yards and set up the second touchdown.

Terzian went to the ten on the first play, and then straight down the middle to score. This time he split the uprights, and the score mounted to 15 to 0.

In the same quarter, Warren Haskin recovered a Panther fumble on the Salinas 21 yard line. On first down Billy Wada made two to the 19. On the next play, Jim McGowan took an end around and went all the way, with Ekdall throwing the best block of the day when it appeared that McGowan would be trapped on the ten. Score: 22 to 0 after Terzian's conversion.

An 86 yard march in the fourth quarter provided the final score. Davies, from his own 14, faked a punt and ran 13 yards to the 27. Wada raced 27, and then 16 yards to the Panther 30 yard line. A shovel pass, Wada to Lou Vasquez, placed the ball on the 21, from where Wada passed to Davies for the touchdown. A pass for conversion was incomplete, and the score remained at 28 to 0.

Salinas failed to make a serious threat during the entire contest, their efforts being mainly bent to keeping the mounting score as small as possible.

Panther Fracas Tops For Rams

By Bob Marcus

With every member of the roster inserted into the fray, Coach Lee Eisan's powerful grid machine thundered to a rollicking 28 to 0 victory over a weak and impotent Salinas eleven last week.

* * *

The game marked the inaugural tussle to be played on the college field.

* * *

Aided by wise field generalship from Turk "The Turkey" Terzian, who led the Ram attack from his tailback post, the Rams were able to dominate the entire game. Repeating his efforts of the Sacramento affair, Terzian scored the initial tally, and with his brilliant punt returns and sure fire passes to Art Ekdall kept the Salinas defense widespread, enabling the wide reverses to function.

* * *

Reverses figured greatly in the amount of yardage amassed by the Rams, with Art Ekdall, Lou Vasquez, Jack Medrano, and Tempe Davies making sizeable gains into the secondary.

* * *

Playing one of its better games, the Ram forward wall kept the lettuce region eleven from gaining any appreciable yardage. No standout in particular can be mentioned, but noteworthy games were turned in by all four ends, Jim McGowan, Ed Cassidy, Bob Jones, and Harold Corbett.

* * *

Tackles Augie Kalnen, Bob Hoffman, and Don Tobin played stellar ball, particularly Hoffman, who made certain his nomination for All-Conference honors.

* * *

Most underrated of all, perhaps, have been the guards, namely, Glenn Smith, Bill Brown, and Merle MacFarlane. This trio also turned in accreditable efforts.

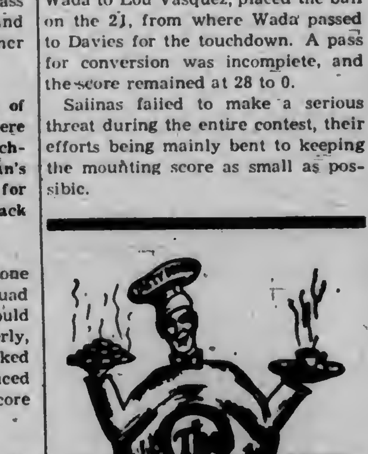
* * *

Centers Dutch Danielson and Ed Giavia appeared well drilled in pass defense, for both roamed far and wide to deflect many Panther passes.

* * *

During the waning moments of the fourth period, the Rams were still driving towards another touchdown with Billy Wada, Terzian's understudy, sprinting the ends for huge yardage until Timer Jack Brady's gun halted the march.

* * *



It is impossible to cite any one player as a standout. The squad knew that it had plays which could produce results if worked properly, and with this idea in mind, worked as a polished unit, and produced the results which the final score clearly shows.

* * *

In an attempt to mystify the Rams' blocking assignments, the Salinas forward wall lined up alongside one another with five men in front and three in back. When the Rams broke from the huddle, the squad shifted into a 5-3-2-1 defense.

Round Trip Tickets Now Available For Pasadena

Round trip tickets to Pasadena, where the college football team will meet the Pasadena Junior College varsity in the Rose Bowl next Thursday, November 6, are now available to students, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"A coach of the Daylight Limited has been reserved for students who may wish to go," Browne said. Tickets are on sale now.

A round trip ticket costs $9.77, which is a special reduced rate for students," he explained, "and those who wish tickets should see me."

He pointed out, however, that the trip would necessitate an absence from the college of at least two days.

Students Go At Own Risk

"Students who think that their college work has maintained an even enough standard to afford such an absence may take this leave, however, they do so at their own discretion," he warned.

The train will leave at 8 a. m., Thursday. Students will detrain at Glendale.

College Offers Low Fare

"Those students who take the trip should bear in mind that all the college offers is a reduced rate in their fare and nothing else," Browne pointed out.

The team will stay at the Hotel Savoy in Pasadena, as the players have in the past. The game will be played in Pasadena's Rose Bowl on Thursday night, November 6.

Students Reminded Of Attendance Rules

Students, who for any reason other than illness, find it necessary to temporarily withdraw from college, are again reminded that they should first secure a leave of absence from the attendance committee. Thomas A. Gabbert, attendance committee member, warned recently.

"It is especially important that this be stressed because of the approaching holiday seasons," he said.

Any student who is absent from his classes for an equivalent of two weeks' attendance, will be excluded from his classes, although he might have applied for a temporary leave, but, he may be readmitted by appealing to the attendance committee.

Possession of a temporary leave of absence will simplify the reinstatement of a student to his classes upon his return, Gabbert explained.

Community Chest

Hopes For New Record High

By Jack Robinson

The 1941 drive of the Community Chest is drawing to a close. It is expected that the quota that was established will not only be reached but that it will be passed. It may have entered your mind that the Chest does good work for the people of San Francisco but you have also probably wondered just how you can help.

You can aid one in every six San Franciscans by giving. Your gift need not be a large one, in fact most of those received are small. But the Chest does not rely on amount of gift, it relies instead on amount of gifts.

As a final look at the Community Chest, let us look at the things that it does, that you do. The Community Chest helps more than 74,000 people in need of medical aid. It gives aid and encouragement to more than 10,000 families by the use of its five branches of service.

More than 70,000 people make use of the youth clubs and other neighborhood centers each year. Over 6,000 children are being given another chance by being placed in foster homes. All of this and much more goes to make the fact that we should all unite in giving to help our own.

Unclaimed Books Held By WSS To Go To Library

Unclaimed for books remaining in the Women's Service Society book exchange will be presented to the college library unless called for this week, Violet Butler, president of the organization, announced recently.

"Students have been warned for nearly two months to claim their books," Miss Butler said, "and as there is no permanent book exchange or any available storage space, it is impossible to keep the books until the next semester."

Eight Faculty Men Serve In Army, Navy

By Claire Leeds

Uncle Sam of the menacing recruit poster captioned, I WANT YOU! has pointed his finger at eight members of the college faculty and they are now serving the government in national defense.

Six of these instructors, who were reserve officers, are enlisted in the Army, one is serving in the Navy, and one is acting as a civilian instructor in defense industry, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

The Army has claimed James S. Hughes, stationed at March Field, Riverside; Donald Atherton, at the Presidio in San Francisco; Frederick McFarland, in San Francisco; Paul V. Wendell, at Fort Lewis, Washington, and Chester W. Clark, at Los Angeles.

John J. Hurley is connected with the ROTC at the University of California, and F. G. Marsh, head of the college business department, has been appointed by the Navy as an instructor, also at the University.

Karl F. Venter is the only instructor serving in civilian capacity. He is teaching men in mechanical fields for defense industry.

Most of these men will serve the government for one year, but Wendell and Hughes recently requested an additional year's leave of absence so that they might remain in the Army.

Rally Plans Made For San Mateo Game

Plans for a pep rally to precede the San Mateo football game on Friday, November 14, were expressed by Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, today.

Even though plans for the San Mateo rally are indefinite at the current time, Mohorovich explained that the pep rally would surpass those for past games. The rally commissioner today was searching for suitable talent for the occasion.

A proposal by Mohorovich that willing students participate in a trek to the San Mateo school to promote the game until the day before the match was also under discussion. According to Mohorovich, the rooters who made the trip would accompany a similar caravan from San Mateo to this college.

Three gibbons, anthropoid apes more closely related to man than any of the monkeys, have been acquired by the psychology laboratory at Pennsylvania State College for experimental purposes.

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

IV. Algy Grudgingly Absorbs Some History

"ALGY, before we dig into student self-government in this attempt to understand our college better, we think that we should pause a moment and consider the history of the college."

"But I thought we'd talk about the Ex. Council this time," Algy protested. "Everybody knows the college has a history, just like everyone knows I played with blocks once, but who wants to hear about it?"

"Look, Algy, a glance at the efforts made to begin the college and to bring it to its present position might make you appreciate it more."

"Yeah, I know," Algy cracked, "the dramatic rise from log-cabin to penthouse. All right, let's have it."

Encouraged by Algy's enthusiasm, we began.

"Since history usually is taken chronologically—quit winching, Algy, you know what it means—we aren't going to be different, so let's put in the record that the establishment of this college was authorized February 15, 1935, by the Board of Education on the recommendation of Dr. Edwin A. Lee, then Superintendent of Schools in San Francisco. The following August, the 20th to be exact, several hundred students who had long awaited such a move, gathered at the War Memorial Opera House for the initial ceremonies of organization."

"You mean healthy-minded people actually went to start a work hour?" Algy had an overdose of homework last week-end.

"No kidding, Algy, not only students, but the citizens of San Francisco had, for some 10 years, realized the need for a junior college—something to extend the public school system into the higher educational levels. Other cities of the nation were doing it. They were realizing that employers weren't satisfied with just a high school record from job applicants. Since a complete college education was many times impossible from the standpoints of time or money, the junior college seemed an excellent compromise. And, take it from us, Algy, the venture, in all parts of the country, has proved itself worthy of all expectations.

"But now we're wavering from our history. After that first meeting, partial materialization had to be arranged for the Phantom College. Through the co-operation of the University of California and high schools in San Francisco, facilities in some 25 locations in the city were made available. Morning classes met in the University of California Extension Building at 540 Powell. From there we traveled for our afternoon classes to Galileo High School. Though we mentioned about 25 different locations for study or physical education purposes, the two places last named were the main concentrating points of the student body. The novelty, sometimes distressing, other times refreshing, of journeying over the city, lounging in Union Square, which we called the campus, was an experience that rates a landmark in college history."

O.K., Ed, snap out of the memories and let's get this history over with," grumbled Algy. Algy was a difficult customer this time.

"Well, Professor Cloud was selected to lead the college from the start. Long and widely recognized for his service as teacher and administrator in the city's school department, where he then served as Chief Deputy Superintendent of Schools, he was promoted to the not enviable task of coordinating a sprawling child of a college into a coherent, spirited unit.

"In the fall of 1935, Balboa Park was selected as the building site. April 25, 1937, Mayor Angelo J. Rossi broke ground here to signify the first step of actual construction. The foundation was poured the next year. At the same time, San Franciscans loyally voted a bond issue providing for the construction of the two gyms. The great day arrived August 27, 1940, when the college, then 3,000 strong, boiling with spirit, entered the brand new buildings. And November 16, 1940, a gala dedication day which all San Francisco was invited to attend.

"Even you have got to admit, Algy, that we've come a long way here at Balboa Park. The present college as a whole is eloquent proof of President Cloud's organizational ability. Naturally, he was not alone in his efforts, but the records give him the largest share of credit.

"The college seal—yes, there is one, Algy—bears the motto, That Youth May Be Educated To Life. This motto is no empty symbol. Since its beginning, main channels of efforts have flowed to practical purposes, as the superb line-up of terminal or two-year courses indicate. We have specialized in these courses of study designed to graduate students directly in skilled jobs after two years work. New programs are being introduced as rapidly as possible in answer to demands by local industries. The motto is also realized in the student government which we shall begin next Friday, and is generally emphasized in all college activities.

"We've skipped a few items in this thumb-nail history, but we think we've covered most of the main points."

"Yeah," yawned Algy, "it wasn't too bad after all."

College Actresses Win Roles In USF Production

Gloria Olivi and Vivian Proechold, two college actresses, will have roles in the University of San Francisco production, George Washington Slept Here, playing November 4, 5, and 6, at the USF Little Theater, it was learned recently.

Miss Olivi has been an active member of the Campus Players, college drama club, since its beginning last semester, and has played in two USF productions, Brother Rat, and Ghost Train.

Winthrop Williams Called To Army

A call to military service again depletes the ranks of the college faculty.

Captain Winthrop W. Williams, a member of the United States Army Reserve, has received orders to report to Fort Benning, Georgia, for active duty with the Army Signal Corps.

Leaves Hotel Division

For the past year, Captain Williams has been a member of the college hotel and restaurant division faculty. In addition to his commission in the United States Army Reserve, Captain Williams holds a bachelor of arts, a bachelor of laws, and a master of science degree from the University of Indiana.

No successor has been selected yet to fill the vacancy developing from Captain William's departure, according to college authorities.

Captain Williams is not the first member of the hotel division staff to be called for active duty in the nation's armed forces. A year ago, Lieutenant Paul V. Wendell left the college for duty at Fort Lewis, Washington.

Williams Directs Photographers

At Fort Benning, which is widely known as the infantry proving ground for new methods and equipment, Captain Williams will command the 161st Signal Photo Company. He will direct the work of expert photographers in the taking of still and motion pictures of maneuvers and training programs.

December 5 Melodrama Will Have Gay Nineties Theme

Promising to be one of the brighter events of the semester, members of the Campus Players rushed plans for their old-fashioned melodrama and olio to be presented, Friday, December 5.

The program is to be given free of charge to members of the associated students, and will consist of a one-act play, followed by the olio. Both will be characteristic of the Gay Nineties period.

The olio, made up of several short acts, will include dancing, singing and comedy skits, announced Dolores Sullivan, president of the group.

The script of the melodrama was written by Carol Helbing, member of the group, and at present is undergoing rewriting, for new material is being added.

"The Campus Players wishes to announce its full support to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the welfare committee, and his recent plans for a carnival day," Miss Sullivan commented, "and members have already decided to present a preview of melodrama, providing carnival day is held before our own affair."

Miss Sullivan urged all regular members to attend next Wednesday's meeting. Any new students interested in joining the group are welcome to do so, she added. The meeting will be held at 3 p. m. in Room 257.

Secondary Flight Students Complete Training Course

All students enrolled in the secondary, and all but four who are in the primary Civil Pilot Training course, have completed their solo flights, Major George D. Richards, CPT instructor, announced recently.

The future pilots taking the secondary course who have completed their solo flights are Dave Bridges, Dick Carpenter, Ted Condo, Al Fritz, Bob Hale, Bob Jurk, Bob Linari, John Nichols, Stan Ward and Dave Wilson.

Richards has moved his office from his quarters in Room 236 to the large expanse of the observatory at the top of the building.

Choir Organizes Male Quartet

A male quartet, comprised of Nat Hoekenga, tenor; Pearce Davies, second tenor; Clarence Ashman, baritone; and Lemmox Cinnamond, bass; has been organized recently by the college A Cappella Choir, according to Flossita Badger, college music instructor.

Also under way are plans for a women's trio, and a mixed quartet. However, auditions for members of these later groups have not yet been completed, and as they will not hold rehearsals for awhile, Miss Badger added.

These smaller ensembles will take the place of the entire choir when groups request them. They plan to audition with the talent bureau, and thus be "on call" when requests for groups of their type are made.

Next A Cappella Choir appearance will be before the Trinity Methodist Church, at 16th and Market streets, later this month, Miss Badger said.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

SENATOR AIKEN (R., Vt.) declared last week that President Roosevelt was "personally responsible" for any lives lost in the recent torpedoing of the Reuben James.

This is a rather strong statement to come from one political representative to the chief political representative, and it is either completely correct or a fallacy of the imagination and of one senator's susceptibility to the dramatic.

Aiken claimed that Mr. Roosevelt was responsible because he had directed the navy "to hunt down and sink ships of another nation with which we are not legally at war." The senator further said that if the President and the members of his Cabinet had kept their promises the men of those ships which have been fired upon and sunk would not lie rotting on the ocean floor today.

This last statement is pure foolishness. There is no guarantee that U.S. ships would not have been sunk any place in the oceans. Even in taking ordinary supplies to our own outposts in Iceland and Greenland we are threatening the Nazi expansionists—and they feel themselves justified in sinking boats that form their opposition.

THOSE GERMAN RULES

The question here is not whether or not the Germans were justified in the sinking of the Reuben James, but whether or not their policy of torpedoing according to their own rules and their own indiscretion should be blamed upon our chief executive.

Simply because there is a boogy in the Atlantic is no reason why Americans should hug the shores of this country. It results in trouble either way because this is how things are:

in a war such as the present one a nation wishing to be neutral cannot be so. The well-wishing nation is either too weak to maintain her neutrality, and therefore is drawn into the struggle and is consumed; or she is strong enough to protect herself and is likewise drawn into the war in an attempt to protect democracy.

As a result the progress of a neutral nation in time of war depends upon the strength of its leaders. If those leaders are weak, the policy of that nation is also weak; if the leaders are strong so is the policy.

MR. R. IS NOT WEAK!

Mr. R. of Hyde Park is no weakling. He must realize that responsibility for U.S. actions will be placed upon him when the history books of this era are written. We are not a military leader would by now be thinking of the shores of the western hemisphere with an eye to economic supremacy.

Hitler must now devote his time to overcoming the aid that we are giving his opponents. During this time America can and is increasing her aid and strength so that until all of Europe, Asia, and Africa are under the Nazi heel Hitler must continue to kill off his opponents, his materials and himself substantially at the moral of his people.

This is a strong executive means to do. And as much as it means to us it means ten times as much to the conquered peoples and to the yet unconquered.

YOURE LUCKY TO BE HERE

Senator Aiken should realize that if things were not the way they are he would probably not have the right to criticize the system which allows him to do so.

Naturally Germany does not wish us to trade with England. And England would not wish us to trade with Germany. It is our own decision which tells us with whom we desire to trade.

The restraint of that trade, while harming the Nazi cause, also harms the American cause. Hitler protects himself—therefore it is utter fallacy to assume that we should allow ourselves to travel unprotected.

When the two causes, German and American, which are at variance with each other come to a colliding point trouble is the result.

TROUBLE AND CONSEQUENCE

We have had that trouble—it was inevitable. It does not necessarily mean that there should be another AEF. It only means that we should not waste much of our aid to the democracies by having it sent to the bottom by U-boats.

It must finally, and at long last, be realized that we cannot evade some sort of involvement in this war. The best answer is to come out with as much in victory and as little in loss as is humanly possible. It's a question of convoys. If we must, we must—and we must.

Club Advisory Board

Charter Renewal Deadline Extended To 2 P.M. Today

All organizations that failed to file renewals for club charters in the Club Advisory Board on the first deadline will have until 2 p. m. today to do so, Francis Goetz, CAB president, announced Wednesday.

Because so many organizations faced the danger of suspension, the membership committee deemed it necessary to extend the deadline.

21 Clubs File

Only 21 of the 35 active clubs registered with the CAB in previous semesters had applied for application. Many of the leading clubs and organizations of the campus were among the number faced with immediate suspension, Goetz explained.

Pat Ruf, chairman of the membership committee, announced that no complete list of club standings has been tabulated, but all clubs and their representatives that have been recognized or suspended by the club board would be read at today's meeting.

Suspension is the loss of membership in the CAB and the loss of all recognition by the Associated Students.

Carnival Day Discussed

Highlight of today's meeting will be the discussion and final decision of the CAB on the question of the recent plans of the Welfare Committee for a carnival day.

Goetz, president of the board, announced that the CAB was in favor of the plan, and would like to support it fully, but that the final decision lies in the hands of the club representatives that make up the board.

The question is to be discussed thoroughly at today's meeting, Goetz continued, and the results of the vote by the representatives will be announced immediately following the meeting.

Nielson Resigns Post

George Nielson announced that he would be unable to continue as editor of the CAB Cabby, because of heavy program and activities in which he is now engaged. Ed Lopez has been named by Goetz to the position.

First edition of the Cabby by the new editor will be distributed at Friday's meeting. It will feature carnivals by Dolores Sullivan, and articles on many of the more important subjects being discussed on the campus today. Carnival day, and its relation to the club board, will also be featured.

"I only hope that I possess enough experience to make a success of the CAB position," Lopez said. "I shall strive to make it interesting and attractive to every reader."

PHILLIPS, DUFFY SPEAK MONDAY

Just 'Typical American College Boy' Sought As Freshman King

Misinterpretation of the nature of the election of the law freshman king is responsible for most of the controversy which has arisen in regard to this contest, Jing Kirk, low freshman president, feels.

"The election is not intended to be a beauty contest," Kirk emphasized, "therefore a more appropriate title than 'Apollo' is being sought for the winner."

Personality Basis Chosen

"Candidates for the freshman Joe College or Campus King will be selected by the seven unknown women principally on the basis of personality," Kirk pointed out. "He will represent the typical American college boy."

It has been decided that the freshman king will not escort the sophomore sweetheart to the formal as planned, and he will not be introduced at the Associated Men Students' boxing matches if a rally or other more appropriate event for the purpose can be arranged.

Election Date Named

Pictures of the candidates will be displayed Monday, November 24, following the Thanksgiving holiday. The final election will be held Friday, December 5, and the winner may be introduced the following Monday, Kirk said.

Kirk especially emphasized that the freshman king is to be selected on a basis of personality rather than for his physical charm.

Campus Players

Casting Starts For Melodrama

Rushing plans for the presentation of their old-fashioned melodrama and olio to be presented to members of the Associated Students free of charge on Friday, December 5, the Campus Players will start casting sometime next week.

As yet, a name has not been chosen for the melodrama written by Carol Helbing. The original name Stay is to be changed to something more characteristic of the Gay Nineties period.

No Play Site Yet

The site for the presentation will be the cafeteria or the gymnasium, no definite choice has been made.

All meetings up to date, according to Dolores Sullivan, president of the organization, have been used as workshop periods, and will continue to be so, until all casting is complete and rehearsals are in order. The olio, composed of several skits featuring dancing, singing and comedy sketches, is now being worked on by members of the drama group.

Program Roster Due Soon

A complete roster of the program and specialty acts will be released as soon as all casting is complete, Miss Sullivan commented.

Other plans are now being considered for the preview of the melodrama to be presented at the carnival day event, providing the welfare committee's plans are a success and the event is placed on the schedule of the Associated Students' calendar.

Registrars

Mohr, Learnard To Attend Sixteenth Annual Convention At Santa Barbara This Weekend

Registrar J. Paul Mohr and his assistant, Mary Jane Learnard, will represent the college at the sixteenth annual convention of the Pacific Coast Association of Collegiate Registrars to be held on November 9, 10, and 11 at Santa Barbara, California.

"Every year the registrars from all colleges, universities, and junior colleges of the western states meet to discuss problems of registration and administration that have confronted them during the preceding year," Miss Learnard said. "This will be my thirteenth attendance and I am certainly looking forward to it, we always have a fine time at the conventions," she added.

Nevada, Washington, California, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Arizona were the states which every year sent their registrars to the convention. "I have found the registrars to be most enjoyable people, all of them have a fine sense of humor. In fact that is one of the first essentials for a good registrar," she concluded.

Improvement To Be Discussed

"This will be my fourth convention," Mohr said. "The reason I did not go to previous conventions is that the dean of men was the registrar at that time.

"The conventions are always extremely interesting and this one should be exceptional for we are going to hear reports of experimental methods of filing, sorting, and general improvements for the registrar's office. The question is to be discussed thoroughly at today's meeting, Goetz continued, and the results of the vote by the representatives will be announced immediately following the meeting.

Band

Volunteer Group May Be Disbanded

Although it has been meeting regularly on Friday afternoons in Room 200, the college band, which started as a voluntary organization at the beginning of this semester, has about reached its conclusion, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"The band had no instructor to begin with," Dean Browne said. "The students of the college who were interested in the band at the beginning of the semester formed into a group and tried to make a go of it by selecting and editing their own music," he explained.

Students Dropped Out

"All went well for a couple of weeks," he added, "but then every few of the students who were previously interested, stopped coming to the band rehearsals, probably because they got no credit for their efforts. This naturally cut down the number of instruments until they found that they were unable to play at any kind of a gathering with so few members."

Dean Browne expressed the belief that if the band members were given uniforms next semester they would make a greater effort.

Ginther Was Leading

"Clarence Ginther has been acting as student leader as have others," he remarked, "but what the band really needs is some sort of reward for their efforts. If the college can arrange for the band to travel with the team next term and if they can afford to buy the members uniforms then it may have some response," he conjectured.

According to Dean Browne, the present band, which consists of about eight members, may play at the coming football game with San Mateo Junior College on Saturday, November 15. He added that the band was scheduled to play at the Salinas Junior College fray last week, but that only six members were present, not enough to make a good initial appearance.

Talent Bureau Hunts Novelty, Specialty Acts

Novelty numbers and specialty acts are still wanted by the talent bureau, according to Irwin Cohen, student manager of the bureau.

"Recognition began the first of the week," Cohen pointed out, "so that a greater number of students would have an opportunity to be auditioned."

"Singers are especially numerous," Cohen explained, "but skits and specialty or novelty acts are greatly needed."

The talent bureau operates so that organizations inside and outside the college will have a central place to go when they want student entertainers. At rallies and college assemblies, talent bureau talent is provided, Cohen said, but calls are often received from non-college organizations. He said that two such calls had already been filled.

Appointments for auditions should be made through Wesley Muscio, Flossita Badger, faculty advisers, or Cohen as soon as possible so that auditioning may be completed and the records filed.

New Youth Correction Act Topic For Radio Program Observing Education Week

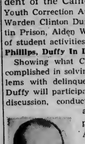
By Claire Leeds

As the college's contribution to American Education Week, a radio assembly broadcast featuring Guidance Problems With Delinquents as its theme, will be presented Monday, November 10 from 10:40 to 11 a. m. over the college public address system.

Prominent guest speakers will include James H. Phillips, president of the California Prison Association, sponsor of the famous Youth Correction Authority Act, and Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison, Aldeo W. Smith, director of student activities, said.

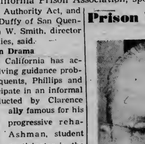
Phillips, Duffy In Drama

Showing what California has accomplished in solving guidance problems with delinquents, Phillips and Duffy will participate in an informal discussion, conducted by Clarence Ashman, student participator in the broadcast.



Phillips and Duffy will also take part in a dramatization showing how a typical juvenile delinquent is handled by the Youth Correction Authority in contrast to old methods.

Duffy is nationally famous for his progressive rehabilitation program. In line with his policy for rehabilitation rather than punishment of public offenders, he has introduced many reforms in the penal system. Athletics, for example, are an important factor in Duffy's program. San Quentin's sports program is the most varied of any penal institution in the world. Throughout his administration Duffy has maintained his attitude that the prisoner is entitled to a second chance.



Act Aided By Phillips

Applying the same policy to guidance of offenders 23 years of age and younger, Phillips is supporting the Youth Correction Authority Act, has

Administration Lists Education Week Aims

In summarizing the purpose of American Education Week, Marcus Skarstedt, college librarian, speaking for the administrative staff of the college, said Wednesday, "It would be well for us to realize that American Education Week, which is now being observed for the twenty-first time in our country, is the time of year when all our schools as one report to the people of the United States."

Administrative officials also released a statement emphasizing the aims upon which faculty members will concentrate interest in connection with American Education Week. This was issued to instructors in mimeographed form.

These topics have been designated as follows: for Sunday, Seeking World Order; Monday, Building Physical Fitness; Tuesday, Strengthening National Morale; Wednesday, Improving Economic Well Being; Thursday, Safeguarding the School; Support; Friday, Learning the Ways of Democracy; Saturday, Enriching Family Life.

Parking

Violations Soar As Rains Come-- But Rules Go On

Parking violations at the college soared upward last week with the first heavy rains of the season, and a warning to students to observe existing rules in spite of rain was voiced by Dean Edwin C. Browne.

"While the recent rainy spell has made is desirable to park as close to the building as possible, that same rainy season makes the sides of the hill slippery," he pointed out.

"You wouldn't park on the edge of a ski jump," he remarked.

Parking signs, placed at what is considered a prudent level around the hill sides, have eliminated most of the violations, according to Browne.

"Still," he conjectured, "I suppose there will always be a certain few who will violate this rule, even though it was made with their own protection in mind."

No Parking On Drive Way

"The parking situation on the college drive way seems to have shown the improvement whatsoever," Dean Browne said. "Students seem to insist on sitting in their automobiles in front of the college merely to talk, or to wait for friends. It's a tight enough squeeze for the bus to get down Phelan Avenue without its having to swerve around parked vehicles on the drive way," he observed.

Traffic Regulations Cited

Dean Browne called attention to the regulations drawn up last semester and published on Friday, March 14, in The Guardsman.

1. There shall be no cars waiting for passengers in the circle.

2. The loading and discharging of passengers in front of the building shall be done with dispatch.

3. No private cars may park on the circle or on part of the paved road adjoining the circle.

4. There shall be no parking in the ramps leading to north and south entrances to the building.

5. The maximum speed limit on the circle drive will be 10 miles per hour.

6. Pedestrians shall have the right of way at all times.

Women's Physical Ed. Dept. Welcomes Visitors

To enable the public to observe how the women's physical education department functions, Bertha Keller, women's physical education instructor, requested women students this week to invite parents and friends to visit the physical education classes during American Education Week, November 9 to 16.

Junior College Council Confab On Civil Defense

In observance of American Education Week, the junior college council will hold its fall meeting here on Wednesday evening, November 12, at 8:15 p.m., George Green, council president, announced this week.

The topic to be discussed is Civilian Defense. Speaking will be Thomas Larke, Jr., chairman of the Red Cross Committee and of the San Francisco Civilian Defense Council, and Mrs. Helen Schreiner, field representative of the Community Volunteer Service, office of civilian defense.

All parents of college students are invited to attend the meetings as well as those friends of friends of the college. The membership of the council is the faculty and those civil minded citizens who are interested in the welfare of the college. There will be no admission charge.

As usual in most schools and colleges there will be programs planned in line with American Education Week which is from Sunday, November 9 to the next Sunday, November 16. During this time most educational institutions will hold open house in an attempt to familiarize the public with the workings of their schools. All students are urged by Green to ask their parents to attend the meetings.

Civic Leaders To Record Education Week Program Here For Later Outside Release

Speaking on the topic San Francisco's Children—Are They Getting a Square Deal? seven prominent men and women will use college transcription facilities Wednesday afternoon, November 12, to record a radio program for release over KGO at 10 p.m. in observance of American Education Week, President A. J. Cloud said today.

The speakers will be experts qualified to discuss the various phases of the topic, Cloud explained.

Participants will include John F. Brady, Chief Deputy Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, speaking on education in relation to the problem; Dr. J. C. Geiger, Director of Public Health, discussing public health; Mrs. Tadini Buciglalupi, Child Welfare Chairman, San Francisco Center of the California League of Women Voters, contributing information on juvenile delinquency; Rev. James O'Dowd, Superintendent of Parochial Schools, speaking on spiritual development, and Mrs. H. W. Thomas, Vice-President, Second District of the P.-T.A. Jennings Pierce, NBC director of public service, will act as chairman. Each will speak for three minutes.

Dr. Amos Christie of the University of California will act as moderator for the discussion, and Honorable Jesse C. Caldman, Chairman of the Citizens' Committee for American Education Week, will introduce the guests.

Each speaker will attempt to set forth a statement of minimum standards which could be incorporated in a children's charter to be adopted by the round table participants at the end of the program.

Such a charter, according to the Citizens' Committee, could then be used by child welfare leaders in this community as a goal toward which to strive.

The discussion group will be guests of Cloud for luncheon at the college immediately preceding the discussion.

Youth Act Broadcast

Significant Law Demands Attention

WHEN Warden Clinton T. Duffy and Assemblyman James H. Phillips meet this Monday with faculty and students in the college radio room to discuss the Youth Correction Authority Act, that same day, in Sacramento, an Advisory Panel of five men will confer in a session to select the group that will administer the act.

The college broadcast, then, will not toy with pending legislative ideals. The youth act was passed last September 13, and the machinery to place it into practice is moving swiftly—College students should appreciate this special program and carefully receive it, not only to increase social awareness, but because the act deals specifically with the age group represented here.

Commendation is owing the administration and particularly faculty member Alden W. Smith for bringing to the fore this revolutionary legislation. That to clarify and interpret the act they present Warden Duffy, nationally famed for his enlightened direction of San Quentin Prison, and Assemblyman Phillips, sponsor of the act, is cause for even greater merit.

California's new and unique Youth Correction Authority Act is generally praised by authorities in pertinent professions as a laudable effort to deal with the youthful offender of society between 18 and 23 who is in the anomalous position of being too old for reference to the juvenile court and too young to be properly accorded equal treatment with older and, perhaps, hardened law-breakers.

This move to reclaim California youths and to prevent further misconduct, will begin operation as soon as the five-man panel chooses a group of six persons it thinks worthy of executing the terms of the act. From this group of six, Governor Olsen must select two and may name a third to complete the three-member authority. Once constituted, the authority must direct the most important phase of the act—integration of the many agencies in the state that work toward crime prevention. Through the use of medical, correctional, psychiatric institutions and detention, parole, and probation offices under one co-ordinating body an impressive piece of machinery will be set up designed to correct haphazard incarceration of young persons. Special judicial attention will be directed to them, and each case will be individually weighed with regard to health, habits, temperament, intelligence, and other personal characteristics of the offender.

The authority does not represent an addition to the California judiciary system as it might appear. Cases may be laid before the authority only after due certification by a California court according to the detailed regulations of the act. Moreover, it is within the power of the authority not to handle any case that it thinks would not benefit by the procedure of the authority.

Former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes noted that the act was "The most important constructive suggestion for dealing with the crime problem that has been made since the original probations and juvenile court legislation."

The substitution of scientific methods of rehabilitation by treating the offender as one might deal with someone requiring medical attention has attracted additional attention all over the country.

Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, sums up general and editorial opinion when he says the act is "one of the most significant forward steps that we have taken in the handling of juvenile delinquency."

The exposition of the youth act as the college's part in American Education Week was a well-chosen and practical topic. Again, the broadcast Monday deserves the attention of everyone.

Shots At ...RAMdom

WHEN

they dragged that hermit from his little hole under the Bay Bridge the other day and arrested him because the government made the same kind of money he did, it reminded us of a strange character we once met. Where would this column be without strange characters? You've almost got to be one to write a column.

This particular whing-ding hopped over a match stick and nudged us while we were doggedly worrying a chip steak at Bunny's.

"Say, bud, will youse pay my check if I give ya da dough?" he rasped out of the corner of his drooping lower lip.

We looked at the proffered bill. It was a very nice job. George Washington stared reprovingly from it. It bore serial numbers. But, in each corner, where there should've been a one, there was a three.

"Come, now," we admonished, "a three dollar bill?"

"Sure," he explained, "da racket's a natural. Dey can't arrest youse cuz da guvment don't MAKE three dollar bills."

Sounds foolproof, doesn't it. It must be a pretty old trick though, because when we tried it the waitress caught on right away.

LATELY

there's been a lot of law standing around at intersections and waiting for fiends who scoot around with their tail lights off. In cars, of course.

As is our custom, we were swinging hand over hand along a telephone wire on our way home, and we saw a group of watchful officers standing on a corner with pencils poised to write tickets for drivers without stern lights.

Their principal gear was parked opposite them. Suddenly there was a rending crash, the scream of tortured rubber on asphalt, followed by a silence that could have been broken by a dropping fender, and was.

A black coupe with Mexican license plates had side-swiped the patrol car, neatly stripping it of a fender. The officers rushed en masse, writing tickets as they ran.

"Whatsa big idea?" they bellowed in chorus.

Then they looked at each other startledly, each having thought that particular phrase was original with him individually.

The pale man behind the wheel of the coupe rolled his lustrous blue eyes and roguishly stuck out his tongue.

"Sorry, officers, but this is a thoroughfare and I couldn't see you in time to stop. You see, your tail lights were out. There's a law against that, you know."

WE would have given 10 dollars to be in his place at that moment.

He DID.

FOR YOU

who saw that little strueture in the court Monday morning after Hallowe'en, and are wondering at the rapidity with which it was removed, we have the following explanation. It seems we have some hilh-billys here who haven't heard about Hallowe'en. They didn't know it was put there for a joke. Heh, heh, no. What you're thinking is wrong. They thought it was an air-raid shelter.

'Fair Play' Blasts 'Mr. Mess'—Yell Kings Miss Game

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 124. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

● L'Affaire Apollo Childlike

Editor, The Guardsman:

Mr. A. A. Mess blew a puff of steam into print in last Friday's Guardsman. To save "Mr. Mess" any potential labor of writing more of his immortal letters, may I say here and now—I don't give a continental damn about what "Mess" or any of his kind thinks.

The "Frosh King," Frosh Hero according to Mess, is a big but unlaughable joke. It makes no difference how he is elected; the whole affair is too childlike to bother about.

Hopeful that "Mess" will clear up, I remain

● Three Cheers For Goldberg

Editor, The Guardsman:

Last Friday history was made when the first football game on the college campus took place. The crowd was record breaking in consolation to the amount of spectators at other games at Seals Stadium. But where were the yell leaders? It should have been a field day for them. Their pleas, urgings, and hopes for rooters were fulfilled. The rooters were willing to root, but there was no one to lead them. Chants were set up to try and convince the head yell leader to begin yelling. He was even carried bodily before the crowd, but he didn't utter a sound. Rumor had it that he had laryngitis. If so he could have told the crowd so, and perhaps made friends instead of enemies for himself.

Finally, a student named Goldberg got up and lead several cheers which may have spurred the team on to victory.

Three cheers for Goldberg!

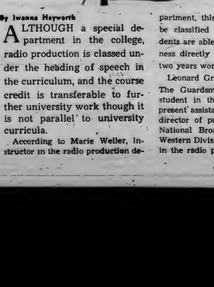
● How's That Again?

Editor, The Guardsman:



I was astonished to find a very depreciating error in a recent issue of The Guardsman, to wit, the name Hin Street was spelled Haight Street. Originally, the street was named after my great, great grandfather's grandson, Claythorpe Hsit, the man who proved his greatness by justifying his criminal insanity on the remarkable philosophy of stealing. Later a rival of this noble sire had the name deliberately misspelled through some handshaking with pieces of gold providing the communicating medium. . . .

Mr. Editor, I hope I have impressed upon you the illustrious connotation that is the name Hsit and I hope The Guardsman will serve as an instrument to see that a grest wrong is righted.

Yours,

C. Thistlethwaite Hsit,
Chairman of the Committee to Correct Public Misinformation.

Your College Presents . . . The College Radio Classes Go On The Air

By Iwanna Hayworth

ALTHOUGH a special department in the college, radio production is classed under the heading of speech in the curriculum, and the course credit is transferable to further university work though it is not parallel to university curricula.

According to Marie Weller, instructor in the radio production department, this course could easily be classified as terminal, as students are able to go into this business directly upon completing the two years work at the college.

Leonard Gross, former editor of The Guardsman and a one-time student in this course, is at the present assistant to Jennings Pierce, director of public service for the National Broadcasting Company's Western Division. Gross was active in the radio production class.

When first instituted into the college curriculum two years ago, the radio production students were allowed to use one of the studios at KSFO, Columbia outlet for San Francisco.

SIX SUBJECTS OFFER BACKGROUND

Some of the suggested subjects for students who wish to major in this line of work are English, literature, drama, journalism, speech and radio script writing.

The modern radio room located on the first floor of the main building is one of the four educational institutions from which broadcasts may be made through the Sunset Gompers Trade School Station.

The equipment which makes up the studio and control room is some of the finest to be found in any college or university on the West Coast. Frequency modulation is the unit which is being worked out through the radio department. This in conjunction with Gomper's Station KALW. Some students who are in the radio engineering courses also get practical experience in the control room in modulating and getting the correct tone, going on the assumption that a broadcast was in progress.

STUDENTS WRITE SCRIPTS

Students in the script writing classes are given instruction in the writing of their own scripts. Different types of scripts are considered. At the present time, some of these students are working on a series of scripts dealing with famous people which will be adaptable for children of grammar school age.

Next week, in observance of American Education Week, there will be two radio broadcasts given from the college.

The first one, on Monday, is to be a regular broadcast. The second will be for recording of a program Wednesday to be broadcast that evening from 10 to 10:30 over KGO.

RECORDINGS MADE

One interesting part of the script writing class is that at the first of the semester, recordings of students' voices are made. At the close of the semester, another recording is made to find how much the students have improved in their study.

Miss Weiter said that she hoped in the near future there could be another course instituted into this curriculum, namely for men students who wish to go into the radio announcing field.

If this plan works out, the course will take two hours daily, and the fundamentals of radio announcing will be taught.

Friday the art department will be featured.

FEM FADS . . .

by Nancy Cowie

TODAY again is search-for-all-talent-among-clothing-day, and actually, in spite of the rainy weather, we find some tasty little items. First of all, the English tweed coat that Dolores Sullivan has been wearing of late is certainly a beauty, and not hard to miss because of the bright red plaid lining.

To match the lining Miss Sullivan has a skirt of the same plaid that she picked up in an entirely different city (she says), and completing the outfit she has a Scotch cap which as yet remains unseen on the campus.

IN THE DARK

Several columns ago the material was dedicated to the color red, and the next day a red coat was seen on one of the alumnae. The woman coming back for a visit had on a brilliant red reefer coat, bellbes and straight backed, with large patch pockets, and big white buttons.

Graduates of high schools last week had a chance to see the Associated Women Students dressed in their Sunday best, and would have provided ample material for several columns. If the food hadn't been so good we might have been able to look at more clothes instead of more food.

However, Betty Fox, AWS president, had an outfit that really caught the eye. It was a green suit, not the drab olive green, nor light pastel green, but matter of fact Kelly-green. With it she wore a white shirt, and white gardenia provided by the horticulture department to complete the collegienne looking outfit. Surely green is as popular as red, and is just as good looking, too.

COLD COLE?

With rainy weather out come galoshes, rain coats, hats and even gloves. But the gloves to end all gloves were worn by Carmel Cole the other day. They were fuzzy, furry mittens and simply immense. If Miss Cole wears one to serve as two gloves and the other to serve as a hat we wouldn't be mystified in the least. In fact, it could rather be expected.

The subject of plaids was brought up several paragraphs ago but perhaps it isn't too late to bring another red plaid outfit up. The outfit, or better half of an outfit, was a red plaid wool shirt made like a lumberjack's jacket, with long sleeves, high collar and so forth. With this shirt Margaret McMahon, long time secretary, wore a grey skirt to set off the bright colors to perfection.

NAN SEES . . .

Nan Dewey buttons remaking your last year's into a new fashion. Novelty buttons this fall are quite the thing. Yesterday in the cafeteria NAN SAW a dress decorated with buttons which looked like padlocks. These would be the key to the situation if you wanted to renew an old model.

ear-rings (this is a repeat, but more are being worn), and oh boy, do they add sophistication to the wearer!

Cowie Nothing But The Truth . . . a personal Spectator . . . triumph for Hope

CONTINUING his meteoric rise into the limelight of public favor, Bob Hope, through the force of his own comic personality, carries a creaky old farce, Nothing But The Truth, to eminent success.

Paramount has supplied its star comedian with an out-moded vehicle that has served as motion picture fare several times in the past, as a play many times, and as a Little Theater production innumerably.

Utilizing the original farcical skeleton, the producers have dove-tailed 1941 zags and situations into a complacent whole. This heterogenious combination of the old and new . . . old plot dished up with fresh zags would have fared considerably on the ho-hum side, we're afraid, without Hope, but the sparkling screen skill of the Pepsodent man injects pep and vitality into every scene, wrings humor out of what may well have been dead situations, and brings the whole thing to a frequent hilarious high.

GOOD COMEDY THEME PRESENT

The premise that a man can refrain from telling nothing but the truth for 24 hours is a natural in comedy themes and must certainly have panicked audiences way back around 1916 when it first appeared. Thanks to magnificent trouping by Hope and some good situations improvised by script-writers Don Hartman and Ken Englund, most of the antiquated veneer of the plot fades into the background and obtrudes only at well-scattered intervals.

It's a personal triumph for Hope, who for the first time demonstrates his true worth as a film comedian. In previous screen efforts Hope was blessed by tremendous natural material that was sure fire whether Hope was excellent or not. His Caught In The Draft was comedy personified. All he had to do was saunter through a series of really funny gag situations. The same may be said for his earlier pictures . . . material was superior in each instance. Now that the inevitable let-down has occurred and Hope was forced to carry the picture on his own shoulders, the true worth as a comedian is readily discernible. He makes Nothing But The Truth well worth seeing and adds materially to his own status in the limited group of fine comedians that exists today.

SLOW START PRESENT

The story takes a little time to start rolling, but once Hope and the material start moving, the earlier lagging moments are easily forgiven. Seems Bob is a fellow named Steve Bennett, who enters the brokerage offices of Edward Arnold and Glen Anders. Before the bewildered Mr. Bennett can catch his breath, he has accepted $10,000 charity money from Paulette Goddard, the niece of big-boss Arnold to double by investment. Then Bennett is wheedled into betting that he can tell the truth for 24 hours by the Arnold-Anders combine. Bennett bets the $10,000 of Miss Goddard's money as his 24 hours of suffering begins. He is invited aboard Arnold's house-boat for the week-end and then complications pile on. Hope must tell the truth to every question asked him or forfeit the bet; Paulette wants her money back; everybody goes crazy and the audience goes delirious with laughter.

Perhaps the best scene was the dining sequence wherein poor Hope, in answer to a question about Catherine Doucet's appearance, responds sadly, "She wouldn't pass for 18 if she wore a paper bag over her head."

A very excellent cast aids Hope materially in delivering 1916 farce into 1941 standards. Paulette Goddard, pert and vivacious, does what little the part calls for in attractive fashion. Edward Arnold, for a refreshing change, forsakes grim villany for pleasant menace and helps the picture a lot. Glen Anders, a newcomer, looks like a fine actor. And lots of competent faces round out the cast; Clarence Kolb, Helen Vinson, Rose Hobart, Catherine Doucet and Willie Best. But it's Hope's picture from fade-in to fade-out.

SWARMING over the football field these days are a whole flock of seagulls numbering more than a hundred. Union Square has pigeons, Market Street has wolves, but we have seagulls. The sports editor, a libidinous fellow, likes to believe that they are vultures, flying around the field sniping up the remnants of the Salinas football team. After a couple of whiffs of what makes him run, we too could see pink vultures where there should be seagulls.

Election time is now past, but there is one disappointed potential politician who didn't have a chance to even lose by a close vote. His name is John Watson, and he wanted to run on the anarchist ticket for anything he could get his hands on. Watson states that for the past five years he has voted every election day for the minority party regardless of whether or not he knew why he was voting. It is his contention that if the democrats and republicans can run and be elected, the anarchists and communists also deserve a chance to get in on the gravy.

There has been much comment pertaining to pinball playing among the students, but these so-called columnists have neglected to mention the more serious matter of caterpillar racing in Turbiville's pinball palace. The other day we saw four sad-looking men sitting around a table looking at its top as if they were thinking of challenging Einstein's theory of relativity. Upon further investigation it was found out they were not meditating over profound matters, but rather that of trying to make a pair of caterpillars run in the right direction. Perhaps the gentlemen were so disgusted with the inanities of life that this was their only path in the realm of gambling and lesser iniquity.

According to one young thing who has fallen prey to a man's fickleness, there ought to be something done about etiquette around here. It seems that a strange prince charming asked her to a dance. He asked that she meet him there, and when she arrived at the appointed place she found the dance and the band, but no prince charming. Now she feels that something should be done about it. May we ask what?

Another Vague Rumor; Informal Yell Leader

Once again, for the second time this semester, material has floated to the newsy nose of this department via the wisping breezes of rumor. First a miniature "college character" was supposed to have vandalized to the extent of making Stockton Junior College see red (all over their pavement). Now, this same little fiend is considered responsible (and reprehensible) for another malefic perpetration.

Approximately two weeks a go, a crew of several men, working for this fair city, began building a warehouse designed to contain mammoth pipes. Being human, these men had, in the large field opposite the science hall (where aforementioned building was taking place), one of those little buildings which are made noticeable by their aloneness.

JERK'S QUIRK

Last Friday night—Halloween you know—this same impish little jerk, so the story is supposed to go, enlisted the aid of six stalwart men to aid him in carrying out his misappropriated genius. In a body, under the direct supervision of the fiend, they descended upon this helpless, inert structure and used it to blaspheme the sanctum of the college.

Grunting with the extent of their exertion, the united body gave with a mighty surge and hoisted the edifice clear of the ground. Struggling under the little house's oppressive weight, they gradually weaved their way out of the lot, wended their way across Phelan Avenue, fought up the grass in front of the college, around to the rear of the science hall, and eventually deposited their burden in the center of the rear court at the foot of the center staircase.

Having progressed that far, the little maroon was content—but not satisfied. Having accomplished the task, and reached his goal, he was wont to dedicate the work. And that he proceeded to do.

Came Monday morning, this quaint little shack, complete with its multiple adornments, was rudely and unceremoniously dragged to and dumped over the brow of the hill adjacent to the flag pole. Consigned to a miserable fate, and soaked by a week-end of rain, the poor old thing looked sad Monday afternoon, after being moved back to its original site.

The time was last Friday afternoon, the place was the college football field, the event was the Ram versus Salinas affair, the leading man remains anonymous.

Seeing, hearing, and feeling the desire of the college rooters to yell—but vociferously, this unknown spartan was led to assume a position in front of the college cheering section and led them in a few noisy outbursts. Incidentally, he did a fine job; as did the college rooters. And coincidentally, WE wish to sympathize with Mel Steele, head yell leader, over his attack of laryngitis.

Volleyball Next On Intramural Sports Program

As the inclement weather will not allow outdoor activities to be held, volleyball will be the next sport on the intramural program, Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser revealed.

Entries for this tournament must be given to Brady in the men's gymnasium office, on or before Friday noon, November 14.

Late entries will not be accepted, for the schedule will be drawn up the following week end, Brady said.

Medals Awarded

Medals will be awarded to the first three teams, with each squad receiving nine each. During actual play, however, only six men will be allowed to compete, while the remaining three will act as substitutes.

Last semester, the Newman Club won the tournament with little effort, over their closest competitor, the Goats. With the Newmans well on their way to a basketball championship and looming as pre-tournament favorites in the volleyball league, it appears they are certain to retain the intramural trophy.

Tennis Starts Soon

Tennis, one of the many intramural activities, is expected to start within two weeks, Brady announced. Anyone interested in participating in the tournament, should see Brady before Thursday, November 13.

Competition will consist of a singles and doubles tournament, and the matches may be played anytime it is convenient for the respective participants.

After the first round pairings are determined and posted on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium next week, the match must be played within two days after the posting. Failure to comply, will result in the disqualification of the competitors.

Anyone playing in the singles tournament, can also play doubles, for the schedule will be so arranged that a singles and doubles match will not be played on the same day.

Swim—November 28

On Friday, November 28, the swimming intramurals will be held. Six events are being planned by Al Eisan, swimming coach.

Next week, the basketball league will come to a conclusion. Three games are scheduled, with each game having a direct bearing on the standings of the league.

The undefeated Newman Club meets the Rabbits, and a loss for either squad will place the former in second place and the latter out of any contention for receiving medals.

Spartans Need Win

The next encounter finds the Japanese Students playing the Spartans. A loss for the Spartans would place them in a tie for third place, while a victory for the Japanese would have no result on their present standing.

Sixty Women From Six Colleges To Gather Tomorrow For Swim Sportsday At YWCA

The YWCA will be the scene of activity tomorrow at 11:30 a.m. when more than 60 women from six colleges and junior colleges gather for a sportsday of swimming, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the Women's Athletic Association announced recently.

The teams consisting of 10 members from each college will compete in free style racing, backstroke and breastroke racing, selecting of best crawl form, a comic relay, and an equadrama.

Following this there will be an exhibition by Helen Crienkovich, diving champion and student of the college, and a half hour swim for all present.

Lunch Will Be Served

Lunch will then be served in the Y cafeteria which will be decorated for the occasion in the college colors, red and white. No entertainment had been planned during the luncheon. Thelma Soo Hoo, chairman for the day said, but faculty advisers from the six colleges participating will be introduced as well as presidents of the various organizations.

All WAA members are urged to attend, and any women students of the college who wish to come are more than welcome, Miss Soo Hoo pointed out. Although previously announced that sign-ups would be necessary in order to attend, it was decided that anyone could come regardless of whether they signed up or not.

Water Polo

College Squad Drops Final Tilt To Stanford Seven, Loses 10-5

Playing the final game of its short schedule this semester, the college water polo squad was defeated by a strong Stanford seven, 10 to 5, last Monday night, at the Indian's home pool.

"The main idea of the water polo team this semester was to increase the students' interest in the swimming class, and to keep the boys swimming," Coach Allan Eisan said.

Two games were played against the Olympic Club Reserves, and although the team hadn't played together at all, they gave the "Winged-O" Reserves a tough battle, especially in the second tilt. The Rams were leading until the last 50 seconds of the final gun, when the Reserves tied the contest up at 3 to 3, but in the three minute overtime, the Ram squad couldn't keep pace with the strong Olympic Club mermen.

Paris, Lucas Star

The Club, with such outstanding stars as Henry Paris and Bill Lucas, dropped in a bucket to go into the lead as the gun sounded, ending the game.

It can be seen by the score of this game, and the way in which it was played, that it was a much better one than the first, which was also lost, by a large score, 10 to 7.

The games brought out such fine swimmers as Don Bartlett, Phil De Lano, Bill Hickey, Warren Kleist, Tom Callahan, Jim Duncan, Howard Schuff, and Maurice Richardson.

Eisan Pleased

It was hoped that many more games were to be played, but intervening schedules, the contests with the University of California, San Mateo, and Salinas junior colleges were cancelled.

"I hope the boys come out for water polo next semester as they did this semester, and if they do, we will have another chance to build up water polo to one of the leading sports of the college athletic program," said Coach Eisan.

Donut Dunking Dastardly Dealt

By Jack Robinson

"Donut dunking is rapidly becoming a national habit," announced Dunka Donut, president of the National Dunkers Association, here today. This faseinating sport is being seen almost every place that one goes. There is, however, a definite technique that is universally used by those who claim to be professionals.

There is a set procedure that should be used by all dunkers. First, a large white napkin should be carefully draped about the neck so that any spare sloshing will not drop on the dunker's vest or other raiment.

Secondly, break the donut in half and gracefully submerge it in the coffee, cocoa, or milk for exactly two and one-half seconds so that the luscious morsel is just soaked. It should then be allowed to drain and then without hurry the donut should be conveyed to the mouth. From then on . . . You are on your own.

The most important rule is, however, DO NOT GET YOUR FINGERS WET.

Known by all good dunkers is the creed of the brotherhood: "As you wander through life brother, whatever be your goal, keep your eye on the donut and not on the hole."

Soccer

State Gators Out-Mud Ram Kickers 3 To 1

Playing under a steady downpour of "liquid fog" (rain) the college soccer squad went down to defeat before a strong San Francisco State eleven, 3 to 1 at the Crocker Amazon Playground last Saturday.

The team had quite a few scoring chances, but just couldn't seem to make them count," Coach Jim Jensen said. The soccer squad proved the phrase, "practice makes perfect," by playing a well balanced game, instead of the usual defensive game in the first half, and an offensive game in the final period.

"State has an all-around good, well balanced team, and they deserved to win, although we gave them a point," Jensen said.

Squad Donates Point

The point that the college boys donated to State occurred in the first half when the Ram fullback attempting to kick out on an angle, had the ball, which was very heavy and wet, slide off the side of his foot and roll through his own goal.

John Lazar, center for the college squad, chalked up the lited and White's only marker, to bring his total for the season to eight points. He scored three against Menlo, three against San Mateo, tallied the only point against the San Francisco Dons, and one against State.

Lazar Stars

It is partly due to Lazar's playing, along with the other 10 men on the team, that has kept the college eleven up among the leaders in the team standings.

Although there were only three teams in the Junior College loop, the college shin kickers walked off with the championship, and should be congratulated because the other two opponents gave the Red and White some strong competition.

The team will have an open date tomorrow, and will play the San Jose State Spartans on Saturday, November 15, with the game against the Papooses from Stanford on the following Saturday, November 22.

Spartans Strong

The Spartans have one of the strongest squads ever making an appearance in the soccer league this season, and, according to Coach Jensen, "the boys will be in for a very busy afternoon when they play San Jose."

The game is scheduled for the Crocker Amazon field, and adequate bleachers are there to accommodate at least from two to three thousand spectators. Jensen remarked "that the soccer boys will have a better chance against the Stanford frosh than against San Jose."

Hailed as just another football player, Bill Brown, has improved to a point where he is a fundamental cog in the Ram forward wall. Small in stature, Brown has held up strongly on power plays into the center of the line, where he is a valuable asset.

Team Improvement Shown In Every Game; Statistics Disclose Rams Outgained

By Nick Barbarotto

After every contest in which the Ram footballers engaged, Coach Lee Eisan was quoted as saying, "We improved a little in the last game, but we can still stand improvement." Looking back over the seven contests played previous to the Pasadena game, it can easily be seen that Coach Eisan was speaking true words.

In the opening game against San Francisco State, the Rams emerged with a skin-of-the-teeth victory, 7 to 6. In that fray, Armand "Turk" Terzian kicked the winning convert following Bob Christen's touchdown, and the college got off to a flying start.

Rams Defeated 14 To 0

The next week a fighting Los Angeles City College came to San Francisco and handed the Eisanmen a 14 to 0 defeat, which Eisan couldn't believe was possible. The Rams showed a disorganized team on the field that night, and Eisan put them through vigorous practices that week in preparation for the California frosh.

Came the California contest and the Rams went to Berkeley with a determined ambition for victory. In the Cal game, however, they met a team that was rated the best freshman squad in the university's history, and went down to a 25 to 0 defeat. Despite the overwhelming score, the Rams did improve over the last game, showing a bit more organization and team work.

Touchdowns Called Back

The Stockton Junior College game followed, and the Rams entered the fray as favorites. They lived up to their expectations, but after having two touchdowns called back by the referee and throwing two more away, had to be satisfied with a 0 to 0 score. The game marked the third in a row in which the Rams failed to score a touchdown, but showed a definite improvement over their other games and Coach Eisan claimed they had played their best game of the season.

Next opponents to face the now up-and-coming Rams were the Buccaneers from Modesto and their "T" formation. The Eisanmen again played the role of favorites but were completely taken in the first half by the "T" and fell before the Pirates 19 to 7. The game was an upset, as the Pirates had already lost a few games before meeting the Rams. The Red and White dominated the second half, however, and stopped everything the "T" had to offer.

Rams Win Two In Row

Disgusted with the way they had narrowly been missing victory, the Rams took the field against Sacramento with one ambition in mind, that of a decided victory. The Panthers met a bunch of determined men that put together their best game up to then, and fell before the Rams 13 to 8. Improvement was tremendous for the Rams, at which time it showed them that victory could be achieved in all of their final games.

Salinas came to the campus gridiron in an attempt to stop the rise of the Rams, but were unsuccessful. The college still improved over the Sacramento fray and handed Salinas a 28 to 0 trouncing. This was definitely their best game of the season and proved to Eisan that the squad was actually good when it decided to play football.

Squad Makes 778 Yards

In the first six games against San Francisco State, Los Angeles, Cal Frosh, Stockton, Modesto, and Sacramento, the Rams made 778 yards from scrimmage to their opponents' 908, or an average of 130 yards to 151 yards per game. The Red and White lost 177 yards from scrimmage while the opponents gave up 210 for an average of 29.5 yards to 35 yards per contest. All in all, the Rams made a net gain of 601 yards to 798 yards for opponents on scrimmage for an average

Season Success If Rams Win

By Bob Marcus

With one game remaining on its schedule, that against the unbeaten conference leaders, San Mateo, the Rams can make the season a success with a victory over the Bulldogs and very dismal with a defeat.

* * *

The only defeat suffered by the San Mateans was to the highly touted Stanford Freshmen in a drizzling rain, 13 to 7. Not in the junior college conference, however, the Stanford Papooses are the only undefeated freshman squad in the Pacific Coast Conference along with the California Cubs.

* * *

In conference competition, the only squad to cross the San Mateo goal to pay dirt, was the Stockton eleven.

The peninsula squad should loom as overwhelming favorites, but if the odds hold true to form, San Mateo was favored last year, but were defeated in a quagmire on a rain soaked Seals Stadium floor.

By far the outstanding ground gainer for the Rams has been Turk Terzian, who from his quarterback position, is the main figurehead in the Ram double wing offense.

* * *

Leading kicker has been Templeton Davies, who has averaged 40 yards on his high, twisting spirals. At times, Augie Kalmen has proven himself an able threat, with booming kicks beyond the 60 yard mark.

* * *

Will the squad in the southland, it is reasonably safe to release the nicknames acquired by the men during the course of the season: "Operator" Brown, "Turk" Terzian, "Pop" Tobin, "Screw" Smith, "Bronko" Drake, "Fat" Castellano, "Trotsky" Kalmen, "Hook" Vasquez, "Sleepy" Corbett, "Mort" Cassidy, "Tizer" Danielson, "Curly" Medrano, "Izzy" Urbano, "Red" Glavia, "Vicious" Davies, and "Drink" Wada.

Although hit hard with the loss of such players as Dick Souza, Bob Hufnagle, Frank Molina, Bob Christen, and Bud McKinnon, the squad has held up measurably well under the circumstances.

* * *

Shifted from right halfback to the left half position, Art Ekdall has finally found his position. With his keen speed, deception, broken field ability, and knack of cutting sharply on reverses, has been the reason why the Rams have been able to move up the field.

* * *

Although a 6 ft. 3 in., 200 pounder, tackle Bob Hoffman, is without a doubt one of the fastest men on the eleven. Although playing on the left side of the line, Hoffman has, on many occasions, broken through to smear many a play on the opposite side of the line, as witnessed in the Salinas game.

Day And Mixer Precede Dance

Low Soph Occasion Caters To East Bayers; To Receive Stimulation

With the announcement that there would be a low sophomore day and a mixer to stimulate spirit for the low sophomore dance to be held at the Oakland Scottish Rite Auditorium on Tuesday, November 18, Mel Dropo, class president, urged everyone to "get into the swim."

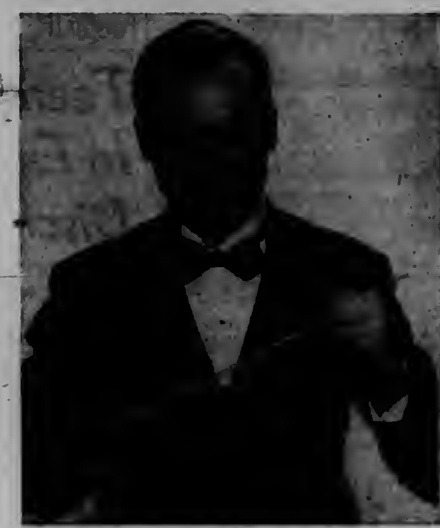
With music supplied by Warren Ringen, whose band is noted for its college music and featuring Betty Schomaker as the songstress, Dropo said that the dance was sure to be one of the best in the college's history.

The dance is being held in Oakland so that the more than one-third of the college students that live in the East Bay may attend. Heretofore all of the dances have been held here in San Francisco, but this is to be the only one that will be held in the East Bay.

Those that are planning to attend are asked not to wear corsages. The dance is to be semi-formal.

Low Soph Day Important

Of almost equal importance, according to Jim Duryea, secretary of the low sophomore class, is the new low sophomore day. The day is to start out with a rally to be given by the rally commission with the intention of creating spirit for the San Mateo football game that same evening. Following this will be given a "real" mixer, Duryea said.



Described as being "the first real mixer that has ever been held," the music will be provided from records which have just been purchased. These records range from Shaw to Miller and back to Martin and are guaranteed by Duryea to set "everybody to dancing."

Beautiful Women There

There will be 20 of the campus' most beautiful women to make formal introductions if they are needed. All those who are planning to attend are urged to "come stag."

By using "canned" music the dancers can have the music they like by the most outstanding orchestras and bands of the country, Duryea told reporters.

"The success of the new 'day' depends on the reaction of the students and the probability of there being another hinges on the turn out," Duryea announced.

Warren Ringen, music master, leads the orchestra for the low sophomore semi-formal, Tuesday, November 18, at the Scottish Rite hall in Oakland. As an added feature, Ringen presents his vocalist, Betty Schomaker.

Employment

Wrapping Instructions For Students Desiring Christmas Jods Starts

Instruction of students who wish jobs as wrappers during the Christmas season will begin Monday, November 10, and continue until Friday, November 14, stated Joseph A. Amori, college employment director. The classes will be held at Continuation School, located at 15th and Mission streets, hourly from 1:00 to 3:00 o'clock. Each class will last two hours, he added and the wrapping course will last either six or eight hours, depending upon the individual.

Anyone attending these classes, which will be conducted in the afternoons only, can be almost certain of securing a Christmas job, Amori said. There will be no charge for the instruction.

In regard to excused absences for Christmas work, Amori made this statement:

"There will be no general rule adopted this year. Every case will be judged individually with regards to their scholastic standing and how badly they need the job. College is officially dismissed December 12."

A number of jobs which require only four hours in the afternoon and a full day Saturday are available in the placement office now, continued Amori, and these jobs will work into full-time Christmas positions. The openings are in various fields such as sales, stock clerks, and wrapping. Anyone who could work from 1 to 5 in the afternoons or 2 to 6 and put in a whole day Saturday may apply for these jobs at the employment office, Amori said.

Omicron Phi Pi Group Holds Initiation Meet

Initiation of new members into the Omicron Phi Pi society will take place Tuesday, November 11, at the home of Michael Zarchin.

Candidates seeking information regarding entry into the organization are urged to see Zarchin before the meeting date, it was revealed today.

Membership keys for members will be available at the Tuesday night meeting, and orders for keys for members who have not yet requested them can be ordered by making application at the finance office between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock.

Following the initiation at Zarchin's home, 295 Urbano Drive, at 7:30 p. m., a discussion of the Japanese-American relations will take place.

Holidays Cancel Four Guardsman Issues In Nov.

Since several holidays appear in the month of November, The Guardsman will suspend publication for four issues.

Dates on which The Guardsman will not appear are November 11, Armistice Day; November 18 and 21, Thanksgiving holidays; and November 25.

Even though November 18 and 25 are not holidays, vacation time from the Armistice and Thanksgiving holidays will cut into publication time. Remaining issues to appear this month are the November 14 and 28 papers.

sought to segregate incorrigibles from those young delinquents who can be rehabilitated. The bill, originating from a study made by the American Law Institute, was taken over by Phillips, sponsored by him, and passed by the Legislature in September.

New Life For Criminal

In contrast to the old method of sending all young offenders to San Quentin, irrespective of individual differences, the act provides scientific treatment. The criminal is recommended to a state trade school, to an institution for the insane or feebleminded or to a forestry camp. Some are sent to San Quentin, and others are given probation.

According to former Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, passage of Phillips' bill was the most important piece of legislation concerning youth since the installation of the juvenile court. The law has been recommended to the other 47 states, but California has taken the initiative under the leadership of Phillips.

The Rams attempted 77 passes and completed 23 for 31 per cent, while opponents attempted 87 and completed 28 for a 32 per cent record. The Rams gained 282 yards through the air for an average of 47 per game, while their opponents made 391 yards and a game average of 65 yards.

Net gained on passes and scrimmage is 883 for the college or 147 per game and 1,189 yards of 198 per game for their opponents.

Punts Average 37 Yards

Augie Kalnen and Temple Davies punted 60 times for the college and averaged 37 yards per kick. The Rams' opponents punted 56 times and averaged 36.5 yards a kick, which makes the punting duels fairly even.

The Rams lost 195 yards through penalties or 32.5 per game, while their opponents were penalized 225 yards or an average of 37.5 a game.

Forum Club Discusses Western Hemisphere Topics

Fraternity Presents Locket To Winner

Presentation of an engraved sweetheart locket to the sophomore queen will be made again this semester at the sophomore formal by the Phi Lambda Epsilon fraternity, officers of that organization announced Wednesday.

Harry Haesloop, Phi Lambda Epsilon president, will make the presentation. The locket is to be given in addition to the 15-inch loving cup.

The 21 preliminary candidates for the contest will be notified Monday, November 24, following the Thanksgiving holiday, George Coart, high sophomore president, revealed.

After a week of careful deliberation, six final candidates will be chosen by the committee. Names of the seven judges will not be disclosed until shortly before the contest, Coart said. Election of the queen will be conducted by the Associated Men Students.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 124, according to the following deadlines:

Next High School Senior Tea To Be Planned Thursday

Plans for the second in a series of Associated Women Students' teas to be held at the college later this month or early in December will be discussed at the meeting to be held Thursday, November 13, at 2 p. m. in Dean Margaret Dougherty's office, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

This tea will be the second in a group of teas sponsored by the AWS to honor the high school women, and to give them an opportunity to visit the college, meet some of its students, and get acquainted with the activities of a college," explained Miss Fox.

Probably chairwomen of the day will be Pat Niemeyer, vice-president of the Associated Students, and Betty McKillop, vice-president of the AWS, assisted by Miss Fox and a chosen reception committee.

This second tea will be to honor senior women from Polytechnic, Commerce, and Galileo High Schools, Miss Fox said. The first, which was held last month, honored women from Washington, Lincoln and Lowell High Schools. Other high school senior women will be honored at teas which are expected to follow.

Also important to the members of the AWS is the fact that Gloria Olivi has been appointed temporary secretary of the association. She is to take the place of Jean Herrold, who has taken a leave of absence, according to Miss Dougherty.

Owing to circumstances beyond The Guardsman's control UNDERSTANDING YOUR COLLEGE does not appear today. It will appear in the next issue, Friday, November 14.

Annual Newman Club Party Next Monday

The annual wiener roast and dance given by members of the Newman Club will take place Monday, November 10, at 8 p. m. at Sigmund Stern Grove, Joe O'Neil, club treasurer, revealed.

The outing, generally held at the end of the week, will be on Monday because of the holiday, Armistice Day.

Any student may attend, O'Neil pointed out, whether a member of the club or not. Dancing will consist of the evening's entertainment.

Hush, Hush, The Weekly Council Meeting Is Called To Order

By Frank Quinn

Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, brings his sturdy gavel down upon the desk top with a resounding thump! The room is hushed! Occupants of the room lean forward in their seats with breathless anxiety! The forces of the Associated Student government are at work, another Executive Council meeting has begun!

Secretary Aspasia Vasilatos runs through her minutes with her unusual dexterity. The heads of the college committees mumble their usual "Nothing to report."

President Haesloop calls for unfinished business. In answer to his vain call there is deep silence while members of the council desperately wrack their brains hoping to stumble over something to say.

President Haesloop calls for new business. Again deep silence. And then like a bolt from the blue someone suggests that the council appropriate 60 cents for the purchase of two keys lost last semester. At last the forces of your government are really at work! The motion is passed without discussion—unanimously.

President Haesloop calls for more new business. And again deep silence, which is at last broken by a motion to appropriate 5 cents for a lock to be put on the calendar stand by the front door. The motion is passed unanimously.

President Haesloop asks if there are any objections to closing the meeting. Deep silence.

President Haesloop brings his sturdy gavel down upon the desk top with a resounding thump! Members of the Ex-Council lean back in their seats with sighs of relief! The nervous tension that held the room has left!

Armistice Day Tuesday Official College Holiday

Armistice Day, Tuesday, November 11, will be an official holiday, according to J. Paul Mohr, college registrar.

"Though the college is excused Tuesday, there will definitely be classes on Monday, November 10," Mohr said.

Rallies

San Mateo Joins College In Inter Campus Programs

Two joint rallies with San Mateo Junior College Thursday, November 13 and Friday, November 14, at San Mateo and at the college respectively, are in preparation for the Saturday night grid classic at Seals Stadium between the two colleges, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, announced Wednesday.

"On November 13," Mohorovich disclosed, "a willing number of students from the college will caravan to San Mateo where a rally will be given and where we shall present our talent for their approval.

San Mateans To Visit

On November 14, a group of San Mateo students will come to the college where we shall give a rally in their honor. At that time they will present any entertaining talent they may have," he said.

Explaining that the rally at the college on Friday would be held on the front steps, Mohorovich added that he expected that all classes would be excused at 11 o'clock to attend the rally.

Attendance At Rally Urged

Mohorovich urged everyone to attend the rally and promised all that they would enjoy bigger and better entertainment.

"Frank Isola, vocalist, who went over so well at the last rally, will probably favor us with a few songs," Mohorovich added.

Beta Phi Beta Traditional Invitation Dance Nov. 28

This year, Beta Phi Beta fraternity's semi-annual invitational dance will be held on Friday evening, November 28, at the Century Club in San Francisco.

Bids for the dance, which will start at 9 p. m. and continue until 1 a. m., may be purchased for $1.10 from fraternity members Joe Wise and Jim Duryea and at the student store.

Dancing will be to the music of Jerry Norman and his orchestra with a special added entertainment during intermission.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

FOR many, many years governments of men have looked with favor upon the custom of setting aside certain days of the year in commemoration of dynamic and greatly important occasions.

Armistice Day, 1941, was celebrated by the chief executive in a speech. This speech told of the necessity of 1917 and of the necessity of 1941-2-3, etc!

Mr. Roosevelt declared that because we won the last war people were looking for the reasons that we fought it; if we had lost that war, he said, the reasons (in curtailed privileges) would have been all too obvious.

Because America was endangered in 1917 America fought — because America is endangered in 1941 America must continue to fight for liberty and freedom. This, students, constitutes oratory of the finest type; it will win debates and contests for you; if you plan upon a political career—use it!

IT'S A LAW!

But oratory is a science and a law unto itself. It admits no superiors, no contradictions; there is no priority in oratory other than oratory. It is a law because the law of oratory maintains that its conclusions must prevail or it is not good oratory. And to an orator bad oratory has never existed.

The minds of men must come to be swayed by way of their emotions. It is not the rationality but the feelings of the listener that are played upon.

So, following (as is seemingly the long established custom) the lead of Winston C., Franklin D. is with greater and greater intensity playing upon the emotions of his people. Often it is only through this medium that the needed action may find its proponents. However, in the contemporary scene—we do not know!

SHOULD IT HAVE BEEN——?

Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt should have said:

"An Armistice Day message from the President in this year 1941 is in reality but the wish for another Armistice. The chosen leader of one hundred and thirty million people can have only this one thought if he is ever to hope for a clear and honest conscience.

"When he realizes that through his actions hundreds of thousands of his people may go to their deaths; when he takes into account the faith that a nation has put upon him; when he considers this wealth, and power, and faith, and trust resting upon his office, the mighty weight of it all staggers his sense of proportions. He is awed by the countless possibilities to do good; he is plagued by the fear of the countless wrongs that may unwittingly be committed.

"His decisions must be right for his people. At this stage of the game ambition is no longer of importance. He has reached the top, he has his chance, failure on his part is failure on the part of a great nation.

"He must lie awake at night doubting the logic of his actions, he must carry the weight of his office during every minute. The sword of Damocles hangs constantly over his head. Yet he must present a calm, unperturbed, understanding, assured front. He of all men cannot doubt; of all Americans his actions must be certain—and right.

"So night and day he weighs the problem of peace and war. He builds mighty hypotheses in his mind, he collects advice and criticism from a thousand friendly and opposing mouths and minds; slowly his ultimate program is forming. But all the while he must act as though it had been established from the first.

"During this formative period mistakes are made, opposition arises, doubt is spreading. But no man is perfect, the problem is not simple. These mistakes point the way for more judicious actions. They form the basis for his final decision.

"Your President has weighed the merits of peace and of war. He has pondered upon vigilence or apathy. And vigilence has won.

"He has decided for himself and for his country that life is precious, but that it is not so precious as other human necessities. He has decided that his people must be allowed to live their lives without coercion, that they must have liberty in place of slavery, and hope in place of complete despair. He has decided that his people must have no fear except fear of their own conscience and good judgment, no pride except a pride in dem-

Rally

San Mateo Joins Program Today Features Ira Blue; Circus Act, Skit, Songs Complete Entertainment

Featuring Ira Blue, radio announcer and sportscaster, as guest speaker, a joint rally with San Mateo Junior College will be held this morning at 11 o'clock with all classes being excused for the occasion, Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner, announced this week.

"After presenting our entertainment for their approval at San Mateo yesterday," Mohorovich explained, "we are looking forward to good entertainment from them. Our entertainment consisted of a puppet act, songs by Frank Isola, and a few words from 'Terrible' Turk Terzian and Hal Trotsky of the football team," Mohorovich added.

Orchestra Plays For Rally

Commenting further on the rally today, Mohorovich disclosed that an orchestra led by Manuel Maun will play sweet swing for the affair. According to Mohorovich, the band can play either sweet or hot music.

"Also featured as entertainment will be a big circus act with Sam Sneed as a clown," he remarked. "A street commentator will take part in a skit as will Ed Coffin and Jack Robinson, who took part in the last rally.

"Best Rally Ever"

"Last but not least by far in the way of entertainment will be Frank Isola, who will sing a few songs," he said.

Band In First, Last Appearance

In what will be its first and last public showing of the semester, the college band will play for tomorrow's football game between San Mateo Junior College and this college, Douglas Craig, band member, disclosed today.

Consisting of approximately 30 members, the band will be led by several of the group who have helped in selecting and editing its music, according to Craig.

"Practice sessions may continue to be held for the group, but not much enthusiasm is expected because it is near the end of the semester," he said. "Next year, however, with a possibility of getting uniforms and organization, we can start from scratch again and arouse more enthusiasm."

Low Sophomores

Today Named To Honor Class, Stir Interest In Dance Tuesday Night

To instill spirit for the low sophomore semi-formal, a low sophomore day is being held today. The semi-formal will be held at the Scottish Rite Auditorium, 1547 Oak Street in Oakland on Tuesday, November 18.

Music for the dance will be supplied by Warren Ringen, who, according to Jim Duryea, class secretary, is noted for his collegiate music. The vocalist for the affair will not be Betty Shomaker as was formerly announced, but Dorothy Rae will hold forth on the bandstand. The dance will be held in Oakland so as to make it easier for those students who live in Oakland to attend.

All Invited

All students are urged to attend but those members of the low sophomore class are especially asked to come. The admission will be one Associated Student card per couple, and as usual, Mel Dropo, class president, asked that no flowers be worn.

For the first time in the history of the college there has been a day set aside for the low sophomores to reign. At 11 a. m. today there will be a rally held to promote spirit for the San Mateo football game to be held this evening. At 3 p. m. there will be a mixer dance held in the women's gymnasium. Duryea described the mixer as being the first real mixer that has ever been held.

Dancing Off The Record

The music will be from records and will be by the best orchestras of the country, Dropo said. The music will be the tunes that all of the nation is dancing to now. The records have already been purchased and are brand new.

There will be 20 campus women in attendance to make the necessary introductions, Dropo said.

Campus Player Melodrama May Be On Carnival Day

Originally scheduled for Friday, December 5, the old-fashioned melodrama and olio, to have been presented by the Campus Players, will now be given as part of carnival day, Dolores Sullivan, Players' president, said this week.

Only if the Welfare Committee's plan for carnival day is successful will the Campus Players present their program, Miss Sullivan explained, and should that plan fail to gain the support it needs, we shall carry out our original schedule.

At present all meetings of the drama group are being used as workshop periods. No definite casting has been made to date, Miss Sullivan said.

Former Aviation Student Visits, Praises CPT

Ensign Raymond M. Reynolds of the United States Naval Reserve, who took his primary Civil Pilot Training course at the college in the summer of 1940, payed Major George D. Richards, college CPT instructor, a visit recently.

After his visit, Reynolds returned to the Navy Air Corps where he will pilot a dive bomber on the aircraft carrier Saratoga. Reynolds took his advanced training at the University of San Francisco and then went to Jacksonville, Florida.

Reynolds said the training a student gets in the college CPT course is not repeated at Jacksonville.

At Jacksonville, Reynolds found that fewer men who had taken the CPT course "washed out" than those who had not taken the course.

Georgia Investigates "Something For Nothing"

ATLANTA, GA. — (ACP). — The board of regents, which controls the state's university system, has named a committee to look into what one member terms a "widespread belief among citizens of Georgia" that state and federal governments should support them.

Regent John J. Cummings told the board the university's professors and teachers should instill into their students the idea that people must work for a livelihood and not expect something for nothing.

Students Get Grade Report November 26

Students will confer with their advisers at 12 noon on Wednesday, November 26, not on a Monday, November 24, as originally scheduled, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

All students are advised to attend the meetings as deficiencies notices will be distributed and appointments will be set for students planning to return next semester so that the programs for the spring semester may be worked out.

Advisers will be found in the following rooms at 12 noon, at which time all other classes will be excused. Advisers will not be in their offices at this time, Miss Learnard emphasized.

NYA Rolls Increase; Few Placements Still Made

Since NYA rolls have advanced from 233 workers at the close of the first work period to 253 at the last tabulation, the college administration office is virtually closed to applicants, Claude T. Silva, college NYA director, announced last week.

Decreasing funds also limit opportunity for NYA work at the present time, Silva said; however, deserving applicants will still be considered, and a few placements may be made.

Of the 253 students now engaged in NYA work, 161 are women, and 92 are men. These statistics, Silva maintains, are evidence that defense industries have made many new outside jobs available to men. Application for NYA work is heavier during the fall semester, he explained, since more men students register in the fall than graduate in January.

Faculty Association Meets Today For Group Reports

Faculty members are requested to be present at a meeting of the Faculty Association to be held today in Room 100 at 11 o'clock, to hear reports of committee heads, according to Ward Nichols, Faculty Association president.

Progress reports will be given on such topics as terminal reports, grades, and social committee reports.

"The meeting will be completed early and all faculty members are urged to attend and learn what the association is doing," Nichols said.

The CAB Reports

Lindemann Pushes Carnival Day Plans As CAB Votes Full Cooperation; Board Also Suspends Six Clubs For Rule Violations

With unanimous support promised by the college clubs at last week's Club Advisory Board meeting, carnival day is ready for approval by the administration, Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee, announced last Wednesday.

"The representatives of the college clubs echoed the enthusiasm of their respective organizations," Lindemann said. "They voiced several ideas in reference to booths and hot dog stands."

The committee has abandoned the idea of holding the carnival in either the cafeteria or men's gymnasium because of the time necessary to complete construction of booths. The archery field is being considered as a possible site, according to Lindemann.

Next Semester Practical

"Holding of the carnival out of doors would make it necessary to wait for summer weather," Lindemann explained. "This will make it more practical to hold the carnival next semester."

"An idea was submitted to me to hold carnival day at the beginning of each semester. This would probably be the best time for carnival day as school spirit is at its highest during the first few weeks of each semester," Lindemann continued.

Sumner Gives Ideal

The original idea of carnival day was given to the Welfare Committee by Bill Sumner. Sumner suggested that one day of each college semester be set aside for a festivity in which the students would have a chance to take part.

"The committee enlarged upon the idea and hopes to make it a colorful college tradition," Lindemann said.

Bob Lindemann, who speaks of assured college club support of the proposed carnival day. Administration support is being solicited.

Because they failed to observe the final deadline for charter renewals in the Club Advisory Board, six clubs were suspended by the members of the board at last Friday's meeting, according to Francis Goetz, president.

These organizations, as named by Pat Ruf, chairman of the membership committee, are as follows: Astronomical Society, Chinese Students Club, Peace Society, Phi Rho Pi, Physical Education and Recreation Majors' Club, and Riding Club.

No Longer Recognized

These clubs are now suspended, Goetz said, and they will no longer be considered as members of the club board, nor will they be recognized in any way by the Associated Students.

"The CAB regrets the suspension of these clubs," he commented. "We had hoped for a 100 per cent enrollment of all organizations in the CAB this semester, but these organizations had enough time to make application for charters. They were constantly warned by the membership committee and through The Guardsman, of the final deadline. There was no other choice but suspension."

Although 6 clubs were suspended by the club board, 30 organizations previously active in the CAB were recognized and granted club charters.

New Charters Granted

Sigma Delta Pi, society for Jewish men, and Peace Officers, the police training group, two new organizations, were granted charters.

The complete list of all recognized clubs as released by the CAB membership committee is as follows:

Alpha Delta Epsilon, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Alpha Lambda Chi, Beta Chi, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Block S. F., Campus Players, Epsilon Epsilon Epsilon, Engineering Club, Forestry, Forum, Home Economic Association, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Horticulture Club, Japanese Students, Kappa Phi, Music Club, Newman Club, Nu Epsilon Sigma, Omicron Phi Pi, Peace Officers, Phi Beta Rho, Phi Lambda Epsilon, Pi Mu Gamma, Pick and Hammer, Rifle and Pistol Club, Skating Club, Theta Tau, and Women's Service Society.

Highlight of Friday's meeting was the final voting of the various club representatives that make up the CAB, on the recent plans of the Welfare Committee for a carnival day.

Representatives Favor Plan

Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee, presented the plan in full, and the CAB representatives voted unanimously in favor of the plan. Lindemann is now free to go ahead and receive the necessary sanction from the administration and Associated Students.

"Many of the clubs have already made suggestions for the various booths, should the carnival day become a definite date on the Associated Students' calendar," Lindemann revealed.

Cabby, the CAB periodical, was distributed following the adjournment of the meeting.

Ed Lopez, a member of The Guardsman reporting staff, is the current editor of the CAB publication. Art work for Cabby is under the supervision of Dolores Sullivan of The Guardsman art staff.

Editor Lopez looks to a new and improved Cabby in future issues with additional pages featuring more items of personal interest to club members.

Wrapping Classes Now At Adams School

Students who wish jobs as wrappers during the Christmas season, and who have been assigned to classes at Continuation School, are reminded that these classes have been transferred to the Adams School, at Eddy and Van Ness Avenue, stated Joseph A. Amori, college employment director.

These classes have been changed, Amori said, because the limited facilities at Continuation were overcrowded. One hundred and fifty students have already been transferred to Adams, he said.

These students who have been transferred are urged to get in touch with Adams School and find out what time these classes meet.

Twenty-five men have been requested for wrapping jobs for the holiday season, Amori said. Anyone who is interested is urged to apply for these positions immediately.

All of the post office positions have been filled. Fifteen students were selected for these jobs in Berkeley, Oakland, and San Francisco.

Galileo, Commerce, Poly On AWS Tea List

Senior women from Polytechnic, Galileo and Commerce high schools are soon to be honored at the second in a series of Associated Women Student teas, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

Plans for this tea were discussed at the AWS meeting held yesterday in Dean Dougherty's office, Miss Fox explained. It will be conducted much like the first one, which was held last month for the women from Washington, Lincoln and Lowell high schools.

75 Women To Attend

Each school will be invited to send 25 senior women. These women will be contacted through their high school advisers.

A reception committee will be chosen to conduct the guests about the campus. Probable chairwomen for the day will be Pat Niemeyer, Associated Student vice-president, and Betty McKillop, AWS vice-president; assisted by Miss Fox, and Gloria Olivi, acting secretary.

The tea will probably be held in Room 158 as before, she stated. Refreshments will be prepared by the home economics classes.

"The reason we are sponsoring these teas is because we should like to have the high school women become better acquainted with college activities," Miss Fox explained.

Reduced Season Rates For Symphony Available

Students who are interested in securing reduced price rates on season tickets for the San Francisco Symphony, are urged to make their requests known before Monday, November 17, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

"The San Francisco Symphony is again offering season tickets to students at greatly reduced rates," Miss Badger said, "and in order to get the tickets, the reservations must be made through me."

The cost of tickets for the series of 12 Friday evening performances will be approximately $7.50. Tickets for the series of 12 Saturday evening symphonies will be $9.00.

"These tickets are all for good seats," Miss Badger commented, "and I am sure this offer should interest all music lovers."

The symphonies will begin Friday, December 5, and will run approximately every two weeks until April 17.

Wednesday No Holiday; Dance Tuesday Anyway

Wednesday, November 19, will not be a college holiday as previously announced, the registrar's office said Wednesday. Thanksgiving holidays will be Thursday and Friday, November 20 and 21. Change in the original schedule resulted when an institute day for the San Francisco school department was postponed from November 19 to February.

Associated Student officers planned no change in the low sophomore dance scheduled for next Tuesday evening, and Guardsman editor, Borrie Hyman, said that despite the calendar change, there will be no issue of The Guardsman Tuesday, November 18.

Committee Names Ernie Hecksher Orchestra For Formal Dec. 13

Ernie Hecksher, well known San Francisco orchestra leader, is slated to play for the sophomore formal on December 13, it was announced today by George Coart, high sophomore class president.

Following the dance at the Beresford Country Club on the El Camino Real, this side of San Mateo, the breakfast, at about 2:30 a. m., will be given at the new Old English Drive-In near the country club, Coart revealed.

Bids Being Printed

Bids for the formal are now being printed. According to the committee they will be unique, "the best looking yet."

The sophomore sweetheart will be honored at the formal where she will be presented with a 15-inch loving cup by the Associated Students and an engraved sweetheart locket by the Phi Lambda Epsilon fraternity.

Selections Proceeding

Selection of 21 preliminary candidates for the sweetheart contest, Coart said, is being made as planned by the seven judges whose names will be withheld until shortly before the final election. Preliminary candidates will be notified Monday, November 24, following the Thanksgiving holiday.

After a week of careful deliberation the committee will choose from these a group of six for final consideration. Their pictures will be displayed on the bulletin board in the main lobby.

Final election by the Associated Men Students will be conducted Tuesday, December 9.

For Carnival Day

Pull Together

NOW that the Club Advisory Board has voted complete support of Carnival Day, the work of Welfare Committee Head Bob Lindemann has just begun.

His task is not enviable, and everyone who might contribute something to his plan should co-operate to the utmost. The greatest burden of the actual work, once Lindemann's arrangements have been approved by the administration, will fall on the CAB, which is as it should be. Carnival Day is splendid opportunity for the CAB to prove its worth to many who, for a long time, have seriously doubted the value of the group. As Lindemann pointed out, the extent of CAB co-operation will determine to a large degree the success of the venture. The unanimous approval voiced last Friday bodes well.

On the basis of the broadly outlined plans released thus far, The Guardsman offers its support and urges fullest co-operation for the Day.

Band Still Possible

NEWS of the imminent dissolution of the volunteer band should come as a surprise to no one familiar with band history here in the college.

The future, however, should not be received as a final defeat, for President Cloud, though not promising, has outlined a plan for official backing of a band next semester.

Lack of credit for band work was singled out as the chief reason for the dwindling band membership and final disbandment last semester by Madison Devlin, then temporarily in charge of the band. Dean Browne repeated Devlin's words when announcing the condition of the band last week, noting also the lack of an instructor.

When the band was started this September, The Guardsman, cognizant of the arbortive attempt to organize a band last semester, editorially opined that unless credit was granted to the students, the group could have but "a slight chance to survive." These words were predicted on no gift of augury, merely simple observation.

The administration, equally aware of the impediments to successful organization, stated in reply to the editorial that it had been working on possible solutions. After noting several difficulties before the administration in instituting an instructional course, President Cloud commented:

"We are encouraged to think that we shall be able to offer credit courses in instrumental music instruction at the immediate start of the spring semester."

It is to be hoped that plans for the courses do materialize. The last two disappointments to band members and student body alike prove conclusively that organization and credit are absolutely necessary for a permanent band, and no one denies the worth of a band in the college.

Encore Hildebrand

JUDGING by the hearty and cordial response to last week's talk by Dr. Joel H. Hildebrand, dean of the college of letters and science at the University of California, lecture hall space will be inadequate if an encore is offered next year.

Filling even the aisles of the north lecture hall, students and faculty flooded the room to enjoy Dr. Hildebrand's advocacy of the liberal education, made bright by the wit of a genial personality.

Full credit for bringing this truly appreciated guest to the college goes to Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, under the advisership of Alice C. Cooper.

If the society and Dr. Hildebrand could be prevailed upon, we know that annual recurrences of the kind of program offered last week would meet with enthusiastic approval from everyone.

Shots At ...RAMdom

on Sundays when we're feeling musty after vicious rounds of egg nogs with two squirts of vanilla the night before, we drop into the De Young Museum. The quietness and the reassuring permanence of the collected relics provide a feeling of stability. We playfully call this treatment the hot mamas - in - the - evening - and - mummies - in - the - morning plan, and it's better than a bromo.

We were staring at a surrealist picture depicting a flute with a face drinking a cup of coffee under a sobbing moon with a clock in its center. It was entitled Self Portrait and we were coming to the conclusion that it was symbolic, or else a poor likeness, when a middle-aged dreadnaught plowed past leaving a slight destroyer of the Ruby Snooks class.

Now, this particular room was across the hall from one of those masculine sanctums where woman has never trod. The small one, who had been studiously spelling out the labels on all the pictures cocked an eye at the sign on the door. She spelled out the three letter word.

"Aunty, I wanna see 'em," she whined.

Aunty was shocked.

"But, Betty, you can't go in there."

"But, Aunty," wailed the wee one, "mama says there aren't any men left in the world an' that sign says they got 'em here an' I wanna see 'em."

is a step toward proving what we've always maintained. Small girls shouldn't learn to read until they've at least been to college.

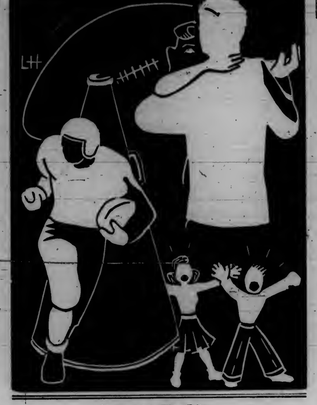
Hmm. How old a model? Blonde?

ONE SAD EVENING

we were in a booth somewhere dazedly trying to unweave the vagaries of a paper wrapped tamale. The next booth contained a young squire and his little chum, who were talking earnestly about life and their present status quo.

"I like you a lot," she swished with her mouth full, "but sometimes you're a regular he-man and at other times you're disgustingly feminine."



"Well," he munched, "you see, as far back as I can trace, half my ancestors have been male and the other half female."

WHEN SAINT MARY'S

played Duquesne at Kezar Stadium last Sunday we blithely hopped up to the student body card ticket booth and tried to use our $4 pasteboard. But, it seems that though high school students may use theirs, a junior college card is non compis mentis. That's just fine. We gave eight times as much for our cards as high school students do, yet their cards are honored and ours aren't.

As late as 1919 in a midwest college now out of existence, women students were not allowed to play except "because it made them take immodest postures."

RAM'S HORN

Band Demise, Stags At Mixers, Rainy Day Gym Questioned

Any student desiring to express an opinion on any subject is urged to use the Ram's Horn for this purpose. Letters should be left in the publication's office, Room 151. Deadline for the Tuesday issue is the preceding Thursday. Deadline for the Friday issue is the preceding Tuesday. All letters should be in by 10 a.m.

● Guessing
Editor, The Guardsman:

In the last issue of The Guardsman, the story on the coming mixer dance for the low sophomore class has me guessing. The statement which was made in reference to "all those who are planning to attend are urged to come stag." That's all very fine, but perhaps there will be just a few of us who wish to ask the "best gal" to accompany us to this said mixer. Of course, it may be admitted that it's very nice for the new students to have this opportunity to become acquainted, but what of us who have been here so long that we know everyone and have one special person whom we want to be seen dancing with.

● Practice Not Wasted
Editor, The Guardsman:

What is all this talk about the voluntary band disbanding? True, the men receive little or no thanks for their weekly practice, but they will form the nucleus of a band next semester. The college really needs some sort of musical organization, aside from singers. Every college, junior college, and even high school in and around San Francisco has a band of its own, and we are just as good as any of these schools.

Naturally a large turn-out could not be expected at first, but new students, and musical students after seeing the group perform at college rallies, games and other college functions will be enthralled with the music, the uniforms, and the trips that the band will get with the football team (we hope). Each year the tournouf will be better and before many semesters are over a grand college band will be in existence.

Surely, the eight stalwart men aren't going to "give up the ship" this late in the game. Why not wait and see what next semester or next year brings? The practice isn't wasted anyway.

Hopeful

● One Wonders
Editor, The Guardsman:

The recent editorial in reference to the cancelling of men's classes held in the gym in the rainy weather, has all the earmarks of a week constitution or mind of the male species of the college.

Why should the men, who are supposed to be the stronger sex admit even to themselves that a little thing like rain could put a damper on their spirits?

Of course, things like this do often come up, but it really makes one wonder sometimes.

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

NEXT week the low sophomores will be hosts at a dance in Oakland, so today the column will attempt to show some new FEMFADS that are being shown in the downtown stores so that all dancers will be well dressed for the coming hop.

Black is always dressy, and is ever popular, but to make it seem new this season a novel color, pink sherbet, combining pink and lavender, was discovered to dress up the dark color. The dressiest dresses with the color incorporated were made with colored panels down the front.

Again in black, but velvet this time, many fashions were found with both sophisticated and simple lines. One model was two piece with a black velvet hip length jacket, and pleated taffeta skirt. The taffeta wasn't plaid, and wasn't striped, but rather a mixture of them both. Another black taffeta was extremely simple, with only white lace trimming around the neck.

STILL SEMI-FORMAL

This dance, incidentally, is semi-formal, and by bearing in mind the definition given by Pat Nicmeyer, social committee chairman, it is easy to decide what to wear. She said that either fancy street length dresses or floor length dinner gowns would be in order for the dance. As no change has been made, this policy undoubtedly stands for the coming dance.

As the rule "no corsages" is still in effect, several models seen would be in perfect taste if only because they don't need any real flowers to dress them up. One was black crepe with a red top providing the color, and a black sequin flower on the right shoulder. At night sequins are in the height of their glory, so the conventional gardenia or other flower corsage would do an injustice to such a dress.

For the student who because of its warmth or softness or some other reason is partial to wool, there are several dresses just made for her. A neutral wool dress zipping up the front, high necked, and trimmed only with braid around the skirt, and elbow length sleeves, is one of these.

SIMPLICITY PREDOMINATES

Simple lines seem to overrule the fashion field this season, but some distinctive additions to the plainness are sequins, beads, braids, and of course, contrasting colors.

Although the majority of the student body wears street length dresses to the dances, there may be some students who like floor length gowns.

One of these is black velvet trimmed with white fur, while another is of shirtmaker type made in red crepe and trimmed with one large gold kid button and a wide gold kid belt. With matching kid shoes, and evening bag, the wearer would jar any stag-line.

SAN SEES . . .

dresses with dropped waist lines especially popular with the younger set (if not, the stores are surely showing the wrong clothes).

Jersey dresses both in street length and floor length models being worn to all college activities.

Appointment For Love . . . Boyer-Sullavan Minus Tears

APPOINTMENT FOR LOVE, a light, captivating farce with a decided emphasis upon the boudoir provides a splendid vehicle for the talented star combination of Charles Boyer and Margret Sullavan. This latest sophisticated comedy from Universal Pictures allows ample room for the two stars to demonstrate skill and versatility in the art of sly comic values.

A transition of mood from the somber Back Street to gay lighthearted frivolity in Appointment For Love was an effortless one for Boyer and Sullavan. Adept at handling the grim, unhappy reins of tragedy, the pair seem even more at home in lighter fare and thanks to their buoyant, sparkling performances, the film rates high on this year's list of cinema successes.

As far as plot goes, the story has been filmed many times before in one form or another, but rarely with such genuine charm or skill. An excellent script manages to create enough twists and subtle devices to steer the material away from the pall of a trite patterned mold.

MARRIAGE VS. CAREER THEME

It's the theme of career vs. marriage played for comedy throughout. When Charles Boyer, as playwright extraordinary meets efficient, test-tube worshipper Margaret Sullavan, a swift courtship follows. Next comes marriage, the honeymoon . . . and Miss Sullavan's great idea. It seems she has no intention of giving up her medical profession; on the contrary, she expects to continue her work with intensity and purpose. But to accomplish her plan, she demands an apartment of her own so she won't bother Charlie in her nocturnal merry flights and rather uncertain hours of practice. An apartment of her own rather startles Charlie, but there is nothing he can do. So the newly married couple reside in the same apartment house in different apartments, driving an inquisitive elevator boy half crazy.

The efforts of Boyer to bring his wife back to his own apartment through stimulated jealousy will provide any number of good old "belly-laughs" among the quantitative chuckles that will be most assuredly provoked. The climax is very delightfully presented, although a trifle obvious.

Director William Seiter has developed every possible laugh from his script and wrapped the whole thing in glitter and glamorous sets. It's a treat to the eye as well as to the funny-bone.

CAST PLAYS IN HIGH-GEAR

Busy farce material like Appointment For Love depends much upon cast for full success and this important ingredient is at 100 per cent efficiency here. Boyer as the playwright and Sullavan as the doctor are not only stimulating personalities but fine purveyors of the Thespian art. Miss Sullavan with her marvelous, throaty voice has long been one of this department's top favorites; we're rather prejudiced about Boyer in that same respect. In an odious glamour-boy comparison, we still maintain Boyer outranks in natural ability and charm the whole parcel of Hollywood matinee idols, Power, Taylor, Gable, and Lynn rolled together.

The two main stars monopolize most of the footage, but such favorites as Eugene Paulette, Reginald Denny, and Rita Johnson show up well in supporting roles. And they should award the fellow who played the elevator boy (we couldn't find his name in the credits) some kind of an Academy Award for his performance. He was a riot.

THE registrar's office boasts everything from soup to nuts, from students to instructors. People, all sorts, shapes and varieties are walking in and out all day long. As well as being a center of attraction for the students, instructors, and characters, it is also a lost and found office. Practically everything portable has been seen there. People lose books, and lunches, and other people, and they all come to the registrar's office with their troubles. The other day someone came in with a cat he had found in the library. It was very unusual to find a cat in the library.

It seems as if every time something happens in a lecture room it has to happen to Louis Berman. Perhaps his star has stopped shining.

It was approximately 2:25 p.m. when the door opened and in walked a plumber. (He must have been a plumber. He was all dirty and had 5 big wrench over his shoulder.) He looked at Berman with disgust and walked up the stairs to the projection room, dropped the wrench on the floor with a clang and then calmly walked out, giving Berman the evil eye.

At approximately 2:35 p.m. he came walking in again. This time he had a burlap bag over his shoulder full of odds and ends. (They must have been odds and ends. They were so small.) He walked calmly up the stairs to the projection room and dropped the odds and ends with a decisive bang. He walked out giving Berman the evil eye.

At approximately 2:45 the plumber came in again and this time he was empty handed. (He was dirty, and he must have been a plumber.) He walked up the stairs again and made a little rustle with the pipes, and wrenches, and odds and ends. And walked out again looking Berman up and down. After he had gotten out of the door Berman said, "that fellow and I seem to have a clash of ideas." We thought it was good anyway.

Today we give the instructors a break.

Robert Utter, English instructor, was in front of his English 22(b) class giving forth with beautiful phrases and pearls of rhetoric in description of the beauty of boats and calm blue ocean waves beating against the sides of the ship, as the boat sailed through serene and tropical water. "Yes," said Utter, "it's wonderful to be aboard a steamer under such circumstances." His speech was effiecious; a calm was prominent when up popped some loquacious person. "a row boat ain't bad either."

When Warden Clinton Duffy visited here Monday he was about to be interviewed by one of the reporters from The Guardsman. She couldn't think of any important questions to ask the gentleman, when the editor came up with the interrogation, "why don't you ask him what percentage of junior college students end up in San Quentin?" We wonder.

Your College Presents . . . Artists Mix Fun And Work In Classes

By Ivanna Hayworth

ART such as is offered at the college is a cultural outlet for students who plan to finish their academic work here, however, if they wish to transfer their work, they receive full credit.

Last year, the university gave the department a break and a course was added to set the requirements under the social science group, namely, history of art and history of music, the latter of which is a favored subject among the students.

Some of the courses which are offered are terminal and as formerly intimated, other are not.

For majors in the group, liberal arts courses and the basic fundamental art classes are required.

Courses in the art curriculum have been offered since the institution of the college in 1935, however, classes at Galileo were not very large.

Because of limitations in both room and equipment here in the new building, it has been necessary to curtail too large classes, yet the classes are now filled to capacity.

PROJECTS OF GROUP VARIED

Students in this division carry some very interesting projects. One woman student, Mrs. Winifred Graber, mother of two children, has as her project the selected writing of book for children using as a subject one of her little girls. Upon bringing the first draft of her book to Richard Allman, art instructor, she was referred to Mrs. Joan Muscio, of the Journalism department. Mrs. Graber was then sent to William Eckert of the advertising art division, and his students are working now on sketches for the book.

GET AROUND LANDSCAPE CLASSES

The landscape art classes meet twice weekly and take their equipment to various places to do their paintings, frequently the beach. Last week upon arriving at the beach and finding the fog coming in much too heavily to do any painting, the students spent a very enjoyable afternoon wandering along the beach collecting rocks and different fossils.

Upon returning to their classes at the college, they have since besieged George Green, instructor of the geology department, for the descriptive geological names and terms used in connection with these rocks. Incidentally Green is furnishing the different classes with material for their sketches and paintings in the form of color photographs and other interesting material in his abundant collection of same.

HISPANIC RELATIONS STRESSED IN NEW COURSE

A new and highly enlightening course has been instituted into the curriculum namely, art of the Americas. Students in the art classes are helping to get it, organized now, according to Allman. This course was offered three years ago, but it was not successfully worked out and was discontinued until a future date.

The general idea of the course is to bring about a common understanding of art between the Americas. This study of art is really the color of the Americas as far as schitect and sculpture are concerned.

The above watercolor is taken from a scene near Lake Merced by Elenor Hawk, student in one of the landscaping classes. Photographs of the painting were made by Ralph Putzker, another art student.

Green is contributing again in this work with numerous photographs which he made when in South and Central America.

Students are earnestly working on their paintings, looking forward to the yearly exhibit which will be held either in April or May of next year at the de Young Museum.

When publication of The Guardsman is resumed, Friday, November 28, the Civil Service department will be featured.

Horse Show, San Mateo Tennis Play Day Highlight Tourney Week Beginning In December

Tourney Week, semi-annual finale of Women's Athletic Association activities, will begin the first week of December, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the organization revealed recently.

Beginning Wednesday, December 3, and continuing through Thursday, December 11, the banquet date, Tourney Week will be highlighted by a horse show, a tennis play day in San Mateo, finals in various sports, and awarding chenilles and awards.

Improvement Expected

Clubs are urged by Miss Kraul to decide early what activities they wish to plan for the week. Last year many clubs had final games or demonstrations, but this year a much better showing is expected.

The banquet, climaxing the week, will be held Thursday, December 11, at Trinity Methodist Church, located at Market and 16th Streets, Miss Kraul pointed out. There will be a guest speaker, and awards won during the semester will be presented.

Club To Present Show

Thursday, December 4, a riding club will present the horseshow extravaganza at the San Francisco Riding Club on Stanyan and Haight Streets at 7:30 p.m., Anna Held, riding club manager announced.

Competitive riding will consist of walk, trot and cantor, single and double events, for beginner, intermediate and advanced riders, Miss Held explained, and also jumping and musical chairs for the advanced riders.

Awards To Be Given

One of the awards to be presented is a polished oak plaque with a bronze horse's head on the top, Miss Held pointed out. Under the head the names of the winners of the horse show will be engraved. It is hoped that the plaque will be placed somewhere in the Science Building before the show so that all students may see it, Miss Held added.

Riders, whether enrolled in riding classes or are members of the riding club, may enter the show, Miss Held announced, and compete for the trophies.

Volley Ball Entries Due To Be Filed Today

All teams wishing to enter the volleyball and softball tournaments must hand in their entry blanks today at the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser announced.

Entry blanks should be given to Brady by noon, as late entries will not be accepted.

In all probability, the volleyball tournament will be held on an elimination basis, with 15 points composing a game, and the best two out of three games determining the winner of the match. Six men are allowed to compete, with three substitutes available if needed.

Volleyball Starts Soon

Play in volleyball will start Monday, November 24, while the softball schedule has not been determined as yet.

Brady requested that all students interested in the tennis intramurals should sign up with him as soon as possible, for play will start next week. Pairings will be listed on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium, and the first round pairings must be completed within two days after they have been posted. Both singles and doubles competition will be the order of action.

Newmans Win Title

Yesterday afternoon, the basketball tournament was brought to a close after a successful season, Brady said.

The winners proved to be the highly touted Newman Club quintet, who with 10 consecutive victories as against no defeats, entered their final game with the Rabbits yesterday. The Newmans clinched the championship by running rampshod over the hapless Blitz Boys last week, winning by a wide 61 to 27 margin.

Their victory became brighter when it was learned that the Goats lost all chance of winning a resemblance of a tie with the Newmans, dropping a 29 to 22 decision to the Spartans.

Three Teams Tie

The Spartan victory placed three teams in an entanglement for second place honors, the principles being the Spartans, Goats and Rabbits.

Playoffs will be held, Tuesday, November 18, with the winner to automatically clinch second place while the loser will end in third position.

Pre-playoff favorites appear to be the Goats, who, although upset in their last encounter, played without the services of center Ed Lyons.

Ram Soccer Squad Meets San Jose

The acid test for the college soccer squad will be made tomorrow, when the Ram shinkickers meet the highly favored San Jose State squad on San Jose's home field at 10 o'clock.

The one big reason San Jose will be favored is because the Spartans have yet to lose a game, and have won the soccer championship for the past two years in a row.

"We are not scored by San Jose's record, and will go down there with only one thought, and that is to play to the best our ability, and hope to bring home another victory," Coach Jim Jensen said.

Jensen has put the squad through a rigid drill all week, and feels that the boys will be at their best.

Besides the outstanding playing of John Lazar, leading scorer for the college soccer team, the losers have received great support from Tom Woods, center half, who, Jensen says is one of the best in the league. Bill Shriakoff, fullback, and Joe Mahoney, halfback, who has played steady ball all season.

It is partly due, however, to Lazar's playing, that has kept the college in eighth, as he has scored three against Menlo, three against San Mateo, and one each against San Francisco State and the University of San Francisco.

Lee Eisan's Eleven Faces Conference Leaders Tonight In Seals Stadium; Rams Drop 12 to 7 Decision To Pasadena Bulldogs In Southland

By Nick Barbarotto

Returning from the southland with two losses instead of one, a 12 to 7 defeat at the hands of Pasadena, and the disqualification to Salinas, the Ram gridders will entertain the strong San Mateo Junior College tonight at 8 o'clock at Seals Stadium.

The game will be the last of the season for the college and also the most important. "If we lost all our games this year," said Coach Eisan, "this is the one that we want to win."

Big Game For Rams

San Mateo, most experts figure, are virtually in for the conference championship and even before their season is ended, are conceded the crown. For that reason, the contest looms as the highlight of the season for the Rams, who would receive much recognition despite their not-so-good gridiron year, should they upset the Bulldogs.

Coach Eisan believes that his men have an even chance to beat the peninsula outfit, revealing that the Rams could have beaten Pasadena had they not suffered a case of fumbilitis.

"We fumbled nine or ten times against Pasadena," said the Ram coach, "and they recovered at least half of them. Once we fumbled on their six yard line, from which point we received a 15 yard penalty and they preceded to score their touch-

Sparking at times, continually threatening, but never actually exploding, Lee Eisan's Rams bowed to the Pasadena Bulldogs last Thursday night in the Rose Bowl, by a five point margin, 12 to 7.

The Rams, from a statistical standpoint, were overpowered by one individual play. After the Red and White drove deeply into Pasadena territory, late in the second half, the Bulldogs recovered a fumble on their own 12 yard line. It was only one play later that, Evans, Bulldog back, skirted his own right end and jaunted 88 yards to score the clincher.

Both teams scored in the opening period of play. Pasadena took a Ram fumble on their opponents' 14 yard marker. The Bulldogs quickly ate up the remaining distance to the goal line and sent Elmer Holman scampering into paydirt to assume the initiative. The conversion was blocked.

Minutes later, Art Ekdall, taking a reverse, faded back and tossed the ball to Hal Corbett, who was finally brought down by the safety on the Pasadena eight yard line. The entire play carried from the Ram 46 to the Pasadena 8, and was good for a total of 46 yards. Turk Terrian made the final eight yards, slipping inside tackle to tally from the one yard line. With Ekdall holding, Terrian made good the conversion which put the visitors into the lead, 7 to 6.

During the rest of the first half play see-sawed back and forth with only one scoring threat. The Rams once again, as has been their fate this season, narrowly missed on a pass into the end zone.

One factor which contributed to the downfall of the Rams was the hard, but slippery and moist surface of the Rose Bowl.

San Mateo possesses a strong, solid, well-balanced forward wall, as evidenced by the results of their previous games. Only team to cross their promised land in the conference was Stockton, who, stranerly, went to the air for their score.

Salinas Protest On Ram Victory

Basing their claims upon the assumption that Bob Jones, end on the college football squad, is ineligible, Salinas Junior College has filed an official protest concerning the game which they lost 28 to 0 on Friday, October 31.

No decision has yet been released from the office of J. Paul Mohr, Athletic Commissioner for the Northern California Junior College Association, although he is now in possession of the complete evidence concerning the protest. Mohr, at the present time, is in Santa Barbara.

Salinas, according to Edwin C. Browne, college Dean of Men, protested on the basis that Jones had been enrolled there during this semester, and that he is therefore ineligible to play for the Rams.

No other conference games will be liable to forfeiture, Browne disclosed, because of a conference rule which prohibits protests made more than 48 hours after the contest in question has been played.

Salinas also claimed that the college watered the playing field before the contest. Lee Eisan, head football coach for the Rams, revealed, and that they were uninformed of the starting time for the game, thus forcing the Rams to wait for them before both the first and second halves.

The Salinas team, Eisan added, also seems to have thought that the head linesman who officiated at the game was the father of one of the Red and White's players.

"It would be different if it were a close score," Eisan said in commenting upon the act, "but we could have made the score 50 to 0 instead of 28 to 0."

Concerning the Salinas assertion that Jones was enrolled there during this semester, Eisan said, "I knew that Jones was in Salinas at the beginning of this semester, but I didn't think that he registered at the junior college there. He was there for only two days."

"Salinas never said anything about Jones' ineligibility to me before the game," Eisan continued, "and in view of the fact that the score was so large, I feel that they should merely have told me not to play him in any of our future games."

Mohr, having all pertinent facts at the present time, is now considering the evidence, and will release a decision after his return from Santa Barbara.

Playing for the peninsula eleven tonight, will be Leo Leggett, former Ram backfield ace, who converted for the Red and White two season ago.

Rams Face Team From Peninsula

Tonight's encounter against the San Mateo Bulldogs in Seals Stadium ends the 1941 football parade for the Rams. At this moment, the Bulldogs are undefeated in conference play, only suffering a setback from the Stanford Freshmen, 13 to 7, a non-conference eleven.

* * *

While in the southland for the Pasadena game, the squad, not being able to utter the Stanford-Southern California affair, attempted to pay their way into the mammoth Memorial Coliseum. However, while waiting in line to purchase their dazzles, members of the squad were approached by the Southern California stadium staff. Every player was required to search through his pockets for a means of identification before being allowed admittance. Upon showing driver's licenses, student body cards, birth certifiates, etc., the players were denied admission because of inadequate identification. The much discussed Southern hospitality was sadly lacking in this instance.

The squad suffered another casualty before entraining for the south, with the news that end Bob Jones, was declared ineligible because he registered at Salinas Junior College prior to coming to San Francisco.

Recognizing Jones, the Salinas eleven requested that they be given the game because the lions used an ineligible man, although beaten decisively, 28 to 0.

While in Los Angeles, the squad stopped at the Hotel Savoy. If a person accidentally wandered into a certain player's room, he would have been surprised to have seen 14 sprawled bodies, soundly sleeping on the floor, although the room itself was limited to two persons. As you may have guessed, the others were staunch followers of the Rams.

* * *

A crowd of 15,000 persons attended the Rose Bowl classic. This was the largest crowd to date which witnessed a Ram eleven in action.

Before the game and during half-time ceremonies, the huge Pasadena band, composed of 135 pieces, marched up and down the greensward before an interested gathering.

Public Support Of Youth Act Stressed

Correction Act Requires Aid, Emphasize Phillips, Duffy In Radio Broadcast

By Claire Leeds

Stressing the necessity for public support of the Youth Correction Authority Act, Assemblyman James H. Phillips, sponsor of the bill, and Warden Clinton Duffy of San Quentin Prison participated in a radio assembly broadcast at the college Monday in observance of American Education Week.

"The eyes of the nation are on the outcome of the first tests of the act," Assemblyman Phillips said. "California is the first state to adopt this progressive measure. Now it is up to all groups and organizations to understand and support it. The Youth Correction Authority Act can succeed if it is supported by the public."

Duffy Favors Act

Warden Duffy, showing what California has accomplished in the guidance of delinquents through passage of the act, emphasized that segregation and classification is the only sound treatment for young offenders. When the new law, passed September 13, is in effect, all youths between 18 and 23 years of age, convicted of crimes, not including murder, will be committed to the three members of the Authority, who will consider their cases individually and recommend proper treatment. This Authority possesses powers which no other single agency has today. In addition to directing a program of probation and rehabilitation for convicted youths, the authority may establish special agencies to prevent public offenses.

Contrasting the scientific treatment of juvenile delinquents by the Authority to the old method of placing all young offenders in a penitentiary, irrespective of individual differences, Phillips and Duffy expressed the significance of the act.

Speakers In Drama

In addition to the discussion by Phillips, Duffy, and Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, who invited the prominent speakers to participate, a skit, featuring Pearce Davies, student participant, showed how a typical juvenile delinquent will be handled by the Authority.

Also heard on the broadcast were Clarence Ashman, announcer, and President A. J. Cloud, who introduced the guests and pointed out the importance of the topic of guidance of delinquents in connection with American Education Week.

Frosh King

Personality First In Apollo Selection

Personality, not physical charm, will determine the selection of a freshman king, Bing Kirk, low freshman president, emphasized again today.

An appropriate title is wanted for the winner. He will not be called Apollo, Kirk said, and he will definitely not escort the sophomore queen to the formal. Candidates, he pointed out, need not be members of the freshman class.

Fourteen, rather than 21, preliminary candidates will be chosen by the committee of seven women. From these, four final candidates will be selected and their pictures will be displayed Monday, November 24, on the bulletin board in the main lobby.

Final election by the Associated Women Students will be held Friday, December 5, and the winner will be introduced the following Monday. Names of the seven judges will also be revealed at that time.

The freshman king will not be introduced at the Associated Men Students' boxing matches if a rally or other more appropriate event for the purpose can be arranged, Kirk said.

"Your President has decided that these things are of more value than life; that if they cannot be had in life—then instead of accepting their opposites, life is far better spent in the attempt to attain them."

Jack Duffy, Warden's Son, Gives His Viewpoints On Youth Act

By Claire Leeds

Living "on the inside" at San Quentin Prison, Jack Duffy, 19-year-old son of Warden Clinton T. Duffy, is familiar with the unique reforms which his famous father has introduced in line with his progressive rehabilitation program.

Jack Duffy, a student at Marin Junior College where he is president of the sophomore class, accompanied the warden when he visited the college to participate in the radio assembly broadcast here Tuesday.

Since the age of two, young Duffy has lived on the grounds of the penitentiary. Warden Duffy was born at San Quentin, his father, in turn, served as steward there, and Mrs. Duffy's father was captain of the guard. Jack Duffy, however, does not intend to follow their careers, but will study law or medicine.

Warden Duffy's program has been one of rehabilitation rather than punishment. In summarizing the policy he has followed during his administration, the warden himself said: "Our principal aim at San Quentin has been to treat each case individually and without brutality, to encourage religion, and to provide for the men complete education with particular emphasis on vocational training." The convict is encouraged in every way to better himself so that he may take his proper place in society.

Radios in the cells, movies twice a month, and a plan for cafeteria service are among the warden's outstanding innovations. The many advantages available to prisoners at San Quentin, Jack Duffy explained, are provided as a result of his father's belief that although hardened criminals will not ordinarily respond to kindness, they will behave in order to retain their privileges. "You've got to give them something," he said, "and then threaten to take it away."

More of these privileges were described by the warden's son. A convict, for example, may receive a regular degree from the University of California by completing in his free time the university extension courses conducted by inmates with university M.A.'s and Ph.D.'s. The diploma, Jack Duffy pointed out, bears no evidence that the student is a convict.

Vocational training is also a significant aspect of the warden's program. More than 3,000 of San Quentin's 4,445 inhabitants are taking courses of some kind, and more than 40 per cent of them are being prepared to fill national defense jobs when they are released from prison.

The sports program at San Quentin is the most varied of any penal institution in the world. Baseball games, boxing matches, an annual track and field meet, and other athletic events are held frequently.

A glee club, a literary magazine, and a prison newspaper which is on the exchange list of The Guardsman, also provide recreation and training for convicts. Dramatics is still another feature of the program. Negro inmates are now preparing for presentation in December of the spectacular production, Green Pastures.

Through his progressive administration at San Quentin, Warden Duffy has captured the attention of the entire nation.

Although his son does not intend to follow a career in penology, he greatly enjoys living on the grounds of the state penitentiary.

"San Quentin is a regular community," Jack Duffy said. "About 300 employees and their families live inside the gates. There are about 100 buildings in addition to those which are a part of the prison and 35 students attend the grammar school there.

Jack Duffy's comments regarding the college were exceedingly favorable. "You have a beautiful college," he told the reporter, "but," he added, "don't forget to plug Marin."

San Mateans Boast Fast Team, Says Eisan, But Heads Up Ram Playing Can Beat Them

down. In the second half our spirit wasn't what it should have been, we were leading 7 to 6 and instead of having more spirit, we bogged down. You need spirit to win ball games and that's what we'll have tonight."

Ekdall, Kalnen Star

Outstanding for the college against Pasadena, and on whose shoulders rest much of the burden of a possible victory tonight, were Art Ekdall and Augie Kalnen. Ekdall played a heroes role in his backfield chores, carrying the pigskin four times for 21, six, 10 and 11 yards for average of 12 yards per crack. He added to this with the only completed Ram pass, a 46 yard to Hal Corbett, which finally produced the Ram score.

Kalnen, besides being a stalwart in the line, kicked tremendously to set Pasadena back time and again. His kicks went 36, 42, 59, 31, 49, 41, 40, and 43 yards for an average of 42 plus per kick. The short ones were aimed at coffin cornor while the 59 yarder traveled 79 yards in the air.

Bob Hoffman and Glenn Smith also turned in a fine game in the line, while Turk Terzian came through with another brilliant performance.

Mateans Strong Team

San Mateo boasts a well-rounded team with plenty of speed, power, and tricks. They have been scored on by only Stockton in conference play, and have lost but one, a non-conference 13 to 7 defeat to the Stanford Frosh. Against common opponents, the Bulldogs defeated Modesto, 17 to 0; Stockton, 12 to 7; and Salinas, 20 to 0. The Rams lost to Modesto, 19 to 7; tied Stockton 0 to 0, and ran up 28 points against Salinas. San Mateo also handed Menlo an 18 to 0 setback.

Regarding tonight's contest, Eisan said, "we'll definitely go into the game as the underdog because San Mateo has one of the best teams they've had in years. They're always tricky and they have a good coach in Murrio McFadden."

Rams Can Win—Eisan

"We had our ups and downs," continued Eisan, "at times showing flashes of a good team. But we had to go through many changes which lowers the personnel of a team and has made us inconsistent. Kicking is the only department in which we have a clear edge, but our tackling is better, so is our passing and pass defense. If we can improve our offense and defense a little more and hold on to the ball, we can beat them."

The squad is keyed up for tonight's encounter more so than any game this year and are determined to end their season with a remarkable upset.

Paint Technology Lectures To Be Given At College

Invitations to attend two lectures on the phases of the paint industry and its relation to business to be given on Monday, November 17, and Monday, December 8, at the college, have been extended to the college students and faculty by Walter D. Forbes, college chemistry instructor. Both lectures will be given in Room 100 starting at 8 p. m.

The first talk, entitled Paint Colors, Their Origin and Use, will be given by Eugene P. Frickstead, chemist and color specialist of the California Ink Company.

The Miracle of Paints in Every-Day Life will be the title of the second lecture by D. J. Tight, president of the R. N. Nason Company.

Poor Articulation Cause Of Speech Deficiency

AUSTIN, TEXAS—(ACP).—How's your articulation? Do you have difficulties pronouncing "th" or "ng"?

University of Texas speech professors find articulation is the predominating speech deficiency, more than one-fourth of all cases treated in the university's speech clinic evidencing this defect.

Stuttering is the next most prevalent speech bugaboo. Dialect causes difficulty chiefly among Spanish-speaking students.

Experiments reported by Dr. A. R. Lauer of Iowa State College indicate the present candlepower of automobile headlights can be doubled without seriously increasing the glare hazard.

Mobile Chem Laboratory Employed By Penn State

STATE COLLEGE, PA.—(ACP).—A mobile chemistry laboratory, housed in a two-ton truck, has been placed in use by Pennsylvania State College to meet the emergency demands of defense education throughout the state.

The laboratory equipment will travel approximately 10,000 miles by 98 class centers where high school graduates are being trained by the college for technical jobs in defense industries.

Hotel Division

Lawrence Wong, Former Student To Replace Williams

Lawrence Wong, substitute college instructor, will teach the accounting and cafeteria operation classes that were formerly taught by Captain Winthrop W. Williams, who is now on a leave of absence, Hilda Watson, hotel and restaurant division chairman, announced this week.

Wong, a graduate of the college hotel and restaurant division, has managed the cafeteria at Galileo High School for the past year and a half.

Captain Williams, who was recently called for active duty by the U. S. Army, is now on his way to Fort Benning, Georgia, where he will report for service with the Signal Corps.

Cynthia Richardson, who since her graduation from the hotel course has assisted Mrs. Watson in the operation of the college cafeteria, will leave the college at the end of the current semester to make plans for her wedding.

Miss Richardson will become the bride of Harry Jacobs, radio engineer on the local staff of the National Broadcasting Company. After their marriage the young couple plan to reside in the East Bay.

Talent Bureau Still Holds Auditions

Auditioning is still going on for talent bureau files, according to Irwin Cohen, student manager.

Specialty and novelty acts are greatly needed, Cohen said. Several students have appeared before the advisers with skits, some of which can be used for outside entertainment, while others are more suited for rallies and college assemblies.

Some of the entertainers for the San Mateo rally today were selected from talent bureau files, Cohen pointed out.

The purpose of the bureau is to organize and file all college entertainers so that when calls are received from either college or non-college organizations for entertainers such talent may be secured easily.

Students wishing to be auditioned should apply to faculty advisers, Flosita Badger, Wesley Muscio, or Cohen for appointments.

Names of students and their types of entertainment will be available soon as possible, Cohen promises.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

- Beta Phi Beta . . . Bids for the semi-formal fraternity dance are now available either from members or from the student store. The dance will be held November 28 at the Century Club with Jerry Norman's orchestra.
- Engineering Society . . . A speaker on aeronautical engineering will be at the meeting November 18 to be held in Room 100. Officers will be elected.
- Pi Mu Gamma . . . Skating party to be held at Winterland Friday, November 15, at 8 p. m. Students are invited.
- Theta Tau . . . Next meeting to be held November 17 at the home of Gege Cox, 1111 Hollywood Avenue, Oakland.
- Bible Club . . . Now meets Tuesdays and Thursdays at noon in Room 108. Everyone welcome.

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

V. Student Government Under The Microscope

"THIS is what you've been waiting for, isn't it, Algy?"

"If you mean we're going to find out what makes the Ex Council tick, the answer is, but yes! You know, that stuff about the Board of Ed, the administration, and the college history, it wasn't too hard to take, but I really want to know how we run the college."

Algy was quite anxious to "understand his college" this session, and it was particularly encouraging to hear him say "how we run the college." At least he did not have to be convinced that he is a real part of the student government.

"A moment, though, Algy, before we lift the lid on the Ex Council. First comes the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College, to get a bit formal, for it is the technical ruler of the council.

"The college, like all democratic groups, has a constitution. It provides for the actual organization of the Associated Students. Payment of the dues at the beginning of each semester as a student of the college is the only requirement for membership.

"Among a great many other things, the constitution also provides for the election of five Associated Student officers: a president of the Associated Students, a vice-president, a secretary, a rally commissioner, and a yell leader.

"And just as the United States Constitution outlines the duties and powers of the officials and defines the rights of the people, so does ours here. We do not, though, copy our three-branch government, but instead use a single governing body presided over by the executive officer of the Associated Students—a procedure more applicable to our needs.

"It's not a dictatorship, is it?" said Algy, with a suspicious grin on his face.

"Well, you judge for yourself, Algy, when we get down to cases. And if you don't mind, we'll quote from the constitution where it specifically recognized the Ex Council: 'The Executive Council is the administrative and legislative body of this association and it shall be responsible for, and shall have final authority in, the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties and conduct of the association.'

"Four officers of the Associated Students and six representatives, usually the presidents of the six major student organizations in the college make up the group.

"This semester the Council is composed of Harry Haesloop, chairman, and president of the Associated Students; Pat Neimeyer, vice-president; Aspasia Vasilatos, secretary; Steve Mohorovich, rally commissioner; Don Jensen, president of the Associated Men Students; Betty Fox, president of the Associated Women Students; Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the Women's Athletic Association; Jack Medrano, Block SF president representing the Men's Athletic Council; Francis Goetz, president of the Club Advisory Board; and ourself, representing the Publications Board.

"This all sounds very professional," said Algy, not too impressed, but what do these people do?"

"Of course, Algy, we defined their broad duties by the constitution, but you want examples, don't you?"

Responding to Algy's affirmative nod, we began with an example, the poor man's method of definition.

"Remember, Algy, a story in the paper about two weeks ago concerning the boost in the price of the soph formal and the allocation of more money to the soph class in order to secure a better known orchestra. . . ."

"Yeah, I know," Algy cut in, "it said that the Ex Council had approved those two subjects at the request of the soph president."

"Well, Algy, if you had been in the council meeting then, you would have seen a typical example of its activity. The fact that neither of the points we mentioned could be accomplished without Ex Council approval shows how it controls all student affairs. Most things pertaining to student affairs or welfare come before the council, and in most instances you can be sure that your representatives there are looking out for the interests of most of the students. The price of the formal, for example, was not raised until it was found necessary if the soph class was to break even in its expenses. The semesterly budget must also be approved by the council, but the best way to understand its role is to attend the meetings."

"You mean anyone can watch them?" queried Algy.

"Right, anyone may sit in at Ex Council meetings; spectators are readily welcomed. The council normally meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 1 p. m. in Room 254. In fact, we'll be loowing for you next Tuesday. Algy."

"Say," Algy suddenly interrupted with a worried cast on his face, "suppose the Ex Council does something a lot of the students don't like, can they get away with it?"

"Certainly not, Algy. Briefly speaking, the constitution says that any act of the Executive Council may be reviewed by a petition of 10 per cent of the Associated Students."

Satisfied, Algy went on. "Tell me," he said, "does anyone from the faculty keep tabs on the council?"

"There is a faculty adviser, Alden Smith. One of his main functions is to act as a kind of parliamentary referee and to interpret the constitution whenever necessary.

"Incidentally, you might not know that the council activities are carried on through a class, political science 2ab, which serves to ground members in the best methods of student rule and in the fundamentals of parliamentary law, and all council business is transacted by rather formal procedure governed by Robert's Rules of Order.

"A third job for Smith is to develop in the council a strong sense of citizenship and leadership responsibility. And in doing this he follows President Cloud's philosophy of giving to students all possible control over their affairs."

"Sounds good to me," said Algy. "I think I'll look in at a few of the meetings."

Next time we'll begin work on the separate divisions of the student government.

Though her office keeps her more or less behind the scenes in student government, Aspasia Vasilatos, Associated Student secretary, is an important cog in the student machinery.

Caroline Chatfield, author of a syndicated newspaper column on human relations, headed her class and was president of the student association at Queens College, Charlotte, N. C.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

WISE men have said that almost all wars are the result of economic conditions or desires. Wiser men have accepted these words but have added—that to the men who do the fighting and to the women and children who do the suffering these economic conditions or desires (other than the requirement of staying alive) are of little concern. People think of lives and hardships rather than of colonies or natural boundaries.

And though it is true that the thoughts of destruction are uppermost in the minds of most of us, certainly some consideration is given at times to the economic and other aspects of the present struggle between two vastly different types of life.

It is just this willingness on the part of most people to consider possibilities and effects other than those which are near at hand and all too evident that allows them to joke of death and speak of rehabilitation when the destruction has ceased.

WHAT OF THE SOLDIER?

Men would be too afraid to enter a battle if they stopped to realize the possibilities of fighting with modern weapons. It is during such times that the paralysis of war, the fervor of baser instincts, dominates the rationality of their minds and permits wholesale slaughter. Soldiers glory in carnage, death is seldom feared in the midst of battle. Sergeant York was a conspicuous exception. Once ideals have been instilled in the man that man is a machine for the attainment of those ideals.

Even a thinking soldier (if one may be a soldier and think at the same time) has little chance for reflection when performing the primary tasks of his profession.

So it is only while a people are not fighting, or it is only for those persons in a warring nation who are not warring, that thinking may be done. Once a nation becomes engrossed the war effort crushes all else. Then it is useless to think.

THOSE OTHER THINGS

Perhaps this is a disjointed attempt at making a point but it should be realized that the majority worry about little other than their immediate security; that as soldiers they have neither the chance nor the desire to worry about them (those other things); but that even so there are or have been times in a nation at peace when a secondary but existing position has been given to the things to come. However, having a secondary consideration is unusual in such times as these.

The soldier thinks little and does much, the thinker thinks much and does little. The dictatorship does much and ponders little, the democracy ponders much and does little.

SOMEPLACE IN BETWEEN

Now! We are not yet at war. We may safely consider economies, defense possibilities, war effort, war advisability, war profits and war losses. We are not a martialed nation of soldiers nor quite an apathetic union of thinkers. We are someplace in between.

When the wise men claim that economics bring about war we may still argue the point—if we wish. When pacifists perform we may yet observe and pass judgment.

So long as we are as we are thought may proceed. That is the whole idea! That thought may proceed, argument exist, criticism abound. That liberties necessarily curtailed by war are and should be exercised.

If a soldier—you fight, you'll fight and that's all you'll do. If a civilian you obey—you will obey only.

Now of all times is not the time to sit back and take life easy. The consideration of economics, destruction, privation, suffering—all are peacetime considerations. Consider now, think now—you'll be too busy later on!

Bill Cothran Gets Start With New Chicago Paper

Receiving an opportunity for advancement in the field he has chosen, Bill Cothran has left the college and his duties as Sports Editor of The Guardsman to accept a position with a newly organized Chicago newspaper.

Cothran, who had been on the staff for two semesters, served as a sports reporter last spring and as editor of that department this semester until his departure on The Challenger, last Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Besides his activity on the paper, he was a member of the music club and the choir.

Backed By Marshall Field

The new Chicago publication is backed by Marshall Field, owner of the largest department store in the world, and will probably be called the Chicago Sun. Because the paper is still getting underway, it is not definite when the date of its first edition will be.

Cothran was offered the position by Rex Smith, who was formerly associated with Newsweek Magazine, and is to be an editor on the Field publication.

Promotions Promised

He will start as a copy boy, with arrangements already made for a promotion to a cub reporter within three months.

His former duties on The Guardsman will be taken over by Nick Barbarotto and Bob Marcus, each of whom will act as co-sports editor for the remainder of the semester.

Alumni's Sixth Try At Organization Fails

In a letter addressed to the Executive Council, Dean Edwin C. Browne announced the abandonment of the sixth attempt to form a San Francisco Junior College Alumni Association.

"The idea of an alumni association had been tried five times before this attempt, for a while it looked as if the association would at last be a success. The officers elected by the group of alumni behind the movement are capable and enthusiastic but they have received no support from graduates of the junior college," Browne said.

The object of the organization was to promote interest for the college and its various activities, Browne explained. A fee of one dollar a year would have entitled members to free dances sponsored by the association and also admission to all athletic events of the college.

"Money had been set aside on the college budget for the use of the alumni, but now that the affair has fallen through some of the money will be used to refund what little dues have been collected, the rest will come back to our treasury," Browne said.

The college executives set aside a fund of $125 to be placed in the college bank, which could be drawn by the association upon requisition. After an extensive campaign in an effort to draw the members together it was found that the dues collected did not exceed the expense by enough to provide a program for the members. The matter was dropped. Members of the association will be refunded their dues after requisition is made on the fund now in the college bank.

"A meeting will soon be called for the purpose of approving this requisition," Browne said, "and unless there is a show of enthusiasm by both members and executives, the Alumni Association will be permanently disbanded."

Christmas Vacation Dec. 13 To Jan. 5

Christmas vacation will begin on Saturday, December 13, this year and will run three weeks through to Monday, January 5, of next year, according to Mary Jane Learnard, assistant college registrar.

"The Board of Education has given us a longer vacation this year so that students working over the holidays will be able to put in more working hours," said Miss Learnard.

Men and women of the college who have obtained positions which will begin prior to Friday, December 12, are advised by the registrar's office to see Thomas Gabbert, chairman of the attendance committee.

NYA Time Cards Due Dec. 2; Regulations Emphasized

NYA student workers are reminded that time cards are due next Tuesday, December 2, in the NYA office, stated Claude Silva, NYA student director.

Because of the requirement of money for defense purposes, the NYA will, from now on, be more strict in dealing with late time cards.

For the convenience of all concerned, Silva asked that students bring in time cards next Monday, December 1.

Bill Of Rights Week

Quiz Program Via College Radio To Feature Week In 1 P.M. Classes Dec. 10

All 1 o'clock classes will have an opportunity to participate in a radio quiz program, Wednesday, December 10, in observance of Bill of Rights Week, December 8 to 13, Alden W. Smith, in charge of student activities, announced Wednesday.

In each class one student will be chosen by the instructor on the basis of his high scholastic and attendance record to represent the class in the quiz. Each instructor will be given a list of the questions to be used with the correct answers and scores.

Interrogator From California

The interrogator, who will probably be a prominent instructor from the University of California, will ask the question through the loud speaker and wait from 5 to 10 seconds. In the time allotted, the representative in each class will attempt to answer the question. Two student teams in the broadcasting booth, who will represent the Associated Women Students and the Associated Men Students will then be allowed 5 to 10 seconds to answer the question. A gong will sound to indicate the end of the allotted time.

At the end of the quiz the instructor in each class will total the score of the representative students. If it is exceptionally high, the instructor will telephone and report the score to the broadcasting booth. Three students achieving the highest scores will receive complimentary bids to the high sophomore formal.

Parker Prepares Questions

Questions on the Constitution will be prepared by Robert Parker, college instructor, and his committee consisting of the members of the history and political science departments. A large percentage of the questions will be on the college, its physical properties, student government, and the faculty.

Representatives of the AWS and AMS who will participate in the broadcast will be announced later.

Scholastic Council

Marshall Hyde New President

Marshall Hyde was named Scholastic Council president last week to succeed former president Dick Manning, who has left the college.

Hyde spoke for the council when he listed as its main goals wider interest in college scholarships and increased interest in academic activity.

Jean Spencer and Myron Du Bain are to assist Hyde in his duties, and Alice Cooper will continue as faculty adviser.

No Meeting Held To Date

To date a meeting has not been held, but Hyde asserted that the council's schedule for the remainder of the semester would be a busy one.

At present plans are being formulated for a scholastic rally, he said. Any students having suggestions for furthering interest in scholastic activities on the campus are asked to submit suggestions to the council, and these will be greatly appreciated.

Trophy Presented Again

Highlight of the scholastic council's schedule for the semester will be the selection of the student most deserving of the perpetual scholastic trophy which is awarded each year to the outstanding graduate.

Letter From A Guardsman Grad

With customary eclat, Joan Nourse Muscio, Guardsman faculty adviser, opened a letter last week. From it a business calling card fluttered to her desk. It bore the legend:

Theodora Wong
Editorial Dept., The Chinese Press

And so another former staff member on the Fourth Estate.

Following a brief inquiry into the sanity of the "Guardsman clowns," Miss Wong expatiated on her present manifold and multitudinous position with the year-old, unique Chinese Press. (The Press is America's only English-language Chinese newspaper.)

To quote Miss Wong:

"I am still working at the Chinese Press, have been here full time since I left the college portals. I'm the rewrite girl, office clerk, copy girl, advertising help, and janitor combined. I am especially indispensable when it comes to sweeping the floor. Besides my colossally meager pay, I receive such compensation as an occasional byline, lots of instruction, and calling cards."

Enigmatically, Miss Wong also notes that the Chinese Press office "is a place where everybody expresses his personality, and lots of it, although this office is by no means patterned after The Guardsman regime."

Staff members and Mrs. Muscio are still puzzling that statement. Suspicion that the observation is not wholly complimentary to The Guardsman office is rapidly gaining ground.

In any event, staff members were happy to hear from a top reporter of a year ago. Besides, isn't Miss Wong proof that not all Guardsman graduates end up in severely-tailored jackets?

Welfare Committee

Carnival Day Out Until Spring; Group To Perfect Plan, Wait Good Weather Before Asking Festival

Carnival day has been suspended as impracticable until the spring semester, according to Bob Lindemann, chairman of the college welfare committee.

"Before the plan is put before the college executives the committee wishes to work further on the idea and put on the finishing touches," Lindemann explained.

Day Still Considered

"So, while carnival day will not be a reality this semester, the students may be sure that the committee is still giving it attention," he added.

"Another factor leading to the delay of the festival is the inclement weather. As it has been decided that the carnival will be held outdoors, the committee saw the logic in waiting until next spring," he added.

Hall Signs Voted

At a meeting held last week the committee voted that signs directing traffic on the stairs should be placed at each turn of the stair wells.

"We hope to have these signs painted on placards by the college art department," Lindemann said. "It has come to the attention of the committee that the congested situation on the main stairs is due mainly to students failing to keep to the right. These signs will remind them, though you wouldn't think it would be necessary to remind anyone old enough to attend the college of anything as simple as this," he remarked.

Band

Activities End For Semester

Activities of the college band for the current semester have been brought to a conclusion, according to Douglas Craig, band member.

Initial, and only performance, of the group was at the San Mateo football game two weeks ago.

Reorganization Possible

Craig intimated that there may be a possibility of reorganizing the members next semester, but noted that at the present time no specific plans had been formulated.

Dean Edwin C. Browne has stressed the difficulties under which the college musical organization struggled.

Credit Sought For Course

He has observed that perhaps some credit should be given members to compensate and create enthusiasm.

Several attempts have been made in the past to organize a permanent musical body to represent the college. With the dissolution of the present one there is now no official college group in this field.

Surveying Completed For Parking Lot

With the completion of all surveying work, the first step in the actual construction of the long awaited parking lot began this week.

Four surveyors from the Department of Public Works have finished their topographical survey of the sections of land which will comprise the roadway behind the college building. Their reports will now be turned over to Timothy Pfleuger, architect authorized by the Board of Education to work out the college's parking problem.

Reports Go To Board

"Mr Pfleuger has been waiting for these reports for sometime, and now that he has them he will probably be able to submit his topographical map for the approval of the Board of Education in a few days," J. Paul Mohr, college registrar, explained.

Mohr went on to say that after the plans had been approved by the board the plan would be submitted to the Department of Public Works. If the idea is approved by them, bids from private contractors will be taken. Pfleuger estimates the project to cost approximately $30,000.

Larger Lot Planned

"This is only the first stage of our fight against the parking problem, and eventually we hope to have Phelan Avenue widened and a permanent parking lot established in the vicinity of the tennis courts," Mohr continued. "The finished plan would cost around $200,000."

The roadway to be constructed in the rear of the college will extend from Phelan Avenue in the form of a semi-circle behind the science building. It will be about 2,000 feet in length and will permit the diagonal parking of some 250 cars. "After the permanent lot has been built, the driveway will be used only by instructors and students obtaining special permission," Mohr said.

Mother, Daughter Tea Planned By College HEA

Home economics students are planning a Mother and Daughter Tea to be held sometime in December at the college, according to Frances Mount, home economics instructor.

The group is currently engaged in planning a Christmas dinner for the members of the classes.

With the regular home economics courses, a general course in nutrition is now being given. Students enrolled in this class are planning meals appropriate for different age and activity groups. After these menus are planned, they are actually prepared by students.

"Incidentally, now that the semester is pretty well advanced, we are having fewer encounters with burnt biscuits," Miss Mount explained.

Unmasked Stalwarts Emerge From Huddle With Seven Sweetheart Finalists; Frosh Women Draw Four Kings

Election By AMS Set For Friday, December 5

Executing the tremendous task of choosing from a group of 16 beautiful girls seven finalists for the sweetheart contest, the incredible soph stalwarts emerged triumphantly from their momentous huddle Tuesday afternoon.

Announcement of the winners, Pat Brand, Shirley Wood, Carmel Cole, Lucille Landresse, Margaret McMahon, Kerma Cazier, and Matilda Mortigia, was made by George Coart, high sophomore president, and Myron Du Bain, chairman of the sophomore formal committee.

Judges Revealed

Revealed for the first time were the names of the seven judges who nominated the preliminary candidates, Don Cole, Art Pearl, Herb Jensen, Dick Naftaly, Jim Juri, Ward Schwartzmann, and Bill Quandt. Duke Drake and Art Posten aided in the final judging.

Queen Pictures Taken

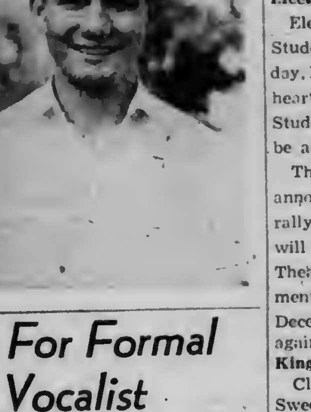
Individual photographs of the finalists taken by the Nicholas Johnson Studios will be displayed next week on the bulletin board in the main lobby. Election by the Associated Men Students will be held next Friday, December 5.

The name of the sophomore sweetheart will be announced Tuesday, December 9. She will probably be introduced at a rally, and she will be honored at the formal, December 13.

Winner Will Get Prize

Presentation of a silver loving cup from the Associated Students, and an engraved locket from the Phi Lambda fraternity will be made to the sophomore queen at the semi-annual class dance.

Selection of the finalists in the contest marks the end of a verbal and front page duel conducted by students and The Guardsman. A recent poll conducted by The Guardsman, prior to the Tuesday selections, showed that 52 per cent of the students of the college favored the plan submitted by Coart, but over one-third of those students polled for the issue had no knowledge of the method of selection.



GET YOUR FORMAL BID EARLY

The smiling lad at left, Ernie Hecksher, has been named to set the tempo for the soph formal.

High soph President George Coart, left, and low frosh President Bing Kirk, right, are currently engaged in discovering a Soph Sweetheart and a Campus King respectively.

Heckscher Orchestra For Formal Has Helen Lynn As Vocalist

Ernie Hecksher, well known Bay Area orchestra leader, has been chosen to play for the December high sophomore formal scheduled for December 13, at Beresford Country Club, it was revealed by class president George Coart today.

Featured vocalist with the Hecksher group is Helen Lynne, a student at the college, who will appear with the band at the college dance.

Heckshe̱r, who has played recently at three major hotels in the city and for dances at the University of California and the University of San Francisco, was selected as the favorite from a group of several popular orchestras in a student poll conducted two weeks ago by George Coart, high sophomore president.

Tickets for the dance are now on sale at the bank at $1.50. Only a limited number of tickets is available.

The Beresford Country Club, site of the formal, may be reached by following the El Camino Real, Highway 101, to San Mateo, turning right at 20th Avenue, and driving about a mile and a half toward the coast. The country club is just off the highway.

Pictures In Main Lobby Next Week

Finalists representing the freshman women's conception of the typical American college boy, Jim Skinner, Bob Murphey, Dick Souza, and Dick Dickson were nominated last Monday in the freshman Campus King contest, Margaret MacMahon, class secretary, revealed Wednesday.

Photographs of the four candidates, taken by the Nicholas Johnson Studios, will be displayed next week with those of the sophomore sweetheart finalists on the bulletin board in the main lobby, Miss MacMahon said.

Election On December 5

Election by the Associated Women Students will be conducted next Friday, December 5, as will be the sweetheart election by the Associated Men Students. Names of both winners will be announced Tuesday, December 9.

The Campus King, Miss McMahon announced, will be introduced at a rally, Thursday, December 11, which will probably be held at the El Rey Theater. He will receive a complimentary bid to the sophomore formal, December 13, and will be introduced again at this affair.

King Parallels Queen Race

Closely paralleling the current Sweetheart Contest conducted by the high sophomore class, Bing Kirk's Campus King was officially inaugurated this semester to obtain a male equivalent to the Sweetheart.

A plan was advanced earlier in the semester to allow the frosh king to accompany the queen to the sophomore formal, but the plan was vetoed by freshman officers when student opinion failed to favor the idea. Unlike Coart's plan for the sweetheart election, a survey conducted by The Guardsman to determine student opinion on the King election showed that 79 per cent of the students questioned favored the plan.

Opportunity Takes

Cothran To SUN

A NEW daily newspaper, The Chicago Sun, has just recently invaded the realm of the Chicago morning dailies. Its backer, Marshall Field, quite naturally thinks he has a sure thing.

This week, Guardsman Sports Editor Bill Cothran, boarded an east-bound train with a job on The Chicago Sun safely tucked in his pocket. We are betting Bill will successfully invade the realm of The Chicago Sun, and, quite naturally, we think we have a sure thing.

Bill starts as a copy boy, but his job is an easily-flexed springboard to reporting and so on up the newsroom ladder.

While his departure from the editorial staff is a definite loss, news in the months to come that Bill has a secure grasp on that ladder will offer no small degree of consolation.

Arbitrary Paradox

IN addition to supplementing the picturesque aspects of San Francisco, the current hotel and department store conflicts offer an interesting paradox. Narration of the confusion would seem to fall best to a Gertrude Stein.

A strike is a strike, such a writer might say. An employer is not a rose, but neither is a business agent. Well, who's unfair. He is. He wasn't unfair yesterday. Yesterday is yesterday. Today he is unfair.

Too complicated? Perhaps a specific case might clarify the issue. Sunday, November 23, a union man could enter the Bellevue Hotel without violating union policy. Monday, November 24, that same union man would draw a fine for entering that same hotel.

Of course, the hotel was picketed as being unfair last Monday. No one denies the right of the union to use pickets—peacefully, but arbitrary use of pickets just doesn't seem consonant with logical policy.

Theoretically all members of the city's hotel employer's association are unfair to the striking union. Collectively the owners have refused to acceed to the union demands. It would seem, therefore, that each hotel must be considered to have refused a new contract basis.

The Mark Hopkins and the Fairmont hotels are both in the employer's group. The former is picketed, hence unfair and taboo to union men and sympathizers. The Fairmont, just across the street, is not picketed. Ostensibly it is fair; union men may enter it. Paradox is the only descriptive word we have at hand for this situation.

Arbitrary is the best word describing the operation of the paradox.

With those two words before us, we can see only an aloof, imperious executive board holding silent council over a map of San Francisco. Perhaps next week this board will, say, perceive the unpicketed, but unfair Fairmont Hotel. Alas, no sooner seen than marked. Let pickets be placed before this hotel! It is hereby this day declared unfair!

Surely, the recent branding of the Bellevue Hotel was no more arbitrary an action.

Consistent, logical policy would dictate no half measures skirting the issue. This you-may-be-next policy makes one wonder more and more about union leadership.

Following up several other radio school surveys conducted last year, Dr. A. L. Chapman, director of the university's bureau of research in education by radio, has announced a statewide check-up will be made to discover personality difficulties in 2,000 Texas eighth and ninth graders which make it inadvisable for them to listen to certain excitement-producing broadcasts.

Shots At ...RAMdom

WHEN ALL ELSE

fails and human interest seems to be giving us the run around, the municipal courts may be depended upon to shoot a little humor or pathos into our path.

A little man was brought in Monday afternoon. He walked placidly between two natty officers. Clad in a huge ulster which gapped to reveal a pair of white pajamas, he stalked with all the haughteur of an Indian Prince.

The judge surveyed him quizically.

"Joseph O'Manovitch, you are charged with disturbing the peace and trying to escape from an officer. How do you plead, guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty, yeronor."

The judge turned to the officers. They were sworn in. One of the officers put the judge wise to what Joe had done.

"On the morning of Monday, the 24th, our squad car was told to proceed to the corner of Jackson and Octavia where a man had reported the body of a nude woman on top of a garbage truck. We proceeded to the location, encountered the truck."

The officer's face became red. He looked balefully at the dignified little man in pyjamas.

"Then," he went on, "we ascended to the top of that garbage truck and tossed the contents into the street, looking for this here dame." And this little . . . . . stood on the street corner laughing at us. We seen he was wearing pyjamas, and we was just mad enough to bring him in for not being properly clothed. When we approached him he ran. We found him about two blocks further down the street hiding in a garbage can. I saw his coat sticking out. When I opened the lid, he shook his finger at me and said, 'remember officer, man's home is his castle'."

The judge smiled but managed to look sternly at the culprit. The officer went on.

"Later we found out that that phony call came from this guy's residence."

"Have you anything to say before sentence is passed on you," the judge asked. "Hoaxing the police is a serious offense."

"I just thought I'd do it," mumbled the little man sheepishly, "nothing ever happens to me."

"And nothing else will for 20 days," remarked the judge. "Take him away."

• Drop Carnival Idea
Editor, The Guardsman:

When is something going to be done about carnival day? For weeks and weeks we've been reading about the carnival day 'coming up' and that plans are indefinite. The suspense is killing, really.

As so many of the clubs have apparently pledged 'allegiance' to the day and offered their cooperation in preparing booths and stands something should be done. If not, let's drop the whole thing as a bad dream and begin on something more practical.

The idea is a good one, but the semester is getting on and next semester the rains are liable to come and put a dampener on the plans.

D.C.

• Ah, A Fan!
Editor, The Guardsman:

Finally students are getting a chance to see how the college works—to see what goes on behind the scenes. Everybody knows a few of the instructors, at least those with whom they have classes, but know nothing of the administrative staff. And the column Understanding Your College certainly gives the inside 'dope' on them all. The columns on the Executive Council, and the ones coming up on student government should be very interesting especially to the new students who may wish to run for office in the future.

I have known there was an Executive Council, but I didn't know where it met, why it met, and what it did when it met. So the last number of the column certainly enlightened me.

Together with this column and the column Your College Presents students of the college are getting a liberal education in what their college does present.

Let's not stop either of them.

FEM FADS . . . by Nancy

RED, white and blue cotton stockings for defense? One male member of the Executive Council thinks they should be, for at a recent meeting he suggested that women of the college should wear colored cotton stockings to aid the silk shortage. (N.B. His motion was ignored.)

The stockings referred to are those gay colored, long stockings. They come in all colors of the rainbow, and may be seen in any leading down town store.

HEARD—BUT NEVER SEEN

Several months ago when the silk shortage was first announced, women dashed downtown to buy several dozen pairs of three-thread chiffon or nylons, it was then that these colored sox made their apparance. They were featured in a picture magazine, written up in fashion magazine and articles, until everybody had heard but not seen the new hose.

In an October issue of The Guardsman an ACP story told how women of Michigan State College were being urged by their dean to wear colored hose to aid defense. The dean, the story went on to say, was a foe of bare legs, and believed that those stockings might be an answer to her prayer.

APPEAL TO PATRIOTISM

"America needs the silk that American women put on their legs. Let's have the college women lead the way in this emergency by voluntarily wearing those lovely, long cotton stockings," she said.

However, back to the man at the council meeting. He must have read the article, and instantly his patriotism was aroused—he saw where he could do wonders for the men back in Washington who were wondering where their next supply of silk was coming from. Next council meeting he popped the question.

But because more than half of the women of the college wear sox, the silk stocking problem does not bother them. And their opinions show that the cotton stockings would apparently be no solution to the problem.

Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the Women's Athletic Association, said, "Definitely not—I don't want to wear them."

Barbara Stahmann agreed and exclaimed, "Well, maybe for beach wear they would be all right. But I think that sox are perfect for college wear." (Incidentally, Miss Stahmann, with what sort of beach wear are long stockings worn?)

Betty O'Connell, low sophomore, exclaimed loudly, "What! wear THOSE? Me? O-o-oh no!!"

Claire Kopetzke, low freshman, ejaculated, also loudly, "Oh, I think those stockings are terrible. I can't feature anyone wearing them. Why one's whole outfit would have to match the stockings. Besides, who wants to get an outfit to match green or lavendar stockings."

Sundown . . . excellent drama in a desert post

QUITE off the beaten track in both theme and locale, Sundown, the new Walter Wanger production, will stack up nicely when the year's crop of action-melodramas is harvested.

Here is a tale of a lonely British outpost in Africa and of six men drawn to the post by widely-differing skeins of Fate. All of them are swept up into the cyclonic forces of a native uprising inspired by the gun-smuggling motivations of a certain group of Naz . . . but since they are never identified in the picture, perhaps we should do the same. Add a beautiful young woman, Zia, who rides into the post with a caravan and you have a plot of distinct vigor and robustness.

It's a timely, topical theme with the eyes of the world focused upon Africa and the internal strife within. Given beautiful photography, fine casting, and an excellent exposition of crisp, taut direction by Henry Hathaway, the Saturday Evening Post story emerges with compelling fascination and intensity to the screen.

CHARACTER STUDY ADDS DEPTH TO STORY

Thanks to the coherent script written by Barre Lyndon, the film manages to avoid the rut of trite knock-'em-down melodrama by concentrating with an acute eye on the characterizations of the six assorted males in a god-forsaken post in the wilderness. This occasional glimpse of character study lends an added depth and power to the action framework of the plot and lifts Sundown to an excellent rating.

Fine performances by the six strangers tossed together by Fate carries the film onto well-generated suspense. Bruce Cabot as Capt. Bill Crawford in charge of the post, gives a nice tinge of raw authenticity to his meaty part. Mr. Cabot, whose last screen appearance of note was tangling claws with King Kong, is one of Hollywood's most abused actors. Given a role particularly tailored to his style, Mr. Cabot can be depended upon to perform notably.

Reginald Gardiner portrays the post-buddy Lieutenant Turner, and, as usual, is likeable in his breezy style. Gardiner is presented with little opportunity to exercise his comic virtues however. Sundown isn't constructed for comedy. For once, the so-called comic relief element was notable for its absence; the picture didn't need it.

SANDERS STEALS SHOW

Top acting honors actually go to George Sanders (the cad of cads . . . here a hero), who as the disciplinarian Major Coombes arrives at the post to relieve Cabot and stays to break up the Naz . . . ring of gun smugglers. Sanders has an annoying habit of stealing pictures; he does it again with his dashing inuendos and dramatic ability. Pressing him for honor is Joseph Calleia as the Italian prisoner of the post. Calleia is another example of Hollywood's manhandling of fine actors.

Carl Esmond as a wandering naturalist who turns up in reel eight to be something more sinister, and Harry Carey as the gruff African trapper, complement the cast as the other masculine inhabitants of the outpost. Both are good.

TIERNEY NEEDS TIME

Gene Tierney is given star billing but doesn't rate it. She unfortunately is the one weak cog in the fine web of Hathaway's melodramatic-mesh. As Zia, mysterious leader of the caravan who drifts into the post to complicate men's lives and the plot as well, Miss Tierney presents a pretty face, exotic gownings and one set expression of cold frigidity that carries her through anger, sorrow, relief, happiness, love, gloom and hysterics. Miss Tierney has yet to earn her salt and learn some acting. But give her time . . . Hedy did it.

Oh yes . . . you'd find scattered tinges of propagandist dialogue scattered among the barking of rifles and throb of jungle drums . . . but definitely scattered, fortunately. And that last scene in London could well have been cut for it drifts too close to the finale of Wanger's Foreign Correspondent. Also it was a shame technicolor was not utilized for those magnificent scenic backgrounds to do them full justice.

But technicolor or no technicolor, Sundown remains an excellent action picture, one of 1941's better efforts.

Your College Presents . . . Prerequisites: Patriotism and Loyalty to Uncle Sam

Staff artist Louise Horne portrays, in this modernistic drawing, various phases in the type of work which civil service employees are engaged in, all the way from the governmental architects, chemists, stenographers, and social workers, to forestry and all its divisions.

By Iwanna Hayworth

THE philosophy of the college civil service program holds that a broad cultural and civic background should be the foundation for the technical training which will equip the individual for loyal and official service to his government.

Many students look forward to civil service positions for a threefold reason; namely, a secure job, fair pay, and assured vacations, however, aspiring applicants for these positions must have not only character and idealism for the job but also ability. Anyone who desires to get into any branch of the civil service should have a definite sense of patriotism, as these people have the opportunity to serve their government.

The program of civil service which is offered by the college is unlike the private schools, unlike the evening high school and continuation courses, and coaching for any specific examination or set of examinations is not offered. A complete battery of psychological exams, vocational interests tests and temperament scales are administered, however.

ONE COURSE IN EXISTENCE NOW

Only one course now in existence is offered which is civil service 50ab and it is required by majors in this field. This course is given in addition to different recommended subjects in the fields of Civil Service and American Institutions. According to Lloyd Luckmann of the department, "no student should be encouraged to direct his college preparation toward a specific position in the service of the divisions of the government."

Aspirants in this line of work are required merely to indicate their intentions to their counselor at the beginning of their college work in one of various departments of the college and the type of government service will be the counselor's guide to the fundamental training which the student must obtain in keeping with his vocation.

In addition to the regular college program there are opportunities through the San Francisco civil service and through the National Youth Administration. Students are placed in various governmental offices as assistants in tax collector's offices, assessor's offices.

PROGRAM ONCE EXTENSIVE NOW INTENSIVE

This program has been in existence in the college curriculum since the foundation of the college, but it has been modified from a very extensive program to the present intensive one. The present program has been developed with the help of various individuals, and the college is very appreciative to the following people who have aided in its development. William Henderson, secretary of the civil service commission, and Frank Albert, his assistant. All of the members of the commission have shown their interest, support, and cooperation. The State Personnel Board and its staff and the Federal office have also attributed their part. Those at the college who have been instrumental through their interest are, President Archibald J. Cloud, Luckmann, Louis Conlan, Claude Silva in charge of the NYA, and members of the business department. Good relations with various personnel agencies have been established also.

No positions in civil service are available to students under 18 years of age and only a few are open to those under 21 years of age. Only the most insignificant positions with the Federal government omit the essential factors, and, according to Luckmann, "students should be reminded that a government position is not a training ground."

During the present emergency many people are being hired by the Federal government under civil service laws by a grant which has been issued in keeping with the defense program, but these positions will not be held as permanent. An example of this is the civil service common laborer who is being sent to the Philippine Islands for the duration of the emergency. The examination which is given to those competing for these positions may either be written or oral.

EXAMS BASED ON CULTURE

Speaking of examinations, there is a tendency on the part of all civil service agencies to base these examinations on psychology and culture, rather than the elder practice of basing them entirely on content. Incidentally, no college course can be recognized by the civil service commission and it does not grant extra bonus points to the candidate who has completed the course. It is hoped by the people who are interested in this program at the college, however, that the time will come when candidates who have completed this course will be granted these points.

An interesting and encouraging

A PRODUCT of the artistic mind is the tool shed at the southwest corner of the building. After having the shed moved there by an immense draying truck, the tool swingers took it upon themselves to decorate the surrounding ground. Upon being questioned on the matter one of the fellows commented that they went to the pains of dragging rocks up from down the hill merely for the purpose of sitting down in an appropriate setting and eating lunch.

The murals at the front entrance of the building seem to be progressing marvelously considering the fact that hardly anyone ever sees the man who is doing the work. He starts work at approximately 5 o'clock when the building is nearly empty. His name is Fred Olmsted; he's done such works of art as the large mural on the California building at Treasure Island.

Speaking of odd people, as usual, there was a fellow who used to hang around The Guardsman office. He ran under the pretense of being a photographer. He sold all sorts of things from slide rules to pictures of grasshoppers. One day he popped his rather empty head in the door and asked, "Have you seen the room?" No answer. Two minutes later, "have you seen the room?" No answer. For a third time he opened the door and this time walked in. "Have you seen the room?" This time he had a large board under his arm. He looked around so expectantly that someone with a kind face said, "All right, what room?" "Well," he says, "I've got the board, but I can't find the room." With that he walked out with a disappointed face. We never saw him again after that.

The football team had better win a game before the end of next season, because if it doesn't we know a student who will be tripping over his beard if something doesn't come to save him. He has made a bet that he will not shave until the team wins a game.

Spartans And Indians Defeat Rams; Soccer Season Closes

By Jim Lee

Completing a successful season, as far as experience and team play goes, the college soccer squad lost to a strong San Jose State varsity, 2 to 1, on Saturday, November 15, and was defeated by an equally powerful Stanford Indian, 3 to 0 last Tuesday.

The San Jose tilt, which was played at the Spartan's home field, was one of the closest games the Rams have played all season. It was tied 1 to 1 through the last three quarters, when, with but two minutes left to play, San Jose, on a fast down-field play, put the game on ice by booting through the 'clincher' to win 2 to 1.

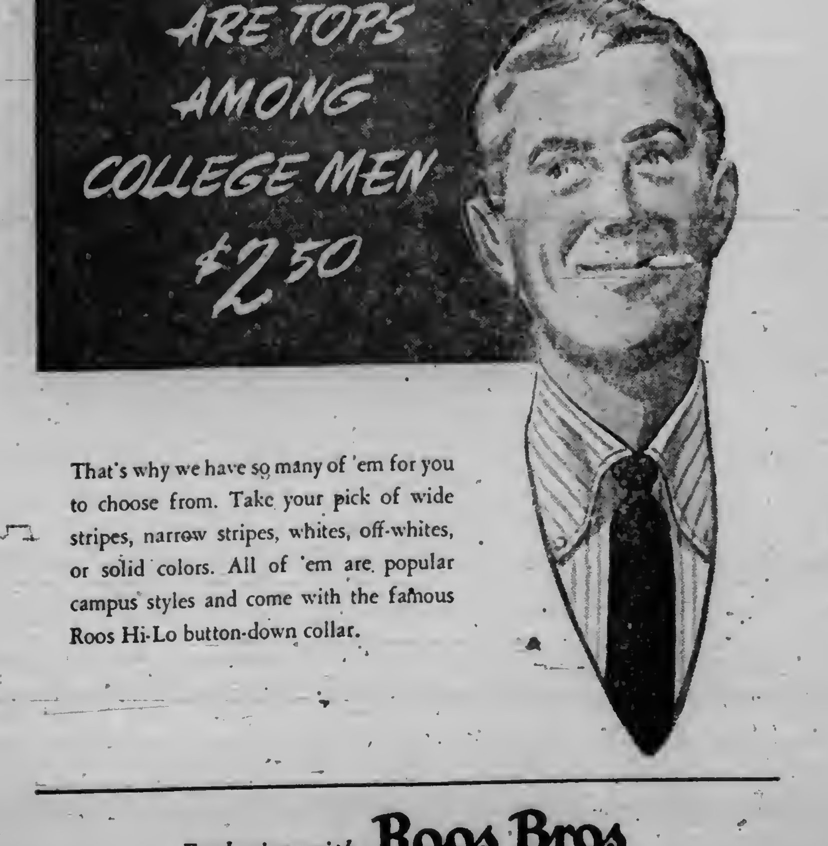
Lazar Scores Again

As was the case in many of the college's other games, Johnny Lazar, one of the best wingmen the soccer squad has had on its list, tallied the only goal for the Rams, to boost his season's total to nine points.

The Stanford encounter, played at Stanford's home field, was closer than the score shows. The Rams practically gave the Indians two points, one when the ball glanced off the foot of one of the college players for a point, and the other when it was kicked out in front of the Ram goal to be quickly scored by Stanford.

Stanford Good—Jensen

"Stanford wasn't three goals better than we were, but the Indians do have a very good squad this season as their record shows," Coach Jim Jensen said.



The Stanford and San Jose State varsities are tied for the state championship, and the college squad did very well against them, considering the big scores they rolled up against their other opponents.

Rams Win Three

The college lost to San Jose State, Stanford, California, and San Francisco State. All of these are four year colleges, and their teams are of varsity standing. The Rams defeated Menlo Junior College, California Aggies, San Mateo Junior College, and tied the University of San Francisco Dons.

"The boys can do very well against any junior college in the state, but, although we play our best, these four year college varsity squads, literally speaking, carry too many guns for us, and have many more students to draw their material from," Coach Jensen said.

Brady Announces All Star Five; Newmans Victors

Displaying closer competition and more evenly balanced quintets than last semester, the intramural basketball tournament came to a successful finale last week, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, announced.

Victors of the tournament proved to be the highly heralded Newman Club, who, although considered the dark horse of the league, staged such a blistering pace in many of its games that it became one of the most feared quintets to trod the maplewood boards, Brady said.

Strictly an offensive team, the Newmans amassed as many as 30 field goals per game, which overshadowed their weak defensive game.

Roberts Is High Scorer

Paced by diminutive Bob Roberts, who led the team in scoring, the Newmans employed a fast breaking attack which accounted for many of their points.

Because of the keener competition this semester, Brady was hard spent to name an All Star quintet, but the squad selected shows both outstanding offensive and defensive men.

Following is the first unit selected by Brady:

Forward	Bob Roberts	Newman Club
Forward	Jack Hare	All Americans
Center	Ed Lyons	Goats
Guard	Al Adorador	Goats
Guard	Marty Toly	All Americans

Second unit:

Forward	Jack Koster	Newman Club
Forward	Joe Quilcy	Spartans
Center	Bob Marcus	Newman Club
Guard	Julio Gahn	Spartans
Guard	Bob Kavanaugh	Rabbits

Later in the semester, a game will be played between the Newman Club and the All Star squad. As yet, no definite date has been announced.

Volleyball Underway

Yesterday afternoon, the first round of the volleyball tournament was held in the men's gymnasium. A total of 11 teams competed in the round, with the main interest centered around the defending champion Newman Club sextet and the squad composed from the staff of the men's physical education department. The squad includes Russ Sweet, Lee Eisan, Al Eisan, Tom Wilson, Jack Gaddy, Jim Jensen, and Brady.

Friday afternoon, December 5, the swimming intramurals will be held, Al Eisan, swimming coach, announced.

Women's Athletics

Horse Show Star Event Of Tourneys

Opportunities to participate in all Women's Athletic Association sport activities will be offered to women students of the college during tourney week, Wednesday, December 3, to Wednesday, December 10, according to Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the organization.

The horse show will be presented at the San Francisco Riding Club on Haight and Stanyan Streets at 1:15 p.m., Miss Kraul said. Riding demonstrations and competitions will be staged with three and five gaited horses, together with jumping by several members of the advanced riding class.

Prizes, including trophies, and a perpetual plaque donated by the riding club, will be awarded to the winners, Anna Held, riding club manager, announced. A slight admission fee will be charged, she added.

In connection with the bowling for tourney week, bowling matches with the Girls Athletic Association from Lowell High School will take place on Wednesday, December 3, with free bowling for any WAA members or college women interested in the sport. Women from Stanford University have expressed a desire to bowl with the WAA club, Gracina Lowe, manager of the club, announced, and a date will be arranged sometime before the Christmas holidays.

The tennis sectional play day will be held Saturday, December 6, at San Mateo Junior College with colleges and junior colleges throughout the area participating, Miss Kraul stated.

"The matches were won last year by the college team, so it is hoped to bring home another first place this semester," Miss Kraul said.

"The program for the day will be similar to the program for the swimming events held here," she added, "with matches, demonstrations, and a luncheon."

Although previously announced for Thursday, December 11, the tourney week banquet date is now Tuesday, December 9, Miss Kraul revealed, at the Trinity Methodist Church on Market and 16th Streets.

"Each year it has been the policy to have invited guests," Miss Kraul pointed out. "Last year each woman attending invited some member of the faculty to the banquet, but this semester each woman is asked to bring some graduating senior from a high school, or a non WAA member of the low or high freshman classes of the college."

The newly organized WAA orchestra will make its initial appearance at this affair, it was announced.

The complete program for the week announced by Miss Kraul is as follows:

Wednesday, December 3—bowling party at Lincoln Bowling Alley.

Thursday, December 4—tennis finals, horse show.

Friday, December 5—golf, 10 to 12 at Lincoln Golf Links; rifle, 10 to 12 at the rifle range.

Saturday, December 5—tennis play day in San Mateo.

Monday, December 8—badminton party and finals.

Tuesday, December 9—swimming at YWCA; tourney week banquet.

Wednesday, December 10—badminton with faculty and friends of members.

Eight Women Sign Up With Orchestra; Room For More

Although eight women have signed up for the Women's Athletic Association orchestra, according to Dorothy Fairbanks, student director of the group, there are still openings for several other musicians.

Members of the organization and the instruments they play are Mary Smith, piano; Betty Thompson, violin; Anell Branch, violin; Margaret Chalmers, bass drum; Dorothy Wagers, clarinet; Suzanne McFall, flute; Frances Riesner, snare drum, and Miss Fairbanks, clarinet.

Practice has begun, Miss Fairbanks pointed out, and will now be on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 2 p.m. in Room 200.

The first appearance of the orchestra will probably be at the tourney week banquet, Miss Fairbanks added.

Although the orchestra has very little music, it is hoped that some will be provided. As the tourney week banquet will be a Christmas theme, the group will try to learn some Christmas carols so that there may be community singing, Miss Fairbanks said.

Boxing

Final Signups For AMS Fights Due Today By 3

With eliminations for the coming intramural fight program already under way, having started last Monday, and final signups for the nearing Associated Men Students fight program due today, tension as to who will be among the finalists is increasing with each passing day.

Signups will still be accepted by Jim Jensen, and Jack Brady, boxing instructors, who can be reached in the men's gymnasium at almost any time of the day, until 3 o'clock.

Finals December 8

The date set for the finals of the AMS bouts will be on Monday night, December 8, and as hoped, will be held at the Coliseum Bowl, located at Tenth and Market.

"This semester we hope to have students out there tossing leather, and if everything goes as planned, this season's boxing carnival will be one of the best the college students have seen in many a year," Coach Jensen said.

Gold boxing gloves will be given to the winners of their respective bouts, with silver ones for second and third contenders. Eliminations will be run off in about a week, then a breather of about two weeks will be taken to give the finalists a chance to warm up for the finals at the 'Bowl.'

Jensen Expects Thrills

With such men as Dave Hunicke, George Chew, and many other returning stars working into fine condition, Coach Jensen hopes to present an evening with an exciting, and thrilling boxing show which will undoubtedly have everyone on the edge of his seat from start to finish.

Jensen also expressed hope that during the process of eliminations, many other not-so-well-known boys will show outstanding ability, and come through with some good fights.

A new heavyweight that has caught Jensen's eye is Al Silva, who won the heavyweight crown at St. Mary's last season, and who will undoubtedly give the present title holder, Duke Drake, a very busy evening in the finals.

Condition Important

"Condition is more important than knowledge because most of the boxers know the fundamentals, and finer points of fighting, but any students, entering the fights, must be in sound, physical shape or he will be refused his entry blank," Jensen said. This will eliminate any possibility of a contender receiving injuries.

Most of the bouts will be run off during the 2 o'clock boxing class, with the rest of them to be finished after 3 o'clock.

Riflemen Hope To Finish Rest Of Year Undefeated

With one victory and two setbacks behind them, the college riflemen are hoping to finish the rest of the season undefeated, according to Jim Juri, president of the Rifle Club and head of the college team.

"It is really too early in the year to determine the status of the marksmen from past matches," Juri said, "but they have shown a great deal of progress and should retain the titles garnered last year."

The Ram rifle squad copped a third in league shoots last semester and a first place in the college division.

The college's second team has fared a little better so far this year, outscoring the Post 429 (team No. 3) 884-854 last month, and winning by default from the San Francisco Rod and Gun Club two weeks ago. Bedford is the leading marksman on the second team with a 188 average.

Two matches were shot this week. The first team met the San Francisco Surf Rifle Club last Tuesday at the college, and the second team invaded the California Guard Armory to take on the Third Battalion last Wednesday.

University of Minnesota's NYA quota for this year is $124,065. Benefiting students represent 7.5 per cent of enrollment, compared with 9 per cent last year.

Rams Near Upset As Season Ends With 12 to 7 Defeat; Wada Scores On 84 Yard Run

Ending its season in a spectacular fashion, the college eleven narrowly missed turning in the greatest upset in the Northern California Junior College Conference loop on November 14 when they bowed before the strong San Mateo Bulldogs, 12 to 7.

As was the case the week previous when they engaged the Pasadena Junior College, the Rams overcame a 6 to 0 score against them, and went into a 7 to 6 lead, only to have their opponents tally another touchdown.

The San Mateans were every bit as strong and powerful as they were said to be, and through the victory, clinched the conference championship. The score has no indication on how great the peninsula outfit was nor how much they outplayed the Rams.

Statistically, the college was massacred. Yet, had it not been the victim of a sneak play, the same play that gave Minnesota an 8 to 7 victory over Northwestern, and the West a touchdown against the East last New Year's, might easily have come out on the long end of a 7 to 6 score.

Ground Game Stalled

On the ground, the Rams were stymied, finding that getting through the Bulldog line was an extremely difficult task. They fared hardly any better through the air, although they managed to gain plus yardage in this department. The Bulldogs held the college to only 32 yards from scrimmage and caused them to lose 51 yards the same way, for a net ground gainage of minus 19 yards. On passes, the Eisanmen totaled 16 yards to end the evening with a minus three yards.

San Mateo, in the meantime, amassed 194 yards from scrimmage, 81 yards through the air, and lost 39 yards for a grand total of 236 net yards from passes and scrimmage. They garnered eight first downs while the college failed to get one. Punting was the only department in which the Rams excelled, where Temple Davies and Auguie Kalnen kicked for a 39.5 yard average.

Corbin Scores

After a scoreless first quarter, the Bulldogs received the first real break in the game which eventually ended in a touchdown. On an attempted reverse, Izzy Urbano fumbled and San Mateo recovered on the college 12 yard line. Four plays got only to the seven and after the college punted to its own 30 yard line, the San Mateans began.

Tom Ellis got five to the 25, then nine to the 16. Bill Corbin added two to the 14, two more to the 12, and Ellis made it a first down on the five yard line. From there, Corbin carried to the one foot line, and then over for a touchdown. Ellis' attempted pass for the extra point fell incomplete and the Bulldogs went into a 6 to 0 lead at the half.

Wada Breaks Away

Midway in the third period, the most sparkling play of the evening occurred and turned the contest into a thrilling affair, besides giving the Rams the spark they needed to accomplish the upset. With the ball on its own 40 yard line, San Mateo punted to the Ram 16 where Billy Wada took the pigskin, and with the help of some nice blocking, especially by Art Ekdall and Merle McFarland, got up to the 32 yard line, spun away from a would-be tackler who had him by one leg, and raced into the end zone to complete an 84 yard touchdown gallop.

The thousands of spectators were thrilled again a minute later when Turk Terzian's conversion gave the Rams a 7 to 6 lead.

After the sudden outburst, the Rams were a determined outfit and seeing that victory was near, failed to yield any yardage. For the remainder of the quarter and for half of the fourth, they kept San Mateo deep in its own territory with long punts and a brilliant defense.

Sneak Play Wins

But just when victory appeared certain, the Bulldogs came back. After a play had gained a yard, San Mateo took the college unaware and, without a huddle, quickly lined up and with a mass of interference, carried 30 yards from its own 36 to the Ram 34. A five yard penalty placed the pigskin on the 29, but on the next play, the college threw the Bulldogs back 13 yards to the 42 yard line. From the 42, Ellis passed to the 20, Corbin got three to the 17, and Ellis found Bill Mudgett in the end zone with a bullet pass to score the winning touchdown. Ellis' missed conversion didn't matter much as the Rams' desperate last minute passes failed to produce a score.

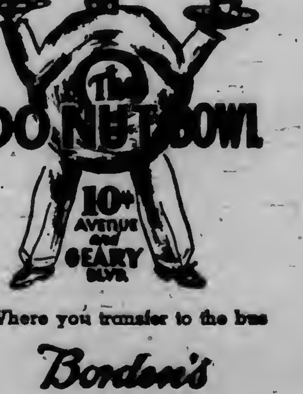
Basketball Team Goes Through Practices For Coming Season; Squad Cut To 30 Men

With the pounding of feet soon to be heard running over the maplewood boards in the various pavilions throughout the nation, Coach Tom Wilson, Ram casaba mentor, has sent his charges through laborious practice sessions for the past several weeks in ready anticipation for the new season.

Fifty cagers signed up for the preliminary drills at the beginning of the semester, but now, after the first cut, only 30 players remain on the squad. In all probability, another cut will be made by Wilson to fully study his players for various assets and faults in their game.



For the first time, the entire roster was sent through offensive and defensive formations this week, practicing mainly screen plays around the post. By next week, Wilson intends to name a starting five which will enter the practice games slated during the Christmas holidays.

Only two veterans are returning for action this year, namely, Mel Dropo, and John Cunningham. Dropo, a center while at Poly High, was forced to play forward last year, but because the squad lacks height this season, he may be moved to center, his former position. Clearly the tallest man on the squad, approximately 6 ft. 2 in. tall, Dropo has a keen shooting eye, and is particularly adept on rebound shots, both offensively and defensively.

Cunningham, stalwart forward, is one of the fastest men on the team, and will prove a valuable cog in Wilson's five.

Roof Expedition Uncovers Strange Facts

Poison Gas, Pigs, Orchids, View, Astound Reporter

By Claire Leeds

Enough poison gas to destroy simultaneously the entire student body, faculty, and janitorial staff; a genuine, growing orchid plant; and no less than six amiable guinea-pigs, were among the oddities observed by a Guardsman reporter and photographer in a recent tour of the roof with Edward H. Redford, building superintendent.

From the top of the building on a clear day, a magnificent view may be had of the pen-insula and Bay area, including such distant points as the Farallones and the Berkeley campanile.

Photos by Bennie Chin

The observatory with its great revolving dome, one of the largest on the Coast, is probably the most imposing architectural feature of the building. Two 40-foot radio towers at either end of the roof are also impressive structures. Less prominent, though equally significant, is a small, weathered box-like enclosure which houses meteorological equipment valued at $200.

Hydrogen sulphide, the deadly gas best characterized by its disagreeable odor, is stored in liquified form in tanks on the roof, converted by a generator into gas and piped to chemistry laboratories as needed for experiments. A sufficient quantity of the concentrated gas to kill everyone in the building is kept on the roof, according to Stephen J. Tomer, chemistry instructor; however, safety apparatus and excellent ventilation eliminate dangerous possibilities.

Four large fan rooms found on the roof enclose powerful machines which draw stale air from classrooms and lecture halls. Numerous vents remove toxic fumes from chemistry laboratories. There is even a still providing distilled water for use in the science labs.

Comparatively few students are familiar with the fourth floor of the building and some are even skeptical as to the existence of a fourth floor. Consisting of rooms 400 to 406, it includes a greenhouse and an animal room maintained by the biology department, the observatory, astronomy darkroom, astronomy laboratory, service room, and elevator machinery.

The observatory is used at present as the college civilian flight training headquarters. According to Louis Berman, astronomy instructor, the dome is probably the largest on any college campus on the Pacific Coast. The present World War, Berman explained, has interfered with plans to secure a large telescope. The glass discs to be imported from Germany or England. When such a telescope is obtained, Berman said, the observatory will be made available to all the citizens of San Francisco.

Astronomy 22a-b classes meet each Monday evening on a section of the roof protected with a layer of asphalt block. A four-inch reflector telescope, a four-inch refractor, and two cement piers for sextants facilitate observation. Adjoining the observatory are a laboratory used by these classes and a darkroom in which prints and lantern slides are made. Photographs of the heavens will be developed here when the large telescope is secured.

The greenhouse, maintained by the botany department, serves as an experimental laboratory. Under ideal conditions, an orchid plant, gardenias, begonias, rare ferns, and many experimental plants are being raised. An extensive system of steam pipes and copper coils beneath the metal seed beds regulates the temperature. This equipment, according to Glenn A. Noble, biology instructor, was designed at the University of California, and this college is one of the first to utilize it. The botany department also plans to build a lath house on the roof.

In the animal room are found, at present, six guinea-pigs and one docile white rabbit, property of the biology department. These animals, Noble said, are kept on hand so that science classes may have fresh specimens to work with. They are well cared for and carefully handled, Noble adds. They are used in bacteriology to make anti-toxins in physiology to demonstrate the effect of drugs, and in zoology for anatomical study.

Last semester, two garter snakes were allowed by some diabolical prankster to escape from the animal room, and those small reptiles created a minor panic as they slithered through the halls.

Among the most interesting of the apparatus found on the roof is the meteorological equipment housed in an insignificant building not much larger than an oversized birdhouse. Likewise, a little-known student with a big job is the college "weather man," Dante Kingsley. Each morning at 9:30, Kingsley compiles a weather forecast from observation of the meteorological instruments. His predictions are 75 to 80 per cent accurate. The report, which indicates temperature, humidity, precipitation, visibility, and wind direction, is posted daily on the bulletin board in the basement at the foot of the stairway at the western end of the main hall. In charge of meteorology is Instructor Joseph E. Williams.

The instruments found on the roof include a rain gauge, resembling a large milk can, which measures the weekly precipitation; a psychrometer, which measures relative humidity; and minimum and maximum thermometers.

One of these instruments, the hygro-thermograph, measures temperature and humidity for a week by means of a strand of human hair. When the air is damp, the hair expands, when it is dry, it becomes taut. This hair, Kingsley pointed out, must be blonde. Therefore, for technical reasons, of course, meteorologists prefer blondes.

VI. AMS And AWS: The Division Equalled Unity

"AS we said last time, Algy, we'll start now on the various groups that are represented on the Executive Council. You remember we saw in our discussion of the council that it is composed of four Associated Student officers and the leaders of the most important student organizations—all of whom run our self-governing association.

"Incidentally, we'll be voting for next semester's officers about a month from now."

"I get it," Algy grinned, "you expect me to be voting then as an ideal citizen who knows all about what he's voting for, and so forth."

"Well, you should have a pretty good idea of student government by the time we finish our talks, and most important, you should know enough to be genuinely interested in the election and to value your right to vote.

"Among the officers you'll choose will be those for the AMS. The women will, of course, vote for the AWS nominees. I guess you know what the abbreviations stand for."

"Sure," Algy responded triumphantly, "the Associated Men Students and the Associated Women Students. But say, is this a subtle way to start talking about the AMS and the AWS?"

"You win, Algy, but if you know all about this, we could linger over the fine points of Modern Design instead."

"No, I'm going to see this thing through. . . ."

". . . If it kills you, we know. O.K., see it through you shall. Both the AMS and the AWS were organized within a month of each other during the first college semester in the fall of 1925 with the intent to unite the men and women into organizations that would in turn help to unite spirit and cooperation for the campus as a whole. Membership in the two bodies was to be automatic upon joining the Associated Students.

"In September of 1935, about 50 men students of the new college with Joe Amori, now head of the college placement bureau, met with the purpose of beginning an association of men students. A constitution was drafted, and Amori, formerly faculty adviser to the AMS at San Mateo Junior College, was selected to act in that capacity here. When Amori took a leave of absence last year, Tom Wilson, basketball and tennis coach, was named as the new adviser.

"The women gathered in the following month, about 200 strong, to institute their organization and to form a constitution. Their meeting was called by Eugenie Leonard, then dean of women. Patty Wells acted as spokesman for the women students. Miss Leonard remained as adviser until June, 1937, when Margaret Dougherty, present dean of women, assumed the position."

"Maybe we should have stuck to Modern Design," Algy muttered vicariously.

"Hang on," he pleaded. "It'll get better."

"Though you're probably acquainted with most of the activities of the AMS and AWS, we'll go over them briefly.

"The men sponsor three main events each semester—a smoker alternating each semester with a bonfire rally just before the football game with State, the boxing matches where the finals of the intramural bouts are run off, and a barn dance. A frosh-soph brawl during the first semester of AMS history was shortlived. According to the current AMS president, Don Jensen, it must have been a brawl of brawls, making a mud wrestling match look like kid stuff. Anyway, the administration, fearful of the lives and limbs of the students, ruled it out.

"Most AWS functions are also social, but of a more subdued nature. Teas, fashion shows, hostessing during open house and similar occasions, parties . . . these make up the activities of AWS for the most part. Also, though, with the AMS, the AWS sponsors a mixer dance during orientation week. Right now it is holding a series of teas to introduce high school senior women to the junior college.

"Betty Fox, present AWS president notes that her group is not wholly social in that it has frequently many services to the women of the college and looks out for the interests of the women through its place on the Ex Council. She says, also, that the self-governing AWS has given the women a feeling of importance and has tended to make them more college conscious.

"In addition to Miss Fox, the present officers are Betty MacKillop, vice-president, and Gloria Olivi, secretary. And not to forget the men, the other AMS officers are Bob Lindemann, vice-president, and Merle MacFarlane, secretary."

Betty Fox, present AWS president, helps Algy understand the many services of the women's organization in today's Understanding Your College.

Don Jensen, current AMS president, reminds students of the old frosh-soph brawl and its ill-fated career as Algy ponders.

CAB Meeting Held Today

A meeting to determine plans for carnival day will be held by the Club Advisory Board today at 2 o'clock in Room 113, according to Francis Goetz, club president.

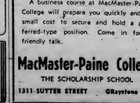
Each club will be asked to signify their intentions of sponsoring a booth at the proposed carnival day. Advance reports from the various clubs favor fruit concessions, Goetz said.

Other business on the club calendar will be a discussion of the Christmas edition of the Cabby, official club publication. The yule edition will feature articles on each organization in the group, and art work by Dolores Sullivan and the art society. Pages in the edition will number approximately 25, according to Ed Lopez, Cabby editor.

Club money that had originally been intended to sponsor a CAB rally will be used to finance the enlarged edition of the club journal.

A discussion of the possible admission of the Bible Club for membership in the CAB will also be featured, Goetz said.

A Cappella Choir Presents Repeat Church Program



Another appearance by the A Cappella Choir will be presented Sunday, November 30, when the choir will give a repeat performance for the Trinity Methodist Church at 2299 Market Street, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor.

"This is a repeat performance," Miss Badger explained. "We performed for this organization last semester, and we are very happy to have been asked back."

Another church program, this for the Calvary Presbyterian Church at Fillmore and Jackson streets, is scheduled for Sunday, December 7, at 7:45 p. m.

The selections will include a group of sacred songs during the service, and a group of secular songs at the young people's meeting, which will follow.

AMS Boxing Trials Will Run Until Dec. 3

Elimination contests for the Associated Men Students' boxing matches to be held at the Coliseum Bowl, Monday, December 8, are now underway and will be completed by December 3, according to Don Jensen, AMS president.

"This is the biggest intramural turnout yet for any boxing matches," Jensen said.

Clayton Frye, boxing coach at Stanford University, has promised that he will referee the matches, Jensen revealed. Medals for the contestants have already been purchased. The winner of each bout will receive a gold medal shaped like a boxing glove and the loser will receive a silver medal also shaped like a boxing glove. Pictures of the boxers will be placed in the showcase on the first floor several days prior to the matches.

Talent Bureau Auditions Continue In Room 200

Talent Bureau auditions will continue this morning in Room 200 at 11 a. m., for student entertainers wishing to perform at rallies, assemblies, and even for outside engagements, according to Irwin Cohen, student manager.

Students wishing auditions should see Cohen in the Associated Student office in Room 169 at 10 a. m. this morning.

As some students have classes during the appointed hour for auditioning, arrangements may be made through Wesley Muscio, Flossita Badger, faculty advisers, or Cohen for another time.

Second Affair Honors High School Women

Another tea, the second in a series of Associated Women Students' affairs for San Francisco high school women, will be held Tuesday, December 2, in honor of senior women from Polytechnic, Galileo and Commerce high schools, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

Chairwoman for the day will be Betty MacKillop, AWS vice-president, assisted by Gloria Olivi, acting AWS secretary, and Miss Fox.

College Life Theme

These high school women have been invited so that they may have a better idea of the social and academic life at the college. "The teas present a marvelous opportunity for the women to get to know the instructors and the students of the college," explained Miss MacKillop.

Pouring tea for the women will be Catherine Musante, Phyllis Haley, and Miriam Gatley, college instructors.

Other instructors who have been invited to attend are Mary Jane Learnard, Verrel Weber, Bertha Keller, Marie Weller, Mildred Williams, Hilda Watson, Phoebe Ward, Claire Cuneo, Frances Mount, Ruth Plimpton Nelson, Andrea Noble, Mozelle Milliken and Dorothy Mercer.

Receptionists Named

A reception committee has also been chosen by the officers of the association. The committee will guide the high school women through the college, and committee members will act as hostesses. Those who have been asked to serve are Beth Schmitz, Gloria Savage, Eloise Winfeldt, June Zakarian, Betty Dahlberg, Aspasia Vasilatos, Jackie Blair, Fleeta Alexander, Donna Meyers, Dorris MacKillop, Kay Allen, Patricia Neimeyer, Joan Hunter, Jean Hunter, Pat Ruf, Betty Sinschimer, Jeanne Spencer, Eleanor Griffin, Sally Nelson, and Virginia Frantz. Alice Danner, Beverly Brown, Dorothy Ann Kraul, Marjorie Wagner, Virginia Casey, Betty Davis, Gerry McGee.

note for those who are studying for this type of work, is that last year all members of the class who took the messengers examination are now employed by the federal government.

Students usually combine this civil service training along with regular business training, as the latter training is very essential in specializing in any field of this type.

Tuesday, the Hotel and Restaurant Division will be featured.

Vol. XIII SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA—TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1941 No. 20

By Francis Chrisman

YOUNG American men who have reached the age of twenty-one should be doing quite a bit of pondering these days over the advisability of dodging the Army in favor of water sports.

Certainly there are many who will recommend the Navy. Several old Army men have told us that the wave treatment is just the thing if one has to serve. They have pointed out the various advantages, and support the U.S. Navy as though it were their own.

So, if these young Americans, being physically fit (or nearly so) and of sound mind, etc., find it advisable to enter some branch of the armed forces—why not the Navy?

That is indeed a problem. Even admitting that one receives better surroundings, pay, chances for advancement, or even entertainment, (these are claims made by Navy advocates) is there any debit side to the ledger? Most certainly there is!

LIFE!

Probably the most important concern of a soldier, sailor, or marine is that of staying alive. Whether in war or at peace life is a darn handy thing to have around, and people go through a lot just to be able to hang onto it. As the situation now stands there is more chance to hang onto it in the Army than in the Army's traditional rival. Just look at the way conditions are traveling.

The Army is at the present time running all over the country playing games. These are jokingly called "war games" by the brass hats, but what kind of war games are they when signs are put up on trucks so that the trucks become tanks, when all the necessary modern equipment just isn't? No, the Army is going to stick around for quite some time to come.

But the Navy: Ah! There we have a completely different setup.

In the United States Navy, students, we have equipment ready, ammunition ready, intentions ready, men ready—all that is needed is the word to go. And that has been given in part.

NAVY MEANS ACTION

This Navy of ours is already shooting and being shot at. Their activity is the sort of thing that kills a person. That means some sort of danger directed towards one's life, and if one desires to keep one's life, shooting is not to be considered an avocation; much more a vocation as it is for the men of the fleet.

No, it is much safer to sit back in your barracks, or tents, or whatever, soldiers are staying in these days, and train without training facilities for the eventual day. The only things that are shot at you are orders and blanks, the orders having more actual effect than a whole salvo of blanks.

Moreover, if you join the Army, you have hostesses. USO posts all over the place, free movies, reduced entrance rates at many places of amusement (although you won't have the money to attend them), vacations and things like that. Without doubt a much nicer existence.

What do you get in the Navy. Salt spray and submarines. There just isn't any comparison between the two services. Salt spray is good for the health, probably, but if people are continually shooting at you—who cares? Submarines are nasty things that always crop up at the most inopportune times. Besides that there now will be convoy duty; long trips, dull, perpetual deck scrubbing; and when you reach your destination you can't even visit for a while, you have to turn around and come on home again.

A WELL-ROUNDED DIET?

See? The Army is safer. It does present a well-rounded set of activities for the ambitious young man. All they need now is for the posts is bridge clubs, and the officers and their wives may have already gotten that idea.

But whether one chooses the Army or the Navy what's the difference? In one they take time and money to fatten you up, get you in good physical condition, for that bullet bearing your name. In the other they cart you out right away and let somebody take pot shots at you.

If you're the type that likes to put things off sign up with the men in the field. If not—sign up with the men in the fleet.

But seriously, the Air Corps offers much more. You have intensive training, pretty planes, good pay — [illegible]

Local Colleges Get Invitation To Boxing Bouts

Invitations to the Associated Men Students' boxing matches to be held Monday, December 8, at the Coliseum Bowl, have been sent to the presidents and AMS presidents of all the neighboring colleges and also of the Junior College Conference schools, Don Jensen, AMS president, announced today.

The matches, which will start at 8 p.m., feature the top fighters of each weight division. The boxers are determined by an intramural elimination contest conducted by Jim Jensen, college boxing instructor. The names of the fighters will be revealed tomorrow and their pictures will be placed in the showcase opposite the elevator on the first floor, Jensen said.

Because the Coliseum Bowl is turned into a skating rink each week end Jensen was forced to schedule the fights for Monday night, and for this same reason there will be no dance following the matches as is usually the custom, he announced.

Admission will be by associated student card for college members and outsiders will be admitted for 25 cents.

CAB Plans Friday Meeting For CABBY Discussion

To plan for a special Christmas edition of the Cabby, official publication of the Club Advisory Board, an important meeting of this organization will be held next Friday, December 5 at 2 p.m. in Room 113.

The purpose of this large edition, Francis Goetz, president of the CAB, said, will be to enable the student body as a whole to see the opportunities available for students in large constructive organizations.

Tea Today Honors Three High Schools

Senior women from Galileo, Polytechnic, and Commerce are being honored at a tea to be given by the Associated Women Students this afternoon at 3:30 in Room 158, according to Betty MacKillop, AWS vice-president, and chairman of the affair.

This is the second in a series of AWS sponsored teas to honor high school women. The first was held Tuesday, October 28 for women from Lincoln, Lowell, and Washington high schools.

Assisting Miss MacKillop with her hostess duties will be Betty Fox, AWS president, and Gloria Olivi, acting AWS secretary. A reception committee of 27 other women has been chosen, consisting of Beth Schmitz, June Zakurian, Gloria Savage, Betty Dahlberg, Aspacia Vasilatos, Eloise Winfeldt, Jackie Blair, Fleeta Alexander, Donna Meyers, Doris MacKillop, Kay Allen, Patricia Neimeyer, Joan Hunter, Jean Hunter, Pat Ruf, Betty Sinschimer, Jeanne Spencer, Eleanor Griffin, Sally Nelson, Virginia Frantz, Betty Ann Kraul, Marjorie Wagner, Virginia Casey, Betty Davis, and Gerry McGee.

Pouring tea will be Catherine Musante, Phylis Haley, Ruth Somers, and Miriam Gatley.

Instructors invited to attend are Dorothy Mercer, Verrel Weber, Mary Jane Learnard, Mozelle Milliken, Marie Weller, Glen Noble, Mildred Williams, Ruth Plimpton, Hilda Watson, Frances Mount, Phebe Ward, and Claire Cuneo.

Each high school will be invited to send 25 senior women to attend the tea. These women will be contacted through their high school advisers.

Refreshments will be prepared by the home economics classes, and committee badges for the various groups are being made by William Eckert's classes in advertising art.

Commissioner Says Student Jobs Underpaid

"The majority of college students working part time are flagrantly underpaid."

So stated Harry I. Christie, new commissioner on the Board of Education, during a visit to the college last Friday. "Employers turn largely to college labor as a means of cheap labor," he added.

Christie is president of The Printers Trade Union. When asked what he thought of college men and women working in down town stores bound by strikes he said:

"Taking another man's job while he is trying to protect himself by the last means available, namely by striking, cannot help but have reflections later in the employment field."

When asked to what extent a check is kept on people who participate in "scab" labor Christie said, "different unions proceed in numerous ways. In the department store strike there is much talk of pictures being taken of all non-union help."

Christie commended the college very highly in its efforts to find jobs for all men and women who need work, and said these efforts are probably responsible for keeping a large number of students in college.

Smith Resigns Fresh Post; Class Picnic Cancelled

High Freshman President Neville Smith has left college and his office, and has been replaced by Eloise Winfelt, former vice-president. Margaret Allan, secretary, has been moved forward to vice-president.

Because it is to late in the semester, the plans for a high freshman class picnic will be cancelled, Miss Winfelt explained, "but the rainy season is liable to move in any day and spoil the entire outing.

AMS Chooses Soph Sweetheart Next Week; College's First King Election Friday

Typifying the ideal college girl and boy, the traditional sophomore sweetheart will be elected next Tuesday, December 9, and the college's first freshman campus king will be chosen this Friday.

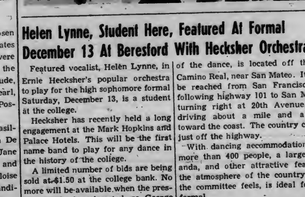
Finalists in the sweetheart contest include Pat Brand, Shirley Wood, Carmel Cole, Lucille Landresse, Margaret McMahon, Kerma Cazier, and Matilda Morigia. For campus king, Jim Skinner, Bob Murphy, Dick Sousa, and Dick Dickson are being considered.

Photos On Display

Individual photographs of all final contestants taken by the Nicholas Johnson Studio, will be displayed this week on the bulletin board in the main lobby.

Sophomore and freshman officers have not yet decided when the winners are to be introduced; however, both will be presented at the high sophomore formal, Saturday, December 13.

Judges Revealed



Sweetheart finalists were chosen from a group of eighteen candidates by seven judges whose names were revealed for the first time after the preliminary election. These include, Don Cole, Duke Drake, Art Pearl, Dick Naftaly, Herb Jensen, Art Posten, and Jim Juri.

In the same manner, Aspasia Vasilatos, Margaret McMahon, Gloria De Martini, Carmel Cole, Mary Jane Frohman, Florence Hefferman, and last semester's sweetheart, Eloise Winfeldt, nominated the four candidates for campus king.

The sweetheart will be honored at the formal where she will be presented with a silver loving cup, and the campus king will receive a complimentary bid to this affair.

Helen Lynne, Student Here, Featured At Formal December 13 At Beresford With Heckshser Orchestra

Featured vocalist, Helen Lynne, in Ernie Heckscher's popular orchestra to play for the high sophomore formal Saturday, December 13, is a student at the college.

Heckscher has recently held a long engagement at the Mark Hopkins and Palace Hotels. This will be the first name band to play for any dance in the history of the college.

A limited number of bids are being sold at $1.50 at the college bank. No more will be available when the present supply is exhausted, so George Coart, high sophomore president, urges those who plan to attend the formal to secure their bids immediately.

The Beresford Country Club, site of the dance, is located off the El Camino Real, near San Mateo. It may be reached from San Francisco by following highway 101 to San Mateo, turning right at 20th Avenue, and driving about a mile and a half toward the coast. The country club is just off the highway.

With dancing accommodations for more than 400 people, a large verandas, and other attractive features, the atmosphere of the country club, the committee feels, is ideal for the formal.

Highlight of the affair will be the introduction of the sophomore sweetheart to be elected next Tuesday. The low freshman campus king will also be presented.

MAC Denies Soccer Champs Block Award

Soccer star Ted Theodus was not alone when he protested the MAC decision in the Ex Council last Thursday. Ex Council sentiment generally favored his stand.

Theodus Protests Decision, Objects To Statement That Championship Unimportant

In a report which brought waves of protest at last Thursday's Executive Council meeting, the Men's Athletic Council recommended denial of championship block sweaters to the soccer team on the basis that "the winning of a junior college soccer championship" is too "insignificant and unimportant" to warrant special blocks.

Axis of the discussion centered about Dean Edwin C. Browne, a member of the athletic council, and Ted Theodus, player on the soccer team and also its unofficial spokesman.

Theodus Hurls Charge

Theodus opened the discussion, following reading of the report, with a plea to members of the Ex-Council. Last year's council, according to Theodus, refused the white block sweaters distinguishing a championship to the soccer team only because the college had tied for first place in the league. "Soccer is a major sport in the college," said Theodus. "The other major sports receive special blocks, why can't we?"

Dean Browne retaliated Theodus' arguments by explaining that only three junior colleges belong to the soccer league; thus to win the championship, the college had to defeat only two teams.

Soccer Prowess Argued

"We have played California, Stanford and other teams of the college league and though we were defeated occasionally we made the best showing in the history of the college soccer team. We were no set-up," came back Theodus.

Other arguments were presented by Ex-Council members, strongest of which Bill Postal, finance chairman, made. "We cannot afford to put out an extra $150 for special sweaters," said Postal.

After hearing this, Ex-Council members decided the report had best be tabled until a later meeting.

Browne Silenced In Fracas

Highlight of the fracas occurred when Dean Browne, caught in the fervor of the argument, rose to his feet only to be set down again by a calm, cold, "you're out of order, dean, sit down," delivered by Theodus. This protest was upheld by Associated Student President Harry Haselsop.

Installation of a traffic signal for the intersection at Ocean and Phelan Avenues, was also discussed by the Council. It was decided that the matter would be placed in the hands of the Welfare Committee for further investigation.

Campus Players' Olio Postponed For Carnival

Originally scheduled for Friday, December 5, the Campus Players' old fashioned melodrama and olio will be presented at the beginning of next semester on carnival day, Dolores Sullivan, president, announced Friday.

Should carnival day fail to become a reality, continued Miss Sullivan, the program will be presented at the first available date.

Olio In Old Time Garb

Consisting of an old fashioned melodrama, followed by several short acts of entertainment characteristic of the Gay Ninety era, the program will be given free of charge to members of the Associated Students.

"Casting is not yet complete," Miss Sullivan said, "but we hope to be ready to present the program in top condition."

Group To See Cornell Play

Members of the drama group will attend the performance of Katharine Cornell in George Bernard Shaw's Doctor's Dilemma next Wednesday at the Curran Theater. Admission to the theater party will be free of charge to all members of the drama group in good standing.

The next practice session of the group is slated for December 3 at 3 o'clock in Room 257, according to Miss Sullivan.

Quiz Program

Coffey To Be Guest Speaker

Commemorating the 150th anniversary of the induction of the Bill of Rights, a quiz broadcast featuring Dr. Rudolph I. Coffey as guest commentator, will be presented over the public address system, Wednesday, December 10, at 1 o'clock.

"Dr. Coffecy is one of the outstanding citizens of San Francisco. His reputation as a scholar together with his experience in the humanities make him an appropriate and attractive speaker for the college on this occasion," Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, said.

Dr. Coffey will speak on the significance of the first 10 amendments to the constitution.

Winners Receive Bids To Formal

Each 1 o'clock class will have the opportunity to participate in the quiz by the three students receiving the highest scores will receive complimentary bids to the high sophomore formal.

Participants in the broadcast itself will include one team representing the Associated Men Students, and one the Associated Women Students. Smith will act as interrogator.

Questions on the constitution will be prepared by Robert Parker and members of the history and political science departments. Questions on the college, its physical properties, student government and the faculty will be prepared.

All Classes To Participate

So that all classes may participate, one student will be chosen in each on the basis of his high scholastic and attendance record. The interrogator will, through the loud speaker, ask the question and allow from 5 to 10 seconds for students to answer.

Each instructor will be provided with a list of the questions and correct answers. The teams within the broadcasting booth will then be given 5 to 10 seconds to answer. A gong will sound to indicate the end of the allotted time.

The instructor in each class will total the score. If the student has made an exceptionally high rating, the instructor will telephone the broadcasting booth and report it. Three winners will be given complimentary bids to the high sophomore formal.

A Cappella Choir Plans Second Church Appearance

A Cappella Choir members will perform their second church program of the semester Sunday, December 7, at the Calvary Presbyterian Church, at Fillmore and Jackson Streets, at 7:45 p.m., according to Flossita Badger, music instructor, and A Cappella Choir director.

The first such performance was before the Trinity Methodist Church last week.

The Choir will sing a group of sacred songs during the service. After the services a young people's meeting will be held, at which the Choir will sing a group of secular songs.

On Monday, December 8, the A Cappella Choir will perform for the Parent-Teachers Association of the Commodore Sloat School.

The annual fall trip of the Choir will take place on Tuesday, December 9. It will entertain at the Petaluma High School and then at the Ukiah High School.

NYA

Budget Cut Closes Rolls

An effort to slash the budget allotted the state NYA because of the abnormal expense involved in national defense has resulted in the closing of admittance to the college NYA rolls for this semester, Claude T. Silva, director, announced last Thursday.

"I received instructions to the affect that no more students should be permitted to enroll until January 3, 1942, in a letter from the California State NYA board last week," Silva explained. While it doesn't affect the present status here this term, 'we aren't sure about what the effect will be next semester."

May Take New Students

Silva conjectured that perhaps a few new students entering next semester before January 3 would be admitted to the rolls.

"This is only a guess on my part," he reminded. "The board indicates the attention of cutting the present budget by about 25 per cent and they are pretty sure how to do the line."

New Ruling In Effect

The new budget rule went into effect on November 21, 1941, according to Silva. While the college never has reached the limited number of NYA enrollees, Silva thinks that next semester may prove to be a different story.

"There is no way of telling now, however, just what the limit will be next semester," he pointed out, "but that it will be considerably less is certain."

Book Exchange To Open Last Week Before Finals

Opening of the book exchange operated by the Women's Service Society is scheduled for the last week before finals, Violet Butler, president of the group, revealed.

The exchange will be open before and during final examinations so that students not returning to college may dispose of their books, Miss Butler explained.

Books may be brought in any time when the exchange is open, Miss Butler said, and will be sold for the price placed on them by the owner. Only texts used in classes will be handled at the exchange.

Books will not be sold until after registration is completed, the exchange will be open for several weeks following the registration period.

California History Theme Of Oratorical Contest

California history will be the theme used in an oratorical contest sponsored by the Native Daughters of California. Students are invited to participate.

The contest will be on February 16, according to Lloyd Luekmann, debating coach.

The trial speeches for the college will be held in Room 100 at 3 o'clock, Tuesday, January 7.

Skyrocketing Prices

Learn The Score

SHOCKING is the only manner to describe the overwhelming defeat (218 to 63) in the House of Rep. of Albert Gore's emergency inflation bill in view of the incredibly short period of debate on the drastic stop-gap measure. Of course, Gore's bill will step on many toes and contrasts sharply with the tepid Administration alternative, but inflation demands drastic counter blows. And certainly a sincere attempt like Gore's should receive fair and intelligent consideration. The seriousness of skyrocketing prices seems to be belied by the House's anxiety over constituent voting favor.

We believe the House action typifies general ignorance of the import of a subject that touches everyone. Therefore, in order to engender a more intelligent understanding of inflationary dangers and combative methods at least in this college, The Guardsman has asked economics instructors William Goss and John Ross to sketch a broad picture of the current problem in our next issue.

It IS Worth While

CRITICS of self-governing student bodies are, unhappily, few in relation to the number of progressive educators who see student government not merely as an extra-curricular outlet for excess energy but as a significant phase of an institution's educational program. How closely the college fits into this keenly-drawn pattern certainly need not be further emphasized here.

From time to time, though, educators attempt to inculcate into the minds of skeptics the value of responsible student government. John J. Crowley, vice-principal of the Polytechnic High School in Riverside, where he is faculty adviser to the student government, had done just that in a recent edition of the California Journal of Secondary Education. (The magazine, incidentally, is edited by Edward H. Redford of this college.)

Uncompromisingly in favor of student self-government, Crowley justifies his stand in his article, Do Student Leaders Excel After Graduation? Crowley's study indicates without doubt that leaders are heavily favored to become leaders in life. While it can be argued that those student leaders would be successful in later life anyway because of certain inherent qualities, we must admit, Crowley notes, that any program that fosters the development of such leadership qualities need not beg for justification.

The writer's survey was based on a study of post-school activities of graduates of a high school located in a small midwestern city. A total number of 485 graduates from the classes of 1927 to 1936 were surveyed by questionnaires supplemented by school records.

That the study was based on high school records in no way vitiates the findings from the standpoint of a junior college. Indeed, the increasing responsibility and the larger scale of affairs at a junior college serve to implement the value of the report, and, it would seem, increase the figures for the percentage of student leaders that rise above average post-college positions and responsibilities.

Specifically, Crowley's survey shows that a very considerable portion of the student leaders had come from the higher intelligence and scholastic levels. On the more practical side, earnings of the leaders as compared to all graduates averaged about one-third more than the latter group. Higher ranking positions claimed almost twice as many leaders as average graduates, and the percentage of unemployment among the student leaders was decidedly below that of all the graduates.

So, we may add Crowley's study to many another report and opinion that responsible student government is definitely worth the time and effort expended on its behalf.

Shots At ...RAMdom

IF

you still read this column, we'd like to point out that any names mentioned herein are always fictitious when their bearers may be put in an embarassing situation by their owners.

Last week we thoughtfully used a fictitious name in connection with the case of a little man who showed up in the municipal court wearing pyjamas. The next day we got a letter from the man whose name we used. It seems that a neighbor of his has a son who attends the college and who brought a paper to his house. By some odd chance his wife happened to read this column. There was her husband's name staring at her. When said gentleman got home that night he had a lot of explaining to do as to what he was doing in the municipal court wearing pyjamas.

We apologize to the O'Manovitch family and all its branches. Rest assured, Mrs. O'Manovitch, it was NOT your husband who wore pyjamas to court. We hope he never does.

THAT DARK DAY

when all students prepare themselves to see how well they did on their midterms was over. Things were a little quieter than usual on the bus. Consequently, we couldn't help overhearing a little conversation in front of us. It went like this:

"I got a cinch in everything but economics."

"Yeah? How'd you make out in economics?"

"I didn't take economics."

WHY IT IS

that so many odd things happen on street cars is mystery but the fact that they do is the saving grace of this column.

A gentleman staggered uncertainly aboard the inbound N car, jostling rudely every one who got in his way. One dignified old fellow who could have been a bank president if bank presidents rode on street cars, looked at the jostler keenly and asked him why he wasn't more careful. The staggering man eyed him pugnaciously.

"Did you see me when I got on this car?"

"I did," answered the gentleman.

"Did you ever see me before in your life?"

"No."

"Did you ever hear any one speak about me or mention my name?"

"No."

"Then how," asked the lurching man triumphantly, "did you know it was me?"

"AND,"

she said, "I would like a pair of alligator shoes."

"Very well madam, what size shoe does your alligator wear?"

THE

first soldier was exhausted. In the war games, he had just sprayed an "enemy soldier" with bullets, knifed him, machine gunned him, threw grenades at him. "Why don't you fall," he moaned weakly to the cool, poised "enemy." "Why should I," came the reply, "I'm a tank."

● Absentee Operator

Editor, The Guardsman:

For obvious reasons I should like to remain anonymous. My subject of complaint concerns the telephone operation. The college closes at 5 o'clock. However, the telephone desk has no operator after 4:30. How can important business that comes up at the last minute be transacted when the phone goes dead before schedule?

● Personality Plus?

Editor, The Guardsman:

Isn't that lovely! "Personality, not physical charm will determine the selection of the Frosh king," said a recent story in The Guardsman.' It's about time for somebody to realize how stupid a frosh king is and how stupid the boosting gentlemen will feel when he is informed of the honor, and this certainly helps. No one ever reads that a man, especially a college Joe, has physical charm. (And I wonder if any have personality.)

However, this one, and the announcement that the king would not be expected to escort Miss Queenie to the soph formal are two moves in the right direction. Perhaps by the process of elimination, the contests will get down to some system and turn out all right.

Really Hopeful

● Annoyed!

Editor, The Guardsman:

Why doesn't somebody do something about the phone booth situation? At times students do have an important message and wish to use a telephone right away, at least within the next 10 minutes time. But some group of students seems to be having a meeting by telephone conversation with absent brethren and occupies the booth for nearly half a period, so that nobody can get near a booth.

Not that I don't believe in the booths or students using the phones, but it is just the idea of them using them for hours at a time. Every once in a while students have important calls to make during their 10 minutes between classes, and when these students carry on their long conversations it is most annoying.

● Jewels

Jewels may come and jewels may go but the people who apparently don't go for them go on forever thinking up novelty ideas. Such as the woman who wears Hawaiian leis with her white shirts.

Sweater girls are apparently on the outs now, for many of the glamour queens (college woman, to you) are wearing sweaters several sizes too large for them. A new fad, y'know. Only the eastern colleges took to it last year. Yes, last semester there were sweaters that were expansive spelled with an 'a' not 'e.' but they were not of the slip-on variety. The larger the better. Maybe big brother can lend a helping hand—or his sweater.

A woman in the hall recently was seen wearing one of these sweaters that was fuzzy, white angora with the customary long sleeves and V-neck. It was really an eye catcher.

GLOVES—BUT DEFINITELY

As spring is still a few months off and the cool interest continue to blow around the school many women are seen keeping their hands warm by wearing gloves.

Your College Presents . . . Hotel Course Fills Need Of Eighth Largest Industry

By Iwanna Hayworth

THE hotel business has undergone an amazing transformation during the past quarter of a century thus becoming a very large industry, namely, the eighth largest in the whole country. This industry, however, is dependent upon its personnel for its existence.

Courses in the hotel and restaurant division of the college have been thus designed to develop in the students the ability to perform successfully on the job and to equip them with fundamental and sufficient technical knowledge to allow for future success in this field. The work given also offers cultural background which will greatly facilitate their placement in the industrial life of the community.

The entire curriculum has been organized on a practical and productive level. At the beginning students are started out with simple performances of the actual tasks, then are given more complex duties to prove their ability.

Production training is supplemented with related class work, the latter being presented by experts currently employed in the industry here in San Francisco.

PROGRAM UNIQUE

The terminal program of the hotel and restaurant division of the college is the only one anywhere of junior college level. Of course there are trade schools and the four-year courses offered by the universities.

One such a course, which is offered at Cornell University, served as the pattern for the originators of the division here in 1936.

At that time, classes for the junior college students were held at Galileo High. After six months of investigation, the first classes for these courses were held in March, 1936. The cafeteria kitchen at Galileo served as their laboratory at that time.

In the early days of the division, there was a limited number of courses; however, as time has passed, a greater number and more specialized courses have been added to the curriculum.

ENROLLMENTS NATION-WIDE

When the division started its second year, it received nation-wide publicity, thus resulting in students coming from all over the United States to enroll in the class. Men from the industry have cooperated in this work by contributing their time in instructing the students in the various specialized fields.

Last semester 1.7 per cent of the students registered in the college were enrolled in the hotel division. This semester, however, because of the national emergency, this percentage has dropped, but only slightly.

An enrollment in this division of work is limited, applications should be made in advance to allow time for qualifications of applicants to be considered.

HOTEL INDUSTRY ADVISES

The Educational Advisory Committee which is made up of men in the hotel industry have heartily expressed their unqualified endorsement of the work which the students are doing.

Membership in the Hotel and Restaurant Society is open to both students and alumni and offers a means of friendship between these graduates and students yet at the college.

Each spring, a group of students is chosen by the members of the faculty and men in the industry, and is sponsored on a state-wide tour of the various hotels, thus enabling them to learn something of how these places are operated in different regions of the state.

According to Mrs. Hilda Watson, chairman of the division, students need two years to complete training, and upon graduation are assured of positions. The last statement of course applies to those whose abilities warrant such placement.

Graduate students prepare the vitamin salads which are served in the college cafeteria every day. This phase of work is only a part of the specialized food preparation. Another illustration of the type of specialized work is found in the cake decoration classes which are under the instruction of Charles Strandberg, pastry chef of the Hotel St. Francis.

FEM ADS . . .

by Nancy

THANKSGIVING is over, but as every day is supposed to be Thanksgiving Day here are a few things for which thanks can still be given. Gloves, that can be finished by the wearer, thereby insuring perfect fit. Women with extra long fingers will appreciate these, especially as they are cut out to order and remain only to be stitched together. Hand sewing in contrasting colors are very effective and when sewn with colors matching a suit or dress would be super effective.

If the number of people seen wearing something has anything to do with popularity, hats with braids attached are very popular. They are beanie or calot type of hat with felt braids in red, yellow, or blue falling down the back. However, if you want to look old and dignified, better steer clear, because these have a tendency to drag off years instead of adding them.

MAKE YOUR OWN FRILLS

While hastily looking through a newspaper to find the Superman comic strip, a tasty little item and picture diverted our attention. After stopping, looking, and reading, we discovered that if a white handkerchief, the kind one gets for graduation and Christmas with fancy appliqued designs, is pressed flat and clipped on the front of a V-neck, dress it gives a frilly-frou effect. If you want cuffs to match, just take two more handkerchiefs and fold them triangularly and tie around the wrist—presto-change—cuffs to match!

Before changing the subject don't forget that with that basic dress long strands of pearls can be worn. Graduated ones similar to the shorter strands recently sold can now be gotten in single or double strands.

PEARLS STILL "IN"

Incidentally have you seen that little, teeny pearl choker that Delores Conners wear with her suits. She tells us that she made it from the end pearls of several strands.

Jewels may come and jewels may go but the people who apparently don't go for them go on forever thinking up novelty ideas. Such as the woman who wears Hawaiian leis with her white shirts.

Sweater girls are apparently on the outs now, for many of the glamour queens (college woman, to you) are wearing sweaters several sizes too large for them. A new fad, y'know. Cowie — Birth of the Blues from relaxation to syncopation

Spectator . . .

Today's Spectator was written by Doug Johnson

THE Birth of the Blues, latest Paramount effort depicting the rise of jazz from a raucous squall in New Orleans' lower Basin Street to the syncopated moaning of present day "name" orchestras, is a breezy little story that entertains despite lacking a point, and having a hairlike plot.

What plot there is centers around the struggle of Bing Crosby to organize a genuine, hell-to-leather Dixie-Land band and have his music accepted by the public. He bails Brian Donlevy, a coronet player, out of jail with the help of Mary Martin, who tags along as a vocalist. The love interest is in the rivalry between Donlevy and Crosby in their wooing of the fair cantry.

CAROLYN LEE BEST JUVENILE YET

Rochester, comic silhouette of Jello fame, is Crosby's faithful side kick, stooge and duster-offer. He and Carolyn Lee, Hollywood's latest juvenile glamour girl (incidentally, the best yet), provide some amusing scenes. Unlike Shirley Temple, Jane Withers, or the other "cute babies" who have toddled across the screen in the past, Carolyn doesn't try to be sweet. She seems to take her acting very seriously, yet at times, after delivering a line, a little how-did-that-come-out, of-me look crosses her face. Audiences eat it up, to witness the refined lady sitting behind us who murmured to her companion:

"If she was mine I wouldn't know whether to swat the back of her lap or kiss her."

If she'd been talking about Mary Martin it would've been a tough question to answer, also.

Crosby who has before proved his worth as an actor as well as a singer, delivers his lines with the same suavemess that add that certain, breezy, happy-go-luck quality to all his pictures. While Brian Donlevy doesn't seem to tie in with him as naturally as Bob Hope does, he does a fine bit of acting as the brazen cavalier.

ORCHESTRA NEW TO MOVIES

Jack Teagarden's orchestra provides the music and a few of the stooges to the drama. They seemed to do the corn demanded by the period of the action quite well. Perhaps Paramount heard them before they chose them as accompanists.

All the old ballads were brought back, including Waiting at the Church, Wait 'Till the Sun Shines Nellie, Caddie Up a Little Closer, and Melancholy Baby. Mary Martin's duet with Crosby in Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie was excellent, strangely enough. Singing a song as ancient as that and actually putting it over is a feat in itself. Together they excel any duet specializing in popular song.

On the same bill at the Paramount is the Parson of Panamint, Peter B. Kyne's story of a little mining town "wearing a neckless of nuggets and a dagger in her garter." Charley Ruggles takes the leading role, depicting the mayor of the blustering town who seeks to look after its interests. He employs Phillip Terry to act as a Parson for the church he built. The Parson fills the role of preacher and part time bouncer, striving to bring the pompous "upper class" together with the lowly mine worker via brotherly love and the church.

While merely a B picture, it has a fine dramatic finish, is packed with excellent acting and good photographic effects.

ACP This Collegiate World

SOLDIERS and sailors, even in Honolulu, read the classified ads, five Westminster College co-eds have found. The girls, in an effort to keep the service men from being lonely at their Hawaiian outpost, inserted the following advertisement in a Honolulu newspaper:

"Five Westminster college girls, New Wilmington, Pa., would like to correspond with men in the army and navy."

Within a short time about 200 letters arrived, from college men and steel workers, clerks and cowboys, salesmen and lumberjacks, now in military service. Few of the letters were "mash" notes. Most expressed their loneliness, while two sent poems, and one writer mailed a sermon on "helping the underdogs."

The students, unable to answer all the letters personally, have passed them out among other coeds, who will correspond with the senders.

Popeye has attained academic respectability. Students at Rockford, Illinois College are learning to sing about the exploits of the sailor man in Spanish. The tune found its way into the curriculum through the help of Professor Nicolas Percas, who first heard the song in his native Spanish home, and then found it equally popular in Venezuela, where he lived for two years before coming to this country.

The Popeye jingle is part of Percas' direct method of introducing Spanish to first-year students. A fourteenth century folk song is also in the repertoire of the Spanish students and during the year their instructor plans to teach the girls other songs illustrative of particular dialects used in different sections of Spain.

Charlotte Safranski, 17-year-old freshman at Mundelein College, Chicago, has the congratulations of an eminent author for discovering in his book an error that had escaped him, his co-authors and hundreds of educators and students for 15 years.

In "Composition for College Students," by Thomas, Manchester and Scott, Miss Safranski found a quotation credited to Max Eastman. She knew the line had been written by Max Beerbohm. She notified the publishers and Prof. Joseph M. Thomas of the University of Minnesota wrote:

"I find you are absolutely correct . . . I am very grateful indeed, to you for calling this error to my attention."

'Duke' Drake Just Missed; Cal. Rooters Get Wise

JUST AN EXPERIENCE

Not that we doubt it, of course not, but just between the footballers and the coaches, there seems to be a little story going around concerning an incident which occurred to a certain fullback during the team's southern expedition to the Rose Bowl.

It goes like this . . . After the team dropped a 12 to 7 game to Pasadena, the boys had a few days to roam about Los Angeles and its various surrounding hergs. Most of them went in groups just to see what they could see, (incidentally, they saw), and a few of them landed in the most astounding places!

Well, to make the story short . . . it seems that Al "Duke" Drake ventured into a movie studio where he had hopes of getting a screen test and perhaps crash the movies.

He was taken to the director, whose consent to the test made The Duke gasp. "Looks like just the type we need," barked the director, "give him a screen test!"

It wasn't long after this that The Duke found the lights out and one of the stooges placing a series of number in front of his countenance before every take. After it was all over, he fumbled around nervously awaiting the decision.

"Nice work, my boy," Duke heard a familiar voice bellow out. "You took a perfect test, you photograph wonderfully, you have a great profile, you blossom out with talent," encouraged the director.

"But," remarked the kill joy, "we just can't use you!"

"Why not?" asked The Duke as he quickly snapped out of whatever he was in.

"Well, it's like this," said the director, "although you photograph so well, your head absorbs all the sound waves, and the only thing we could use you for would be a silent picture, and," he concluded, "those days are gone forever!"

Sounds kind of fishy . . . and, on second thought, we had better look into the matter a little further.

IT'S ABOUT TIME

Not that we like to bring up a subject that has almost been forgotten, but it is interesting to note how the University of California rooting section has suddenly wised up to itself.

But the sad part of it is that the rooters didn't do the wising up on their own accord! No sir, only after the California football coach, Stub Allison, the Bear football players, and the student publication, The Daily Californian, made the request, did they take a turn for the best.

We've had the pleasure of seeing California play in nearly every one of its home games for the last five years, and nothing thrilled us more than to hear those rooters, 10,000 strong, yell, sing, and cheer the Bear team. It is really something to sit across the way and listen to the largest rooting section in the nation add so much color to a football game.

But something started during the Santa Clara game of this year that needed attention. Some lunk head got the idea that should the whole rooting section curse at once, it would really show the spirit that attends the university.

Nothing much was said about it, but the situation grew worse in the next game against the University of Southern California. In that game, the rooters repeated their new discovery after every penalty that was called against the Bears.

The University of California . . . a symbol of the West . . . an institution of higher learning and education, whose requirements are as tough as any university in the nation.

Institution of higher learning and education? Is that what a higher education does for you?

Well, it was after the U.S.C. game that the rooters were requested to act like gentlemen, to which request they responded wholeheartedly.

In the University's last two games, against Washington and against Oregon State, those rooters went back to their old way, and after each penalty enacted as good sports should. Their spirit was brought out in ways that were much more satisfactory than the abusive language method.

Intramural Entries Due December 5

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, December 5, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for softball competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Please enter the following team in the softball round robin that is to be conducted as part of the intramural program of sport activity. I have read the intramural program of sports as it appeared in The Guardsman, September 12, with special attention to the rules and regulations, awards, and point system.

Name of college organization represented.....

If independent team, name of team.....

Manager of team: Name..... Address..... Phone.....

Captain of team: Name..... Address..... Phone.....

Name of Players 1.....2.....3.....
4.....5.....6.....
7.....8.....9.....
10.....11.....12.....

In entering this team I understand that none but members of this college, or college organizations are eligible to compete.

If a student is a member of your organization, he is not eligible to compete unless his name appears in the above list.

I realize that because of studies it may be impossible to have the same players on the field each time our team plays, but I shall make every effort to have a team present.

Signed.....
(Team Manager)

Intramural

Swim Meet Features Program

Chief interest on the intramural calendar this week, is the swimming meet scheduled to be held this Friday, December 5, at the Jefferson High School pool, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, said this week.

The events to be staged in the meet are the 50, 100, and 220 yard free style, the 50 and 100 yard breast stroke, the 50 yard back stroke, and the 150 yard three man relay.

Medals Awarded

Medals will be awarded for first and second places in the individual events, and to the winning relay team. Points will be given for first, second, and third places, which will automatically count toward the team totals.

Entries will be accepted in the men's gymnasium by Al Eisan, swimming coach, until Thursday, December 4.

The meet is open to individual swimmers as well as teams representing fraternities, clubs, or various other organizations within the college. Swimmers may form a team merely to swim in the relay, but no relay squads will be allowed to be formed on the day of the meet.

Enter One Event

Contestants can enter but one event, not including the relay. Students who have won letters in swimming and competed on the college water polo squad are ineligible to compete.

Since the meet will be held during college hours, the exact hour of the meet will be determined by the largest number of men, having a free hour Friday afternoon.

Compete In Volleyball

Sharing top billing with the swimming meet this week, will be the volleyball tournament, which is entering its second round, Thursday, December 4.

All games scheduled for Thursday's round will start promptly at 3:30 o'clock in the men's gymnasium, Brady said.

Newmans Entered

Last semester's winner, the Newman Club, will make its first appearance of the fall semester, as it drew a bye in the first round along with the Goats and Rabbits, topnotch contenders.

The roster of the Newman Club remains intact from last spring, with the exception of one position, Brady said.

By Friday, the singles tennis tournament will undoubtedly be completed. Doubles competition will start Monday, December 8, and the pairings may be found on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium. All contestants competing in the doubles should leave their telephone number with Brady for it will be easier for the players to contact each other concerning the pairings.

Other Entries Taken

Touchtackle football and softball entries should be handed in quickly as possible, Brady announced. The outcome of the weather will determine what sport will be conducted first. If rain prevails, the touchtackle league will be held, and if the weather is favorable, the softball tournament will be staged.

Ping pong, horseshoes, and the rifle competition will be run-off after the Christmas holidays.

Boxing

Trials Being Held This Week By Jim Jensen

With fists flying, the men's boxing classes continued with the process of eliminations in the men's gymasium, in preparation for the coming intramural boxing carnival to be held at the Coliseum Bowl on Monday night, December 8.

The bouts will continue to be run off until sometime this week when finalists will be determined.

So far, the outstanding fighters are Dave Hunicke, who had to step on it to defeat one of his rivals who had high hopes of knocking Hunicke off of his pedestal as champion in the 165 pound class.

Cavanagh Wins

Another boxer who won his individual bout was Dave Cavanaugh, who will probably give Hunicke plenty of argument if he comes through.

Two Entries Taken

Two contestants who finished in the win column were Ira Cartney, who Jensen says "is a very good boy, and should come out among the light heavyweight finalists." The other 175 pounder is Ray Ham, somewhat of a newcomer, who, with a little more experience, should give a big account of himself if he finishes among the top contenders.

Gaddy Requests Baseball Signups Before Holidays

All men students wishing to compete on the college varsity baseball squad should sign up with Jack Gaddy, baseball coach, in the men's gymnasium any day before the Christmas vacation. Practice will start immediately after the beginning of next semester, as Gaddy would like to get some information on his men before daily practice begins.

Isaacs Returns

Manuel Isaacs, an oldtimer in the 127 pound weight, came through with his usual dependable performance, as did Ken Ludlem, another feather-weight contender. Isaacs and Ludlem, both, will probably be in the finals This class will undoubtedly afford the college rooters some of the best performances and thrills of the evening.

Ed Hemsted, in the 135 pound class, finished a winner in his first bout, and he also, should be among the finalists, as he seems to have a little experience in boxing at sometime or another.

Silva Threaj

Duke Drake, the present heavyweight king, isn't sure whether he will fight or not, but hopes he will be able to compete. Also in Drake's class is Joe Silva, champion in his class at St. Mary's last semester, and who will give Drake plenty of competition if Drake fights. Another heavyweight who finished a winner in the heavyweight class, was Ed Olsen, who has had very little experience in actual competition. In his first fight last week, it was just raw courage, and plenty of intestinal fortitude that carried him through his bout.

Anyone may tramp down the hill to the men's gym and see some of the men in action. The fights are being run off from 2 o'clock until around 3:30.

Refreshing Rams

Coach Allan Eisan looks on with great satisfaction as his mermen on the Intramural swimming team work out at the Jefferson High School in preparation for the meet that begins on next Friday.

TOURNEY WEEK BEGINS TOMORROW

Bowling Party First Activity Planned; Tennis Finals, Horse Show Scheduled As Next Events Thursday, December 4

By Nancy Nagle

Climaxing the semester's activities of the Women's Athletic Association, tourney week will begin tomorrow with a bowling party and finish up with the presentation of awards at the tourney week banquet next week, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the group, announced.

Tomorrow at 4:15 p.m. a free bowling party will be held for all members and non-members at the Lincoln Bowling Alleys on Sixth Avenue near Geary Boulevard, Gracina Lowe, club manager, explained. In addition to regular bowling, Miss Lowe announced that a team composed of members of the Girls Athletic Association from Lowell High School would also bowl with members of the WAA team.

Tennis Finals Thursday

Thursday, December 4, from 2:15 to 4 p.m. the tennis finals will be played off, according to Pat Mooney, club manager. She added that a match with San Francisco State was being planned for the same day if the new courts in Balboa Park were completed before that time. If they are not completed before that day the match will be played as soon as possible.

The horse show will be featured at San Francisco Riding Academy at 7:15 p.m. also on Thursday, it was announced. Walk, trot, and canter events will be scheduled for beginner, intermediate and advanced riders.

Three events highlighting next Friday, are golfing at Lincoln Park, a rifle shoot at the rifle range, featuring a novelty shoot at which candles and balloons will take the place of targets for the day, and ice skating at 2:30 at Winterland. Peggy Egan, champion skater will be presented as part of the ice skating program. Admission, but not rental of skates, for those who sign-up in the women's gymnasium will be paid for by WAA.

Tennis Competition

Members of the tennis club have been invited to take part in the tennis sectional play day at San Mateo, Saturday, December 6, Miss Mooney, tennis manager, revealed. Names of students attending are not as yet available, Miss Mooney said. The program of the day will consist of matches between varsity junior colleges and will be concluded by the finals and a luncheon. San Francisco won first place last semester, Miss Mooney pointed out, and it is hoped that another victory will be added this year.

Badminton finals will be played Monday, December 8, according to Leila Rocovi, club manager, but the names of the players are as yet unknown.

All women of the college are invited to go swimming free of charge at the YWCA pool on Sutter Street, Tuesday, December 10 at 1:30 o'clock, Thelma SooHoo, swimming manager said, following by the tourney week banquet at the Trinity Methodist Church at Sixth and Market Streets.

Crienkovich Will Speak

Speaker at the banquet will be Helen Crienkovich, national diving champion and only woman student to be presented with the men's block SF, who will speak on her coming trip to the Hawaiian Islands. In addition to the talk by Miss Crienkovich, the orchestra organized for the WAA by Dorothy Fairbanks will make its initial appearance by playing several Christmas carols, and accompanying the community singing. The talent bureau is also being contacted for additional entertainment. Elma Oddstead, chairman of the banquet revealed.

Guests for the evening will be Dr. Alice Putter, Aileen Kinkel, Laurine Bergin, Berthis Keller, and Verrel Weber, WAA instructors, and GAA presidents from the San Francisco public high schools. Each woman planning to attend is expected to bring a senior high school student, Miss Oddstead announced.

Dinner Reduced

The dinner 60 cent dinner will be offered for 40 cents, Miss Oddstead said, and tickets may be obtained at the college bank before Tuesday afternoon at 1 p.m.

Another important feature of tourney week will be the election of officers for the next semester. Nominations were made at a special meeting of the nominating committee Friday morning, Bernice Struhe, chairman said. Members of her committee are Irene Weed, Chioyo Nao, Dorothy Ann Kraul and Helen Risseto.

Every WAA member may vote during the elections which will take place Thursday, Friday, Monday and Tuesday. Miss Struhe said, and results will be announced at the banquet.

Archery Shoot Planned

Officially closing the week will be an archery shoot on Wednesday, December 10 from 3 to 5 p.m. in which six teams of four women each will compete, shooting at 25 yards. Warm-ups will consist of shooting at balloons and decorated targets, Helen Crienkovich, manager said, after which refreshments will be served.

Any women wishing to attend the archery shoot, golfing, swimming or ice skating should sign up either at the library loan desk, or at the counter in the women's gymnasium.

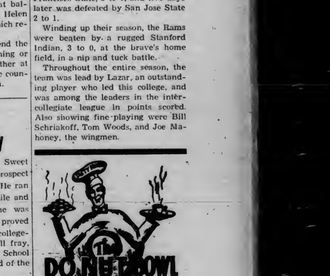
Alvenese Shannon, one of the WAA bowlers, will bowl tomorrow during the opening tourney week event, when the junior college plays San Francisco State College. Besides the competitive bowling all women students are invited to a free bowling party at 4:15 to 6 p.m. at the Lincoln Bowling Alleys on Sixth Avenue near Geary Boulevard.

Red And White Soccer Squad Ends Season

Ending its season schedule with four defeats, three wins, and one tie, the college soccer squad put away its suits and shin guards, having completed a futher successful soccer semester until next year.

The squad began its season by trav-

Sweet's Cindermen Prepare For Season; Skinner Looms As Ram's Track Mainstay



With the cross country race, which was won by Jim Skinner in record time, a thing of the past, the trackmen have gone back to their old routine of preparing for the coming track season, according to Coach Russ Sweet.

"We're not doing anything different than we had been doing before practice for the cross country began," said Sweet. "The men are reporting to their track spikes again and practice consists of exercises and whatever is needed for an athlete's respective event," continued the Ram coach.

Sweet was pleased with the performance of Skinner, who clipped 23 seconds off the record. Skinner was a member of Sweet's track team last semester, at which time Sweet claimed that he was a good prospect but needed more experience. He ran both the mile and the half mile and the Ram mentor believed he was very promising, which was proved during the half time of the college-Salinas Junior College football fray, when the ex-Balboa High School athlete romped home far ahead of the entire field.

Skinner will again be on Sweet's track squad in 1942, which is one of the reasons why Sweet predicts a great season for the Rams. Along with Skinner are many returners from the last season, as well as many newcomers and transfers.

Amori Surveys Why Students Leave College

Sixty per cent of the students enrolled in the junior college leave some time during their first year's work, according to Joseph A. Amori, college employment director, in his article Why Junior College Students Withdraw, published in a recent issue of the Junior College Journal.

Amori, after realizing the increasing amount of withdrawals during one semester, decided to conduct a survey and find out the real reason for this increasing rate.

Former Students Contacted

His survey started by selecting at random one hundred "petitions for leaves," contacting these former students either personally or by telephone, and presenting his questions in such a manner that the students would not realize the object of the call and feel free to answer. The questions concerned the students likes or dislikes for courses, instructors, and social life at the college. In over half the cases, the real reason for withdrawal was revealed.

Many Reply—"Work"

As the word "work" seemed to be the logical answer to the question "why withdraw," many students resorted to it, but Amori reports that out of the 75 students who started work was their reason for leaving, only 30 were really working. Several had transferred, were married, while others dropped out because of illness in the family and personal ill-health, or discontentment. The latter symptom seemed to claim the largest number of students. Amori points out, adding that perhaps a special adviser whose position would be to take care of students' problems would reduce the number who drop because of discontentment.

Another article written by Amori entitled Personalizing Health Instruction was published in the Journal of School Health.

Job "Boom" Creates Another Problem

With the speeding up of the nation's preparedness drive there has been an increased need of office workers, but, even so, about half of the women that have been given positions in the business world from the college are unprepared to keep these positions after the boom is over, announced Ward M. Nichols, acting chairman of the business department, last week.

The business classes of the college are equipping the students as fast as they can but even so the need for workers is difficult to fill, Nichols said. The need is so great that business firms are taking semi-trained people to fill their enlarged needs and it will be the best of these that will be able to keep the positions that they now hold.

There have been several new classes in the business department that have been organized with the aim of better equipping the students for jobs that are permanent, stated Nichols. Among these classes are the new ones that are divided into three component parts, each of them going on at the same time so that one of each is in session at any time of the semester.

Further announcements of these classes will appear in future editions of The Guardsman.

Only Men Now Accepted As Wrapping Course Trainees

Only men will be accepted for future training as wrappers in department stores during the Christmas holidays this year. This rule was made necessary, stated Joseph A. Amori, employment director, because of the excessive overtime that goes with a job of this sort.

Some stores have working schedules for their wrappers as long as 12 to 14 hours at a time. Although such hours represent good money, Amori said, they are not for women.

Of the 150 men and women who have taken this instruction in wrapping, said Amori, 25 have been placed already with jobs waiting for 200 more as soon as college adjourns, or the students get leaves of absences.

Over 300 men and women have been placed in Christmas jobs so far this season, said Amori, in almost every type of position. Such positions as clerks, filing, mechanics, clerical assistants, typists, stenographers.

The college employment department is a new student service initiated this semester.

Hotel Division On Saving Spree

By Harold Levin

How to Save for Uncle Sam is the pertinent theme now being stressed in the college's class in restaurant management, Hilda Watson, chairman of the hotel and restaurant division, announced recently.

As its part in the present national emergency, the hotel and restaurant division is following the national trend in stressing the conservation of food stuffs, as well as light, fuel and water.

Turn off the light, the water and the gas when not needed; watch your temperatures for deep food frying, thus saving on foods and fats; do not use napkins as cleaning cloths and do not waste supplies are but a few of the topics being taught which offer means of conserving resources and materials for the national welfare.

The rising prices of food stuffs necessitates that the persons handling these commodities take care that there is no waste in any direction, according to Mrs. Watson.

"Because rising prices are an indication of market shortages, we may yet face the possibility of actual lack of certain foods. To avoid this, each of us should do our part toward national conservation," Mrs. Watson declared.

Eli Wong Enters Art Field As Illustrator

Eli Wong, who developed his talents here at the college is now successfully drawing for the San Francisco Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in a monthly pamphlet entitled Our Animals.

He gives full credit for his training in art to Richard Allman and Evans Ecke, art instructors here.

Wong was helped through school by the NYA, where he used his talents in making posters and other art work.

In addition to his artistic abilities, which he has practiced since he was a child, his natural love for animals made him well qualified for his present occupation.

Wong, only 19 years old, has drawn for Our Animals since its adoption.

Each month he contributes many clever illustrations and a plate introducing a department in the society's report.

Born here in the city, Wong graduated from George Washington High School before continuing his education at the college.

Transfers To California Must See Registrar Today

All students expecting to transfer to the University of California after Christmas vacation are instructed by J. Paul Mohr, college registrar, to report to his office some time today.

"Even though the students may have already expressed their desire to transfer to the university, I still want them to report to my office," Mohr said. "I am trying to work out a system with California so that students transferring from the junior college will not have to enter late.

"The day that our finals begin the spring semester at California is officially opened, and if my idea works, it is possible junior college students will be allowed to take their finals early or maybe have none at all," Mohr explained.

Campus Club Crier

All club announcements should be turned into The Guardsman office, Room 134, according to the following deadlines:

Wednesday, 11 a.m. for the Friday issue; Friday, 11 a.m. for the Tuesday issue.

- Bible Club . . . Free movie in observance of the first annual National Bible Week, Friday, December 5 at 1 o'clock in Room 136. Everyone is invited. Regular meetings Tuesday, Thursday in Room 208 at noon.
- Block Society . . . Meets today to discuss initiation of new members. Time and place will be posted on bulletin board.
- Nu Epsilon Sigma . . . Important meeting tomorrow, 4 o'clock, Room 136. Last meeting before dance.
- Theta Tau . . . Meeting this evening, 7:30 at the home of Lois Clawson, 17 Auston Way. Important discussion will follow meeting.

Civil Service

Applications For New Jobs Now Received

Civil service examinations for positions which students of the college may possibly fill were announced recently by Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor.

Applications are now being received for the position of automotive mechanic helper which pays a salary of $1,320 a year.

To qualify for this position a person must have had at least six month's experience in the automotive mechanic trade or at least one year trade instruction in the trade in organized classes in a vocational or industrial school of secondary grade.

Duties Named

The duties of the position are to assist the automotive and automobile mechanic in the servicing, maintaining and repairing of gasoline and diesel scrapers, gasoline-power pumps and compressors, bulldozers, tractors, trucks, passenger cars, gasoline and diesel powered shovels and draglines and jack hammers.

Applications are now also being received for the position of classified laborer paying a salary of $1200 a year. The duties of the position are to perform, under immediate supervision, manual or common labor but with an occasional assignment to tasks above mere common labor, requiring some intelligence at well as physical strength.

Qualifications Listed

To qualify for this position, an applicant must show that he has completed at least four grades of schooling or that he has had at least six months' experience in manual work above the grade of mere common or unskilled labor.

This position requires no written test. Applicants will be rated on the quality and quantity of their experience and fitness.

Students who are interested in obtaining this or any other civil service position should see Luckmann in his office, Room 222, immediately.

Hawaiian Exhibition Tour For 'Clinky'

As a guest of the University of Hawaii, Helen Crlenkovich, national women's diving champion and a junior college student, will tour the Hawaiian Islands during the latter part of December.

Miss Crlenkovich will leave on the Matson Liner, Lurline, on December 11. The steamship will dock at Honolulu December 17.

"All my expenses will be paid by the university as will the expenses of my chaperone, Mrs. Phil Patterson, wife of the Fairmont swimming coach," she said. Diving exhibitions will be given by Miss Crlenkovich in Maui, Ewa Plantation, and Honolulu.

Chosen Queen

"On January 1 of each year the University of Hawaii stages a football game with some college from the states, next New Year's Day they will play the University of Utah. Hawaii has selected me 'Pineapple Queen' to represent them at the game, while the Utah school has asked me to appear as their queen," Miss Crlenkovich continued.

A tentative trip to South America, it was to be her second, has been postponed in favor of the Hawaiian trip.

Californians Inc. 'Shoot' College Art In Action

Statues of Thomas A. Edison and Leonardo da Vinci, the mosaic on the side of the building, and the mural being completed by Fred Olmsted were included in a movie entitled Art in San Francisco, according to Heinz Bergruen, Californians Incorporated representative, who visited the college recently.

Twelve hundred feet of film including the works of Olmsted, shots of the artist colony on Telegraph Hill, the three museums in the city, the old Montgomery Block, and the California School of Fine Arts will be completed and shown to high schools and colleges as a part of the visual education program, and to other organizations throughout the state, Bergruen stated.

Guinther, Former Student Here, In RCAF

Pilot Officer Beauford Guinther looks pleased with his 'job' as he poses on the wing of an RCAF ship.

He won his wings after taking up the Fairey Battle, rated one of the world's largest single motor craft.

His rank is comparable to that of a first lieutenant in the U.S. army air corps.

Commissioned As Pilot Officer On Winning Honors As Trainee

Formerly a student of this college, Beauford Guinther, 20-year old son of Mrs. Dolores Guinther Waldorf, noted flyer, and Howard Waldorf, aviation editor of the Oakland Post-Enquirer, was recently commissioned as a pilot officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force, it was learned today. The rank he received is equal to that of first lieutenant in the U.S. Army Air Corps.

Answering the call for experienced pilots, the young flyer volunteered for the RCAF last July where he was commissioned as a pilot officer. From there he was sent to the officer's training school at Toronto where he was graduated with highest honors in his class.

Wings Won At Alberta

Graduated, again with high honors from the RAF school at Ontario, he was awarded the coveted wings, the promotion to flying officer, and the assignment as staff pilot at the new bombing and gunnery school at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada.

As staff pilot he flies the huge Fairey Battle from which the students practice gunnery and bombing. In gunnery practice the plane is flown at an altitude of 300 feet and at a speed of 200 miles an hour. The bombing is practiced from 10,000 feet up.

Raised In Flying

Flying Officer Guinther was practically raised in a flying school, having spent all of his spare time there while attending Sequoia Grammar School, Oakland High School, and the college.

He took his first flying lessons at the age of 16, the minimum age permitted by law, and soloed in two hours and 20 minutes.

He won his private pilot license on his eighteenth birthday, also the lowest age permitted by law. One of his first flights as a private pilot was a cross-country hop from Seattle to Alameda when he ferried a plane there for his mother.

Naval Cadet Board Seeks Trainees Here

The Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board was at the college this week seeking applicants for naval flight training, Major George Richards, college Civil Pilot Training instructor, announced recently.

The board was giving physical examinations to qualified students during the first part of this week in the college observatory.

Office In Ferry Building

The board, which has its office in Room 8 in the Ferry Building, selects all the naval aviation cadets from Colorado, Utah, Nevada and Northern California. It visits all the colleges and junior colleges in its territory seeking applicants for the naval flight training course.

The following students of the college were examined by the board this week:

Kline Raymond Ford, Angelo Getas, Joseph Greely, Albert King, Howard Marg, Wesley Prather, Robert Scott and Robert Silverman.

Specifications Listed

The candidates for the flight training are selected from applicants who have completed two or more years of college, are between the ages of 20 and 27, unmarried, and in excellent physical condition.

The training of each candidate costs the Navy $35,000.

The course consists of 25 hours of dual and solo training at Oakland including ground school in navigation, radio and military tactics.

Cadets Get Further Training

This is followed by one month of intensive ground training at Dallas, Texas. Then the cadet trains seven months at either Jacksonville, Corpus Christi, or Pensacola, at the end of which the cadet is commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve.

After 18 months as a commissioned officer, the cadet may apply for a commission in the regular Navy. In the last year 375 reserve officers applied for and received a commission in the regular Navy.

Lack Of Funds Hampers Coart's Publicity Work

Although it is hampered by rules which prohibit the posting of signs on college walls and also by a lack of funds, the internal publicity committee is still functioning in the best way it knows how, George Coart, committee chairman recently remarked.

"At the present time," Coart announced, "the committee is working on small signs which will advertise the tentative mixer dance on Monday, December 8 and the sophomore formal."

Understanding Your College

By The Editor

VII. Gag Comes Between Algy And Editor

"TELL me, Ed," Algy questioned, "how does the well-dressed woman have her clothes designed?"

"And you tell me, Algy, aren't we getting away from our topics? You know we're supposed to kick around the social committee and the rally committee today."

"Yeah, I know," he returned, "but I figured we needed a rest from student government. You know, all work and . . . "

"Didn't you say you'd see it through last time, Algy?"

"O.K., O.K., it was just a suggestion, but don't you want to fill out the gag?"

"No, Algy. Now let's get to work. What does the social committee do for the college?"

"Why it runs all the dances. That's easy."

"That's only about half right, Algy. It does run most Associated Student dances. 'Sponsor' might be a better word, though. But the basic job of the social committee is to regulate the most important social activities of the college so that functions of different groups do not overlap or conflict.

"It is the job of the Associated Student vice-president, who automatically becomes social committee chairman to coordinate this social calendar. All social dates planned by various college organizations entered on the calendar must be approved by the social committee which, in turn must submit them to the Ex Council for its approval.

"Our present committee chairman is—"

"—Pat Niemeyer," Algy chirped. "I know her; she's—"

"No, Algy, not now."

"Oh, well, how about finishing my gag?"

"No, Algy." Determination capitalized each vowel.

"To get on, the social committee acts as the official reception group for all functions sponsored by the Associated Students. It sponsors, as we noted, the semi-formal class dances. The bang-up low soph dance in Oakland was the last such affair. It also sponsors the popular Friday afternoon mixer dances held in the women's gym. The AMS barn dance, the soph formal, AWS teas, and similar affairs always receive willing support from the social committee.

"We don't have to tell you that the chairman and her committee members have no light task. For faculty advisers, the committee has Deans Dougherty and Browne, Claire Cuneo, and Cecil Aggeler—to all of whom Miss Niemeyer ascribes much of the success of college social affairs.

"While Miss Niemeyer has about 14 people working on the social committee, she emphasizes that she is eager to add any interested students to that number.

"Now, Algy, we'll take a quick look at the rally committee."

"Wait," he said, "let's finish that gag for an intermission number."

"Later, Algy, later."

"All right, shoot the stuff to us; but that punch line will kill you."

"Here we go then, Algy. The rally committee, like the social committee is one of the six representative groups for major student activities in the college. Its main purpose is to instill spirit in the student body politic. Naturally, rallies are the chief means by which the problem is attacked. In addition to the usual rallies of an hour or so, the rally committee, this semester, has initiated 10 minute step rallies sandwiched between classes."

"You know, I like those," Algy broke in. "I think it was a good idea."

"Agreed, Algy. Too many longer rallies wouldn't fit into the college program, hence the step rallies are the ideal solution.

"Rally planning is supplemented work by athletic events, like organizing rooting sections, preserving order there, and generally bolstering spirit.

"The rally committee is headed by the rally commissioner, Steve Mohorovich, who represents the group on the Ex Council. Working directly with him are the head yell leader, Mel Steele, and his two assistants, Norman Appelbaum and Don Taylor, plus several voluntary workers from the student body. Alden W. Smith, faculty adviser for the Ex Council, is also the adviser for the rally committee.

"The office of the rally commissioner was just created last semester. Formerly the head yell leader headed the committee and acted as its coordinating unit. Anything else you want to know about it, Algy?"

"No, but—but—"

"All right, Algy, how does the well-dressed woman have her clothes designed?"

"So that she is always seen in the best places. Ain't it howl?"

"All we can say is—don't do it again."

Faculty, Students Asked To Paint Technology Talk

Faculty members and college students are invited to attend the final lecture of a series of three on paint technology, to be given by J. D. Tight, president of the R. N. Nason Paint Co. on Monday, December 8, at 8 p.m. in Room 100.

Tight has chosen as the title of his lecture "The Miracle of Paints in Everyday Life," and he will use pictures and laboratory demonstrations to illustrate his subject.

To Rule For A Week

Women Students To Choose Frosh King From Among Four Candidates Today; Sweetheart Election By AMS Scheduled Next Tuesday As Opening Soph Week Event

The Sweetheart

From seven final candidates, including Pat Brand, Shirley Wood, Carmel Cole, Margaret McMahon, Lucille Landresse, Kerma Cazier, and Matilda Mortigia, Associated Men Students will elect the traditional sophomore sweetheart next Tuesday.

The winner will be revealed next Wednesday afternoon at a rally on the front steps beginning at 2 o'clock and to run for 25 minutes.

She will be honored at the high sophomore formal Saturday where she will be presented with a perpetual trophy by the high sophomore class, a sterling silver loving cup by the Beta Tau fraternity, and an engraved sweetheart locket by the Phi Lambda Epsilon fraternity.

Photographs Displayed

Individual photographs of the candidates, by the Nicholas Johnston Studios, St. Francis Hotel Building, are being displayed in the showcase in the main lobby.

Voting will be conducted Tuesday from 9 a.m. till 3 or 4 p.m. All Associated Men Students are urged to vote.

Chosen By New Plan

A new method for selection of preliminary and final candidates was introduced this semester by sophomore president, George Coart.

A committee of seven judges, whose names were not revealed until after the preliminary election, chose a group of 16 preliminary candidates. From these, the same committee nominated the final seven, November 26.

"Stalwarts" Named

The "seven soph stalwarts" who made the preliminary decision were Don Cole, Art Pearl, Jim Juri, Ward Schwartzman, and Bill Quandt. Duke Drake and Art Posten aided in the final judging.

Preliminary candidates were Virginia Ovenshire, Dorris MacKillop, Dorothy Walker, Pat Hamilton, Muriel Jacobson, Shirley Roby, Jean Hunter, Barbara Stahlmann, Joan Hunter, and the seven finalists.

The King

Election of the college's first freshman campus king will be conducted today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the main hall, first floor. All Associated Women Students are urged to vote.

Finalists in the contest, who have been chosen on the basis of personality, appearance, and general popularity, are Jim Skinner, Bob Murphy, Dick Souza, and Dick Dickson.

The name of the winner, according to Bing Kirk, low freshman president, will be announced in next Tuesday's Guardsman, and the campus king will be introduced at the rally to be held on the front steps at 2 o'clock next Wednesday. The "King" will receive a complimentary bid to the high sophomore formal.

Individual photographs of the four candidates, taken by the Nicholas Studios, St. Francis Hotel Building, are being displayed in the show case in the main lobby.

The campus king contest was inaugurated this semester by officers of the low freshman class to select a typical college boy to parallel the sophomore sweetheart. Selection has been in accordance with the new plan adopted in the sweetheart election. Seven women, representing the Associated Women Students, nominated the four candidates for campus king.

The seven women who selected the four candidates were Aspasia Vasilatos, Margaret McMahon, Gloria DeMartini, Carmel Cole, Mary Jane Frohman, and last semester's sweetheart, Eloise Windfeldt.

Week's Plans Spectacular

Commencing with the sweetheart election next Tuesday, featuring a rally on the front steps at 2 o'clock Wednesday, and culminating with the traditional formal Saturday night, a spectacular high sophomore week is anticipated by student leaders.

Herb Caen may appear at the rally which has been planned for the purpose of introducing for the first time the sophomore sweetheart, Myron Du Bain, chairman of the sophomore rally committee, revealed Wednesday. The freshman campus king to be elected today, will also be presented at this event.

Hecksher To Attend Rally

Ernie Hecksher, popular orchestra leader, who will play for the formal, and Helen Lynne, featured vocalist, and a student at the college, may also be guests at the rally to be held from 2 to 2:25 o'clock. All students will be excused from classes to attend, Du Bain announced, and all Associated Students are invited.

Jive Band On Program

Entertainment may be provided by Saunders King and his "jive" band with Macey Williams at the piano, and other student talent.

George Coart, high sophomore president; Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, and Du Bain, will alternate as masters of ceremonies.

A perpetual trophy, now being displayed in the college lobby showcase, will be presented to the winning sweetheart contestant at the Wednesday rally by the Beta Tau fraternity, according to Du Bain.

Heckshers First Name Band At Soph Formal

Ernie Hecksher's orchestra, to play for the high sophomore formal next Saturday, December 13, will be the first "name band" to play for any dance at the college.

Hecksher has recently held engagements at three major hotels, the Mark Hopkins, the Palace, and the Clift, and has played for dances at the University of California and the University of San Francisco. He was selected from among more than 12 popular bands auditioned by the high sophomore dance committee.

Helen Lynne, featured vocalist with Hecksher's orchestra is also a student at the college.

A limited number of bids to the dance is now available at the bank at $1.50. George Coart, high sophomore president, warns those who wish to attend to secure their bids immediately.

The breakfast, following the dance, at 3 a.m., will be held at the Old Colonial, a new drive-in restaurant on the El Camino Real, near the Beresford Country Club.

The Beresford Country Club, site of the formal may be reached from San Francisco by following highway 101 to San Mateo, turning right at 20th Avenue, and driving about a mile and a half toward the coast. The club is just off the highway.

Highlight of the affair will be the introduction of the sophomore sweetheart to be elected next Tuesday.

Many Jobs Still Available In Bay Region Cities

A large number of Christmas jobs are now available in Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley, both in post offices and department stores, Joseph A. Amori, college employment director, said this week.

Positions on this side are almost all filled, especially in department stores, Amori added, although candy stores, shoe stores and service stations still have some openings with the latter paying as high as 65 cents an hour for part time work.

Western Union has an application in for 30 more men and women who can type, as teleprinters. They also are asking for applicants to work on telephones. No experience is necessary for either of these jobs, Amori said.

Author Of College Fight Song Finally Gains Fame

EVANSTON, ILL.—(ACP).—The writer of a famous college song whose modesty kept him from the public eye for 28 years has finally accepted recognition.

He is Theodore Van Etten, Chicago pharmacist who in 1912 composed the words and music of "Go Northwestern" while a senior in Northwestern University school of pharmacy.

At Northwestern's recent homecoming game against Minnesota he was honored guest of the Northwestern Alumn association, receiving a varsity letter and membership in the N-men's Club.

"Go U Northwestern" is the only song Van Etten ever composed.

In 1850 Hangtown Paid High Prices

By Harold Levin

Do the high prices of restaurant food and service distress you?

Compared with the prices charged by the Eldorado Hotel of Hangtown, California, in the year 1850, the present prices are dirt cheap.

Ninety-one years ago, according to a menu from the aforementioned hotel, bean soup cost one dollar a portion, two potatoes had a price of .75 cents, rice pudding with molasses brought the proprietor of the hotel one dollar a serving and a "square meal with dessert" could be had for three dollars.

A footnote on the menu adds a significant "payable in advance" and indicates that gold scales will be found at the end of the bar.

Students of the college hotel and restaurant division studying their constantly rising cost sheets are beginning to wonder if the Hangtown prices will again be in vogue by the time they undertake the operation of their own eating places.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

USUALLY not the most optimistic American, Mayor La Guardia of New York City has predicted that the present war will "be over in a year." He may now be classed in the absolute anti-pessimist group.

"I doubt whether Mr. Hitler will be able to enter the next winter if we speed up production," declared the Little Flower, according to an AP dispatch. If Mr. La Guardia is correct in his assumptions concerning Mr. Hitler, he (Mr. La Guardia) will go down in history as a prognosticator de luxe.

"If we speed up production," says the Mayor to the Senate naval affairs committee. By chance he may have forgotten that strikes are strictly taboo in Nazi controlled Europe. If Mr. Hitler expresses a desire for Mr. Smith to continue working, Mr. Smith continues working despite any trivial difference of opinion.

But in this land of freedom, where liberty is a foolish prerequisite to self defense, our individual desires and idyosyncracies must be satiated before we can possibly help our country. In that one respect at least the fascists are right. The state, the government, the people as a whole are vastly more important than any single individual or any single minority group. And the defense, the well being of these people, of that government should not be endangered by selfish actions.

NOT AMERICANA

This is not liberty, it is not freedom, it is not the true American way. But an honest person will admit that all attributes of the American way will not get things done in the proper manner if they are allowed to exist during an emergency such as the present one.

The sacrifices we are willing to make so that the America we know will be safe are not sacrifices in any manner of speaking. They are out and out selfish allowances. We are willing to sacrifice somebody else's son, somebody else's fortune, somebody else's security, somebody else's working conditions—but when we are asked to contribute in a like manner the din that is therewith raised can be heard from here to anyplace else.

That is labor's trouble today. For a long time they have been having their way in everything. The people have kowtowed to them, capitalists have given way before them, the Administration has coddled them. Now their leaders speak of making great sacrifices in the name of their country, in the name of morality and freedom and justice. But those sacrifices consist of undermining the defense program with a series of idiotic strikes, stupid blunders, and uncalled-for bullheaded actions.

If Mr. La Guardia is to be correct within even a year or two, American labor will have to toe the mark with the rest of the country.

The common man must pay the taxes levied by Congress, under the behest of Mr. Roosevelt and his boys, and he has no comeback—he cannot strike—the prisons are already overcrowded. The common man must do the fighting if fighting is to be done—and he cannot strike—new prisons can be erected for his convenience.

MOST UNGRATEFUL!

But American labor is allowed to sit back on its haunches, lap up the cream of the crop—the money, the safety, the security, the war profits, and nothing is done about it when they refuse to do even that. They are indeed most ungrateful.

Oh, what the Nazis would do to Bridges and Lewis! Oh, what they would do to all labor leaders.

Not that there is anything wrong with U.S. labor. It's only that it seems to have lost any claim to mental possession during the existing dilemna.

ACTION PLEASE

If this war is to become a Hitler fiasco in one, two, three, or even four years, production will have to be speeded up by some other means than by merely expressing opinions.

There is no premium paid the loser of a war. There will be no extra dividends declared if we win this one. But the man is a fool who believes that merely the maintaining of our way of life is not a just reward.

Six Former College Men Commissioned As Ensigns

Six students who went through the same secondary class of the college Civil Pilot Training course a year ago have been all commissioned ensigns in the United States Naval Reserve recently, Major George D. Richards, college CPT instructor, announced this week.

They are Bob Benson, Bruce Bower, Clyde Curley, Robert Engemann, Leroy Grau and Raymond Reynolds.

Ex Council

MAC Over-Ruled, Asked To Revise Soccer Decree

Opposing the recommendation by the Men's Athletic Council for denial of championship block sweaters to the soccer team, members of the Executive Council, at last Tuesday's meeting, quoted a phrase from the Athletic Council's own award provisions which confirms the fact that, technically, the team is entitled to the awards.

The complete system of awards adopted by the Executive Council several semesters ago, is published each semester in the college handbook.

Rejected by the Ex-Council, the recommendation was returned to the MAC for revision.

Championship Too Insignificant?

The proposal that sweaters be denied the soccer team was made by the MAC on the grounds that "the winning of a junior college soccer championship is too insignificant to warrant special blocks," since to win the championship the team had to defeat only two other colleges.

Statement that "any team winning a recognized conference championship shall be awarded white sweaters," as found on page 51 of the college handbook, was offered by Don Jensen, Associated Men Students' president, and Borrie Hyman, Guardsman editor, in protest to the stand which the MAC has taken.

Dozen Members Eligible For Blocks

"The manager and 11 or 12 of the 18 members of the team are eligible for block sweaters," Ted Theodus, unofficial spokesman for the soccer team, pointed out.

Whether or not the finance committee is able to provide funds for the sweaters, he added, is questionable.

Blocks For Team Unfair—Browne

With the end of one of the hottest debates the Executive Council last Tuesday voted to give the Men's Athletic Council another chance to approve the purchase of sweaters and blocks for the soccer team before, as members intimate, they go ahead and order the sweaters on their own.

Strongly condemned by Dean Edwin C. Browne the proposition has received wide comment and threats of mass action perhaps by petition.

"When the true facts of the argument come to light," Dean Browne said, "the most sports minded student should realize that the team's demand is totally unfair. The 'Champs' have played only TWO conference games.

"Perhaps this is due to the fact that most colleges haven't organized teams for this sport, and as a result, there are only three colleges in the conference. True the team won all of its games (both of them) for the conference, but can this be the reason for the demand that the Associated Students pay out from $100 to $150?

"Perhaps if the team had won all of the other games that it had played there might be a good reason for the blocks and sweaters, but in actual games won with the other schools and colleges the soccer men placed about fourth," the Dean said.

Internal Publicity Group Works On High Soph Formal

Present objective of the college internal publicity committee is to publicize the sophomore formal dance which will be held at the Beresford Country Club, Saturday, December 13, George Coart, college publicity director, announced Tuesday.

Coart admitted that he himself had painted the large sign which is posted in the first floor show case near the main entrance to the college, and he added that Earl Thollander was responsible for the two lettered posters on each side of it.

Bill Of Rights

All Students Eligible For Radio Quiz

Introducing a new type of assembly broadcast, the quiz program to be presented next Wednesday in observance of Bill of Rights Week will offer the opportunity for each 1 o'clock class to participate.

Guest commentator, Dr. Rudolph I. Coffey, prominent rabbi, will speak on the significance of the first ten amendments to the constitution.

All Classes To Participate

So that all classes may participate, one student representative will be chosen in each on the basis of his scholastic and attendance record. Participating in the broadcast itself will be one team representing the Associated Men Students and one representing the Associated Women Students already named as composed of Betty Fox, Gloria Olivi, and Betty MacKillop. Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, will act as interrogator.

Questions will concern the constitution of the United States and the physical properties, faculty, and student government of the college.

Interrogator To Ask Questions

The interrogator will, through the loud speaker, ask the question and allow from 5 to 10 seconds for the representative students in the various classes to answer. The teams in the broadcasting booth will then be given 5 to 10 seconds to answer the same question. A gong will sound to indicate the end of the alloted time.

Each instructor will be provided with a list of the correct answers. He will total the score of the representative student. If he finds the student has made an exceptionally high rating, the instructor will telephone the broadcasting booth and report it. The three students with the highest scores will be awarded complimentary bids to the high sophomore formal.

Wayne A. Cappella Choir Fills Nationwide Need

DETROIT, MICH.—(ACP)—To fill a need often expressed by music educators, the Wayne University A Cappella Choir will provide recorded choral music on a nation-wide basis, through a recording technique just announced by its director, Prof. Harold Tallman. His two years' investigation has solved perplexing technical problems that long have retarded the recording of choral music.

"Vocal-group music has proved far more difficult to record than instrumental-groups of music," Professor Tallman explains, "because a voice is directional while an instrument is not. Thus a microphone close to the group produces a recording distorted in favor of the nearest singers; while a microphone far enough away to give an over-all impression produces a recording without warmth, one that is 'tinny' and mechanical."

The solution was an arrangement of studio microphones which preserved proper balance. Professor Tallman solved the problem last summer while teaching at the University of Southern California. He sought the approval of Hollywood sound technicians before releasing the recordings for sale.

AMS Auditions Orchestras For January Barn Dance

Auditions are being held by the Associated Men Students to select an orchestra for their barn dance on January 10, at the Alvarado Barn in Richmond, according to Don Jensen, AMS president.

Two committees are doing the auditioning, Jensen explained, one on the San Francisco side of the bay and the other in the east bay area. Announcement of the orchestra chosen will probably not be made until after the Christmas holidays.

The AMS is also obtaining suitable prizes for the best outfits worn by both men and women, at the affair, Jensen said. Admission will be by Associated Student card only.

All Is Ready; Students Told Where To Go

By Bob Haines

Traffic signs for the college halls should be ready the beginning of next week, Bob Lindemann, chairman of the Welfare Committee disclosed Tuesday.

Lindemann explained that signs would be posted at each staircase directing the students to go up and down the correct stairs, thus avoiding serious collisions.

"In the past," he remarked, "students rushing from one class to another have disregarded the fact that other students might be coming down the same steps which they are rapidly climbing.

"How accidents have been avoided in the past I don't know, but I do know that this system whereby special staircases are used to go up or down will cut out the risk of accidents if obeyed."

The step to post traffic signs in the halls ends a campaign to regulate hallway traffic by Lindemann and the welfare group. Enforcement of non-obeyance of the signs will depend on student reaction, Lindemann said.

Industry

Chemistry Adds New Course

After conducting a survey of chemical industrial plants, the college chemistry department is working out an industrial technician course which will come into effect February next, according to Arthur Furst, chemistry instructor who is heading the movement.

"During the survey six college students were placed as industrial technicians showing that these jobs are open to a hard worker," Furst said.

Furst explained that the job of industrial technician will start the employee out at $135 a month with assurance of raises in pay.

"The industries, or some of them," he remarked, "have pledged their whole-hearted support by promising to supply us with materials such as iron, copper, and other metals which we can analyze and work with. Also, cooperation has been received from the University of California. They have sent me some of the findings which they have made in the laboratory," he added.

The course, it was stated, will consist of from three to five units, and emphasis will be put on laboratory technique.

Income Tax Returns Even Stump The Attorneys

MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA. —(ACP)—Even lawyers can do with a little advice, it appears, when it comes to the puzzling job of filling out income tax returns.

University of Minnesota will offer in December a post graduate legal course in income taxation. Lawyers and public administrators qualified as tax experts will assist law school professors as instructors.

Choir Ready For Tour

Another church performance, this one before the Calvary Presbyterian Church at Fillmore and Jackson Streets, on Sunday, December 7, at 7:45 p.m., is scheduled for the college A Cappella Choir pictured above.

The first such performance was for the Trinity Methodist Church last week. During the service, the choir will sing sacred songs. Following the services, the choir will sing groups of secular songs at the young peoples' meeting.

A program for the Parent-Teachers Association of the Commodore Sloat School is being planned for Monday, December 8.

Best event of the semester for the choir members, the annual fall trip, is Tuesday, December 9. The trip will, this semester, take the students to the Petaluma High School and to the Ukiah High School. They will entertain each of the student bodies with songs by the whole ensemble and with solo and quartet numbers. Both of the programs will be opened to the general public.

Somewhere along the way home the group plans to stop for dinner. It's tradition on choir festival trips, members say.

Quiz Program

College Milestone

THIS Wednesday's quiz program commemorating the inclusion of the Bill of Rights into the Constitution points to another milestone in the development and usage of the college radio system.

That the classroom broadcasting network has lain fallow in almost criminal dormancy has been voiced with a certain claim for recognition by some students. Their criticism has been countered by those holding a broader view of the situation with the advice: The system is still new to the college. We can only remove the shine of its novelty and the "handle gingerly" feeling so induced by actually employing the system, examining it carefully, and experimenting with the material and methods that may best be used.

Increasing adherence to this theory has been demonstrated in this semester to marked extent. Constitution Day, September 16, saw a commemorative broadcast featuring City Attorney John O'Toole. An exposition of the vital Youth Correction Authority Act with the aid of Assemblyman James H. Phillips and Warden Clinton T. Duffy was presented on November 10. Now we add to these two events the coming quiz program which portends to be, perhaps, the most enjoyable of all the efforts.

The Wednesday question and answer fest will require more than a receptive audience, for, as the news columns of the paper indicate, classroom participation is a feature of the program. The success necessary to warrant expanded use of the system may be attained for the most part from the instructors conducting classes at the time the program is presented. Careful and keen observance of the instructions presented in the faculty bulletin and The Guardsman will "make" this radio venture, and will undoubtedly open the way to more programs and new ideas for utilizing the broadcasting system to its fullest potentialities.

Quotable Quotes

"National defense and welfare are dependent upon the development of a strong, healthy people. A positive program of physical, mental and social fitness is needed. This program must start in childhood and youth to lay the foundations for healthy adult life. It is a long-range program. Children, youth and adults need to learn a variety of leisure time skills, such as are offered in physical education, for use now and in the future. Frustrated, neglected, or bored people have low morale. Physical education renders an indispensable service to morale improvement through the development of leisure time skills and the opportunities which it offers for their expression." Frank G. "The number of high school teachers who come to us each summer, eager to take graduate work in journalism because they find themselves poorly prepared for responsibilities which have been thrust upon them by their school administrators, leads me to believe that we have here a very weak link in our teacher-training program." Kenneth E. Olson, dean of Medill school of journalism, Northwestern University, sees a need for sounder training of high school journalism teachers.

"We must not sacrifice the great heritage of knowledge and culture that has been handed down to us. The training of the mind and the heart in the present world is even more important than any particular area of technical training. For unless our faith in ourselves, in our democratic polity, in our ideals, in the principles of tolerance and freedom, unless all those things can be maintained, the battle is lost before it begins." Pres. Winfred G. Leutner of Western Reserve University warns against sacrificing real values.

Shots At ...RAMdom

BIG GAME NIGHT

was being enthusiastically commemorated down at the Persian Room of the Drake. Cal men and Stanford men were celebrating and drowning their sorrows in that order.

A couple was sitting under a flattening yellow light that flooded over them from the ceiling, glinting on his hair and making her look quite fair.

"We had a good team this year even if we did lose," he reflected.

"Yes," she mused with a tiny smile teasing the lines about her mouth," and if you'd been eligible this year, we might have won."

"If I'd played," he thought aloud, "we might have won. . . . sure enough. It isn't all brains and speed that wins games. They still need bone and muscle to get the backs away."

The music slowed to a more sedate tempo. He arose quite gallantly, extending his arm in a gesture that has been lost for many and many a year.

"Shall we waltz, my dear?"

They moved out of that friendly light into the shadows that revealed his stooped shoulders and her snow white hair.

The little card on the table said, "Reserved for Mr. and Mrs. Riley, Class of '09."

A GIRL

we know (believe it or not, we know one) has a little chum buddy-in the R.A.F. and once in a while she gets letters from him.

One day he and another were leaning over a stuney fence in England. Both were homesick. One of them was from San Francisco and perhaps the "beastly Henglish fog" reminded him of his home town.

Suddenly there was a hearty, "yoiks, yolks," a shrill "tally ho," and a red-coated rider rode up to the two.

"I say, men, have you seen the fox?"

The San Franciscan, still in a reverie, looked up.

"No," he replied dreamily, "what's playing?"

A BUNCH OF THE BOYS

were whooping it up at Gerty's tea shoppe. The vicious tea had inflamed their brains and brought out the beast in them. Talk turned to women.

"What really attracts," conjectured one, "is their hair."

"I disagree," another replied, "it's their eyes and their clothes that do the damage."

A young squire left off squeezing a lemon into his cup and rose with a tortured look on his pan.

"Look, fellows," he entreated, "let's stop lying."

DOWN AT

the library where ragged men hold up the wall of that building and discuss the wrongs of our political system, we heard this.

"After the revolution we'll all be eating strawberries and cream."

"But I don't like strawberries and cream."

"Well, you'll damned well eat strawberries and cream and like 'em."

● Support Asked For New Drive

Editor, The Guardsman:

There has recently been a great deal of discussion in this and other columns of The Guardsman about the election of the Soph Sweetheart and about the advisability of having a Freshman Apollo.

If the student body shows such great interest in these matters, whole importance I do not want to discount, I feel certain that a matter concerning every individual student much more directly will be seriously considered by the students and officers alike.

In this letter I want to point out to the student body the inadequacy of the health service in this college, in particular as regards the prevention of tuberculosis. Some kind of a test for tuberculosis is offered or required at most colleges and at some high schools.

I think that some test of this kind would be eagerly welcomed by the majority of our students.

The reason why students at this college do not get tests for tuberculosis is probably a lack of funds. But we spend very considerable sums of money for football and other student activities. Although I think that our college would not be worthy of its name or any name, if it did not have a respectable football team, I do not understand why prestige must be bought at the price of health of the whole student body. If the money is there for one purpose, at least just as essential.

Maybe the editor of The Guardsman could write an article or two about this subject. Maybe our student body president, Mr. Haesloop, could show us that he is a man of action, representative of the interests of the student body.

And then again, maybe, the students are not interested enough or to lethargic to bother, and would rather wait for some future generation to turn the wheels of progress.

Very truly yours,
Peter Mark

Your College Presents . . . The Campus Makes A Surveyor's Practice Field

By Iwanna Hayworth

ENGINEERING in the college is taught to some three to four hundred students. This is the only department in the college which has not suffered a loss in enrollment due to the national emergency.

Rather it would be safe to say that there has been an increase in this enrollment because of the fluctuation of employmental opportunities in engineering fields in the defense industries at this time.

Engineering may be classified under any of three headings, Civil, Mechanical, and Electrical. This curriculum includes mathematics, surveying, chemistry, physics, and other related subjects, and certain of these courses are included in the terminal curricula of the college.

The subject for today will deal principally with one example of these terminal studies, namely, surveying.

Students who are majors in this field have two lectures weekly and one laboratory period which is spent outside on various parts of the campus.

On a small scale, these students do actual work on surveying problems—practical problems which involve varied instruments such as the tape, transit, and others.

The curriculum offered here is on the same level as that which is given at the University of California.

At the beginning of each semester the entering students in the surveying classes are first taught how to use the tape. The aforementioned explains the interesting phenomenon that arrests the attention of every passerby in the first days when the walks along Ocean Avenue are filled with students using long tapes to measure the length of these walks.

Surveying, as was mentioned before, may be either terminal or university transfer, in which case four years is the minimum time required.

In the terminal work after one year has been completed, a summer session or trip is required at which time students go to another college where this work is given. Next summer, the students from the college will probably go to Sacramento Junior College, according to Cecil Aggeler, instructor in this division. This part of their work is somewhat a field trip where they learn to master surveying problems on a large scale.

Map drafting and all the problems involved in this is taken up in the second year's work here at the college. An instrument which aids in computing the area of the map is the planimeter. Aggeler explained that the making of maps of the areas which have been surveyed is essential and the planimeter is invaluable in this process.

Laboratories and equipment for this department are complete and very valuable to them. The location of the college is ideal for the surveying students because the work in the course calls for rolling expanses as well as level territory to learn the use of their instruments. When classes for the junior college students were still at Galileo High School, students used for their wide-open spaces, the sidewalks around the college.

Women students are usually discouraged from entering engineering classes, however, this semester, one woman student is enrolled in the surveying classes. What makes this item newsworthy is the fact that she is the only woman in a class of 129 men, and according to Aggeler, she is more than capable of doing the work which the other students are engaged in. She is studying to be a draftsman, and the surveying courses are required for that major.

For students enrolled in this department, the Engineers Club is a recognized organization in the college. At their meeting regular speakers are frequent, and they have movies of interest at all times. On Saturday, December 6, in con-

AS the semester draws to a close, numerous holiday affairs are planned that require a little thought regarding an appropriate ensemble for the party-goer. The first of these parties seems to be the Women's Athletic Association banquet which is to be held Tuesday, December 9 at the Trinity Methodist Church . . . all college women invited . . . no maximum . . . only 40 cents cover charge. (end of plug)

The banquet, according to officials, is informal. But informal, like semi-formal, is subject to differences in opinion and may mean practically anything from a strapless bathing suit to a long dinner gown with a jacket.

OFFICERS TELL ALL

So-o-o we checked up and found out what is meant by informal, and got several of the WAA officers to tell us what they were going to wear to their grand finale banquet.

Something slightly dressier than regular skirt and sweater outfit," was the answer one woman gave, but she quickly added that students who had late classes and who couldn't get home to change would be welcome in their college costumes.

Possibly the banquet committee feels that once in a while students like to dress up. Not to the extent of wearing gloves, high heels, and veiled hats, but in a simpler sense. A change from sweater-skirt ensembles you know.

For instance Dorothy Ann Kraul, WAA president, is wearing a brown dress with tan, and royal blue flowers in it. It has quarter length sleeves and a pleated skirt. She is going hatless but may wear a gardenia in her hair.

Elma Oddstad, secretary of the WAA, will wear a dressy blue dress with a matching jacket. With this she will bear a tweed coat and dark blue hat.

For her last WAA banquet (at least in this college) Bernice Strube, vice-president of the group, will wear a light blue suit with a white silk shirt and black pumps. She won't wear a hat, either.

INFORMALITY SHOWN

The preceding outfits show that a banquet can be held that is really informal by wearing suits, tailored dresses, or dressy dresses. If you feel better in a hat by all means wear one, otherwise forget it.

Before closing off the subject of suits, have you seen the outfits at the south end of the main hall? The merchandising department has really gone to town and picked some of the best looking jackets and sweaters seen for quite a while. The browns and tans blend together to make a very stunning autumnal picture.

The finer and gentler art of pick swinging was the topic of discussion at ditchmen at labor on the grounds. One fellow was standing, arms folded, watching a friend swing a pick. He stood watching lugubriously for a few minutes and then decided to take matters into his own hands, literally. "Move over and I'll show how to make 'em fly." So he makes them fly for a while. "No, no, no," says a third party. So he takes the pick and really lays it on for a few minutes. "Well boys," he says breathlessly, "tha's enough for today." He explained later on that he had graduated from the realm of swinging a pick.

It seems that there is quite a difference between a pick swinger and a shovel pusher. But anyway the line is there. When one man gets through picking the ground to bits, another one comes in with a shovel and shovels the dirt out. Another will shovel it on a truck if a truck is used in the process. It's a reminder of those happy and lazy days of a few years ago when everything was in abbreviation. The WPA was the most mocked of all, once I saw a cartoon that seemed to fit the situation appropriately. One workman was way down in a ditch shoveling dirt high over his head, while another one was standing at the edge of the ditch shoveling the dirt back.

The men that are working on the mosaic on the north side of the building are of Spanish nationality or something very Latin. If one could understand Spanish he would appreciate all the potentialities for cursing the language has. Some Spanish phrases would put the toughest and crudest truck driver to shame. Sometimes little phrases can be heard floating up into the lecture rooms and it seems that a friend who understands Spanish quite well was in a Spanish class when one choice little group of words emanated from the ground. Why did the instructor smile and why did his face assume such a glow?

Spectator . . .

Two-Faced Woman . . . the picture has peculiar points too

THE most over-rated star in America, Miss Greta Garbo, forsakes her moth-balls and "I want to be alone" seclusion for her latest periodic return to the screen in a little number called Two-Faced Woman.

The term "over-rated" is no derogatory slam at Miss Garbo's talents for without any doubt she is a very competent actress. Through the years, however, an aura of glamorized superiority has been woven around the lady through her consistent campaign of rugged individualism. The web of self-inflicted mystery that surrounds Garbo has seemingly permeated her screen personality in the last few years; many people including 99 per cent of the critical gentry have been taken in. To them, a Garbo appearance on the screen is a triumph, a masterpiece, an invincible portrayal by the one and only. Obvious defects in performance or story are usually overlooked. Garbo is supreme.

The above long-winded discourse merely brings us to the point of discussion, Two-Faced Woman, which is easily discernible as flimsy entertainment of average scope starring a Garbo that neither distinguishes herself to any degree nor harms her career. To the G.G. devotees, and there are many of them, these words may be rank heresy but remain unfortunately true.

An ultra-ultra sophisticated farce that loses power through an emphasis on the obvious forms the background for the star. It's a rather unbelievable concoction of slap-stick, sex, and smooth urbanity, mixed in profuse quantities and set in the middle of lush M.G.M. bedroom sets.

The story in brief tells of the grim, uncompromising ski-instructress who falls in love with a magazine editor when he comes to her resort for vacation. Garbo is the athletic-minded ski-bird, while Melvyn Douglas enacts the business-editor who quickly marries her. Quick marital quarrels ensue quickly and he returns to New York. She follows, unknown to him and on the spur of the moment invents the character of a twin-sister . . . a glamorized, seductive, adventuress of the world. Then the wife in the guise of her non-existent sister set out after Douglas to teach him a few lessons. The plot, if we're not mistaken, has served duty before many times. Only a week ago, M.G.M. released a film called The Chocolate Soldier that was motivated by a similar theme . . . husband disguised as another man to test wife.

With a none-too-original script, the picture is developed by George Cukor in over-exaggerated style. The values of subtilties are entirely lost as gusty "arm-swinging comedy" replace the more delicate art of sly inuendo.

True, there are humorous moments. Most of these occur during the excellent series of scenes between Garbo in the seductive, personification of her own sister, and Douglas and Reginald Gardiner as their peak here and give polished accounts of themselves in interpretating some very ticklish material. The film skates on the verge of vulgarity, but never quite skids over the border. Still, the dialogue between Garbo and Douglas isn't for children.

The film also suffers because of an obvious approximation to situations in Garbo's last film Ninochka. The champagne scene in which Garbo emerges tipsy was done with better effect in Ninochka. Some excellent stunt falls by a skier makes up an abrupt climax. Still the entire story is too frail, too obvious to impress.

Melvyn Douglas, who has chased more women in Hollywood boudoirs than any other star, presents another smooth, effortless performance. Robert Gordon, Constance Bennett, and Roland Young provide commendable support.

But in light of Garbo swimming, Garbo dancing, Garbo laughing, Garbo drunk just fails to move our 1941 cynicism.

Then up comes her friend with the statement, "why not with a little while, and they'll be giving 'em away for dishrags when the enlightenment comes."

Rams Awaiting Bowl Bid!
"Duke" Drake Meets Silva

By Bob Marcus

BOWL BID?

With the 1941 pigskin season rapidly coming to a close, the various unbeaten and untied football elevens of the nation are anxiously awaiting word from bowl officials concerning their invitation to a "Bowl-classic" on New Year's Day.

In so far as this year's Ram edition has not been invited to play an intersectional grid contest in 27 days, the various members of the squad are relaxing leisurely after a hard season, giving old injuries a chance to heal, while a few energetic youths have confined their talents to other branches of the sporting world.

HOFFMAN NEEDED

Bob Hoffman, first year man who played quite a bit of tackle this season, and should be nominated unanimously on the All-American Grid Index Poll conducted on the Pacific Coast, has shed his moleskins and head gear for Tom Wilson's basketball squad.

Although a tackle is considered big and clumsy and playing mainly because of his brute strength and height, Bob is opposite the case, and, as displayed on the gridiron this fall, is agile as a cat and quick on foot.

In dire need of height, retaining only Mel Dropo, Wilson's quintet would indeed welcome Hoffman at a guard position, not only as a rebound man, but would tend to make the Ram offensive and defensive game more aggressive.

Having football players participate in the maplewood sport it not an uncommon procedure, for Bob Herwig, stellar center from the University of California, played for Nibs Price's quintet as did Ritchie Hay, another 6 ft. 4 in. youngster. At Stanford, Keith Topping, All-Coast end, played forward for Coach John Bunn before the Hank Luisetti era, and at Southern California, Tom McGarvin was an important cog in Sam Barry's system.

MARVELOUS "DUKE"

Competing in the boxing intramurals Monday night at the Coliseum Bowl, will be defending heavyweight champion, Duke Drake, who held down the fullback berth.

Possessing a well proportioned physique, the "Duker" can throw plenty of leather, but will he facing the champion from St. Mary's College, Al Silva, who also knows what the gloves are used for. Look for an interesting fight, and possibly the best bout of the evening.

INTRAMURAL CONTEST

Highlighting the intramural program within a few weeks is the scheduled All-Star basketball game between the Newman Club, winners of the league, and the All-Star contingent selected by Jack Brady.

Intramural Entries Due December 5

Those interested in the opening intramural round robin must have their entries in by next Friday, December 5, according to Jack Brady. The following Tuesday, schedules for touchtackle competition and play will begin. Entries will be accepted every day by Brady in the office of the men's gymnasium.

Managers of club or independent teams should fill out the application printed below, Brady said.

Please enter the following team in the touchtackle round robin that is to be conducted as part of the intramural program of sport activity. I have read the Intramural program of sports as it appeared in The Guardsman, September 12, with special attention to the rules and regulations, awards, and point system.

Name of college organization represented .....

If independent team, name of team .....

Manager of team: Name ..... Phone .....

Captain of team: Name ..... Phone .....
Address .....

Name of Players 1 ..... 2 ..... 3 .....
4 ..... 5 ..... 6 .....
7 ..... 8 ..... 9 .....
10 ..... 11 ..... 12 .....

In entering this team I understand that none but members of this college, or college organizations are eligible to compete.

If a student is a member of your organization, he is not eligible to compete unless his name appears in the above list.

I realize that because of studies it may be impossible to have the same players on the field each time our team plays, but I shall make every effort to have a team present.

On the theory that colleges should teach students to use their hands as well as their heads, Dartmouth College has established a student workshop.

Women's Athletics

Rifle Shooting, Ice Skating Feature Tourney Week Program Today; Tennis Next Activity Tomorrow

Rifle shooting and ice skating are two activities scheduled for today's party of the Women's Athletic Association tourney week program, according to Dorothy Ann Kraul, WAA president.

Rifle shooting will take place from 10 to 12 at the rifle range with members of the rifle club shooting at poker chips, cards, candles, and balloons, according to Betty Wood, club manager.

This afternoon at 2:30 at Winterland, ice skating is planned, Miss Kraul announced. She added that WAA would pay for admission into Winterland, but would not pay for rental of skates. There will be in addition to skating, an exhibition of figure skating.

Tennis Held Tomorrow

Tomorrow at San Mateo the sectional tennis play day will be held with light members of the tennis club in attendance. Women attending are single players, Pat Mooney and Norma Hamilton; double players are Jean Peterson and Ada Kalima; Evelyn Rothel and Dolores Sullivan, Jean Conlin and Virginia Bopp.

Several events are being planned by the badminton club including a badminton party for men of the faculty, Leila Recovi, club manager said.

Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 swimming for all women will be held at the YWCA, Thelma Soo Hoo, club manager pointed out. No special events are scheduled, Miss Soo Hoo said, but everyone is promised a good time.

Tourney week officiality closes Tuesday night, December 9 at the banquet at Trinity Methodist Church.

Entertainment Planned

Entertainment for the evening furnished by the talent bureau will include two singers, and a monologue by Donna Meyers. The WAA orchestra will also give its initial performance playing several Christmas carols.

Guest speaker for the evening will be Helen Crlenkovich who will give a travelogue on her trip to Hawaii.

Invitations have been extended to faculty and administrative officers of the college, and GAA presidents of the high schools. Each woman attending is requested to bring a senior woman from some high school in the city, Miss Oddstad explained.

The banquet is informal and tickets may be acquired at the college bank until 1 p.m. Tuesday afternoon, she added.

WAA Spring Semester Candidates Nominated

Candidates for Women's Athletic Association offices for the spring semester released last week by Bernice Strube, chairman of the nominating committee:

President, Dorothy Ann Kraul and Janice Berch; secretary, Wood Hall and Nancy Nagle; treasurer, Pat Lee and Anita Friedley.

Nominations were made at a special meeting of the committee Friday morning and were approved by the WAA council, composed of officers and sports managers of various clubs, Miss Strube said.

Election will take place today, Monday and Tuesday, and results will be announced at the tourney week banquet scheduled for Tuesday, December 9. All WAA members are eligible to vote in the elections.

Present officers are Dorothy Ann Kraul, president; Bernice Strube, vice-president; Elma Oddstad, secretary; Janice Berch, treasurer. Bertha Keller is faculty adviser.

Members of the nominating committee under Miss Strube were Irene Weed, Chiyo Nea, Helen Rissetto and Dorothy Ann Kraul.

Nominations were made from club managers, and interested club members. Here members may vote by ballot either at their club meetings or in the women's gymnasium before Tuesday.

Intramural

Swim Meet Takes Place Today At 12

Today at 12 o'clock, the swimming intramurals will be held at the Jefferson High School pool in Daly City, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, revealed this week.

A total of seven events will be staged, namely, the 50, 100, and 220 yard free style, the 50, and 100 yard breast stroke, the 50 yard back stroke, and the 150 yard three man relay.

Supervised By Elsan

All events in the meet will be supervised by Al Elsan, college swimming coach. The meet is open to individual swimmers as well as teams representing fraternities, clubs, or groups of individual swimmers.

Students winning letters in swimming, and members of this fall's water polo squad are ineligible to compete. The contestants will be allowed to compete in one event along with the relay. All points tallied by the various swimmers will count toward the intramural trophy, which is given to the leading organization at the conclusion of the semester.

Medals will be awarded for first and second places in the individual events, and to the winning relay team.

Volley Semi-Finals Next

Yesterday afternoon, the quarter final round of the volleyball tournament was completed, Brady said. Four teams remain in the undefeated bracket, and will enter the semi-finals next Tuesday, December 9. The two teams that lose in the semi-final matches will playoff for the third place position in the finals the following Thursday, December 11.

Medals will be awarded the first three sextets, namely, gold for first, silver for second, and bronze for third.

Four Remain In Tennis

Meanwhile, the singles tennis tournament has reached the quarter final round. Four men, Ronald McArthur, Bob Hoffman, George Yaki and Richmond Sedley, have survived the earlier rounds of competition.

McArthur meets Hoffman, and Yaki and Sedley will compete in the semi-finals at the earliest convenient date, Brady announced. The winners of the two matches will meet in the finals which will decide the championship.

Doubles competition will begin early next week, permitting the finalists of the singles tournament to compete in this tournament also.

Salinas Football

Conference Rules Rams Forfeit Game

Decision on the outcome of the Ram-Salinas Junior College football game was made final this week with the announcement by Paul Mohr, Athletic Commissioner of the Northern California Junior College Conference, that the college was forced to forfeit the game to the Panthers after winning the contest, 28 to 0.

"Yes sir," Commissioner Mohr said, "it's official. We gave them the game and there was no red tape to it."

Decisively Beaten

It all started when the two teams met on the college campus football field on October 31. The Rams tallied four touchdowns and handed the lettuce town men a merciless beating, one that Coach Lee Eisan claimed could have been 50 to 0.

The Panthers based their protest on the grounds that the Rams played an ineligible man in the game, which though not to the knowledge of Coach Eisan, was the exact situation. They claimed that Bob Jones, first string end, had attended Salinas for two days at the beginning of the semester, which automatically made him ineligible from further competition at another junior college for the remainder of the season.

According to Eisan, neither he nor Jones, as well as the members of the team, had any idea that the Ram end was ineligible. He said that he knew Jongs was at Salinas but didn't know that he had registered there. Jones himself, Eisan said, was not aware of the fact that his two-day education at Salinas would cause his ineligibility.

Win Game Regardless

Eisan also stated that Salinas knew of Jones' case before the game, but said nothing to him. By keeping it to themselves, said the Ram coach, they would win the game no matter what the outcome was.

Because of the 48 hour rule, the playing of Jones had no effect on the other games played by the Rams. The rule states that a protest must be made within 48 hours following the game, which Sacramento, the Rams' only other victory, and Stockton, who tied the Red and White, failed to do.

The forfeit caused the college to end its season with one victory, three defeats, and one tie in conference play.

College Rifle Squad Wins Over S.F. Surf Club

Paced by sharp-shooting Homer Pack, with a 185, members of the college number one rifle squad eked out a 908 to 900 win over the San Francisco Surf Club team last Tuesday at the college, while the Ram second team, invading the California Guard Armory to take on the Third Battalion last Wednesday, lost 893 to 961.

Significant is the fact that in most of its matches the college team uses iron sight guns, while opponents use telescope sights. The former sights call for a definitely higher brand of marksmanship and gives a disadvantage to any squad employing them. It has been the continual practice of the college to use iron sights, mainly because it has no others. Overcoming this handicap, the Rams have become one of the most dangerous teams in match shoots.

Both matches of last week were on a 50-foot range, as most of the matches are.

For the second team Don Green and Art Crofts garnered 183 and 182, respectively, while two inexperienced men, firing for the first time in competition, dropped to about 140.

AMS INTRAMURAL FIGHTS MONDAY

Drake Defends Heavyweight Title Against Silva; Seven More Bouts Make Up Program

By Jim Lee

With intramural eliminations completed, finalists are at their physical peak of condition, and are all in readiness for the semi-annual intramural boxing show to be held Monday night, 7:45 p.m. at the Coliseum Bowl, on Eleventh Street, between Missipn and Market.

There will be eight boxing events, with a wrestling exhibition. Because of the lack of contenders, there will be no jiu-jitsu matches this time as there was in last semester's intramural fights.

In the 120 pound class there will be Seisuke Akamini, and Cedris Parokian. This, the bantamweight class, promises to show plenty of action.

There being only three two minute rounds to each event, the fighters will be tossing leather from the starting gong to the final bell.

Isaacs Defends Title

In the 127 pound class, the college students will again have the chance to view Manuel Isaacs, a boxer who finished in the finals in last semester's bouts, and who hopes to repeat with another good performance Monday night. He won't, however, have an easy time, for his opponent is Gene Suacci, a boxer who has had some CYO experience, and, as Coach Jensen says, "punches very hard for a small fighter."

The 135 pound weight will have two closely matched fighters, Ed Hemsted and Bob Portella. Hemsted has shown great promise, but Portella seems to have just a little more experience.

Pearl May Enter

In the welterweight division, the spectators will have an opportunity to see some fine boxing ability from Walt Seaborn, who has shown great possibilities since he entered the boxing classes at the beginning of the semester. In all probability, his opponent will be Art Pearl, who, although he boxed in the finals last semester, has not worked out very much up to date, because he hadn't planned on entering, but filled in for the bed-ridden Luke Lowell, who came down with a severe cold.

In the 155 pound class will be John Massara and Bob Kavanaugh. Massara may have a slight edge, but Kavanaugh showed some fine ability in his semi-final bout with Merle McFarlane, who Kavanaugh decisioned.

Hunicke Returns

One sixty five pound champion Dave Hunicke is fighting again this semester, giving a heretofore unknown opponent a chance to separate Hunicke from his hold on the title. Hunicke seems to have too much experience, but you can never foretell the winner in a fight until the bout is over.

An interesting event should be the lightheavyweight division, with Ray Ham and Ira Carlney opposing each other. Both are evenly matched and the outcome could come out either way.

The event that nearly every college student is waiting for is the bout between heavyweight champion Duke Drake, and challenger Al Silva, former champion at St. Mary's last year. Silva should give Drake a very busy night for Silva is no easy touch. Al has a lightning left jab, and carries enough dynamite in his right hand to stop a baby tank.

Epting-Getas Match

In the wrestling match will be Ed Epting, and Angio Getas, in what should be a knock-down, drag out affair. Epting and Getas were both entered in the matches last semester, and both came out winners in their individual events.

The lights, medals and show are all under the direction of the intramural program. The intramural board has regarded the competitors and supervised the preliminaries.

Refereeing the bouts will be the same official as last semester: Clayton Frye, from Stanford, who, himself, has had a short career in the ring, so he should know his business. Timekeeper will be the ever dependable Russell Sweet.

Jensen Takes Over

A vote of thanks should be tended to Coach Jensen for the way in which he has taken over the vacancy left by the departure of Joe Lanagan, who is teaching at Santa Barbara State College. Jensen has helped the various boxers iron out their individual weak points, and bring their boxing performance up to above average. He is well liked by all his students, which sometimes doesn't happen when a new instructor comes into a college.

Each fighter will have his own handlers, and will receive adequate service from a well-known doctor, who will be on hand at all the events to take care of any cuts the fighters get while throwing punches.

"With all the boxers in fine condition, and with everyone cooperating, I know that the fights on Monday night will come through to the satisfaction of everyone there," Coach Jensen said.

Al Silva, heavyweight challenger, shown all set to throw a wicked right-hand punch, which he hopes will dislodge the heavyweight crown from the present title holder, Duke Drake.

Inflation

Its Moral -- There's No Possible Compromise With An Earthquake

Editor's Note: The following article is the combined effort of The Guardsman and members of the faculty. Its pertinence in point of time as well as the effect inflation itself will have on every citizen of the United States justified in the minds of the editorial staff the work involved in summarizing the facts. Appreciation is hereby extended to those members of the faculty who gave of their knowledge and time that students of the college might understand that with an earthquake there is no compromise.

THE good citizens of California have learned (the bitter way) that earthquakes are not amenable to man's desires, but must be outwitted by careful planning and a healthy respect for their destructive potency.

Inflation is to economics what earthquakes are to the field of geology. Once let inflation get under way, and the weak economic structures will be seen to collapse in ruinous manner. To see what happens take German experience in 1923:

The German government, pressed for funds and afraid to tax its people to provide them, resorted to "printing press money." Soon 1700 printing presses were running three shifts a day. As the flood of money was released, prices did the natural thing, rising sharply. Soon a quart of milk cost a million marks, a good dinner ten million marks. And each day the prices rose as the government poured new paper notes into the hands of the people.

A typical German of the middle class was ruined by this inflation. The savings and investments which were to provide for his old age were virtually confiscated. For if Fritz Schmidt had saved ten thousand marks in the years before the war, he now found that the value of the savings was reduced practically to zero—indeed he was lucky if the ten thousand marks would buy one slice of bread, let alone a loaf!

Obviously the United States is not in for this sort of inflation right now. We won't print paper money. But we don't have to do that in order to have a full-fledged earthquake of inflation. Lying idle in our banks for a decade have been billions of dollars of idle funds, unused during the depression. Suddenly the government needed billions for defense. The government borrowed, putting the idle credit to work. These were paid out through corporations as wages to defense workers. As these workers flocked to stores to spend their new incomes, other industries expanded to supply them. Soon the spectre of shortages appeared. The scarcity of materials and labor prevented a marked rise in volume of civilian goods, so that we have reached this impasse: with virtually unlimited new purchasing power our people are trying to buy a fixed (or even declining) quantity of consumable goods. The result? Obviously the scarcity means rising prices, and that means inflation.

Thus inflation is here. It is not a possible future threat, but an immediate reality. Prices have risen fifteen per cent since the start of the war, and are gathering momentum rapidly. The question becomes, "What shall be done?"

Since the problem is excess spendable funds, the cure lies in the direction of "mopping up" the extra income before it results in higher prices, or else of preventing wage and price increases by legal prohibitions. The solutions in outline are:

First, higher taxes, both income and sales taxes.

Second, greater savings, either voluntary thru defense bonds, or an enforced plan using payroll deductions.

Third, limitation of wage and price increases.

There are two major schools of opinion in America as to these solutions. The "Voluntary School" believes that there should be no system of government controls. They prefer heavier taxes and voluntary savings. Nothing could be worse than arbitrary government powers to dictate prices, for this would destroy economic freedom as this country has known it, this group says. And without such dictatorial powers they contend no system of price controls could work. Some of these writers even contend that no price limitations could work in the U.S. no matter how great the legal powers of the government to intervene. They point to our experiments under Prohibition as proof of the absurdity of regulation by law of a matter involving the whole populace.

The second school of thought is ardently in favor of government controls. They take the attitude "You had better do it, and do it soon, or it will be too bad." But they disagree as to how far the controls must extend. Some want all prices, wages, rents, and farm prices to be included. This group claims that there must be "over-all" limits. They point out that if an exception is made for wages and farm prices soon other groups will demand similar exemption, and the whole experiment will fail. When they are charged with favoring government "dictation" they answer that if we pursue a policy of drift we will experience a calamitous price rise, wiping out persons on fixed incomes, and that we will head straight for a depression that will dwarf the 1929 collapse.

At present public opinion (especially Congressional sentiment) seems unwilling to go sanction complete controls. But while the debate continues, economists are warning that there is no time to waste if controls are to be attempted. And they remind the country that once the earthquake of inflation has begun it is too late to improvise protection.

Ye Ladies Fashions Hearken Back To Ye Middle Ages Say Ye Experts

By Ada Garfinkel

Current fashions show that millinery designers revert back to the middle ages in their quest to obtain ideas for milady's chapeaux.

Recently, a picture of a smartly clad model appeared in a local daily. Perched casually over one eye, was what was described as "a deep pink velvet 'beefeater' beret." The hat was flat with a slightly ruffled brim.

Intriguing cognomen, but puzzling to the uninitiated!

Students of political science at the college, however, will recognize it to be the nickname applied to English Yeomen of the Guard.

It was in the year 1485, at the coronation of Henry the VII in Westminster Abbey, that these sturdy yeomen were first introduced into English tradition. Originally it was their duty to safeguard the king, and to attend to his personal wants day and night.

As was the fashion of the times, their costumes were colorful, resplendent with gold and velvet. To complete this lavish outfit, the yeomen wore flat, pancake-shaped hats that sported narrow, fluted brims.

So impressive did the ranks of the guard become in ensuing years, that when Count Cosino, grand duke of Tuscany, visited in England, he wrote home an account of the stature and magnificence of the yeomen. "They are great eaters of beef," he penned, "and a large ration is served them every day at the court. Indeed they might be called 'beefeaters'!"

College books disclose the information that the Yeomen of the Guard are to this day a colorful constituent of English ceremonial traditions, although their functions are very different from their incipient origin.

If their costumes are now perhaps not as resplendent as the regalia of Tudor days, at least part of their dress mode is not lost to posterity.

Through ingenious research, fashion-conscious designers have dipped into the archives of history and produced a prototype of the headgear worn almost 500 years ago.

Low Sophomores

Pacific City Class Skate Postponed Until January; Dropo Still Hopes For Mixer

With the postponement of the planned low sophomore skate which was to be held tonight, Jim Duryea, class secretary, revealed that the low sophomore social calendar was at an end.

The skate, which was to be held at Pacific City, is being postponed because the plans which would be necessary to make it a typical low soph event have not been made. The Associated Students were to have been invited and Duryea hoped that the skate would be held in the early part of January.

With the claim that the low soph mixer was the most successful that has ever been held, Mel Dropo, low sophomore president, said that he hoped that there would be time in the remainder of the semester for another like it.

There are only a few tentative plans for the end of the semester, but they include the hoped for skate and another mixer. "At any event, there will in all probability be another low sophomore sponsored event before finals," Dropo said.

Specialties Turn Out In Recent Auditions

Talent including specialties of all variety was brought forth in the audition held last Friday at 11 a.m. in Room 200, according to Irwin Cohen, student manager.

Already receiving a great number of responses, the talent bureau has voiced a demand for more singers of popular music and novelty acts. According to Irwin Cohen, student manager, he is welcoming any interested student to try out as comedian or perhaps present novelty skits.

As talent for the Christmas rally is being brought together, Cohen maintains that he still lacks specialty acts. Students wishing for an audition, should apply to faculty advisers Flossita Badger, Wesley Muscio, or to Cohen for appointments. Cohen is available at the Associated Student office at 12 o'clock daily.

All names of students and their types of entertainment will be made known as soon as possible, according to Cohen.

Third In Paint Lecture Series Next Monday Night

Miracle of Paints in Everyday Life, a lecture to be given by D. J. Tight of the R. N. Nason Company, will be the third in a series on important phases of the paint industry, to be given next Monday night at the college.

Along with his lecture, Tight will demonstrate the quick-drying methods used by the automobile industry. For this demonstration, a bank of 50 infra-red lights will be set up, and Tight will spray, dry, and finish small articles before the audience.

W. D. Forbes, in explaining the demonstration, said that with the new method, the painting of automobiles takes only a few minutes, where previously it took weeks to completely finish the process.

These lectures are given at intervals of approximately three weeks in Room 100 on Monday evenings at 8 p.m.

The public is invited to attend these lectures for which no admission will be charged.

AWS

Seniors View College Life

Senior women from Galileo, Commerce and Polytechnic high schools who attended the Associated Women Student tea last Tuesday, had an opportunity to see college life as it is, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

These women, honored at the second in a series of AWS affairs, the purpose of which was to give the women an opportunity to become better acquainted with the college, its instructors, and its students. The first tea, which was held October 28 entertained senior women from Washington, Lincoln and Lowell high schools.

Another similar event to entertain seniors from the remaining San Francisco high schools will probably be planned at the next AWS meeting.

"This is still rather indefinite," Miss Fox said. "Nothing will be actually settled until the next meeting."

Betty MacKillop, AWS vice-president, and chairman of Tuesday's affair, stated that she especially wanted to thank all of the women participating in the affair.

Yearbook Publication Suspended Indefinitely

No yearbook will be published this year, according to Francis Colligan, English instructor. He explained that the increased printing costs made publication impractical at the present time.

Colligan said that it would cost $5 a copy to put out a book that would be satisfactory. At that cost, even after receiving money from sales and advertising, the cost to the student body would be too great.

Publication will be suspended indefinitely, Colligan said.

Students, Faculty Present Legion Show

Students and faculty members of the college presented a program for the West Twin Peaks Post of the American Legion last Wednesday evening in the auditorium of Homewood Terrace.

The program, under the direction of Marcel Levey, commander of the post included an accordion solo by Robert Ibarolle, tap dances by Irene Woods, a vocal solo by Jean Fraser, a piano solo by Gordon Brewer and an address on the Bill of Rights by Lloyd D. Luckmann, college instructor.

This post makes available scholarships for books and student dues for three or four men each semester. Application for these awards may be made to either Dean Edwin C. Browne, Lloyd D. Luckmann, Lee Eisan, or Registrar J. Paul Mohr.

Defense Affects Civil Service Too

That the shortages brought about by the national defense effort, which have been affecting almost everyone now affects even the national government itself, was brought out in a recent civil service notice received by Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor, recently.

The notice, which announces the fact that civil service examinations will be given for the position of automotive mechanic, contains the following paragraphs under the listing of the physical requirements for the position.

"The above physical requirements are those which must be met for regular probational appointment. In view of the possible shortage during the present emergency of persons who are fully qualified physically, applications will be accepted from those who cannot meet these normal requirements but who can perform a minimum of acceptable service at the present time without undue hazard to themselves or to others.

"Such persons may be certified, if otherwise eligible, for temporary duty for the duration of the emergency in the absence of qualified eligibles. In the case of remediable defects the status of an appointment may be changed from temporary to probationary if the defect is corrected."

CAB Appoints Clapp To Cabby Editorship

Discussion of future plans for Cabby, the Club Advisory Board mimeographed publication, and the appointment of Allen Clapp to the editorship will take place at a meeting of the CAB to be held today in Room 113 at 2 o'clock, according to Francis Goetz, CAB president.

Clapp will succeed Ed Lopez as editor of the magazine. Lopez was forced to discontinue his activities with the publication when he took a leave of absence to go to work until the end of the Christmas holidays, Goetz said.

Two New Classes Announced In Business Department

There will be two new business classes open and required to all new entering business majors next term, Ward Nichols, acting chairman of the business department has revealed.

The classes will go under the names of Business 56, a course in beginners shorthand for women secretarial majors, and Business 74 a-b-c. This last series will be in reality three courses in one.

Starting with a six week course in filing, for which two units credit will be given, the classes are to be given in three parts. At the end of this period a six weeks class in penmanship will be given for one unit credit. There will be no outside work required for this course.

Finally another six weeks course for two units in spelling will be given. These courses will be arranged so that one of each will be given at all times. Tests will be taken so that those students who have no need for taking the studies will be excused from attending class in those subject.

There is a definite need for men and women who can do office work in modern defense work, Nichols explained.

WSS Program Features Banquet In January

Forthcoming in the Women's Service Society program schedule will be a banquet in January, which will be the scene of the new member initiation, according to Violet Butler, club leader.

The WSS group will participate in book sales and will also assist faculty members in registering new students next semester.

As yet, no definite date has been set for the opening of the book exchange, but it will be some time early in January, Miss Butler declared.

Students Desiring Study Aid Urged To See Advisers

Students who are in need of help in developing study habits or in improving reading ability, are urged to see their advisers so that they may arrange to have some guidance in these matters, according to Elizabeth Stetson, student adviser.

Already this semester Miss Stetson has been working with students who have been readmitted on probation. "This work has been going so well, that now I have additional time in which I might be able to help students who are failing in their studies," Miss Stetson said.

Miss Stetson's office hours are Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9 to 12 and from 1 to 3; and Tuesday and Thursday, from 1 to 3 in Room 210.

Students, however, are reminded that it is best for them to make appointments with Miss Stetson through their advisers.

Miss Stetson, a graduate of Stanford University, has worked with the Attendance Committee since last semester, and has been entrusted with the guidance post at the college for the present semester.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

IN last Friday's column something was said in regard to labor and the existing conditions. If we remember correctly that something intimated rather strongly that U.S. labor ought to revise its outlook and prepare to make some of the sacrifices that it is always preparing to make but never (at least so far) does.

That, however, is only one-half of the complete picture. On the other side of the fence sits the employer, big and little business. That employer may, by chance, be looking forward with keen anticipation to the completion of the legislation now pending in Congress which will curb strikes and tie labor down.

That employer may be hoping that by means of these prospective labor-power curbing laws he will gain the upper hand in the omnipresent struggle between the worker and his boss.

Labor alone is not to blame for the slow methods and tie-ups existent in contrast to the possible speeds which could be obtained if everyone pulled together. Capital, big business, little business, every employer, is also to blame; and is as guilty by every conception as are his workers.

Why is there a shortage of materials needed for defense production? Why does it seem that the great industrial firms are apathetic in getting things done in time? Why, in contrast to their eagerness to appease labor in the past, before the war, does capital haggle over every little point and refuse to back down? Why does capital claim that if labor was curbed the necessary production could be given easily?

As well as labor, big business in particular and little business in general, are fighting for their lives. Big business fears that additional large scale units may be developed during this crisis to help get the work done; they fear that when the crisis has passed these units will become competitors—and they have never approved of too much competition.

Little business fears the trend toward centralization. It is afraid that the organizing of great units to supply war materials and perhaps later the necessities may shut out the retail tradesman and eventually kill him and his business. It approves of the governmental and public trend toward labor control, but at the same time it realizes that this would mean the assumption of greater power and control by men and groups who know what to do with that power.

If the large scale corporations had not been so concerned with creating actual, if not technical, monopolies during the past decade or so there would not be this problem today. There is a shortage of actual material, and when and if the material is secured then there is a shortage of machines and facilities. These shortages should have never existed.

Had there been a chance for newcomers in those large fields which are now restricted to a few great companies, planes and tanks would be rolling off the production lines in an unprecedented amount. But good old-fashioned United States greed stuck his nose into the gravy of public demand, cornered the markets, and told the rest of the country to go to blazes. At this rate the country is on the way.

Little business, really having no other choice, followed obediently in the wake of their older, larger, and more money-wise, brothers. They fought the unions, payed as low wages as possible and still do, looked with disfavor upon newcomers.

It is greed, greed, greed all the way around. Everybody stands around looking like a determined defender of liberty but conjuring up new ways to line the personal war chest.

We said last week that liberty and the American way of life were worth any war that was ever, or will ever be, fought. If you, the reader, don't believe in that theory you had best join the nearest bund and reveal your true feelings. The wise reader will either admit the democratic advantages or learn to appreciate them.

Businessmen are operating and prospering under that democratic system right now, and their greed has caused them to lose sight of all proportions. Labor needs a setback or two to jerk it back into the world of reality; capital needs two jerks and a lusty smack to loft it onto the plane of sensibility.

Above all a businessman loves his profession and his material possessions. If that businessman, speaking in a collective sense, continues to abuse the opportunities of war economics he, and his arch-enemy labor, will lose the fruits of a struggle that first began in 1776—profession, prestige—everything.

Campus King

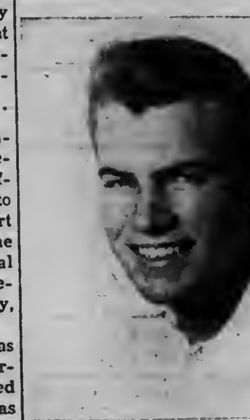
Jim Skinner Triumphs Over Three Opponents To Rule During High Soph Week

Jim Skinner was selected by the Associated Women Students last Friday as the Campus King in an election conducted by the freshman class and directed by Bing Kirk, low freshman president.

Skinner won out over a field of four which included Bob Murphy, Dick Souza and Dick Dickson, according to Kirk. Details of the voting were not revealed.

The winner will be introduced with the sophomore sweetheart at a rally tomorrow from 2 to 2:25 on the front steps. He will receive a complimentary bid to the high sophomore formal, Saturday, December 13.

Winner Selected On Popularity



The campus king contest was introduced for the first time this semester by Bing Kirk and other officers of the low freshman class to parallel the traditional sweetheart contest. The winner represents the women's conception of a typical American college boy. He was selected on the basis of personality, looks and general popularity.

Originally the freshman king was to be called Apollo, but this apparently misleading title was abandoned in favor of campus king. A plan was advanced earlier in the semester to allow the campus king to accompany the sweetheart to the sophomore formal, but was vetoed by freshman officers when student opinion failed to favor the idea.

Students Favor Plan

A poll conducted by The Guardsman to determine student opinion on the king election showed that 79 per cent of the students questioned favored the plan.

The success of this semester's contest will determine whether the selection of a campus king will be maintained as a semi-annual tradition.

His Majesty Jim Skinner, has been selected by the women of the college as the typical college man. Personality and general popularity were the deciding factors in his selection and victory.

Rally Tomorrow At 2; All Classes Excused

Because the Christmas rally which was to be held at the El Rey Theater Friday, December 12 has been cancelled there will be a rally tomorrow between 2 and 2:30 p.m. with all classes excused, according to George Coart, high sophomore class president at the college.

"College executives forced the cancellation of the Christmas rally," Coart revealed, "consequently we will present the sophomore sweetheart on Wednesday afternoon at the sophomore rally which will be held on the front steps of the college."

Coart expressed his hope that every man on the campus would vote for the campus queen on Wednesday morning before the rally so that a sizeable vote would be possible.

"There is a strong possibility that Ernie Hecksher and his vocalist, Helen Lynne, will be present for the rally," he remarked, "but this is not definite. The freshman campus king will probably be presented also."

Entertainment has not yet been decided upon, according to Coart, but he promised plenty of it—"enough to fill a good half hour."

Students Dislike Bingo, Screeno

KENT, OHIO—(ACP)—That University students stay away from the movies when bingo, screeno, and bank night are held is revealed in a survey conducted by students of Dr. Harry D. Wolfe, associate professor of marketing at Kent State University.

The poll shows that instead of boosting attendance, these gift attractions keep 35 per cent of university students from attending the movies more often than they do.

Opinion is almost evenly divided concerning double features with 35 per cent of the students opposed to twin bills and 26 per cent in favor of them. The remaining 29 per cent don't care. However, more than three-fourths of the students polled disliked movie programs to last over two and a half hours.

The poll also reveals that men attend movies more often than women and that both sexes attend because of the picture and not the stars in it.

Favorite types of pictures for university students are light comedies and musicals, the poll indicates.

Choir

Annual Tour Starts Today

Members of the A Cappella Choir left on their annual fall trip at 8 o'clock this morning, according to Flossita Badger, music instructor. They will make two appearances today, the first of which will be at the Petaluma High School, and the second at Ukiah High School.

Included on the programs will be three groups of songs by the choir. These will be Christmas carols, several sacred numbers and some secular numbers.

Specially featured will be violin solos by Doris Crane; vocal solos by Ruth Berryesa, Katherine Davies and Nat Hoekenga; and several numbers by the quartet consisting of Katherine Davies, Pearce Davies, Doris Crane, and Clarence Ashman.

Talent bureau students recently performed a program for the local post of the American Legion. The program included accordian solos by Bob Ibaroli, dances by Irene Weed, vocal solos by Jean Frazer, accompanied by Gordan Brewer, and piano solos by Gordon Brewer.

Third AWS High School Tea Planned For Next January

Plans for the third Associated Women's sponsored tea, to honor San Francisco high school senior women, to be held some time in January, will be discussed at the next AWS meeting, according to Betty Fox, AWS president.

This affair will be given for women students from Mission, Balboa and Girls' high schools.

The coming of the holiday vacation makes it necessary to have the tea next month. It will, however, be held this semester, Miss Fox said.

Everything concerning the tea is rather indefinite, she explained. It will probably be very much like the last two, the first of which was held October 28, and honored women from Washington, Lincoln and Lowell; and the second one, for Commerce Polytechnic and Galileo high school seniors.

Under the current plan, an invitation is sent to senior advisers of the honored schools. The advisers then choose 25 women to represent their respective schools at the affair.

A hostess from the college takes three or four high school guests and escorts them about the college. Tea is served in Room 158. Refreshments and decorations are prepared by the home economics and art departments.

Ex Council

Athletic Council Withdraws Award Recommendation

Action in the award of block sweaters to the soccer team was again delayed at last Tuesday's Executive Council meeting despite a report from the Men's Athletic Council withdrawing its previous recommendation that the awards be denied.

The MAC proposed denial because the team had to play only two 90 minute games to win the conference title, and because it seemed inadvisable to draw from the budget the sum needed to purchase the sweaters. This recommendation was rejected by the Ex-Council last Tuesday.

Browne Assails ExCouncil

Dean Edwin C. Browne, member of the athletic council, who had vigorously supported its stand, assailed the Ex-Council last Thursday with the statement, "It is apparent that you desire to gouge into the treasury at any opportunity to get all you can."

Instrumental in the rejection of the recommendation was the eloquent opposition of Ted Theodus, speaking in behalf of the soccer team last Tuesday. Theodus pointed out that in addition to the conference games the team has played Stanford, California, and other teams of the college league, and has made the best showing in its history.

The MAC rule that "any team winning a recognized conference shall be awarded white sweaters," as stated in the Athletic Council's own award rules and published in the college handbook, confirmed the fact that the team is actually entitled to the sweaters.

Sweet Favors Award

Track coach Russ Sweet, unofficial chairman of the MAC, after rejection by the Ex-Council of the original recommendation, suggested that those members of the team who had played the required number of minutes be awarded sweaters.

Indirectly, Theodus again played an important part in the controversy when Jack Madrano, student representative of the MAC and block society, proposed that a special sweater be awarded to this prominent member of the soccer team.

Theodus Not Eligible

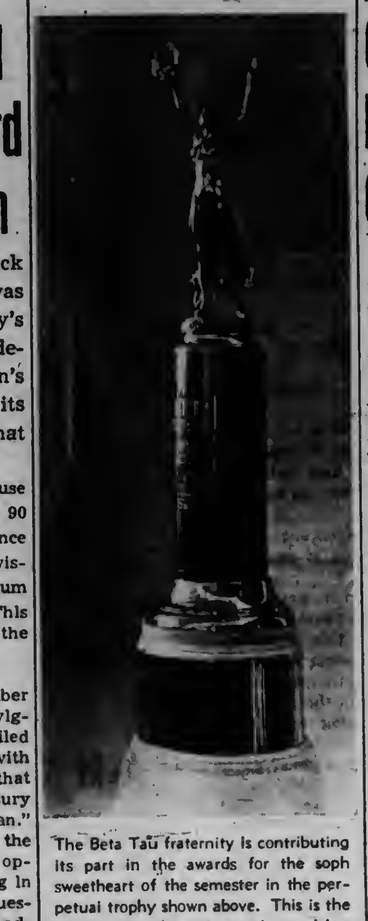
Because he has played for the team three years, Theodus was not eligible to participate in the conference games this semester, and therefore is technically not eligible to receive a sweater. The soccer team feels, however, that Theodus, because of his fine spirit and outstanding record, merits recognition.

While the Ex-Council apparently favored awards for members of the soccer team who had played the required number of minutes, Alden W. Smith, faculty adviser for the group, warned that provision for a special block for Theodus, who had not played in the actual conference games, might invalidate the entire motion. For this reason, the motion was again tabled for further investigation.

Team Received Trophy

On behalf of the team, Don Jensen, Associated Men Student's president, explained that in winning the conference title, the soccer team received a beautiful trophy to be displayed in the showcase.

"We have no right to accept this trophy," Jensen declared, "unless we award sweaters to the team. Regarding the financial problem, the soccer team is willing to give up a banquet they have planned and individual members of the team have agreed to make personal contributions to help to pay for the sweaters."



NYA Students May Work During Vacation

NYA students wishing to work during the Christmas vacation may be allowed to do so, Claude Silva, NYA director, has announced.

"Because the month of December will not allow many actual working days," Silva said, "arrangements have been made to allow some of the students now on NYA to finish up their allotted time.

"There is particularly a shortage of men," the director added, stressing the point that work could be found for both men and women students.

Sweetheart Award

The Beta Tau fraternity is contributing its part in the awards for the soph sweetheart of the semester in the perpetual trophy shown above. This is the first time such a perpetual award has been given since the contest was inaugurated.

AMS Will Vote Today 9 To 3

Selecting from seven final candidates the ideal college girl, the Associated Men Students will elect today a sophomore sweetheart to reign at the high sophomore formal Saturday.

Voting will be conducted from 9 a. m. till 3 p.m. by ballot in the main hall where The Guardsman is distributed. Presentation of an Associated Student card will be required, for permission to vote.

Sweethearts Under Glass

Individual photographs of the finalists, Pat Brand, Lucille Landresse, Margaret McMahon, Matilda Mortigia, Kerma Cazier, Carmel Cole, and Shirley Wood are displayed in the show case in the main lobby.

The winner will be revealed tomorrow at a rally on the front steps from 2 till 2:25 p.m. She will be presented with a perpetual trophy by the Beta Tau fraternity. At the formal, Saturday, she will receive a 15 inch loving cup from The Associated Men Students, an engraved sweetheart locket from the Phi Lambda Epsilon, and a gold bracelet from the Phi Alpha Omega. These are exhibited in the show case.

Secret Seven Select Sweethearts

The sweetheart election, a traditional feature of high sophomore week, is being conducted this semester in a different manner than previous contests. The new method, inaugurated by George Coart, high sophomore president, provided for seven judges to select the preliminary and final candidates. The names of the judges were withheld until after the preliminary election. Each judge selected two preliminary candidates, and from this group the seven finalists were nominated.

The preliminary candidates were, Virginia Ovenshire, Dorris MacKillop, Dorothy Walker, Pat Hamilton, Joan Hunter, Muriel Jacobson, Shirley Roby, Jean Hunter, and Barbara Stahmann.

Honor Society Gives Party To Conclude Semester

With a Christmas party next Wednesday in the cafeteria, Alpha Gamma Sigma will conclude its activities for this semester, Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser of the club, declared recently.

In addition to the regular business of the meeting, there will be games and music. Previously meetings have been confined to business.

The coaching system, which has been practiced since the end of the first mid-term will be discontinued next Friday. During its existence it has worked very well, helping many students in their difficult subjects, Miss Cooper said.

Quiz Program

One O'clock Classes Participate In Radio Question-Answer Fest Observing Bill Of Rights Week

All 1 o'clock classes will have the opportunity to participate in the quiz program to be presented over the public address system tomorrow in observance of the second annual Bill of Rights Week.

Guest commentator, who will speak on the significance of the first ten ammendments of the constitution in safeguarding public rights, will be Dr. Rudolph I. Coffey.

Dr. Coffey To Speak

"Dr. Coffey is one of the outstanding citizens of San Francisco," Alden W. Smith, director of student activities, said. "His reputation as a scholar together with his experience in the humanities make him an appropriate and attractive speaker for the college on this occasion."

Participants in the broadcast include Smith as interrogator, and one team representing the Associated Men Students, and one representing the Associated Women Students. Contestants from the AMS will be Sam Mendelson, Jim Upp and Don Jensen; from the AWS, Betty MacKillop, Gloria Olivi and Betty Fox.

The quiz will consist of questions on the constitution prepared by Robert J. Parker and members of the history and political science departments. Questions on the college, its physical properties, student government, have been prepared by Borrie Hyman, editor of The Guardsman, who will assist with the program.

Student Represents Each Class

So that all classes may participate, one representative student will be chosen in each on the basis of his high scholastic and attendance record.

The interrogator will, through the loud speaker, ask the question, and allow from 5 to 10 seconds for students in the various classrooms to answer. The teams within the broadcasting booth will then be given 5 to 10 seconds to answer the same question. A gong will sound to indicate the end of the alloted time.

Each instructor will be provided with a list of the correct answers. At the end of the quiz he will total the score of the representative student in his class. If the student has made an exceptionally high rating, the instructor will telephone the broadcasting booth and report it. The three winners will receive complimentary bids to the sophomore formal.

Soph Formal

Beresford Site Of Soph Dance

Climaxing high sophomore week, the winter formal will be held Saturday evening at the Beresford Golf and Country Club near San Mateo, with dancing from 9 until 1.

Slated to play for the dance is Ernie Hecksher's popular orchestra, the first name band to play for any affair at the college. Hecksher has recently held engagements at three major San Francisco hotels, the Palace, the Mark Hopkins, and the Clift. Helen Lynne, featured vocalist with Hecksher's band, is also a student at the college.

Old Colonial Breakfast

Following the dance, the traditional breakfast will take place at the Old Colonial, a new drive-in restaurant on the El Camino Real near the country club. The breakfast will begin at 3 a.m. and high sophomore officers expect it to be especially successful this semester.

The Beresford Country Club may be reached from San Francisco by following highway 101 to San Mateo, turning right at 20th Avenue and driving about a mile and a half toward the coast. The country club is just off the highway.

Hecksher Could Play For 400

With dancing accommodations for more than 400 people, a large veranda, and other attractive features, the Beresford was chosen in preference to the California Country Club, site of past sophomore formals.

Hecksher's orchestra was selected from a group of more than 12 popular bands auditioned by the high sophomore formal committee. The committee included Mary Stephens, Jean Sheehan, Ward Swartzman, Dick Naftaly, Ed Coffin, and chairman, Myron Du Bain.

In a student poll conducted recently by George Coart, high sophomore president, Hecksher's orchestra was selected as the favorite from a group of several being considered.

Christmas Vacation Runs Dec. 13 To January 4

Vacation for the Christmas holidays will be from Saturday, December 13, to Sunday, January 4, the registrar's office announced this week.

At the same time, Borrie Hyman, editor of The Guardsman, said that this edition of the paper will be the last until Friday, January 9.

Helen Crlenkovich Will Not Go On Hawaiian Tour, Exhibition

War in the Pacific cancelled the tour planned by Helen Crlenkovich to the Hawaiian Islands this month. National diving champion and student at the college, she was to have appeared in four exhibitions there. The complete plans make a nice dream, now, and are printed below as originally written before Sunday, December 7.

A science laboratory finds Helen Crlenkovich, national women's diving champion and student here, absorbed in her college work and planning to leave for the Hawaiian Islands. Events of Sunday, December 7, cancelled the plans.

dark" regarding any details of her voyage.

Will Visit Maui and Oahu

From Honolulu she will fly to Maui and Oahu where exhibitions will be given.

As guest of the University of Hawaii she will represent them as "Pineapple Queen" at the football game New Year's Day with the University of Utah. The Utah college also asked her to represent them as queen, she said.

Purpose Stated

Miss Crlenkovich is well known in athletic circles of the islands and is making the tour primarily to boost diving in the territory.

Accompanying her as chaperone will be Mrs. Phil Patterson, wife of the Fairmont swimming coach. Expenses of both will be paid by the university, Miss Crlenkovich added.

She will return in time to complete the semester in January, but she added regretfully she would be a few days late.

Judicial Counterpoint

Okie Law Banned

THE United States Supreme Court plucked the strings and the only lawful decision in a painful controversy hummed a too-long delayed Te Oeum for the "Anti-Okie" laws illspawned by 27 states including California during the past five years.

Joyful overtones blended into the dirge proclaimed a reaffirmation of individual liberties and a renewed fight to solve the problems of the wretched Joads and other dust-plagued migrants.

Roughly sketched, the "Anti-Okie" laws were hastily-pillared barricades by relief-burdened states erected to fend off impoverished fugitives from the great Dust Bowl. The states proclaimed that the entrance of indigents was unlawful and, naturally, punishable by the state courts.

One cannot blame the states for trying to protect their own interests, but how they proposed to combat charges of unconstitutionality which would inevitably arise is a question for the Delphic Oracle.

The inocuous sounding phrase "To regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states, and with the Indian Tribes," which has been the foundation of many a momentous Supreme Court decision, was also the basis for this latest bit of judicial counterpoint.

Justice Byrnes wrote the main court decision with this thesis, a concurring opinion by Justice Robert H. Jackson broadened the scope of the award, when the new justice expressed the belief that various laws approaching the outlines of the "Anti-Okie" legislation, are quite probably also unconstitutional.

These laws in general involve excessively arbitrary use of the term "citizen" and the treatment and privileges of citizens.

Examples of this type of legislation are as tenuous as:

Idaho, last year, passed a law which forbids local boards to spend money for the education of children living in migratory labor camps.

New York has a "deportation" law under which 25,000 poor persons are said to have been deported to the states from which they originated.

An Iowa "warning out" law states that persons suspected of being about to apply for relief may be served with a legal notice by the sheriff of his county that he is not a citizen of that county and must leave it.

Special citizenship in a county is new to us. It's also a "new one" to the Constitution. While not wholly necessary, it might be beneficial to quote the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution; its provisions are so unique to so many peoples.

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

We cannot help to subscribe to Justice Jackson's decision after studying these lines.

When migratory problems were seen as one of national character, the Tolan Committee of the House was organized. It has proved to be an efficient, completely desirable group.

It is good to see that this committee is still functioning. While a nation's eyes are focused on billions for defense, humanity and national unity prescribe that we not forget consideration and social legislation to reinstate these "thousands on defense."

The solution is clearly a Federal problem. The states have clearly failed.

ONE BALMY

Sunday afternoon we decided to see if some of the old chamber of commerece circulars we have were accurate in describing Fisherman's Wharf as "a colorful, romantic alice of neopolitan atmosphere on the edge of a great city." While musing that they were reasonably correct but had forgotten to mention the unmistakable aroma of fish, we spotted a picturesque old gentleman sitting on a fish basket before a long, tea colored skein which he was mending.

"An old salt from Epsom," we thought, "an uneducated, poor but honest fisherman making his living at next to the oldest profession in the world, human interest, 'quaint' stuff for the column."

We summoned our best accent:

"Buon giorno, signor, you manda tha net, eh?"

"Obviously," he replied dryly without looking up.

"Heh, heh, this old sea dog has a sense of humor," we thought.

"She's a pretty biga net. How she's a getting torn," we asked in our earliest manner.

Our poor, old ignorant son of the beach looked up at us with a wry smile.

"Sharks," he said in well modulated tones, "while never attaining a notable size in this immediate locale, are nevertheless a bane to the commercial fisherman. They become enmeshed in the skein and tolerate it while trying to bite their way through the strands. If you will excuse me, sir, I must go to dinner."

He smiled cheerily and walked briskly to the shore end of the pier, unlocked a 1941 Packard Eight and squirted away as smoothly as custard.

The little crab boats bowing gently to each other sent little, derisive squeaks to our crimson ears.

"Poor, uneducated fisherman, eh? Thrrp."

CHRISTMAS

shoppers were doing it early on Market Street, bustling in and out of stores and trying to hold arms full of packages and umbrellas at the same time. A little fellow was standing on the corner with his mother, waiting for the lights to change. We heard him ask if he could go to see Santa Claus.

"No, Joey," replied the young mother, "that store's picketed and your pop says we mustn't go through a picket line because the union might find out and fine him."

Little Joey's lip quivered and the storm clouds on his brow threatened rain.

He looked up at his mother and quavered, "gee, is Santa Claus a scab, too?"

FROM PROVIDENCE,

Rhode Island, we have the report that Professor Mortimer J. Adler of Chicago University made a speech advocating that students "Toss the college text book out of the window and spend 48 hours a week with the instructor."

We approve the idea heartily, Professor, and see room for only one improvement. Reverse the procedure.

Twentieth Century Plague; Enthusiast For 'Yearbook'

● Flies, Nasty Creatures!

Editor, The Guardsman:

In the past centuries there have been many plagues in both Europe and here, in America, but we here in the college are at the present time going through one of the worst that has ever been known.

The time is mid-afternoon just when the sun is at its hottest. The room is buzzing with the study of many students. Suddenly there is a loud scream and a slap and the cry that—"those darn flies are getting vicious." Yes, the rooms on the south end of the building are being invaded by millions of flies. These flies are not content with just taking over, but they want to drive the human inhabitants completely out of the vicinity. It is getting to the point where no one dare take his life in his hands and enter these portals without a trusty fly gun.

Surely there is something that can be done about this deplorable situation. For example, either make a fly swatter standard equipment in all rooms on the south end of the building, or use some other method of disposing of the little "friends."

Thanking you in advance, I am,

Justa Jurk

● Save The Spirits

Editor, The Guardsman:

What happened to the yearbook promised last semester to the students of the college?

Everyone I talked to last semester was all pepped up over the prospects of a yearbook and when there is spirit shown in this school it should be salvaged and something done to encourage it.

All the high schools in the city have yearbooks, and many colleges and junior colleges have also. So why shouldn't we?

Although they might not seem so important to many students now, yearbooks are fun in future years to spend a rainy Sunday afternoon with and reminisce. One can go through it and find students he hadn't seen for years, others who had apparently disappeared and so forth. It all is fun, and an important part of a student college life.

Naturally there are those who find no need nor call for a yearbook, and those who wouldn't want to spend the money (if there is any to spend) and all that sort of thing. But this element is found in every school. The students who want such a book should stick together and perhaps in a semester or two, some provision may be made for one.

Hopeful

FEM ADS . . . by Nancy

HIGHLIGHT of the social pre-holiday season as far as college students are concerned, is the High Soph Formal coming up next week. So, bearing this thought in mind, we embarked on a sightseeing tour of stores and magazines to see just what will be worn for holiday formal dances.

After the most important question, the date—or man, is settled, the dress comes next in importance. This holiday season no one should have trouble finding a dress because there are so many stunning ones being shown.

MATERIAL SUBSTITUTIONS

Taffeta and net seem to be tops when it comes to materials, but the women who decided there won't be any more net or taffeta for them will find substitutes in the form of jersey, crepe, brocade, satin, and velvet.

For the sophisticated, tall, dark and handsome woman a black velvet dirndl skirt with a gold and white sweater would be very striking.

On the dainty blonde a black over pink net would be most beauteous. If you don't comprehend "black over net" it means, three skirts, two of them pink, and one black. A gathered bodice, and narrow shoulder straps complete the outfit.

Jerseys made on the peasant dirndl fashion with wide cross-stitched braid around the hem and neck line, are distinctive but may be a bit too informal for the high soph formal.

SPOTLIGHT ON WHITE

Today's spotlight falls on a white chiffon made with long flowing sleeves, rather plain but with gold nailheads around the neckline and cuffs. Although this particular gown was chiffon, other white models are found in crepe, net and what have you. Flowing Grecian draped gowns are still popular and are still made most attractively in white.

Billowy skirted velvet set off by a contrasting taffeta blouse is very becoming, and can be found in many styles. Some with jackets, some without. Some with sleeves, some without.

Metallic clothes are sparkling and shine out very nicely on the dance floor. Not too much, of course, but just enough.

OH, DEM GOLDEN SLIPPERS

Shoes borrowed from beach styles of last summer have been converted by stylists into evening slippers in silver, gold, and even kid of colors matching the dress. Some are decorated with nailheads, while others remain unadorned.

Evening slippers this season have really hit a new high and instead of simply a pair of gold or silver sandals, like in "ye olden days," there is a great choice in both styles and colors to select from.

NAN SEES . . .

fancy coiffures being covered up until the club is reached with net squares sprinkled with sequins. These can be worn during the dance, too.

for women who like to wear bows, sparling bows attached to either combs or bobby pins for formal wear, can be worn.

Cowie Skylark . . . it almost lays an egg

Spectator . . .

WIFE on her fifth wedding anniversary finds a problem on her hands. That old debbil, career, is beginning to creep insidiously into her marriage. Her loving husband is permitting his advertising business to intrude a little too much into their personal life.

When hubby's business attachments become too annoying, wife takes a powder with the accompanying encouragements of the gallant stranger who forms the third party in the inevitable triangle. Hubby and the boy-friend both start paying terrific courtship to wife in an attempt to win her. The anticipated outcome depends only upon the vagarities of the director's mind and the amount of film to be utilized.

THE OLD TRIANGLE AGAIN

The plot sounds familiar, doesn't it? It definitely is; it has formed the basis of more screen-plays than one would care to remember. One of the basic, fundamental themes of the American cinema (according to the script-writers), this business career vs. love plot may be developed into simple, unadulterated treatments, hackneyed and trite and the usual inhabitants of lower berths in double-feature bills.

Or—if it is sufficiently garnished with excellent acting, some vital, intelligent direction, good situations to hang on the tattered story-frame, and particularly emphasized as comedy, the old story still stands a good chance of providing some amusing entertainment even for a 1941 audience who has seen it all before in one form or another.

On the fringe of the latter category we must place Paramount's latest "comedy," Skylark starring Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland, and Brian Aherne. It presents the triangle with laughter replacing drama. A brilliant cast has been gathered to punch home Samson Raphaelson's story; every possible production value in directing, photography, glittering sets and costuming have been added; original situations have been somewhat laboriously conceived; no expense has been spared in turning out an A-one top-notch film—and yet . . .

The lacquered varnish of sophistication in dialogue and treatment that camouflages the basic weakness of the plot occasionally wears quite thin; then it is, that the gaunt, skeleton-like ribs of an emaciated story protrude barely. These moments are few, but sufficient to discourage a completely commending nod to Skylark. Give the fine cast and the accompanying direction by Mark Sandrich 100 thanks to lifting the material up by its bootstraps. It could have been oh, so much worse.

COLBERT SCORES ANOTHER TRIUMPH

Skylark in one respect is a personal triumph for Claudette Colbert, long a favorite with this department since those days when she distinguished herself with an age in Cleopatra. Miss Colbert completely radiant and charming as ever, socks home her part in every scene and adds another convincing portrayal to her growing list of screen gems. Photography is particularly kind to her this trip.

Ray Milland plays the husband torn between his work and his wife and does it nicely. He has played opposite Miss Colbert before, and the two make splendid foils for each other in their many scenes. Brian Aherne as the family "friend" seemed strangely miscast. His very dignified British personality collides solidly with the slap-happy antics of his role. The result isn't too impressive. Nice support is contributed by Walter Abel and Binnie Barnes. Somebody seemingly must get intoxicated in these sophisticated opuses and Abel is usually the individual to do it. He does it nicely though.

Still, Skylark must be necessarily relegated to that in-between category of pictures, not good, not bad. It's breezy entertainment, but definitely in a rut.

IF the government is looking for a place to play with their tanks, they might give the parking lot a chance for fame and misfortune. The other day two cars were stuck in the mud, how they finally got out is a mystery. Cars were bouncing over the rough and muddy terrain swaying from side to side as if they were being shaken by some huge invisible monster. Last semester when the rains got bad some cars slid down the side of the muddy and slippery hill like toboggans.

Lin Yu Tang, who wrote the Joy of Living, also wrote a little thesis on the art of sitting. Yu should have been around here when he wrote his essay.

Sitting is a great art, and we could venture to say that no two people sit exactly alike. Someone once said that you can judge a man's character by his posture, but he sold braces with health courses.

One of the most prominent types of sitter is the athletic type who must have at least three chairs to be comfortable. One to sit in and two for his feet. He sprawls out over a chair, like a mountain emaciating.

In lecture one day we happened to see an interesting type of sitter. He was what you might call a side sitter, more commonly known in the theater as the aisle sitter. This fellow as we found was born this way; his mother having been frightened by the Leaning Tower of Pisa. He told us that it was extremely difficult for him to go to the show and have to take a seat in the middle of the seating section. One night, he confided in us, he went to the show and was ushered to a seat in the middle. Before the night was over he was thrown out of the theater by the manager. It seemed that he was placed beside some conceited sensitive young thing who was flattered to think that because of his leaning posture that he was flirting with her.

An intriguing position for some politicians' cousin would be the job of fly swatter extraordinaire. Flies, flies, flies, everytime you turn around, there is a fly or four. It gets to be quite distracting for the instructors. To see people sitting in class waving arms and books around one might get the opinion that there were bats in the proverbial belfry. First, it's grasshoppers, then its seagulls, and now its flies. Don't be too surprised upon returning from Christmas vacation to find the building gone—eaten up by a plague of locusts.

Your College Presents . . . Survey Results: Lab Technicians, A Practical Course

By Iwanna Hayworth

A STUDENT opinion survey taken of students enrolled in the parasitology class held unanimously that the laboratory technicians course is the most practical of all the curriculum offered in the college.

Several reasons substantiating these preferences were cited by these students.

The parasitology course is excellent to teach students to make self analysis and examination. They learn to discern whether they are afflicted by any parasite which may be the direct cause of ill health or carriers of these parasites.

The method by which the subject matter is given enables the student to fully grasp every minute detail of it. This is accomplished by continued reviews of material covered in class. The theory of the curriculum is taught in the tri-weekly lectures.

Two men in the parasitology class pointed out another point in favor of the course as being very practical for any men who are subject in the very near future to the Selective Service Act, as the Army has very definite needs for parasitologists.

Although pre-nursing and pre-medical students have in their required curricula courses comparable to those in the laboratory technicians studies, parasitology will prove invaluable to them. Several students in the formerly mentioned division are enrolled in these classes.

FIRST APPEARANCE IN SEPTEMBER

As a result of student demand, this special course for laboratory technicians was begun this semester under the sponsorship of and by Dr. Glen Noble, chirman of the Biology department.

The future success of this newly added department depends upon new state regulations for laboratory technicians. One such requirement is an A.B. degree before any student can become a licensed technician in this field or a doctor's assistant.

Before this division was added in the curriculum, however, the courses offered for aspiring technicians was only preparatory, and according to Dr. Noble, success at this early stage of the game is marked, as there are a number of students anxious to enroll in the courses. "It is probable that next semester, the number of students now enrolled will be doubled."

The field for such skilled people is open. There are at present jobs open in San Francisco, Santa Barbara, San Jose, Reno, and numerous others. The Army has need for these trained workmen as well as other branches of the service.

Doctors and others specializing in medical work have a definite need for laboratory technicians to aid them in diagnosing of diseases, both known and unknown, as doctors themselves rarely specialize in this field along with their work.

A bright future is ahead for any student who is desiring to become a laboratory technician. Staff Artist Louise Horne shows in her drawing one such individual engrossed in his work, amid test tubes, recorder, slides and other needed paraphernalia.

ILLUSTRATING WORK

In the parasitology class, students learn not only how to recognize different microscopic slides, but also how to make these slides for their work in the laboratory. Examples of their work will include study of malaria, sleeping sickness, protozoa infection, parasitic worms which are found in the human intestines, blood, and may even be found in any organ of the body, and other like material.

The slide material which is made available for student use in these courses is obtained from supply houses, downtown hospitals, other laboratory technicians, and the individual students themselves. Members of this parasitology class make self-examinations about once every two weeks. Practically every student is found to have present in his system some parasite.

STUDENTS KNOW BY PARASITIC NAME

One woman in this group remarked that each person was known to his fellow students in the class not by his own name, but by the name of the parasite which he was found either to be afflicted with or a carrier. One feminine member of the group goes by the name of "Unknown," because up until the present time, she has discovered no such bug in her system."

The cafeteria workers are serving as material for experiments for these parasitical technicians who are searching for any parasites in the group.

Other courses taken by these students are serology, study of serum reactions as applied to laboratory diagnosis of communicable diseases. Hematology, another, is a study of the blood. Bacteriology 50 is an advanced study of etiologic agents of infectious diseases, cultural methods used in their treatment, immunity, and pathology.

In closing the discussion for today, according to Dr. Noble, "It takes two years at the present time to complete the laboratory technicians course, however, in the future, four years of work may be required."

RAMblings By Nick Barbarotto

Kalnen Versus Trotsky; Kilgore Rates Over Rams

JUST KALNEN—IT'S SIMPLE

One quiet afternoon on February 15, 1920, a bouncing baby boy was born to the family of Mr. and Mrs. Kalnen right here in glorious San Francisco. The family pride was christened August Karl Kalnen, and the future was to hold many bright things for young August.

The gentleman is now a worthy student of the college, and his name is a thing of the past. Through the years it slowly changed, so that most of his later friends know him as Trotsky, and wonder . . . who is Kalnen? . . . when the name is mentioned.

To those who know him well, both Trotsky and Kalnen mean the same person. But, as we have said, those who don't are led to believe that there are two people.

So it is for those that are disillusioned that we bring up the subject. Kalnen and Trotsky are both and the same person! Be that understood.

The change was slow, and, as would be expected, his first name soon became "Augie." That isn't unusual . . . everyone has a nickname at some time or other, some more than others (and some worse than others).

From Augie Kalnen, someone decided that Trotsky Kalnen would be ideal, and so the thing took another turn. That was alright, too, but when Trotsky Kalnen changed to "Trot" Trotsky . . . well, what can one believe!

When it reached this stage, all the aforementioned confusion took place . . . and we hope that everything is straightened out now.

The situation reached its peak one day during football practice. Coach Lee Eisan called for a scrimmage and began calling the men that were to make up the first string.

After the backfield was chosen, Eisan barked, "Danielson, get over a ball! Hufnagle and Brown at guards . . . Kalnen and Trotsky at tackles . . . and Cassidy and Jones at ends!"

That's funny . . . all along we were under the impression that Bob Hoffman was the other tackle. But we all make mistakes, don't we?

HAS EVERYTHING—EVEN RAMS

There's a sheet entitled the Mobil Pigskin Prophet that comes out every Wednesday, and on it they give you the lowdown on football for that week-end. The sheet can be acquired at any Mobil gas station and contains everything a person can think of pertaining to the gridiron.

It is published by the All-American Gridiron Index for the Mobilgas Dealers and the said information is provided by Sam Hayes, the well-known sports commentator.

First it gives predictions as to the outcomes of all the college and university games, taking them in six separate sections, the Coast, Southwest, West, South, East, and Central.

Then there are articles on all the major games of the week-end, plus predictions on all the junior college games, the standings of all the conferences, the undefeated teams of the nation, the coach of the week, the player of the week, the top 50 major colleges for that week, and the top 25 junior colleges for the same week.

And right in the middle of the sheet stands . . . 80% winners for 10 years . . . meaning that their predictions for the last 10 years have been right eight out of 10 times.

No, this isn't an advertisement as you might be led to expect by now!

What we're driving at is the fact that in the column . . . Top 25 Junior Colleges This Week . . . stands the Rams!

It's near the bottom of the column, in 23rd place to be exact. But just the same being the 23rd best in the nation after finishing in fifth place in your own conference, and ending the season with two wins, six losses and one tie for conference and non-conference games, isn't so bad at all!

Kilgore Junior College from Texas was in the number one spot, while San Mateo, Conference Champions, were down in 12th place. The Rams received some 403 points, while Kilgore collected a total of 551.

WE COULD HAVE TOLD YOU

Not that we want to give you the impression that we're fatheads—but we are proud to boast that this department . . . although we didn't announce it before the game because the column didn't appear . . . was one of the very few that picked California to beat Stanford.

Yea, we admit it's an old subject.

Intramural

Volleyball Semi-Finals Today; Three Sextets Will Enter Finals Thursday, December 11

Semi-finals of the volleyball tournament will be held promptly this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the men's gymnasium, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, announced this week.

Later in the week, Thursday, December 11, the final round will be staged.

From the earlier rounds of last week, seven teams fought for a chance to enter the competition today, namely, the Newman Club, Goats, Rabbits, Harbin, Shinkickers, Phi Lambda Epsilon, and the members of the men's physical education staff.

Of the teams mentioned, the probable squads which will enter the finals on Thursday, are the Newman Club, Goats, and the men's gym staff.

Newmans Lose Mossler

Last semester's winner, the Newman sextet, has practically the same roster with which it won the crown, losing only George Mössler. The squad will undoubtedly enter today's semi-finals with a team manned by Bob Cavender, Lou Vasquez, Ed Cassidy, Jack Koster, Don Tobin, and Bob Marcus.

Runnerup to the Newman's last spring was the Goats, who, unlike the champions, has the same roster also. Mel Dropo is the leading scorer and is closely followed by Dick Vulovich as the team's leading candidate for intramural honors.

Gym Staff Entered

On the other hand, the men's gym staff was defeated in the early rounds of last semester in an upset, but appear stronger in this tournament, and loom as dark horses. The roster of the squad includes Lee Eisan, Jack Gaddy, Russ Sweet, Al Eisan, Jim Jensen, and Brady.

As usual, all points garnered in the tournament will automatically count toward the winning of the intramural trophy, now held by the Newman Club. Medals will be awarded to the first three sextets.

Tennis Delayed

Because of the wet weather, the singles tournament in tennis competition was momentarily stalled, Brady said. Competition, however, will probably be continued this week. Doubles will start immediately after the completion of the singles.

After the Christmas vacation, an All Star basketball contest is scheduled to take place between the Newman Club, winners of the intramural league, and a team selected by Brady. The date of the game has not been determined as yet.

Seven Events Completed

Since the semester began, a total of seven events will have been completed by this Friday, including such activities as free throwing, basketball, the cross country race, singles and doubles tennis, volleyball, and swimming.

Basketball

Rams Engage Santa Clara Tomorrow

Having already played two games of its large practice schedule, the Ram basketball squad, under the tutorship of Coach Tom Wilson, will journey down to San Jose to play the Santa Clara Frosh tomorrow evening, 6:30 p.m. at the Bronco's home pavilion.

The Red and White has fifteen practice games scheduled this season before it opens its conference schedule on January 16, with the San Mateo Junior College quintet on the Ram's court.

Rams Play Six Home Games

The basketball squad has thirteen conference games, running from January 16, to February 24. Six of these conference encounters will be played at home, with the games against Salinas, Santa Rosa, Stockton, Menlo and Sacramento, away from home. The tilts to be played on the Ram's home pavilion will be against San Mateo, Yuba, Modesto, Marin, Santa Rosa, and Salinas.

Doubleheaders Scheduled

Doubleheaders will be played against San Mateo, Salinas, Santa Rosa and Marin. Single contests will see the college squad battling Yuba, Sacramento, Modesto and Menlo. The preliminaries of all these doubleheaders will be played by the junior varsity.

The baby Rams have many likely looking prospects on the team this year, and with the number of contests the Lambs have scheduled, the junior varsity should produce some fine material for next year's varsity.

At present, Coach Tom Wilson has been relying mainly on the efforts of Mel Dropo, returning veteran of last season to bolster the Ram attack. A high scoring forward last year, Dropo has been shifted to guard in the early practice sessions ordered by Wilson and has shown to good advantage. Unless graduates from the various high schools strengthen the guard position, Dropo will remain at that spot.

Is Successful

Presenting Coach Jim Jansen, new gymnasium instructor in the college this semester, who has done a great job in organizing the pugilists in his boxing classes.

Final results of the Associated Men Student's boxing show at the Coliseum Bowl last night, will be published in the next issue of The Guardsman, which will come out on Friday, January 9, 1942.

A total of 309 students have competed in these events thus far, and in as much as ping pong, touchtackle football, softball, horse shoes, and rifle shooting have to be run off after the Christmas holidays, the total number of students who competed appears to be gratifying, Brady said.

Activities Lighter

Activities in the fall semester are usually lighter than in the spring, and because of football and basketball practice, it naturally tends to cut down the number of eligible participants and days the gym can be used.

As a result, fall interest is keener, and there is a stronger concentration of participants on a smaller number of teams, Brady said.

Trophies Go On Display

Later in the week, trophys which will be awarded to the winning intramural teams, will be on display in the show case in the men's gymnasium.

At present, four trophys have been acquired, and the names of the victors in tennis, both singles and doubles, as well as basketball and volleyball, will have their names engraved upon them, Brady concluded.

Sixty-Seven Awards Given WAA Participants Today

Sixty-seven awards will be presented at the tourney week banquet today to all women who partook of WAA activities this semester, according to Bernice Strube, WAA vice-president.

Awards will be given to the following women: archery, Rivona Alfonsi, Mariun Du Jardin, Anita Friedly, Helen Gifford, Margaret Hallohan, Carol Mae Holsman, Phyllis Lapham, Helen Rissetto, Bernice Strube, Alice Swing. Badminton awards go to Ruth Esmond, Carol Graves, Eva Laidlaw, Mary Loble, Mary Milinouich, Betty Morris, Kimi Noda, Jacko Okazari, Lorna Watkinson, Ruth Willis and Helen Wood.

Bowling: Anita Friedly, Dorothes Jorgensen, Mary Kyne, Lucille Landresse, Gracina Lowe, Eloise Oswald, Hulaine Reid, Mie Sao, Alvenise Shannon, Thelma Soo Hoo, Georgia Theodore and Dorothy Thurmond.

Golf: Annell Branch, Vern Delucchi, Peggy Feeney, Eloise Oswald, Genevieve Partman and Lorraine Westrup. Dancing: Irene Weed.

Ice skating: Romona Carrillo, Sophia Ellis, Gloria Lang, Ruth Nield and Martha Wallis.

Newmans Meet Gym Staff

Next Friday morning, December 12, at an unannounced time, a basketball game will be played between the Newman Club, winners of the intramural basketball league this semester, and the men's physical education staff.

Women's Athletics

Swimming, Badminton, Archery Events Complete Tourney Week; Banquet Planned For Tonight

Concluding events for Women's Athletic Association tourney week scheduled for today and tomorrow, according to Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the organization, are swimming at the YWCA, badminton and archery finals, and the grand finale banquet.

Swimming events tomorrow will commence at 1:30 at the YWCA pool on Sutter Street to which all women of the college are invited. Admission to the pool will be paid by WAA funds, Miss Kraul said.

Faculty Men May Enter

Faculty men will be given an opportunity to join in the WAA tourney week program at the badminton program, Wednesday, December 10 at 2 in the women's gymnasium, Lella Rocovi, club manager, announced. Badminton finals will also be played off between Virginia Bopp and Audrey Turner.

WAA members and other archers of the college are invited to attend their archery events at 10 a.m. Wednesday, December 10, according to Helen Rissetto, manager of the club, at the archery range. Teams are to be formed and several special shooting events are being planned. Following the program, refreshments will be served.

Finale of the week will be tonight at the Trinity Methodist Church on Market and 16th streets at 6 p.m. when all WAA members and their guests will assemble for the banquet.

Crienkovich To Entertain

Entertainment for the evening will include a travelogue given by Helen Crienkovich, champion diver and student of the college, on her trip to South America; a monologue by Donna Meyers; two singers provided by the talent bureau; several numbers of the orchestra, and presentation of awards won during the semester.

This will be the first appearance of the WAA orchestra, Miss Oddstad remarked, since its beginning six weeks ago. The band, composed of eight members and under the leadership of Dorothy Fairbanks, will play two Christmas carols and will accompany community singing.

Special guests for the evening will include women faculty and college officials, WAA instructors, and GAA presidents from public high schools. Each woman is requested by Elma Oddstad, chairman of the banquet to bring a senior woman from a high school, or freshman student at the college, as her special guest for the evening.

Tickets Obtained At Bank

Tickets and reservations for the banquet may be obtained at the college bank until 1 p.m. today and are 40 cents.

Another feature of the banquet will be the announcement of newly elected officers for the coming semester, Miss Kraul pointed out.

Nominated for president were Dorothy Ann Kraul and Janice Berch; secretary, Betty Wood and Nancy Nagle; treasurer, Pat Lee and Anita Friedley.

Present officers are Dorothy Ann Kraul, president; Bernice Strube, vice-president; Elma Oddstad, secretary, and Janice Berch, treasurer.

Jim Skinner, Campus King, Sets Cross-Country Record

Jim Skinner, elected campus king last Friday, competed for Russ Sweet's track squad last November and showed some fine talents. This fall he came home with the intramural cross-country championship in record time.

His laurels at the college have been high, and, according to Sweet, far from ended.

College Prominent In Hispanic-American Pioneering

Editor's note: Information in the following article is the combination of material selected from two sources; various studies made of the Civilization of the Americas, and from suggestions by Dr. Robert J. Parker, co-ordinator of this curriculum.

By Iwanna Hayworth

Culture is the epitome of history, and from each of these great historic epochs the America south of us has a precious cultural heritage well worthy of our appreciation.

Educators nation-wide, have acted to place the resources of the schools and colleges behind the vital program of improving Pan American understanding.

The college here is the first educational institution in this part of the United States to offer a curriculum which includes a two-year course of work in the Civilization of the Americas.

This development of the course owes its present form to the foresight of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, president of the college, Dr. J. Paul Mohr, registrar, Dr. Robert J. Parker, co-ordinator of this curriculum, and the cooperation of members of the faculty who worked out specialized courses to fit into the plan being followed.

Inspiration for courses of this type comes from a near-by center of Pan-American study, University of California, where Dr. Herbert R. Bolton, famed mural, will grace the interior of the college library building when this building is constructed.

Foundation courses for this curriculum are the History of the Americas, and courses in Spanish. These courses include not only studies of Hispanic America but also Canada, United States and its possessions.

A course in the Geography of the Americas was added in this curriculum in the fall of 1936 under the sponsorship of Dr. Joseph Williams to parallel History 28ab, for the further enlightenment of students interested in foreign trade.

In 1938 four new, inter-related courses were added, art, government, economics, and literature.

The Art of the Americas given by Richard Allman, art instructor at the college, deals with the architecture, painting, music, dances, and other arts of the Hemisphere with relation to the influences of the culture of different environments.

In Political Science 8, or the Governments of the Americas, under the leadership of John Selig, discussions of governmental structures and institutions, contemporary problems and politics of the countries of the Western Hemisphere are given.

William Goss contributes his time with Economics 8ab or Economic Relationships of the Americas.

Literature of the Americas was begun by Catherine Musante, and is now being developed by Dr. Francis Colligan.

The idea behind each curriculum offered in the college is to instruct and inform both the students who are majoring in the field of Western Hemisphere history and those who have a slighter competing interest but sincere desire for knowledge of the countries which make up the rest of the American frontier.

It has been suggested by members of the faculty and administration who are engaged at the present time in finding ways and means of improving the already excellent curriculum.

According to Dr. Parker, "we hope sometime in the near future to organize a Pan-American of an International Relations Club to encourage more student interest in inter-American relations". Explaining such an organization, he said that he wished to have an organization in which students could get together informally for the purpose of learning more in this field of inter-American relations.

It has been suggested that a series of popular lectures be offered next semester as a one or two unit course. These lectures will be given by men from other universities and members of the faculty who are interested in the Pan-American situation.

Since the Civil Aeronautics Authority requires only five units of work a semester in that training, students enrolled in the C.A.A. are anxious to get into the courses under the heading of Western Hemisphere Civilization, as they realize, according to Dr. Parker, that a portion of their lives may be spent in the Latin Americas.

"There is no better place and no better opportunity in the whole United States to study the problems of the meeting and merging of the English and Spanish Civilizations than at our own door," said Dr. Stuart Cuthbertson, University of Colorado. "Certainly, if we desire to make possible a closer friendship, it is our own personal duty to take the lead in the effort by studying the present aspects and backgrounds of their life, by realizing that in prejudices and beliefs the roots of civilization lie deep."

Texas College Aids War Gas Production

AUSTIN, TEXAS — (ACP) — To cram war-important aviation gasoline with greater power and "kick," elaborate chemical engineering experiments are under way at the University of Texas.

The research has as its ultimate end finding better ways to design gasoline cracking plants, and every day Dr. W. A. Felsing, chemistry department head, and his assistants are literally wedging apart the various components of airplane fuel.

As a result of the research, Felsing and his workers will soon know the behavior of aviation gasoline and its components under all sorts of conditions.

Purpose of the investigation of pressure and volume relationships of the fuels at high temperatures is to get data to correlate the physical properties of the hydro-carbons with their structure. The data may prove helpful in designing new distillation and fractionation plants to turn out better gasoline for Uncle Sam's defense aircraft.

Samples of hydrocarbons for testing are supplied the University by the American Petroleum Institute, now spending some $80,000 a year to synthesize hard-to-separate gasoline components in pure enough form to study their physical qualities.

Karl Koenig To Address Business Class Tomorrow

An address by Karl F. Koenig, of the international banking department of the Bank of America will be given for the international business class, business 90, at 11 a.m. tomorrow in Room 303, according to Edward Larson, business instructor.

Koenig will discuss the features of foreign exchange, and practical operations as pertaining to a bank. He will also comment on present conditions in international finance, Larson added.

Visitors are welcome to attend the address. Koenig is reputed to be well versed in banking, having gotten his experience in the department of foreign exchange, and a practical talk on the subject is expected.

Hunter College students voluntarily withdraw from school when they fail to meet minimum standards of scholarship.

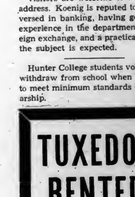
VIII. The CAB, and the Publications Board

"THE Club Advisory Board and the Publications Board, two more of the six major representative student activities, occupy us for today, Algy. Naturally, they're represented on the Ex Council."

"My, Ed, but we're getting formal. And I guess that last remark was a gentle hint for me to exhale. Gee, the Ex Council is democratic; everybody seems to be represented"



"Algy, what makes you so bitter today? Wait, don't answer that; we haven't much time, so let's start right in on the CAB.

"The CAB was organized in 1938 to act as a coordinating unit between the various clubs in the college and the Associated Students. Chief among CAB functions is the supervision of college clubs through its charter-granting powers. To gain official recognition in the college, each club, whether a newcomer or an old-timer, must apply to the CAB for this charter or seal of approval. The CAB must then submit its decisions to the Ex Council for final approval."

"Why all the red-tape," quizzed Algy. "And what does recognition get them, and who does the recognizing?"

"What an order, Algy! To start with the last question first, though, the CAB is composed of one representative from each properly chartered club in the college. Exactly what 'recognition' means is hard to pin down. Briefly, we may say it means that a club so designated has the backing of the college name, which may often mean more tangible support; publicity in The Guardsman

CAB President

and the strength to carry out larger aims through cooperation with the other organizations— and unified by the CAB. Your so-called red-tape is necessary to insure that only desirable and more or less permanent groups exist under the college name.

"Registration in the CAB is particularly important for the men's and women's social organizations. Certain of the citizenry would be prone to frown on such groups as secret societies, prohibited by public school law, but for official recognition by the college.

"President of the CAB now is Francis Goetz. Pat Ruff and Beverly Brown are vice-president and secretary. Cecil Aggeler is their faculty adviser.

"Thirty clubs now make up the group.

"The seldom-heard-of Publications Board was formed out of actual necessity in the spring of 1939 to combat the abuse of the college name on publications that had received neither student nor administration approval. At that time the board was made responsible for all publications bearing the college name. Only two official publications of the college exist now: The Guardsman and The Forum Magazine. A yearbook, if organized, would also be an official publication. Any other publications must first be approved by the board before distribution. Each issue of Cabby, the CAB magazine, for example, must be approved by the Publications Board before it is given to the members.

"The chairman of the Publications Board is always the editor of The Guardsman who is automatically appointed upon the recommendation of the chairman of the journalism department, Dean Edwin C. Browne and Joan Nourse Muscio, Guardsman faculty adviser, are permanent members of the board.

"The rest of the board is composed of representatives of The Guardsman and The Forum, and one person from each recognized publication. Cabby is now the only publication to fall in the last class.

"Nothing more now, Algy, until after the holidays."

Faculty Association

Instructors, Hotel Division Students Speak At High School

Students and instructors spoke to George Washington High School seniors last Thursday, who were interested in various departments connected with the college.

Hilda Watson, Don Perham, and a group of hotel and restaurant management students spoke to students interested in this department. Lloyd D. Luckmann spoke to those planning to enter universities, and W. C. Marsh spoke to those interested in insurance.

Ward Nichols, who spoke to the accounting and secretarial group, reported favorable student response.

Other events participated in by the Faculty Association were a business education conference which was held at the Lake Merrit Hotel, Saturday at 9:30 a.m.

Leading educators of California in the field of business attended. They discussed problems in education.

The Faculty Association also held a dinner party at the Claremont Hotel that evening with between 25 and 30 couples in attendance.

Social committee chairman of the group, Oscar E. Anderson, and Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, spoke at the gathering.

Civil Service Rolls Show 13 Jobs Closed

Notice of discontinued positions in various fields has been received by Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor. Many jobs are still available however, and those interested should see Luckmann in Room 222.

The discontinued positions as issued by Mr. Luckmann include: associate, assistant, junior, and under purchasing officer; automotive mechanic and automotive mechanic's helper.

Additional positions that have been cut from the Civil Service roll are: alphabetic card-punch operator; power lineman of high-tension transmission lines; junior and senior machinist and machinist's helper; senior and assistant chemical analyst; patternmaker and gasoline and oil distribution system operator.

Test Information Aids Students

BROOKINGS, S. D.—(ACP)—In general, students are benefitted rather than retarded by being informed of their mental ability test scores, research by Dean R. K. Compton of the general science division at South Dakota State College indicates.

Dr. Compton, who also heads the college psychology department, recently completed a survey involving 1,331 students from 27 different colleges.

Knowledge of the scores resulted in possible detrimental attitudes in only 4 to 6 per cent of the students tested. He observed that students who had estimated their ability higher than the test indicated apparently derived less benefit from the knowledge than those who had under-estimated their intelligence.

Dr. Compton advises that test results probably should not be made known to students unless this knowledge is accompanied by adequate counseling service at the same time.

Talent Bureau

Soph Rally To Feature Student Acts

Entertainment provided by the college talent bureau will be featured at the sophomore rally to be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock on the front steps, according to Irwin Cohen, bureau student manager.

Responses to the demand for more talent have been satisfactory, but Cohen has voiced an appeal for more specialty numbers and popular singers.

Entertainment including dancers, marionettes, and singers will probably be featured in-coming college rallies, but entertainment for tomorrow's rally has not yet been revealed.

Those who have displayed their talent at past rallies and outside entertainments are Bob Iverole, Irene Weed, Mary Lovig, Teddy Ruegg, and Donna Meyer. Cohen urged interested students to contact him as soon as possible and arrange for an audition.

AMS Plans Barn Dance, Barbecue January 10

Plans for a picnic to precede the Associated Men Students' barn dance to be held on January 10 in the Alvarado Barn in Richmond are being considered by the AMS barn dance committee, according to Don Jensen, AMS president.

The picnic, if held, would take place in the park adjacent to the barn and would start about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The usual picnic games such as baseball and horseshoes would be part of the program, Jensen announced. The picnic would probably be followed by a barbecue in the evening.

At the present time auditions are being held to select an orchestra for the dance. Orchestras from San Francisco and the Eastbay are being heard before a election is made, Jensen said. The dance, which is a semi-annual event, is one of the social highlights of each semester.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

SIX months ago America was hopelessly attempting to unify itself for a possible war to come. Now that that war has come, as it ultimately had to come, the unity which was being sought has magically appeared.

Communism, which in the past was such an insidious fifth column within this country, now fears to make itself known except in the defense of democracy. This is rather amusing in itself—but will doubtlessly be attended to when the Axis powers have been put in their rightful place.

To any observant reader and watcher such organizations as the Student Defenders of Democracy are certainly uncalled for. The American people do not need any group or groups to remind them that democracy must be defended.

Bunds and Fascist cliques are taboo, isolationists non-existant, apathetic public support a thing of the past, mud slinging and political retaliations forced to the background.

And Americans have a right to feel proud of this transformation. Superlatives fail far short of apt description insofar as the response of a nation to a responsibility is concerned.

What follows is not a slant on any particular headline, but a series of them. Perhaps it is a slant on those of past, present and future.

DESCRIPTION—EXPLANATION:

In bitter fight the day is won,
Its carnage steeped the deeds are done.
Cannon roars for this occasion,
Bullet meets the cruel invasion.

Red blood runs cold upon the field,
Where weapons and mens' hearts are steeled.
Impersonal the bayonet,
Whose gleaming points with gore are wet.

What body now is torn apart?
A bullet rests within whose heart?
What genius did his life forego
The better that that light might glow?

What sacrifices have been made?
What ghastly tricks the fates have played?
By what infallable decree
Did come such strife and misery?

See here, this one without an arm
Did pen sweet verses of such charm,
So gay, so lilting in their rhyme;
O! few like him alive you'll find.

And there, whose face is blown away
What idol of the matinee,
How they'd applaud if they could see
Attainments of such great glory.

Oh this! A singer of whose voice is said
Could kill the live and wake the dead.
But useless now that simple jest;
His throat is torn, his soul at rest.

This officer in private life
Had children, friends, and home and wife.
He has them still, but they not he;
He is with God—as you can see.

A question raised, what now to ask?
A doubt perhaps about the task
For which, with causes of such dismay,
Those thousands had to die this way.

This field strewn with human waste
To satiate, with Mars, his taste
For sanguinary meals of man.
What glory to that evil plan?

No glory to the world of Mars.
No glory to the world of wars.
But glory great to men who, free,
Will fight and die for liberty.

Their lips will smile, their throats will sing.
They know in dying that they bring
Not to themselves unending fame,
But death unknown in freedom's name.

The singer gives his last encore;
The poet vows he'll write no more;
From off the stage the actor goes
Into the wickedest of shows.

The easy life is cast aside;
And now they fight with those who died
A hundred years or so ago
That that bright light might brighter glow.

For life is dear and pleasure sweet.
'Tis fine to live and laugh and meet
The wonders of a wondrous land;
To close with friendship every hand.

But sweeter things than life there are;
And better things than life by far.
How strange that life should ever be Subservient to liberty.

They'll die, these men, but there remains
A world released from tyrants' chains.
They died, these men, that there may be
A better world—a world made free.

Pres. A. J. Cloud

A Message For 1942

Greetings to all students of San Francisco Junior College as the year 1942 opens!

Young or old, no citizen of this freedom-loving land has ever had to face so stern and stupendous a task as at the present moment, in contributing his uttermost share toward his country's welfare. Democracy is critically threatened. Pearl Harbor in Hawaii—the bastion of our naval and military defense in the Pacific—has been treacherously and violently assailed; Manila has been mercilessly bombed, even though officially proclaimed an "open city." The United States is at war—at total war.

In times past, too many young Americans have been inclined to view the offerings of free, public education as a matter so commonplace as to hold no special meaning for them; but those times are, indeed past, and that attitude must be abandoned forthwith, in response to the national need. The clock has struck the appointed hour.

Seize eagerly, then, the opportunity of education afforded you, in order that you may make yourselves ready for the troubled days ahead. Sound and thorough education will toughen your arm, and strengthen your brain, and revitalize your soul. Thus, education will lay open to you the chiefest avenue by pursuing which you may make your fullest contribution to the eventual triumph of the social and political ideals cherished by the people of the great Republic.

—PRES. A. J. CLOUD

Final Exams Scheduled From January 19 To 28

Instruction for the fall semester officially ends next Friday, January 16, and final examinations will be conducted from Monday, January 19 till Wednesday, January 28, the registrar's office reported this week.

Examinations will be held in the rooms where classes regularly meet, according to the schedule issued by J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

See final schedule on page 4.

Dean Dougherty Asks All College Women To Carry On Despite War

By Kay Parac

"In order to keep the home fires burning, so to speak, women students of the college in the present emergency will have to carry on much the same as they have been up to now," Margaret Dougherty, Dean of women, said today, in a message to college women.

Miss Dougherty added that many of the women would probably change from academic to nursing and nutrition courses. They will be more in demand as we proceed with the work in the defense of our country, she said.

Petty grievances will be obliterated, and women will have to learn to do without, without complaining, Miss Dougherty prophesized. Red Cross knitting will serve to knit together closer friendships. Many of the women of the college have become interested in special service organizations such as the American Women's Voluntary Services, Ambulance Corps, Red Cross, and more will volunteer from time to time.

Many social activities will have to be surrendered, said Miss Dougherty. The cancellation of the Sophomore Formal is mute evidence of this condition.

Morale is the women's problem, just as much as the fight on the battlefield is the men's job. Cheerfulness and good neighborliness is the keynote of morale. Cooperation combined with the aforementioned virtues will set the morale high.

In the college, students should go about their studies with more interest than ever. In this direction lies the college students' battlefield. Everyone should try to accomplish something with added enthusiasm.

"Let's win on all fronts!" Miss Dougherty exclaimed.

College War Effort

National Defense Aided By Knitting Classes In College

Students wishing to do their part in national defense can do so in their own college by knitting scarfs and sweaters under the direction of Claire Cuneo, Home Economics Department instructor.

During vacation, Miss Cuneo explained, a number of women spent their mornings at school organizing a Red Cross unit, which it is hoped will eventually become the second production center in the city, the only other one being located at 625 Sutter Street.

Although most of the women who attended these meetings had knitted before, there were several beginners. Miss Cuneo pointed out. Both beginning and experienced knitters are welcome, she added, as the need for both scarfs and sweaters is great.

Yarn And Instructions Available

Students who wish to get yarn or who wish to get help on their work should come to Miss Cuneo in Room 158 from 2 to 3 p.m. any week day. However, if this time is inconvenient she will be in class from 9:30 to 11 a.m. and will be available at this time to give any necessary instructions. Students who wish to learn to knit should report Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 3 p.m. If possible, they should bring needles of any size and practice yarn.

In addition to the knitters, several women have signed up to do sewing, Miss Cuneo said, and have begun to work on small dresses which may be worn by the evacuees that arrive in San Francisco from war invaded countries.

Need For Sweaters

As many of the evacuees leave their homes with such short notice, the need for warm clothes is urgent. Sewing may be done either in the home economics rooms or at home.

Plans are also being drawn up for a blanket which will be made by all the volunteer knitters out of any scraps of yarn they may have. Six inch squares will be knitted and a color design will be worked out. Yarn may be turned in to Miss Cuneo any time before the final examination period, Miss Cuneo pointed out.

As Miss Cuneo will be in the school only while giving her own examinations during the final examination period, students who wish to knit between the two semesters should get their yarn and instructions before the exams start, Miss Cuneo pointed out. There is no time limit for turning in the finished product, she added, but the sooner the better.

College Women Serve

Women who attended the holiday gatherings or who began knitting the first of the week are Janice Berch, Violet Butler, Edith Carrey, Dolores Connor, Nell Crues, Alice Donner, Betty Fox, Mary Ann Grover, Doris Gustafson, Martha Howell, Patriela Ilg, Jackie Isenbruck, Dorothy Ann Kraul, Dorothea Jorgenson, Gloria Lange, Jane Lippert, June Matsuda, Pearl Mew, Gladys Moeller, Pat Mooney, Dorothy Marofka, Tami Nagasugi, Nancy Nagle, Gloria Olivi, Leona Schafer, Elaine Stuck, Dolores Sullivan, Dorothy-Helen Thurmond, Alice Violanti, Martha Wallace, and Iki Yamomato.

Air Raid Precaution Rules Given In Dual Form To Help The Doubtful

Two Sides To The Story

Interceptor Command Issues Rules Which May Aid, But—

The following instructions and regulations for air raids have been released through Dean Edwin C. Browne's office.

WARNING SIGNAL

Continuous ringing of classroom bells for the period of at least two minutes.

All students must stand at the warning signal and be ready to leave the room as soon as the instructor has secured the door wide open. Leave all books and loose articles in the room as it will be impossible for you to keep them with you in the halls.

EXIT FROM ROOMS

All students will proceed to the corridor. Those in the basement (with the exception of those in the cafeteria), first and second floors will remain in the corridor in front of their classrooms under the immediate supervision of their instructor. Those on the third floor will proceed as follows:

Rooms 344, 345, 346, 347 and 349—proceed via the back, northeast stairs to the second floor corridor.

Rooms 300, 302, 304, 350—proceed via the front, northwest stairs to the first floor corridor.

Library—proceed via the front southwest stairs to the basement corridor.

All other third floor rooms—proceed via the center stairway to the basement corridor.

Students in the Cafeteria—proceed via the adjoining stairway to the first floor north corridor.

Those out of doors—proceed via the entrance to the first floor and basement.

Students in the Gymnasium—all students in and around the gyms should proceed by the shortest route to the locker rooms. In the men's locker room stay clear of the glass in front of the office. In the women's locker room, do not occupy the two rows of stalls adjoining the west windows.

DISCIPLINE IN CORRIDORS

Classes must remain in a group. Students are to stand as near the wall as possible, leaving a passageway clear through the hall. They should avoid standing in front of glass bulletin boards.

All stairs and entrances are to be cleared as soon as possible and kept clear during the alarm.

ALL CLEAR

The all clear signal will be a series of intermittent class bell signals.

These modified air raid hints are presented as a kind of balance for the grim quality of the official rules.

1. As soon as the bombs start dropping, run like the devil. (It doesn't matter where, so long as you run like the devil.)

2. Wear track shoes if possible. If the people in front of you are slow, you won't have any trouble getting over them.

3. Take advantage of opportunities afforded you when air raid sirens sound the warning of attack: i.e.—
   a. If in a bakery, grab some pie or cake.
   b. If in a creamery, grab a shake.
   c. If in a movie, grab a blonde.

4. If you find an unexploded bomb, always pick it up and shake well (maybe the firing pin is stuck). If that doesn't work, heave it in a furnace. (The fire dept. will come later and take care of things.)

5. If an incendiary bomb is found burning in a building, throw gasoline on it. (You can't put it out anyway, so you might just as well have a little fun.)
   a. If no gasoline is available, throw a bucket of water on it, and lie down——you are dead:
   b.x. The properties of the bomb free the hydrogen from the water, causing rapid combustion. (In fact, it will explode with a heli-u-va cra-a-ash.)

6. Always get excited and holler bloody murder. (It will add to the fun and confusion and scare happy thoughts out of the kids.)

7. Drink heavily, eat onions, limburger cheese, etc., before entering a crowded air raid shelter. (It will make you very unpopular with the people within your immediate vicinity, eliminating any unnecessary discomfort that would be more prevalent if people crowded too closely.)

8. If you should be the victim of a direct bomb hit, don't go to pieces. (Lie still and you won't be noticed.)

9. Knock the air raid wardens down if they start to tell you what to do. (They always save the best seats for themselves and their friends anyhow.)

Unknowingly portraying the future, these students lined the main floor corridor as they listened to the A Cappella Choir give an informal program of Christmas songs just before the college adjourned for Christmas vacation.

For, so will the students form in the basement and first and second floors during air raid warning drills. However students will not be allowed to block the corridors then. They must line against the walls, away from doors, windows.

Ex-Council

MAC Controversy Closed By Rule Of Constitution

Shattering weeks of controversy regarding the award of blocks to the soccer team, Alden W. Smith revealed at last Tuesday's Ex-Council meeting that the Men's Athletic Council, as provided for in the constitution does not exist.

The MAC, he pointed out, at present consists of the Associated Student president, a representative of the Block Society, and two faculty members appointed by the president of the college.

By-Laws Reorganized

The MAC, as provided by the constitution, was to consist of a general athletic manager, to be appointed by the associated student president, and other representatives.

Smith suggested that Article III Section I of the by-laws of the constitution be revised to make valid the MAC as now organized.

Provision For Awards Adopted

At the same time the Ex-Council passed a motion giving full authority to the MAC to present awards. Formerly the recommendation for awards by the MAC was subject to approval by the Ex-Council.

A permanent, legal provision for making awards was adopted. One section of the provision covers MAC awards, one covers Womens' Athletic Awards, and one covers special non-athletic awards.

WSS Book Exchange Opens Day Before Final Exams

Receiving used student books on the day preceding finals, the Women's Service Society will formally open their book exchange service for the spring semester.

Leona Schaefer, club president; Nancy Leaman, vice president; Mildred Ginga, secretary, and Jane Lippert, treasurer, newly elected club officers, will be in charge of the service conducted free of charge for college students.

Already conducting a survey to see what books will be used next semester, the group will handle only books that they deem necessary. The actual selling of the collected books will get underway next semester, but the receiving will begin the day before finals.

Students desiring to be accommodated by the WSS are urged to bring used text books to Room 103.

Selling approximately $400 worth of student text books last semester, WSS members have planned for an enlarged service for the coming term, according to Miss Schaefer.

Nominees

Garner, Jensen, And Coart Presidential Candidates In Spring Semester Race

Presidential nominees for the spring semester, to be chosen next Thursday, January 14, in Room 37, are Robert G. Garner, Don Jensen, and George Coart, Myron Du Bain, election committee chairman, revealed Wednesday.

Other candidates who filed their petitions Wednesday for associated student offices are: vice-president, Gloria Olivi, Shirley Wood, Jo Ann Hill, Barbara Stahlmann and Lucile Lundrese. Rally Commissioner, Robert Murphy; Yell-leader, Jim Upp.

For president of the AWS, Betty MacKillop; vice-president, Joan Hunter, Virginia Frantz, Elobe Windfelt; secretary, Ernestine Cervelli. AMS president, Jim Dayes, Sam Mendelson, Myron Du Bain; vice-president, Ed Lopez, Frank Isola, Bill Steenberg, Nick Barbarotto.

Installation of officers is scheduled for Friday, January 15. No primary election will be held and winners will be determined by a plurality vote.

The regulations as set up by the election committee are as follows:

1. There shall be no cash outlay by candidates or by others in their behalf.
2. Campaigning shall be by word of mouth.
3. There shall be no printed matter distributed.
4. There shall be no electioneering within 100 feet of the polls.
5. Each candidate shall be restricted to two posters on the campus. One may be put on the bulletin board adjacent to the check room, and the other may be put on the cafeteria bulletin board.
6. There shall be no gratuities of any kind offered.
7. Each office shall have group pictures taken of the candidates which shall be on display in the trophy case with proper identification.

Members of the election committee are Margaret McMahon, Ray Scott, Ray Hoyt, Gloria De Martini, and Myron Du Bain, chairman.

Supervising at the polls during election will be Dean Edwin C. Browne, a representative from the election committee, and Du Bain. Associated student elections held each semester are supervised by the election committee which receives its authority from the Executive Council.

Absence Leave Granted Muscio

Joan Nourse Muscio, faculty adviser to The Guardsman was this week granted a five-month leave of absence from the college by President A. J. Cloud.

Mrs. Muscio was forced to terminate her work here immediately on the orders of her physician who has scheduled a program of complete rest for The Guardsman's adviser.

Miss Sonia Selig will conduct Mrs. Muscio's classes for the balance of this semester. The Guardsman adviser for the spring semester has not been named as yet.

Highly regarded as both an instructor and as a hard-working member of the staff, Mrs. Muscio is already missed by staff members.

In leaving, Mrs. Muscio expressed her sincerest regrets which, she said, were tempered by her confidence that this and next semester's staff would continue to maintain and further the standards already attained by The Guardsman.

Walter D. Forbes Gains Position In Who's Who

Recent research in the treatment of adolescent acne has rewarded Walter D. Forbes, college chemistry instructor, with a place in Who's Who in America.

This is the first time in the history of the college that any instructor has gained this honor.

Asked to comment on his attainment of a spot in Who's Who, Forbes said, "When only a few thousand people out of 30 million gain such prominence I naturally consider it a great honor."

Forbes discovered that calcium phosphate counteracts the cases of adolescent acne and he revealed his discovery at a convention of the American Academy for the Advancement of Science which was held in June of last year.

Forbes explained that 95 per cent of the cases which have received his treatment have been successful.

New Draft Registration Affects 400 College Men

The new draft law will affect approximately 400 students here in the college, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne. The new law lowers the age of those subject to military training to 20 years of age. Registration will take place February 16.

Bible Of Democracy

The Newspaper

Now, when events in the day's news supremely occupy the world, these words by a distinguished educator, Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, seem quite pertinent. It is but few who realize how great and unfailing a service the press of the nations performs in peace and war.—The Editor.

DESPITE the popular adage, I tend to believe what I read in the newspapers. I find that they are a surprisingly accurate current history of events in those fields of which I have some knowledge, and I am disposed, therefore, to trust them in fields where my ignorance is more profound.

I read and ponder the newspapers wherever I may happen to be, holding that there is no truer index of a community than its public press. I may not like the choice of news items, I may not agree with the editorials, but I judge the people by their paper because I know that newspapermen as a class make every effort to get the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, whatever may be the difficulties or dangers of that always difficult and dangerous task.

Newspapers today are more than business enterprises organized for the profit to be gained from the sale of advertising and subscriptions. They have established themselves as institutions in which the acceptance of lesser service than the public service is betrayal of a public trust. Not all, of course, measure up to this high standard.

Human nature being what it is, there are still some newspapers whose insatiable appetite for circulation over-powers conscience and drives ideals into hiding. And there are others which, under pressure from advertisers or the business office distort, suppress, or manufacture news. But these are the exceptions.

In the development of public opinion newspapers play an indispensable part. Without them democracy could not endure in large countries like the United States and Canada; for without them the electorate would not be informed of the facts with which politics must deal, and on which education must be founded. "The newspaper" is, says Walter Lippmann, in all literalness the Bible of democracy, the book out of which a people determines its conduct. It is the only serious book most people read. It is the only book they read every day. Great indeed is the power of the press and the responsibility that goes with that power.

WHY JOURNALISTS DIE YOUNG

The typograhpical error is a slippery thing and sly,
You can hunt till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by.
Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps;
It shrinks down in a corner, and it never stirs
or peeps,
That typographical error, too small for human eyes;
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.
The boss he stares with horror, then he grabs
his hair and groans;
The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing you see.

Shots At ...RAMdom

BY NOW

most of us are beginning to look with jaundiced eye or listen with askance ear to some of the slush that is erupting from rumbling congressmen and burbling radio announcers in the mighty effort to sell defense bonds.

But, all the thundering and all the crooning haven't so far expressed a more succinct argument than a five word querie we heard by a big Irish cop on Market Street. He wanted to know,

"Where would American refugees go?"

SOME

wise guy suggested, Oakland.

THERE'S NO DOUBT

that General Douglas MacArthur is the best man we could have in command of the Philippine division; but it would be interesting to know what thoughts pass through his mind when he remembers that he sat on the court martial that stripped Billy Mitchell of his military ranking because he was over zealous in urging the United States to increase the size of its air arm. What changes have been wrought.

TOO MUCH

Happy New Year had brought the sad eyed little man to a violent stop somewhere in the middle of Grant Avenue. The right fender of his coupe was crumpled around the left fender of a Packard sedan. Glass tinkled. He looked mournfully into the sarcastic eyes of the policeman. The officer put the usual question.

"Whatinell ya tryin' to doo?"

A strange look came into the glazed eyes of the little man.

"Look, offisher, I've had too much to drink, this aint my car, I can't see, I have no license, I don't know how to drive. In fact, I wash my hands of the whole matter."

He got about ten feet away before the astounded law put the arm on him.

DENTISTS CAN

be resourceful as well as amusing, as is proved by a little instance related by the guy who scrapes our uncle's plates on Saturday afternoons. A woman came into his office one afternoon to have a tooth pulled, but every time she saw the forceps before her she clamped her mouth shut. The dentist turned to his assistant with an evil look in his eyes. He handed him a pin. No words passed between them. The idea needed no explaining.

Once again the forceps appeared before the woman's face, and at the same time the assistant gave a viscious jab through the seat of the chair with the pin. In an instant the dentist had the tooth in his forceps. He had it before her.

Now, that didn't hurt a bit, did it?"

"No, doctor, but I didn't know that the roots grew so deep."

THEY'RE AT IT AGAIN.

Hut sut rilera etc. etc. was bad enough. Now we've got Rose O'Day with sinamaroosh filigadoosha bald dal de a. What tobacco auctioneer got that one off?

Final Results Questioned; Rallies Spiritless?

• So Soddy, Chums!
Editor, The Guardsman:

The Tuesday, December 9 edition of The Guardsman stated that the election of the Sophomore Sweetheart would be held from 9 a.m. till 3 p.m. December 9. At 1:30 three flustrated Phi Lambs went to vote! We were informed by the non-Partisan Sweetheart Election Committee that the election was over and that we could not vote. What kind of a deal is this?

Of course we are not inferring that this action could have any possible effect on the outcome of the final results, but we believe that it represents inefficiency on some one's part, and we are plenty griped as are many other students who were deprived of their rights to express their choice in the Sweetheart Election.

Roy J. Wride, Stan Seagren, Clinton Peck

Ed Note: According to George Coart, at noon on the day of the election, the polls would be open until 2 or 3 p.m. Any information published by The Guardsman was given by officials in charge of the election.

• Once Upon A Time—
Editor, The Guardsman:

A lot of you will recognize the following scenes taken from "a day at the college."

Today there is going to be a rally.

The rally commissioner steps up to the microphone, clears his throat and gasps,

"Today there has been a swell rally planned for you. A good rally . . ." The commissioner continues,

"First I want to introduce that real spirit leader, your yell leader ...." Upon this, a man shambles across the stage and with very little pep, motion, or spirit, proceeds to "Fire" the audience with a will to win. (Confidentially, there is more spirit in the moving objects down on any counter at Fisherman's Wharf.)

At this point the rally commissioner announces that there will be a game held at such-and-such a place, and at this certain time.

After this, a few unspirited yells are issued by the students, and—

The rally ends.

We are not a bunch of grammar school kids, even though the rally commission seems to think so. It takes a little more than a dead fish making a half-hearted attempt to instill spirit to entertain us.

FEM FADS . . .

by Nancy

HO HUM! Vacation, Christmas and 1941 are all things of the past, but don't fret for there still are finals, spring semester, and spring fashions to look forward to. While the first two items will take care of themselves when the time comes, spring fashions seem of most interest to us now. Of course a major dampener has been added to lessen our interest in spring and its forthcoming outfits (if war can be called a dampener) but life must go on—and there are still parties, dances and get-togethers that require appropriate dress for the occasion. But before we get into spring with its birds, flowers and spring showers let's review some of new finds distributed by a gentleman named Mr. S. Claus.

GORGEOUS GIFTS GALORE

By the looks of the students Monday following vacation Santa was very generous with his gifts of argyle sweaters for in nearly every class these colorful knitted garments loomed up. By way of contrast and variety there is the soft dusty pink with blue sweater being worn by Jackie Isenbruck and the loud but attractive dark brown and kelly green one worn by Claire Leeds.

From the east comes word that black sweaters will be worn with black skirts and—yes, black hosiery. Very becoming, but probably a fad that will not "take" in our non-conservative west.

Spring really came a little prematurely, but nevertheless welcome, last week when a well dressed blonde woman was seen wearing a blue camel's hair coat, fashioned like a polo coat trimmed with large white pearl buttons and set off by navy blue accessories.

CAMEL CARAVAN

Camels seem to be in great demand lately with the navy soft camels hair jackets and coats that are being shown. Lovely in their own natural color, these coats when dyed a darker brown or light blue are even lovelier.

With one of these coats—natural color—a bright colored skirt, white flannel shirt and dutch cap the same color as the skirt, any student would be eligible for best-dressed collegienne nominations.

Incidentally before we got off the subject of Christmas gifts—or perhaps just new costume jewelry, have you seen the new "rich man, poor man" bracelets?

They are made in charm bracelet style, with the charms being small enameled faces supposed to represent the names of the ancient rope skipping game.

If you are an addict of these bracelets why not try a V (for victory) charmer. These are made of dot dot dot dash (. . . —) links.

For those of you who just happen to misplace things, a handkerchief has been recently manufactured for you and you alone. The only design is printed in large big letters "this belongs to______" and your own name is imprinted thereon. See if you can lose them—for good.

How Green Was My Valley . . . a 1942 master-piece

THAT proverbial axiom "the story's the thing" so widely mah-handled by the critical gentry receives a commanding death blow by the superb John Ford picturization of Richard Llewellyn's How Green Was My Valley.

Even we were guilty of expressing our fundamental belief in "sturdy story" as the true test of a motion picture. We apologize and withdraw our statement. How Green Was My Valley has no basic story or plot as we commonly see it. Instead, the picture is built around a series of intimate glimpses into the existence of a Welsh family, glimpses that follow no fixed pattern, but dart hither and yon.

ACTION REVOLVES AROUND MINES

Each episode is almost a portrait, beautifully tinted and molded, blending into a powerful continuity with the imposing structure of the Welsh coal mines fixed as a stationary core to hold the magnificent segments together much as a magnet reacts upon iron filings.

And yet, despite its non-conformity to traditional story-form on the screen, the picture is almost unbelievably brilliant. For once the most complimentary adjectives may be pulled out of hiding and administered without fear of contradiction. In distributing laurels, one must of necessity give Director John Ford the lion's share. It was his genius that produced genuine warmth and humanness. Such elements are not easy things to conjure out of a script and project upon a screen. Ford did it. His direction is sensitive, sensing and depicting all the nuances of human experience. The film abounds in little touches of rare humor that spring spontaneously into life throughout the story. It is Ford's handling of the splendid material that makes such moments memorable.

FLAWLESS SUPPORT GIVEN FORD

In motivating the simple tale of the Morgan clan with proper pace and beautiful fluidity, Ford has been aided by flawless support. Photography of an exquisite perfection that will catch at your throat is a haunting pictorial accompanying agent to Ford's master story-telling. The setting of a Welsh village and its crowning coal-mine, expertly recreated by 20th Century-Fox adds authenticity and vigor. Music that remains with the spectator after he leaves the theater is presented by the stirring Welsh choir, singing their traditional country-ballads. An accompanying musical scenario by Alfred Newman catches the spirit of the picture completing the trio of behind the scene departments that blend talents so notably in this instance.

It is difficult to discover any "best-scene"; such a high standard of uniformity runs throughout that one scene rarely eclipses another. Neither is there anything to distract.

STORY EXPRESSED THROUGH HUW

The narrative of How Green Was My Valley is seen through the eyes of Huw, youngest son of Mr. Morgan as he reviews his life in the valley. As his mind wanders into the past, all the dead scenes glow to life, dead friends, departed friends reenact their roles in Huw's boyhood. Sturdy father fighting to hold his brood of sons together; the heart of his home, mother, with her cheerful determination and fighting courage; his coal-mining brother struggling against the injustice of man to forge meager livings from the earth; sister Angharad with her hopeless love-affair with preacher Gruffydd who will "not marry a woman and drag her into the poverty of his home"; all and more pass in a fascinating cavalcade through the cinematic pages of Mr. Ford's masterpiece.

Other vivid recollections from Huw's youth . . . the night he and mother fell in the pool and he lost the use of his frozen legs, the day kindly Mr. Gruffydd taught him to walk again, the horrors of that mine strike, the first day he attended school and was unmercifully treated, the proud morning he marched off to the mine with his brothers to dig for his living against father's wishes, the climaxing horror when a mine cave-in caught father . . . all are caught with rare understanding by Ford.

A cast without one weak member bring to life Richard Llewellyn's characters. Such performers as Walter Pidgeon as the minister, Donald Crisp as Mr. Morgan, Sara Allgood as Mrs. Morgan, Roddy McDowell as the sensitive new child-star as Huw and Maureen O'Hara as the saddened Angharad live their roles. Every role, down to the smallest bit has been perfectly cast.

Don't miss How Green Was My Valley.

Your College Presents . . . College Credit Given For Working In Retail Trade

By Iwanna Hayworth

RETAIL merchandising, as a major for college students, is an ideal course because it gives these students the practical experience in their chosen field and at the same time they receive college credit for such work.

The idea behind this terminal course is to present the theory of the work in lectures at the college, and the supervised employment in certain retail stores at the prevailing apprenticeship wage scale which will help the student to learn the actual store operations and methods.

The majority of the students are selling, and some are doing routine work.

2ND SEMESTER PREFERRED

Students who wish to get into the retail merchandising classes are usually taken from second semester students who have completed one semester of business training. The training in this merchandising curriculum may be finished in less than two years, and is usually completed in three semesters.

The material presented in the first semester deals with selling techniques, store organization and functions, merchandise analysis, which is a study of the merchandise being sold by the retail stores, and merchandise mathematics.

The following semester's work deals with buying and merchandising, advertising and merchandise analysis, this being a continuation of the analysis course offered the previous semester.

It is the hope of the instructors in this division that students will do so well in the positions which they have held during their apprenticeship that they will eventually work into buying and executive positions. This, as stated before, will depend entirely upon the initiative of the student.

Incidentally, students are admitted into this merchandise course only with the consent of the instructor. This instructor, acting as a personnel manager, judges them on the basis of personality, sincerity, and other selling ability.

PIONEERS IN THIS FIELD

Although there are approximately a half dozen other junior colleges in California which offer such a curriculum, this college was the pioneer in this vicinity.

Courses to be taken along with the required work are mostly elective, however, there are a few which have been suggested by instructors in the division. Salesmanship and business psychology are the most important of these.

This semester will mark the graduation of quite a number of the students enrolled in the merchandising classes. Any entering students who wish to be enrolled in this course next semester should try to contact the instructor for their interviews, for, as was previously mentioned, the consent of the instructor is the deciding factor of a student's entrance into the class.

If a student does not care for a life filled with competition and excitement such as is offered in the retailing career, it is best (and this bit is taken from an article—Retail As A Career) to reconsider and choose something less stimulating; something which will not bring out the best in him, but a career which will allow him to ride along in a mediocre position fated never to rise above the level of "just getting by."

Students are asked to remember that the buyers and the executives in the retail businesses, at one time, were, too, just starting their careers, but through perseverance and hard work have risen to the positions which they now enjoy.

Tuesday will mark the end of Your College Presents for this semester, when the subject The College and National Defense will be featured.

Staff artist Louise Horne shows how a well-trained merchandising major sells the goods. Not only is salesmanship offered in the merchandising course, but also training for routine and specialized jobs throughout the retail store.

Cabbages & Kings

AT the bookstore, two rather seedy looking persons ambled up to the fountain and began to look as if they wanted service. One was playing with the juke box while the other kept on looking expectant. Finally the garcon came up to the expectant person and gave out with the usual, "What'll ya have?" Reply, "Cherry coke." He then turned to the other odd looking person and said, "What'll you have, Bud?" Whereupon the musically inclined one said, "Everything I Love." "Well," replied the jerk in a dulcet tone, "what will that be dearie?"

Speaking of local color. New Year's Eve (Ho Hum) we saw one of the students from here riding the merry-go-round. This was not so spectacular. But what was novel was the fact that he had an Indian blanket wrapped around him and a corn cob pipe stuck in his face. As the merry-go-round came to a halt he dug into his pocket and produced folding money. He said to the operator, "How many rides for this?" "Oh about forty-five I guess," said the man in charge. "Gimme fifty rides for it and you can have the whole thing." Eagerly the fin was accepted. That was at 2:30 when we saw him last contentedly going around in circles. It must have gone on until daylight if he wasn't carried away before then.

Nothing like being trite. During the second blackout police were cooperating with air raid warnings trying to put the lights of the district out. Finally the place was dark except for one low building which was lit up like a Christmas tree. "Lights out," someone shouted. No results. "Turn those lights out," shouted an officer of the law. Again the dark resounded with a booming warning. What is discipline coming to with two lowly patrolmen shouting threats at the sergeant in the station house?

Cagers Face Pasadena; Eisan Refs Rose Bowl

Although plans for America's premier junior college basketball extravaganza were momentarily stalled because of the war situation, and with the necessary precautions taken against possible blackouts, the California Invitational Basketball Tournament started its thrill packed, three day event last night in the Modesto Junior College gymnasium.

Sponsored by the Modesto 20-30 club, a tournament queen was chosen by the Modesto students to rule over the tourney to present medals and other awards to the outstanding players from the 150 leading players within the state.

LONG BEACH-MARIN FAVORED

Pre-tourney information indicates that Long Beach and Marin Junior College quintets loom as co-favorites to dethrone the defending champions, Modesto, for Coach Art Dittberner has lost his entire first string via graduation.

Last season, Modesto also placed three men on the all-tourney team, namely Bob DeWitt and Sig Jacobson, forwards, and Dick Davey, guard.

DeWitt and Jacobson have now joined the ranks of Sam Barry's powerful Southern California Trojans, and Davey, the University of San Francisco. This explicitly shows the high caliber of the tournament which is endeavoring to attract better basketballers every season.

SOUTH DOMINATES

However, Southern California has dominated play to date. Pasadena was the victor in 1939, Los Angeles City College in 1940, and, as already mentioned, Modesto upheld the northern part of the state last year.

Coach Tom Wilson's Ram cagers were to engage Pasadena in their first game last night, a team they successfully toppled last year. If victorious, the Red and White will undoubtedly meet the highly touted Salinas quintet in the next round.

COACH GOES SOUTH

During the Christmas vacation just passed, Lee Eisan, Ram football mentor, refereed the Rose Bowl encounter held at Durham, North Carolina, between the Oregon State Beavers and the Duke Bluedevils.

STAR LAZAR

Johnny Lazar, center forward on the Ram soccer squad this season and one of the leading scorers in the Northern California Intercollegiate Conference, was unanimously named on the All-Conference squad. Tommy Wood, center half, was named on the second squad.

The Boys--Eisan and Co.

Coaching Staff Boasts Successful Season; United Press Praises Work Of Lee Eisan

By Nick Barbarotto

Though it is the athletes and the teams as a whole that get all the praise, it is seldom realized what an important part the respective coaches play.

Throughout this semester, which is quickly drawing to a close, the college gym staff has gone about its work, in the times of both war and peace, in the same successful manner. Each member's accomplishments have been numerous and outstanding.

Eisan Refs Rose Bowl

Lee Eisan brought his gridders through a fair season despite the fact that injuries, the draft, and other military activities caused the loss of many outstanding players. Besides this, Eisan officiated in many of the coast football games, and refereed the Rose Bowl game between Oregon State College and Duke University at Durham, North Carolina. He was requested for the job by Oregon State after a row caused Tom Fitzpatrick to quit the position. His work at the Rose Bowl was highly praised by the United Press as well as other qualifying sports writers.

Russ Sweet assisted with the football team, officiated in many of the city high school games, and was at the head of the fall track class, with which he hopes to have a very successful season next semester.

Team Enters Tournament

Tom Wilson coached tennis and at present is sending his basketball charges through the Modesto Invitational Junior College Basketball Tournament in preparation for the coming conference games.

Jack Gaddy also assisted with the football team, acted as chief scout, and officiated at high school and junior college games. Because of the present situation, baseball will be discontinued next semester, though Gaddy had already made preparations for it.

Jack Brady is acting as the head of the intramural program which is rated as the biggest and most successful in the history of the college. The program includes almost every sport and at present is coming to a smashing finish.

Championship For Jensen

Jim Jensen is the second newest member of the staff, having replaced John Hurley when the latter went into the army. He led his soccer team to the conference championship in his first year as coach of that sport, and handled the boxing classes with much interest. Through his efforts, the Associated Men Student's Intramural fights again proved to be successful. Despite the blackout that San Francisco suffered on the night of the fights, a large crowd attended the Coliseum Bowl.

Allan Eisan, brother of the football coach, is the newest addition to the staff. He replaced Joe Lantagne when Lantagne went to Santa Barbara State College. This is Eisan's first semester and he very capably handled the Junior Varsity football team and the swimming team.

Softball Playoffs Scheduled For Today At 3:15 p.m.; Touch Tackle Football Starts Monday

Finals of the softball tournament will be held this afternoon at 3:15 p.m. at Balboa Park, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser announced this week.

Eight teams entered the competition earlier in the week, until now, through the elimination basis, two teams will play for the championship today.

Medals will be awarded to the first three teams, gold for first, silver for second, and bronze for third.

Football Starts Monday

Starting Monday, January 12, competition in touchtackle football will begin on the football practice field at 3:15 p.m., Brady said. Ten teams entered the league, and because the semester is rapidly coming to an end, an elimination tournament will prevail.

Six men are allowed to a team and two-twenty minute halves will be played including time outs. Each team will be allowed two time outs during a half. Brady stressed the fact that cleats will be abolished during actual play because an injury may be inflicted to a contestant.

The schedule of the league may be found on the bulletin board in the men's gymnasium.

The final rounds of the doubles tennis tournament will also start Monday, January 12. Brady requests that the results of all matches be recorded with him in the gymnasium as soon as possible.

Rifle intramurals are scheduled to commence Monday afternoon at 3:15 p.m. in the rifle range. No previous signups are necessary, as any contestant may compete simply by reporting to the rifle range at the specified time.

Entries Accepted

Horseshoe and ping pong entries will be accepted by Brady in the gym until Monday noon, January 12. Play is expected to start sometime during the afternoon.

Before the Christmas vacation, the volleyball tournament came to a finale, finding the Newman Club, the victors for the third successive semester. Harbin finished second, while Phi Lambda Epsilon won third place honors.

In the final game, the Newman Club was forced to stage a driving finish winning out, 15-12, 12-15, 19-17.

A challenge has been made by the San Francisco State Newman Club to play the college Newman Club, winners of the intramural basketball league.

The date has not been decided upon as yet, but the game will undoubtedly be played in the State gymnasium.

Blackout Fails To Stop Show

Holding their show in spite of the black-out emergency, the Associated Men Students held their semi-annual boxing carnival in the Coliseum Bowl Monday night, December 8, before an excited crowd of over 300 college students.

The throng was hardly settled comfortably in their seats when Suisake Akamini T.K.O.'d George Yaki in one minute, five seconds of the first round in the opening 118 pound class. Akamini had too much power for Yaki, who, although put on the canvas for a nine count earlier in the round, gamely climbed to his feet and stood toe to toe and tried to slug it out with Akamini, but Akamini proved too tough an opponent.

Suacci Wins

As was hoped by many students, the 127 pound division also provided a thriller when Gene Suacci earned a three round decision over Manuel Isaacs in a fiercely fought battle, which saw both fighters scoring with heavy blows.

In the 135 class Bob Hemsted defeated an aggressive Bob Portello to gain the nod in the three round fracas.

The 145 pound division also proved a hair-raiser, when Walt Seaborn punched out a three round win over John Silvestri. The winner wasn't decided until the final bell, because of the closeness of the bout.

Massara Wins Default

Johnny Massara won by a default over Bob Schneider, who, because of the blackout situation, could not get across the San Francisco Bay Bridge.

As was expected, Dave Hunicke again won the 165 pound title by pounding out a decision over Bob Cavanaugh. Hunicke carried too much dynamite in his punches, and threw everthing but the ring posts at Cavanaugh. Cavanaugh, however, by his unusual style, scored at least twelve straight lefts to Hunicke's face before Hunicke landed a single blow.

In the light heavyweight class, Ira Cartney, a new student from Washington University, outpointed Jack Cederland to gain top honors as the final winner.

Drake Almost Defaults

The final bout, the heavyweight contest, was almost another default when Duke Drake, thinking the blackout had stopped all entertainment, almost failed to appear, and not until after three wild rounds was Drake proclaimed the winner in a very close decision.

As an added attraction, Ed Epting and John Getas put on a wrestling show that had the crowd on their feet during the whole event, with women screaming everytime one of the wrestlers threw his opponent out of the ring. The bout finally ended in a draw.

Marksmen Win Two, Lose Two; End In Third Place

College marksmen of the first team garnered a third place, while the second team dragged down a fourth place in the upper division of the San Francisco Rifle Association standings, released over the holidays.

The first team actually won three matches and lost two, but the third win was not gained before the ratings were published. So the Rams stand in third place with two official victories and two defeats, giving them a .500 for the first semester.

Tea Replaces Postponed Banquet

In place of the Women's Athletic Association banquet which was to be held Thursday, December 19, a tea is being planned which will take place sometime next week, Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the WAA revealed recently.

The tea will be open to all college women whether members of the organization or not, Miss Kraul stated. As much of the original program as possible will be presented, she added.

The banquet was canceled because of the ruling made by the Board of Education providing that no night meetings should be held.

Entertainment Provided

Included on the original program was a talk by Helen Crlenkovich, national diving champion and student of the college, several numbers by the newly organized WAA orchestra, community singing, a monologue by Donna Meyers, several singers provided by the talent bureau, and presentation of awards won during the semester.

Officers Presented

Highlight of the afternoon entertainment will come when the newly elected officers will be presented, Bernice Strube, nominations committee chairman said. The officers were elected the week before the holiday vacation began and have not yet been informed of their election, Miss Strube pointed out.

One Meeting Planned

Although no definite announcement has been made concerning the date of the tea, Miss Kraul believed it would be some time within the next week.

WAA clubs will meet for one more week only, Miss Kraul said, until after the final examination period.

Grades Withheld Until Exam Taken

Following is the list of students who have no medical examination on file in the men's gymnasium. If these examinations are not taken before finals begin, the student's grade will be withheld until he has fulfilled the requirement. The doctor's hours are 1 to 3 p.m. daily except Friday, and Friday, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Wilson's Cagers Invade Modesto For Tournament; Dropo, Terry Lead Rams

This season, as in past seasons, the semi-annual Modesto State Tournament will again be held in Modesto, having already started, running from yesterday, January 8, to tomorrow night, January 10.

Sixteen teams are entered with eight from northern California, and eight from southern California. Those junior colleges that will be represented will be Stockton, Glendale, Compton, Santa Rosa, Modesto, Salinas, San Francisco, Pasadena, Sacramento, Menlo, Los Angeles City College, Marin, Long Beach, Yuba, Placer, and Reedley.

The final game will be at 8:00 tomorrow night. The contests will be run through the afternoon till evening. A final victory in this tournament will be a "feather in the cap" for any team, for some of the best junior college quintets in California are entered.

Rams Win Four

The college casaba tossers have played nine games, winning four, and losing five. The Rams defeated the Negro Y.M.C.A. of Oakland 35-32, Mesa College 46-44, California Frosh 52-43, and Lassen J.C. 49-21.

Teams that have defeated the Red and White were the Y.M.C.A. 48-42, the Sun Lumber Co. from Los Angeles 50-49, Santa Rosa Furniture Co. 55-25, and also the U.S.F. Frosh who have defeated the Rams in two games, the first 51-45, and the second 43-30.

Lambs Coached By Sweet

The junior varsity, coached by Russ Sweet, track coach, have split even in their respective games, having won two, and lost two.

The Lambs have beaten the Galileo varsity, 38-35, toppled the Sacred Heart varsity, 50-48, and were defeated by Armstrong J.C., 38-33, and were also beaten by a strong Balboa varsity 48-34.

This season, the junior varsity will play the opening game to the varsity contest, and most of the games, whether practice or league tilts, will be played in the college home pavilion.

Roster Contains Twenty

This year the squad totals 20 players, but Coach Tom Wilson expects some players may have to drop out before the semester is completed, having to work, or to enter Uncle Sam's armed forces.

So far, outstanding players on the squad are Bob Roberts, Dave Cunningham, Mel Dropo, Alex Adorador, Jack Terry, Frank Isola, Bob Cavanaugh, and Gus Strongrin. This doesn't mean, however, that these players are the only ones playing, but they have held high point honors in most of the games played so far. Only two players are returning from the squad of last year, those being Cunningham, and Dropo. Dropo has been moved from forward to center, where he will be better able to use his height on rebound shots, and in setting up post plays.

The Modesto games started at 2:30 yesterday afternoon, and will run through the rest of the day with the last game of the evening beginning at 8:00.

The same procedure will follow today and tomorrow. Those teams that are defeated will figure in a playoff to determine final standings of the last place teams, while those squads that win their respective games will also figure in a playoff to determine the first, second, third, and fourth place teams.

Awards Given

Awards will probably be given to the team scoring the highest amount of points, and also, an award to the individual player scoring the most points.

After the tournament is completed, the sixteen teams will probably remain in Modesto until Sunday, when they will return to their respective towns to continue with their conference schedule.

Aroma Of Coffee . . . A Fragrant Quest

Reporter, Algy Find Work Project

By Ed Lopez

Something new has been added! That something is the new aroma circulating through the corridors of the northern section of the building. The odor to be sure, is familiar, but it definitely does not belong to the variety of smells usually inhabiting this section of the building. (Attention chemistry department!)

The aroma of coffee——fresh and fragrant.

Our editor detected more than coffee in the air, he smelled a good news story and so with his child prodigy, Algy, as guest for the day, I found myself on the trail of the coffee brewers and my proverbial chance of a lifetime to make good.

I headed directly for the cafeteria.

"Look old chap," quirped Algy, "I'd say that smell was coming from outside."

"That is silly," I retorted, "who would be boiling coffee on the campus."

"I really don't know old boy," said Algy, "but there is smoke outside, and where there is smoke there is sure to be fire and perhaps a coffee pot. Quite simple!"

"Quite," was my reply.

Algy led the way and sure enough upon turning the corner of the north end of the building we came face to face with a fire and most important of all a steaming coffee pot.

A group of men were working on the scaffold covering the north wall and only one man was standing by the fire.

"Hi," I called and stepped up to warm my hands. "What you got, coffee?"

"Yeah," was the only reply.

"Sure smells good"

"It usually is."

I saw I wasn't getting very far, so I tried other tactics. That coffee smelled good, and I had hopes of being invited to partake before I had left.

"Sure is cold, I began, I'm freezing"

"Yeah, sure is," was the only answer.

About this time Algy broke in with, "Well stupid, get your interview. You found the coffee pot, now get busy. You know you don't act like a reporter at all!"

I gave Algy the cold stare. Maybe, I thought, if I get this fellow talking he might offer me coffee later!

I introduced myself (ignored Algy) and found the fellow I was addressing was called Pete Galvin.

I asked Pete for any information he could give me on what he and the other men were doing here at the north end of the campus brewing coffee.

"Well," said Pete, "there are nine of us here working under Mr. Herman Volz on the Interaction of Science mosaic. The entire project is being sponsored by the WPA. We don't spend all our time here on your campus, most of the preliminary work is done at the Columbus Avenue shop. The mosaic is composed of many designs, all made with tiny pieces of colored marble. We place sections of the designs on cardboard slabs at the shop and then bring them here to be cemented in their place. It is almost like working a jig-saw puzzle."

"Is the work almost completed?" I asked.

"Yes, we have to finish the top designs and then the biggest job of all, the polishing. That really is a job for the mosaic covers 42 feet by 55. We should be finished in another five weeks, then we'll start the south wall mosaic picturing the interaction of Mechanisms."

"You know coffee is very bad for you," suddenly interrupted Algy, "why if you only knew how it affects the nervous system. I never touch it."

"Algy——" I started, but the danger was done.

Pete had picked up the coffee pot and was heading for the little green shack where the rest of the men were gathering.

"Sorry you boys don't care for coffee! Would do you good on a day like this!"

I got my story, but the coffee ——no.

Parking Lot, Bleacher Bids Await Approval

With bids for the construction of the parking lot awaiting acceptance, and the installation of the men's gym bleachers insured within 30 days time, building arrangements on the campus neared improvement today.

Bids for the parking lot are as yet to be received by the Bureau of Architects, and plans for the construction of the parking lot are awaiting the acceptance of the bids by the bureau. Estimated cost of the roadway is slated at approximately $41,000.

Bleachers In 30 Days

Apparently not affected by priority ratings, the gym bleachers, costing an estimated $12,324 will be installed with 30 days, and will seat 2,000 persons.

The bleachers will be of the accordion type, folding up against the gym walls when not in use. Used for rallies, athletic events, class meetings, and other social events, the bleachers will take the place of the front step seats at rallies.

Ends Long Campaign

Concluding a long campaign on the part of student and faculty officials, the installation of the bleachers and parking lot will mark the first step toward college improvement since the completion of the college building. The present parking lot has proved inadequate because of size and its muddy condition during the rainy season.

Matilda Mortigia, winner in the recent Sweetheart Contest held as a traditional event by the high soph class, receives her trophy at the special Award Rally held before Christmas. Miss Mortigia was one of seven finalists and successfully braved both preliminaries and finals to emerge victorious.

Cafeteria Dance Set Replacing Barn Dance

In place of the canceled Associated Men Student's barn dance which was scheduled for tomorrow evening, Don Jensen, AMS president, has planned an afternoon dance to be held Friday, January 16 from 2:30 to 5 in the cafeteria.

No orchestra has been chosen as yet and no classes will be excused, because next Friday is the last day of instruction for this semester, Jensen said.

A crew of ten men is needed by Jensen to clear up the cafeteria before the dance, the AMS president announced.

Because of the continual possibility of blackouts and the turning of Alvarado Barn into an army camp, the barn dance was postponed, Jensen announced.

A Post-Xmas Tale— Dean Santa's Toys

By George Cowie

Dear Santa Claus:

We just wanted to write a letter to thank you for all the nice things you brought us on Christmas. We liked them very much and we got everything we wanted. We all hope you had a nice Christmas too, and a Happy New Year.

Yours truly,

The Children of Pinehaven

The letter reproduced above was received by Dean Edwin C. Brown, January 2. Signatures of 27 homeless children were affixed following the letter of thanks.

Therein hangs a little story, a story that broke during Christmas week but certainly deserves January recounting.

During Christmas week, four of the college fraternities: Beta Phi Beta, Tri Epsilon, Beta Tau and Phi Lambda Epsilon pooled resources with each fraternity contributing an average of twenty-five dollars to turn Christmas week into real Christmas cheer for the Pinehaven children.

The children were asked what presents they desired most; a list was drawn up that resembled a glamorized letter to Saint Nick. Wrist watches, dishes, toy carts, dolls, roller skates, play houses, toy stoves . . . all and more found their way on the list.

Dean Browne, alias Santa contributed the use of his car and the packages were finally delivered. It was quite a delivery with $77.42 worth of packages crammed in one grand assortment.

Packages were given out December 23 at 3 p.m. at the Pinehaven Nursery in San Francisco.

The four college fraternities as well as Phi Alpha Omega which provides annual turkey dinners for Christmas needy can look back with satisfaction at their contribution to the recent holiday season.

to the different sports. Ineidentally Algy, listen to the imposing array of sports: rifle, archery, badminton, tennis, bowling, ice skating, golf, swimming, and riding.

Each of these sports is organized as a club, and one member from each is elected to represent it on a general supervising council. The rest of the council is composed of the officers of the WAA whom we might as well name now. The president, Miss Kraul, we've already mentioned. Bernice Strube is vice-president; Elma Oddstad, secretary; Janice Berch, treasurer; Tami Nazaugi, publicity manager. Bertha M. Keller is the faculty adviser.

"If you've read the WAA news on the sports page, Algy, we don't have to tell you that the WAA is a remarkably active part of the college. It names among its various functions, an initiation barbecue at the beginning of the semester, an impressive horse show, and its main affair, tourney week which is climaxed by a banquet. Several play days are held each semester with other colleges and junior colleges under the auspices of the Northern Alto California Conference.

"Really attractive awards are given on the basis of degree of participation in the activities presented.

"And finally, we'll say that the WAA now numbers about 200, making it one of the largest organizations in the college.

"The Men's Athletic Council in no way parallels the work of the WAA. Its chief, if not its only function is to recommend athletic awards to the Ex Council. We should say more about the MAC, but at the present time its membership and general organization is in a state of flux while plans for greater efficiency and a more concise statement of its functions are being considered. (See page 1, col. 5 for details.)

"Next week, we'll wind up these discussions with some brief comments on the four standing committees which carry out the more detailed work of the Ex Council."

"You mean," said Algy, his voice swelling with joy, "you mean—we're almost through?"

"Right. We shouldn't want to keep you from finals—Algy! Put down that book end; we won't mention THEM again."

CAB Nominations To Be Held In Room 113 Today

Nomination of CAB officers for the coming semester will be held by the Club Advisory Board today in Room 113 at 2 o'clock, according to Pat Rut, CAB vice-president.

Offices to be filled are president, vice-president and secretary. Later in the semester an editor to head the staff of the Cabby, CAB publication, will be appointed.

No Cabby was printed this week because of Christmas holidays.

One week from today the CAB will meet in Room 113 again at 2 o'clock to elect officers from the nominees for the three offices, Miss Rut revealed.

IX. Algy Makes Hay With The WAA

"ALL right, Algy, if you'll take your feet off our desk, we'll finish the discussion of the groups represented on the Executive Council. But first, do you remember the function of the Council. Quick now!"

"That's a breeze," Algy sniffed. "The Ex Council is the policy-making and law-making body representing the Associated Students, of which I am an integral part."

"A noble blend of sarcasm and knowledge, Algy, only next time answer without looking at our notes."

"To get down to business, let's take a survey of the Women's Athletic Association. According to the WAA president, Dorothy Ann Kraul, the group was organized in 1933 to encourage interest in athletics, and, naturally, the good sportsmanship and fellowship that sports develop. Membership is open to all women in the college who demonstrate real interest in one or more of the nine activities now offered. The association is extra-curricular, with the several gym instructors devoting their time

Debating Team Holds Oratorical Tryouts

Tryouts for members of the debating team to compete in the Native Daughters of California Oratorical contest will be held next Monday and Tuesday at 12 noon in Room 344 and at 10 a.m. in Room 345 respectively, according to Lloyd Luckmann, faculty adviser of the group.

The students who will try out are Bob McCaffery, Anthony Cosola, Roger Souza, Peter Kakures, Jacquelyne Blair and Matt Hill. John Linville was also supposed to try out but he enlisted in the army the first part of this week.

The college tryout winners will compete against representatives from Marin, Santa Rosa and San Mateo junior colleges on February 16, for the Native Daughters at a place yet to be determined.

Blackout Regulations Change Astronomy Meetings

Because no group will be permitted to hold evening meetings at the college because of blackout restrictions, the astronomy observation class will probably be held in the afternoon instead of evenings, Miss Learnard, assistant registrar, revealed today. "What the observation class plans to observe in the afternoon," Miss Learnard remarked, "I do not know!"

Among the events canceled for the same reason was the AMS barn dance formerly scheduled.

Civil Pilot Training Men Now Train In Death Valley

Students taking primary Civil Pilot Training are now flying in Death Valley while those enrolled in the secondary course are doing their flying in Susanville, California, Major George D. Richards, college CPT instructor, announced this week.

Major Richards declared that he has not received any word as yet from the government as to what effects the present war may have upon him, personally, or upon the CPT program.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

ACCORDING to Boake Carter the first casualty during wartime is truth. But there is no necessity to lose tears because of this self-evident fact; few would have it otherwise.

In the pursuance of a struggle such as the present one, a struggle in which the enemy is powerful and resourceful, there must of necessity be reverses for the defending forces. Usually these reverses are initial or mark the first phase of the war. This, at least, was the case in all the other similar conflicts.

During the first few months of conflict, before the nation has become completely mobilized for war action, morale and enthusiasm are of the utmost importance. Therein lies the reason for truth restriction.

ENGLISH BALANCE SHEET

All this, of course, is common knowledge. In England they have been using the admirable system of announcing defeats with victories. That little idea has been falling down badly of late because there have not been enough defeats to balance off the wins. For all anybody knows the British government may have a flock of victories still in hiding. At least they have enough of them to keep the books more than balanced.

In the United States, however, things probably will not be run in the same manner. The Englishman prefers to maintain his calm—the American likes to look the devil in the eye. Naturally the government will have to use an approach suited to the American constitution. About the simplest method possible, providing it is in no way helpful to the enemy, would be to blurt out reverses as they come.

Why not save defeats to be balanced off with successes? Well, in the first place, American morale does not need any priming. It may need that priming if every victory is offset by a loss. Americans may begin to think that they are doing well enough. And it must be remembered that in a war there is no such thing as doing well enough. It can always be better.

A SHOT IN THE ARM

When Americans hear of such things as Pearl Harbor, Manila, and Luzon, that's the best shot in the arm they could possibly get. It tells them those incidents are to be considered necessary; but as long as they have happened their net result was far from the intended one.

They say that in the last war American troops astounded their French brothers in arms by rushing pell-mell into the German lines without paying the slightest attention to the dangers.

It seems that the U.S. Army likes to get things done. The people at home also like to get things done. And the more capable they are of grasping a complete picture of the entire situation the more capable will they be putting an end to the source and cause of that situation.

President Seymour Mary Learnard gives much publicity to the new Office of Censorship. He has had stressed the promise that as much as is humanly possible will be given to the populace.

IT'S GOOD TO KNOW

Democracy has proved that there is no government capable of obtaining the government by enlightened citizens. War places certain restrictions on enlightening. But the more the people know the more they are able to do, and the more they are willing to do.

As wars go this is going to be a pip. It will be inexcusable if those who aren't able to get away to the fighting zones are robbed of detailed reports whenever those reports are at all possible.

Certainly the newspapers are going to have their little troubles. During wars and such they always do. But with the aid of an understanding censor and a completely receptive audience, all those planes and tanks the President was speaking of may soon grace the front pages of newspapers from New York to right here.

Yes indeed, things are going to hum from now on in. And we for one would hate to miss the details of all that noise.

Hotel Division Students Enlist In Armed Forces

Two more students of the college hotel and restaurant division have shown their love for a trip to Tokio.

Frank Threlfall, a fourth semester student, has enlisted in the United States Navy while Ken Adams, a second semester student, is now endeavoring to join the Coast Guard.

Henri Carbonnel, who graduated from the hotel division last semester, has enlisted for pilot training in the United States Army Air Corps.

Students Advised To See Advisers Before Registration

Students planning to return to the college for the spring semester should see their advisers to plan a program for the new semester, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, announced this week.

Advisers will be in their offices on Thursday, January 29, to counsel students who have not already had a conference. Registration for returning students will take place on Monday, February 2.

Instruction begins Wednesday, February 4.

Students should report for registration according to the following schedule:

8:30 a.m. . . . S-W inclusive
9:30 a.m. . . . N-R inclusive
10:30 a.m. . . . L-M inclusive
12:30 p.m. . . . H-K inclusive
1:30 p.m. . . . D-G inclusive
2:30 p.m. . . . A-C inclusive

Registration is starting with those names furthest down the alphabet in the hope students who usually register last a chance to get first choice of classes.

Today's Guardsman Last Of Semester

With this issue, The Guardsman will suspend publication until next semester. The first edition of the new semester will be out on Friday, February 6, though this date is subject to change.

Scholarships Offered College Graduates

Three scholarships to various California colleges are open to the graduating students of the college this semester, according to Alice Cooper, faculty adviser of Alpha Gamma Sigma, college honor group.

Pomona College of Claremont, California, offers nine advanced standing scholarships for junior college students for the academic year 1942-43. Five scholarships of $150 each, two scholarships of $150 for candidates nominated by their Alpha Gamma Sigma, and two special department scholarships of $350 in physics and economics.

Application Deadline Set

All candidates must be eligible for admission to Pomona College.

In order that such eligibility may be determined, all candidates must file before February 1, 1942, with the Committee on Admissions, a regular application for admission (fee $3.50).

Mills Offer Scholarships

Mills College offers a number of scholarships varying in value from $100 to $500. All candidates must furnish adequate evidence of need for financial assistance as well as academic achievement. Only students who anticipate becoming candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts should apply for scholarships.

Applications should be filed with the Dean of Undergraduate Students, Mills College, Oakland, California on or before March 16, 1942.

The scholarship application should be preceded or accompanied by the formal application for admission.

Red Cross Fund

College Aids Red Cross In Urgent Drive For Funds

Competing with San Francisco State College and the University of San Francisco, a committee representing the college has been organized by Harry Haesloop, Associated Students president, for the purpose of collecting funds for the present Red Cross drive, Marshall Hyde, committee chairman, announced Friday.

"The drive will be started this week," Hyde explained, "and both faculty members and students will participate.

Quota Not Named

"Tables will be set up at various points throughout the building. We have a definite quota to reach but we do not know for certain what it is yet. That will be announced at a later date."

Hyde urged all students to participate in the drive to enable the Red Cross to buy materials needed for the hospitalization of America's soldiers and sailors in the war zones.

Everyone Can Help

"Never has there been a more worthy cause to which to contribute," he remarked. "Every penny, nickle, dime, or quarter will help tremendously in the drive. Everyone can contribute something," he urged.

Hyde named Gloria DeMartini, Marge MacMahon, Francis Gbetz, and Raymond Hoyt as his committee members.

Civilian Defense

Defense Classes Offered In Spring

In answer to the innumerable requests of college students for information on civilian defense, Benjamin Pavone has announced a Civilian Defense course to be inaugurated next semester.

The classes will be instructed by faculty members who have been teaching classes of adults since the beginning of the present emergency, said Pavone, though there is no connection between this course and the Civilian Defense Council. It will be a college course taught by college instructors.

Classes will be conducted for the purpose of enabling students to be prepared to care for their own safety and the safety of others in times of emergency, stated Pavone.

Moving pictures covering all phases of an air raid as experienced in England will be shown in supplement to the lectures. No text will be used, added Pavone.

The course will consist of one lecture per week for one hour with one unit credit. Subject matter covered by the course will be:

1. Civilian Defense Organization.
2. Civil Air Defense.
3. First Aid.
4. Blackout Regulations.
5. Gas Protection.
6. Military Explosives and ammunition.
7. Fire Defense.
8. Air Raid Wardens.
9. Law and Order.
10. Communications and Transportation.
11. Plant Protection.
12. Sabotage and Espionage.
13. Identification of Persons and Property.
14. Public Health and Sanitation.
15. Students' Part in National Defense.

Semester Publicity Aid Praised By Coart

Reviewing his publicity work for the semester last Friday, George Coart, internal publicity chairman of the college, praised the work of his assistants who "did mighty well under the circumstances."

"Our committee started out with a bang at the beginning of the semester," Coart said, "but when rules of the college prevented us from posting signs on the building's walls because of possible damage to them, we were forced to work on a somewhat smaller scale."

Photographs which were to be posted in showcases to depict the activities of the past week were given a try, according to Coart, but this, too, was unsuccessful because of lack of time and photographic facilities.

"We had no alternative other than cutting rather crude stencils with which we turned out signs for every room," Coart explained. "This method of publicizing coming events was by no means as thorough as our first method would have been."

Honor Society Permanent Membership Blanks Ready

Graduates desiring to apply for Alpha Gamma Sigma permanent membership ratings are urged to secure application blanks at the registrar's office or from herself, announced Alice C. Cooper, faculty adviser to the Alpha Gamma group.

Requirements for permanent membership as indicated by Miss Cooper include a minimum of three semesters membership plus a graduating average of grades 3.3. Further information about the Alpha Gamma Sigma may be secured from Miss Cooper in Room 187, Mondays and Wednesdays at 11 a.m. and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 10 a.m.

Student Elections Set For Thursday

Votes Cast In Room 37; Three Vie For Presidency

From a group of 22 candidates, including presidential nominees, Don Jensen, George Coart, and Robert Garner, the Associated Students will elect next semester's officers this Thursday, January 15, Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, said Friday.

Voting machines will be in operation in Room 37 from 8 till 4 o'clock, Thursday, Haesloop said. Voters must present Associated Student cards at the polls. No primary election will be held, according to Haesloop, and winners will be determined by plurality vote. Photographs of the candidates are being displayed in the lobby show case.

Harry Haesloop, out-going Associated Students president, will terminate his tenure in office Friday when the semester draws to a close. Haesloop took over the reins of student government successfully in September after Gene Powell was forced to leave college for naval training in Florida.

CAB Elections

Clapp, Lopez Nominated

Nominations of future Club Advisory Board officers for the coming semester were held Friday afternoon in Room 113, announced Francis Goetz, president.

Candidates nominated are as follows: president, Allan Clapp and Ed Lopez; vice-president, Dorothy Hogan and Virginia Overshire, and secretary, Pat Huff and Beverly Brown.

Elections are to be held Friday of this week in Room 113 at 2 o'clock.

"All club representatives should try to attend this meeting, and cast their vote for the candidate they feel is most capable of holding the office," Goetz said. "The CAB is no small organization. The entire function of the college club system depends on its continuance. I repeat that all organizations should see that they are represented at Friday's meeting."

According to Goetz, the club board still favors the plan for a Carnival Day next semester. "Now more than ever," he said, "there is a need for day activities. Carnival Day would take the place of many of the night festivities that will not be held because of the present emergency. I do not know what the future officers will think of the plan, but it certainly deserves some thought."

Current Event Contest Planned For February 10

Scheduled for the 10th and 11th of next month a current affairs contest will be held at the college in conjunction with similar contests to be held in over 100 junior colleges throughout the country, according to William Goss, college economics instructor.

Tentative plans now call for the use of the quiz in economics and civil service courses, but any student wishing to take part may register with Goss in Room 237 between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. either tomorrow or Friday.

The question will cover important events of the last four month of 1941. Included will be references not only to the field of national and international affairs, but also in branches of business, science, literature, and the arts.

Prizes will be given to the freshman, sophomore and faculty member who came out with the best scores.

Plans here call for use of the quiz in economics and civil service courses, but any student wishing to take part may register with William Goss in Room 237 between 10 and 1 o'clock this Wednesday or Friday.

AMS Sponsored Dance Slated For Friday

Substituting for the semi-annual Associated Men Students' barn dance which was canceled at the last minute, Don Jensen, AMS president, has scheduled a mixer dance to be held next Friday in the cafeteria from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

Selected to play for the dance was Warren Ringen and his eight piece orchestra. Ringen is also bringing along a vocalist, Jensen confirmed.

Popular Leader

Ringen played for the low sophomore dance which was held earlier in the semester at the Scottish Rite Auditorium in Oakland, and met with popular acclaim by the students, hence his rescheduling, Jensen said.

The cafeteria is being used again because of the rainy weather which has made the path to the women's gymnasium a quagmire, Jensen stated. The athletic instructors do not wish to have the gymnasium floor cluttered up with mud.

Classes Not Excused

No classes will be excused for the dance because Friday is the last day of instruction, Jensen said.

"I would like a crew of about 10 men to help me clean up the cafeteria before the dance," Jensen requested.

Any student wishing to help should ask for Don Jensen in the Associated Student office, Room 169, some time between now and Friday.

Co-eds May Learn Hubby Feeding Art

Attention co-eds! Are you planning to have a home of your own some day?

Would you like to know more of how to meet the inevitable problems of home purchasing, and cleaning and the sometimes more terrifying ordeal of managing your first parties in your home?

Beginning next semester, there's to be a course in homemaking, offered by the home economics department, under Miss Frances Mount.

No prerequisites are needed for this course which will tell you what to feed a hungry husband on a small budget, how to do the baby's washing in the easiest manner, and what to serve when "the girls" come for luncheon and bridge.

Open to all women students, this course is designed to offer to college women, training for a well rounded approach to life and is planned to be comprehensive in scope, according to Dean Margaret Dougherty, who is especially enthusiastic over such types of training for women particularly at this time of changing conditions under the national emergency.

Debating Students May Still Enter Oratory Quiz

Debating club members may still try out for the Native Daughters of California Oratorical contest if they appear in Room 345 today at 10 a.m., according to Lloyd Luckmann, faculty adviser of the group.

The students selected will compete against members of Marin, Santa Rosa and San Mateo junior colleges on February 16, at a place yet to be determined. The team judged the best by the judging committee will be acclaimed California junior college champion debaters, Luckmann said.

All Classes Excused For Rally Friday

All 11 o'clock classes will be excused to attend the installation rally this Friday, January 16, on the front steps of the college, Harry Haesloop, Associated Student president, announced Wednesday.

Newly elected officers will be installed at the rally, blocks will be awarded to the football and championship soccer teams, and keys will be presented to members of the Executive Council.

Du Bain Resigns

Myron Du Bain, candidate for AMS president, announced his resignation as election committee chairman. Haesloop will take charge of Du Bain's duties. Lucille Landresse, former candidate for AWS secretary, has declined to run.

For Civilian Morale

Seven Rules

This advice for maintaining civilian morale gathered by Associated Collegiate Press from Dr. Lee of Northwestern is as practical and sensible as any we have yet seen. It is worthy of serious attenion.—The Editor.

SEVEN rules for maintaining wartime civilian morale have been outlined by Dr. Irving J. Lee of Northwestern University, an expert on the psychology of anxiety. For a number of years Dr. Lee has applied the principles back of these rules to many cases of stage fright with amazing success.

"The position of many Americans today," he points out, "is analogous to that experienced in stage fright. This situation, if permitted to continue, might lead to a deterioration of civilian morale."

Points to be remembered by all civilians during the crisis are:

1. Center your attention on your task-at-hand and seek new ways of helping.

2. Don't feel that the whole burden rests on you. Just do something, however small, and the net result will be great.

3. Worrying about a situation dissipates your energy, leads to more worry, and saps your efficiency for necessary work.

4. Don't expect too much. Prepare for bad news. It isn't the pain, but the surprise coming of the pain that hurts. Remember that the anticipation of danger has a protective effect.

5. Question all rumors. Don't let them affect you emotionally.

6. Trust those in authority. They are the only ones in a position to know the facts.

7. Don't worry near children. They are easily excitable and spread anxiety quickly.

Just as an inexperienced public speaker allows his worry about the audience or his own failings to distract his thoughts from the talk he is to make, so many civilians dissipate their energies worrying about conditions they cannot control and lose their effectiveness for necessary duties.

Civilians often worry so much about war conditions that they lose efficiency in their work and their personal lives. This increases their anxiety. Any prolongation of worry leads first to inefficiency, then to personal breakdown. At a time when America needs the full efficiency of everyone, it is essential that we realize what our immediate task is and do not allow worry to distract us.

Quotable Quotes

"IT is not enough to rejoice that resistance to offensive fascist propaganda in the Latin American countries is bringing about a friendlier attitude toward our Good Will policy. It is the foundations of brotherhood that we must establish, and we have made only moderate progress in that direction. With the help of a realistic educational approach we hope soon to reach the cornerstone stage, a critical time in any constructive project. There is no American problem of greater significance than our political, social, cultural and educational relations with Central and South America. The Latin American countries are a gold mine from which our students can derive infinite benefit and our statesmen decisive advantage in our program of peace and interracial reconciliation. By means of research, service and leadership, our schools and colleges have it within their power to determine the destiny and happiness of the western world. Drastic revision of our philosophy of education and the production of a new type of classroom instructor are needed so that geography, history, literature and the arts can be given an international flavor and interpretation. The campaign for Pan-American unity is a courageous effort for co-operative peace, from the successful outcome of which the whole world would sense a social, moral and spiritual uplift."—Carroll D. Champlin, professor of education, Pennsylvania State College, sets a goal for education in development of inter-American good will.

who prefers to remain known only at E. F. S. gave birth to a very excellent idea the other day. She suggests a bomber box" be placed somewhere in the hall. A bomber box is where people put whatever money they can spare with the purchase of a bomber in view. It seems to us that this would be a nice gesture in as much as the city is on the verge of starting some such campaign any way. A contribution of a lump sum by the college would show that students of this college can be practical about remembering Pearl Harbor.

APPROPRIATE

slogans would be "DIMES FOR DEFENSE," or if you happen to be one of those rich guys, "BUCKS FOR BOMBERS." Guys like us would have to be satisfied with "Dimes against Japs."

SOME DAY

someone will analyze the processes of the female mind and their method of dividing eligible escorts into categories. We heard a conversation over coffee and in a doughnut parlor. It seems a poor fellow was going to take out the speaker all unaware that she thought he was a "pill, a drip, a jerk, repulsive, but who was really a swell guy." Maybe you can figure out how anyone can be all of those things and still be a swell guy. We can't.

REPORTS are still filtering in from important sources about the activities of some of our friends during New Years. Young Cuthbert came through as usual. He says he was walking down Powell Street. He looked behind him and there was a whole line of elephants marching behind him. Cuthbert says he can never figure out how elephants know when he's had a little refreshment. They always seem to come though. "You probably think," he said, "that I was apprehended for being disorderly." That wasn't it at all. It was all on account of those pink elephants. The cop came up and asked me if I had a license for a parade an' what could I say?"

WHEN

someone trys to figure out how to add 20 more lines to a column like this he usually racks his brains to a mass of bloody pulp and raw ganglions in an effort to fill space before deadline. We asked the editor if it was o.k. to dedicate the space to those who like to doodle, but he just grunted so we came to the conclusion that the idea wasn't so hot. For the last 20 minutes we've been making chains out of paper clips and now we're all out of paper clips so there's nothing left to do.

This being the last column we'll be writing this semester we will give you a little advice. If someone comes up to you and asks you if you'd write a column, tell him to look at what happened to that beaten wreck walking down the hall on his hands and knees. That will be us. Ta, ta, we've got a date with Napoleon.

Appeal To Students, Justa Plea; Abused Sororities Speak

● Unfair

Editor, The Guardsman:

I belong to a sorority, and I believe that many of our social activities are well worth writing up in the school paper. As far as I know, The Guardsman is a publication belonging to the students—for the students—for the part of the other. Fear, pain, love all exist in identical thrusts; the pain of one is the pain of the other.

Their ultimate reuniting to fight the Colonna clan, despoilers of Corsica and their love for the same woman make for a first-class story in both situation and climax.

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., whose resemblance to his late father is often startling, gives the best performances in his career as the twin brothers. He draws a nice line between the two characters without dangerously close to stealing the entire picture and is prevented from doing so only by the scope of Fairbank's roles. As Baron Colonna, he is a subtle combination of lovability and sheer menace. He is a most enjoyable villain. As the heroine constantly in dire straits, Ruth Warrick presents an attractive cameo appearance, but a very cold one. A little less dignity and more vivacity would have rendered her role more pleasant. Excellent support is given by H. B. Warner as the family doctor and friend, John Emery as Colonna's cousin and by Henry Wilcoxin, J. Carroll Naish, and Gloria Holden.

We think The Corsican Brothers will please many, displease but few. It is spirited adventure of the better sort.

Metcalfe

Cabbages & Kings

NONE of the people who read these columns realize how difficult it is to sit down at a typewriter and elucidate on approximately nothing. And nothingness is the essence of column-writing. To arrive at the office in the morning with not an iota of an idea, and to sit and stare at the clock and watch deadline time slowly creep up and pass is positively nerve-wracking.

The only thing worth writing is just about ineffable. And the nice little things that should be printable are not exactly worth writing about if you gather what we mean. If this were a heetic tabloid with gangsters and touts hanging around waiting to be paid off for hot tips, perhaps things might be different. But that kind of paper is only to be found in the realm of the 18th best seller, and in the tarnished domain of the cinema. About the only thing in the office that resembles a movie actor is the senemic fellow who, trying to get an idea for his column, sits in the corner reading Irvin S. Cobb. He looks something like an exaggerated kleptomaniac, sneaking around looking at everybody elses' copy.

Then the editor enters the scene. "No ideas yet?" he asks in a disturbed tone. Sagly the truth comes out. No ideas yet. He walks out with no further comment. Really he's a nice fellow, when things are going right. But things never go right any more.

In every office there is a poet, or a faesimile. We have one also. He hears bells ringing, but sometime the water runs so loudly that he can't hear the bells audibly. It is during this interim that he becomes prolific. When the water subsides and he hears the bells, he has to stop because the purple kangaroos won't let him alone.

Almost everyone in the office has a grandiose picture of his own future, be it conservative congressman or challenging news-hound. A couple are just as near to anarchists as anything Montgomery Street could offer.

There are the down-to-earth minority who seem so disgusted and tired of the whole thing. They are the boys who are always thinking how delightful it would be if the rabble would be silent.

And amid all this racket you expect a work of art, as it were?

Spectator . . .

Corsican Brothers . . . Dumas a la Hollywood but very good

SWASH-BUCKLING sword and cloak drama can be either brilliant screen fare or dismal corn, depending strictly upon the manner in which it is treated, directed, and performed.

Edward Small's production of The Corsican Brothers veers toward the former extreme thanks to a particularly fascinating story and to some nice direction by Gregory Ratoff that successfully bridges the pitfalls of costume drama . . . over exaggerated absurdities in action or immature story development that hides under the enveloping cloud of this self-same emphasis upon action.

Both story weaknesses and physical absurdities are done away with nicely here. The script, adapted freely from an Alexander Dumas story (freely in this instance covering quite a lot of territory), is still based on an intriguing story premise, the possibilities that exist in a separation of Siamese twins at birth by surgery and resultant experiences of these two identical brothers, separated throughout life yet bearing physic bonds between them that carry through the intervening elements of time and space.

NOT SO INCREDIBLE

It sounds like a wildly improbable tale; yet, as interpreted by Gregory Ratoff and given persuasive life by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the theme of dual coidentity maintains an air of solid reality and stirges on in quite thrilling fashion within plausible bounds.

The magic of trick photography reaches full maturity in The Corsican Brothers and adds to the enjoyment of the film. Such amazing effects as Douglas Fairbanks fighting himself, hitting himself on the chin, carrying his own body in his arms prove camera are rarefied skill-ed, so you see a warm woolen outfit would be more than appreciated by them.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW

The men in service are not the only ones who wear uniforms now, as there are several women's organizations in which tailored military uniforms are worn. Undoubtedly many women of the college belong to these groups, but for those who have not yet signed up we will dedicate our descriptions hoping that this will inspire their enrollment.

The women's Ambulance and Transport Corps have good-looking two-piece tan outfits, complete with Sam Browne belt and jaunty over-seas cap, while the Civilian Defense uniform is similar but without the belt.

Red Cross continues with its regulation grey outfits, but has added several other uniforms for hospital workers, ambulance drivers and office workers.

BE IT EVER THUS

Designers, always ready to grasp a timely motif for their designs, now use the military theme in hats, dresses and costume jewelry. Military costume jewelry is especially in evidence what with bracelets, lapel pins, necklaces, and even a blackout pin.

The pin appeared within a week of the first blackout advertised as being illuminous in a blackout. So the other person will see that he is bumping into something, no doubt.

So on and on ad infinitum.

FEM by Nancy ADS . . .

ARE you doing your part for national defense? If not, the Associated Women Students and the Women's Athletic Association mobilized last week after drafting the services of Claire Cuneo as instructor, and began a Red Cross unit for all college students who wished to cooperate in this work.

Having agreed to the preliminary plans for such a unit, the women reported for duty the following day armed with practice yarn and knitting needles and cheerfully began their work. For awhile the going was hard but after twists, snarls, and dropped stitches were untangled and pitfied up, peace reigned. Then regulation yarns of navy blue and brown were distributed, and the actual knitting began in earnest.

Knitting often becomes discouraging at first, but patience and hard work are rewarded when some handsome young sailor or soldier is saved from freezing by the heavy sweater or scarf.

WOOLENS FOR REFUGEES

For those who are more adept with a sewing rather than a knitting needle, there is sewing to be done—and lots of it. The evacuated children who recently landed here in the midst of our rainy season from their warm sunny islands are rarefied skill-ed, so you see a warm woolen outfit would be more than appreciated by them.

● Hello Walk Again!

Editor, The Guardsman:

We have long heard about the improvements that were going to be made when the parking lot was being built. That was all well and good but now with the rainy season LA Chamber de Commerce) coming on, what is going to be done about that death trap known cutely as "Hello Walk?"

It is bad enough to have to climb it, but when you are taking your life in your hands, so to speak, it is time that something be done. It would take but a little time and small expense to make this farce more of a comedy. It is gutted with ravines that make the canyons of the Colorado turn a little green. The low spots are packed with mud and the covering of gravel makes the trip more hazardous. Please for the love of humanity, life, and your own neck if you take any classes in the gym, see if something can't be done about this horrible situation.

Yours for better walks,

Your College Presents . . . National Defense: On Land, In Air, At Home

By Ivanna Hayworth

SINCE people nationwide are particularly concerned how they can aid in the present emergency, it seems very fitting to close the columns for this semester in Your College Presents by telling how our college is helping in the national defense program.

All the courses described today are not additions, but were in the curriculum already. It would be well to note how the training which is offered will aid in the cause of the defense of the nation.

Foremost in the list of these defense courses offered here is the Civilian Pilot Training course under the direction and supervision of Major George Richards. Since war was declared, and the ban placed on the actual flight instruction within a one-hundred mile radius of San Francisco, primary students in this curriculum have been sent to Furnace Creek in Death Valley for this training, and the second semester students have been sent to Susanville. All of these students left San Francisco on Christmas Eve of last year for this training.

Regardless of the curtailment of flying facilities, which may still be effective next semester, courses for these air defenders of the nation will be given. Because of the crisis at hand, it is probable that the present quota of students enrolled may be raised to satisfy the vast demand for such instruction.

Because of the need for employees in defense industries, there are openings of every kind in civil service positions. According to one of the instructors in this division, there is a great demand for persons with stenographic ability. When made known to the department, these openings will either be published or listed on the bulletin board, and if anyone is interested in this field, he should contact Lloyd Luckmann, chairman of the division.

Also falling in the same category as the civil service defense positions is the growing demand for students who can do typing, shorthand, accounting, and office machine work.

Incidentally, Mr. Buck Private, of the U. S. Army, has a much better chance of being commissioned if he is equipped with business training, most important of which is typing ability. The business department is offering, beginning next semester, a business course which may be finished in six weeks, or if students prefer, a full semester may be taken to complete it.

Since engineers are the minds behind the building of tanks, ships, roads; bridges, and all like equipment and improvements in time of both war and peace, the engineering program of the college is invaluable in teaching these students blue-print reading, drafting, drawing and similar technical skills.

In the army, there is always a demand for engineers to make the plans for the layout of roads, war maps and all the other essential plans which are invaluable to army maneuvers.

Another part of the Engineering curriculum, namely, radio technology, plays its bit by training students in the field of radio designing, construction, repairing, and the operation of receiving sets and transmitters. Trained men in this division will be of value in the Signal Corps of the service.

Students graduating from the peace officers program will be a boon to the police and officials in charge of civilian defense, as they will have had the required training for positions such as air raid wardens and guard duty during emergencies.

Courses in laboratory technique and the pre-nursing curriculum, of course rate highly in civilian defense preparation. The army has very definite needs for parasitologists, and even if the pre-nursing students haven't completed their training, they have had enough practical training to administer first aid both in the army and on the home front.

Eisan Swindles Chaves; Sullivan Squawks Again

NO DOGS AND NO DOLLAR

The fact that Lee Eisan, Ram football coach, refereed the Rose Bowl game between Duke and Oregon State on New Year's Day is not new, but some of the minor details which occurred at Durham concerning Eisan may prove to be interesting.

For instance—the little episode that took place during the tossing of the coin which marked Eisan as a "gypper".

It is customary to toss a silver dollar before the opening kickoff to decide who's going to do what! But, as Eisan claims, you just can't find a silver dollar in North Carolina and a 50 cent piece was all he could get his hands on. Having to be content with that Eisan flipped it in the air, and it landed just the way Oregon State captain, Martin Chaves, had called it.

So—Chaves, too, had to be content with the measley 50 cents instead of the silver dollar to which he was entitled.

All that Eisan had to say was . . . "I feel like a thief."

The show which both Oregon State and Duke put on for the spectators was called by many prominents as probably one of the greatest in Rose Bowl history. It is said by those close to the picture that excitement prevailed from the opening kickoff until the final gun and that the three touchdowns scored within three minutes was just about the tops in Rose Bowl performances.

The score changed hands continuously and not until both teams walked off the field was a winner assured. Eisan, himself, said that it was probably the most exciting Rose Bowl contest he has seen, played in, or refereed. He added that it was so grim that the boys didn't even waste time arguing decisions.

YET—the thing that amazed Eisan most was . . . NO DOG RAN ON THE FIELD.

Said the head official, "I still can't quite believe that not a single dog showed up to be shooed from the stadium."

Oh, yes . . . for those of you that aren't football enthusiasts, Oregon State won, 20 to 16.

U. P. PRAISES EISAN

Jack Guenther, United Press Staff Correspondent, had only good words to say about Eisan's work on New Year's Day.

Guenther says that Eisan had enough experience in Bowl games, having played in the 1929 California-Georgia Tech game, which featured Roy Riegels' backward run.

Besides boasting Eisan's officiating, Guenther added that he knows more about the particular game between the Beavers and the Bluedevils than all the publicized experts you can collect.

In contrast to this, Prescott Sullivan, The Examiner sports headache, claimed that Eisan employed a "slow whistle" throughout the game, thereby turning the contest into a rough and tumble affair.

Sullivan also claims that the Beavers from Oregon State wanted a rough game and it was they who requested that Eisan referee in place of Tom Fitzpatrick.

The United Press' comments, of course, bury those of Sullivan's like a needle under a haystack.

We're beginning to wonder if those fans that are continuously calling Sullivan a "BUM" aren't right!

IT'S EDUCATIONAL

The priority on rubber will have no effect on Coach Russ Sweet's track team next semester! In other words, the shortage on tires will not prevent the enrollmen from taking trips, in fact, it seems to have increased them.

The Rams engage in 14 meets for the entire season and 10 of them are away from home! Two more are at Kezar Stadium and the other two are on the campus field.

Making up the 10 Ram visits will be trips to Modesto twice, Santa Rosa twice, Salinas, Kentfield, Stockton, Fresno, Los Angeles, and Visalia.

Quite an enjoyable semester for those that qualify on the squad.

BASEBALL FOR '42

Many of you may have been dissilusioned by the rumor that there would be no baseball games for the Rams next semester. So, right here and now, we tell you that the rumor is another false one!

The college will definitely participate and be represented on the diamond during the spring!

Says Coach Jack Gaddy, "Yes, there most certainly will be baseball but we won't have a schedule made out for a month or so."

If you had any hopes of making the team—they are not lost!

NEWMANS VS. NEWMANS

The San Francisco State Newman Club, winners of the intramural basketball championship at that college, have challenged the Ram Newman Club to a contest.

The Red and White Newmans also captured the intramural basketball championship here at the college, and should the two teams meet, it would really be a championship affair.

The challenge was made by John McGuire, manager of the Gator Newman Club, and has been officially accepted by the Ram outfit. But as yet, Jack Brady, intramural faculty adviser, has not set a date for the game.

Members of the Ram Newmans, Bob Roberts, Bob Marcus, Bob Cavender, Art Koster, Bert Acton, and Jack Skinner, were very much in favor of meeting the challengers and are anxiously awaiting the final decision.

If the game is to be played at all, it will probably take place at the State gymnasium, at which place the Gators would have a slight edge. It is a known fact that a team playing on its own court has an eight point advantage to start with.

Despite this, however, the college Newmans have reached the 60 point mark in all of its games except one. It went through its 11 game schedule with 11 victories and were not really threatened once.

The game is a natural and should prove to be as thrilling a contest as could be expected. However, the Ram Newmans should score their twelfth victory.

Intramural

Program Considered Success Despite Limited Days Events Allowed To Be Concluded

By Bob Marcus

Although the intramural program for the fall semester is limited to the amout of days in which activities may be conducted, this semester's program has been deemed a success in regard to the excellent turnout of participants, Jack Brady, faculty intramural adviser, announced this week.

With the basketball squad practicing daily in the men's gymnasium, the many indoor activities conducted had to be arranged so as not to conflict with Tom Wilson's fall basketball squad. Many of the outdoor activities, likewise, had to be postponed on many occassions, as the inclement weather prohibited any competition whatsoever.

Many Compete

In figures compiled by Brady, a total of 564 men students presented entries to him, competing in free throwing, basketball, volleyball, cross country run, singles and doubles tennis, swimming and boxing.

Only the finals of the tennis tournament, and the results of the touch-tackle, rifle, ping pong, and horse-shoe competition remain undecided.

The first activity, freethrowing, was won by Jack Koster, who set a new intramural record, caging 15 field goals out of a possible 25. Close behind, followed Dave Solomon, who found the range for 13 baskets.

Newmans Win Basketball

Highlight of the program was the evenly matched basketball league, finding the Newman Club finishing an undefeated season with 11 victories, replacing last semester's winner, the All Americans.

At the conclusion of the league, the Spartans and Goats were deadlocked for second place, and after a playoff, the Spartans won runnerup honors.

Between halves of the Ram-Salinas football encounter, the cross country run was held on the college campus. Jim Skinner ran the gruelling two and a quarter mile grind setting a new intramural record, winning by 50 yards over his nearest competitor, Stuart Boles. His time was 12:21.3, considerably faster than the time made by Don Venter, last semester's winner, clocked in 12:43.

Newmans Win Volleyball

Winning for the third succesive semester, the Newman Club kept its undefeated volleyball record intact, defeating the Harbin sextet. In the championship game, the Newmans were forced to come from behind, finally winning, 15-12, 12-15, 19-17. Third place honors went to Phi Lambda Epsilon.

This is remarkable because of the fact that the Newmans used only three players instead of the required six in their first round game against the Epsilons.

This semester the swimming meet was held at the Jefferson High School pool under the jurisdiction of Al Eisan, swimming coach. Following are the results tabulated by Brady: fifty yard free style, won by Starkey; 100 yard free style, won by Byers; 100 yard breast stroke, 50 yard back stroke, won by Seiad; 50 yard breast stroke won by Smythe; relay, won by Seiad, Smythe and Jacobs.

Blackout Cuts Crowd

The boxing intramurals held at the Coliseum Bowl proved very exciting although the first emergency blackout of the war dwindled the crowd down to a meager 300 patrons. Here are the results released by Jim Jensen, boxing coach.

In the 118 pound class, Akamini defeated Yaki; Suaci decisioned Isaacs to win the 127 pound division; Hemsted defeated Portello winning the 135 pound rank; Seaborn won over Silvestri in the 145 pound division; Somarca defeated Schneider, winning 158 pound class; defending champion Hunicke retained his 165 pound crown winning an easy decision over Cavanaugh; 175 pound class, Cartney defeated Cederlund, and Drake defended his heavyweight title defeating Olsen.

With these events officially completed, only the events mentioned before remain on the fall program.

Brady Manages Events

All the events were managed by Brady, who; this semester, conducted the program without the aid of a student manager.

Brady, incidentally, requests that all clubs, fraternities, and other organizations who expect to compete in the intramural program next semester, file their entry blanks with him as soon as possible.

Greater response is given to the spring program because of the longer schedules, and because of this, Brady wishes to draw up the schedules immediately.

Women's Athletics

Presentation Of Officers At Tea Today

Introduction of newly elected Women's Athletic Association officers for the following semester will be made at the tea this afternoon from 3 to 4:30 p.m. in the north wing of the cafeteria, according to Dorothy Ann Kraul, president of the organization.

The tea, taking the place of a banquet previously canceled, will be open to all women of the college whether members of the WAA or not, Miss Kraul said.

Entertainment will be the same as scheduled for the banquet, Miss Kraul explained, consisting of singers, a talk by Helen Crlenkovich, a monologue presented by Donna Meyers, and several numbers by the WAA orchestra. Awards for the semester's participation in WAA activities will also be presented, Miss Kraul announced.

Present officers of the WAA are Dorothy Ann Kraul, president; Bernice Strube, vice-president; Elma Oddstead, secretary, and Janice Berch, treasurer.

Refreshments will be served by the hotel and restaurant division, Miss Kraul added.

The tea will mark the closing of the WAA activities for the semester, Miss Kraul said, as all clubs will meet for the last time this week. Sign-ups and new club meetings will be announced after registration, she added.

Snow Trip Canceled; Students May Attend

The snow trip to Yosemite planned by the Ice Skating Club has been canceled, according to Aileen Kinkel, ice skating instructor, as early registration prevents any faculty members from attending.

"Any students who go on such a trip go on their own and the college is not responsible," Miss Kinkel said.

Wheel Of Women

Swimming team members, Dorothy Eames, Dorothy Bonetti, Jane Forest, Catherine Martin, Marie McMillan, Anita Hansen and Peggy Hatch are shown practicing synchronized swimming under the direction of Aileen Kinkel, instructor of the class.

Until the swimming pool is constructed between the two gymnasiums, classes will be held at the YWCA. Swimming will be offered next semester as part of the "off campus" physical education activities on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Basketball

First Conference Game Of Season To Be Played Friday Against San Mateo

By James Lee

With the Rams' conference basketball schedule set to begin this coming Friday night with the San Mateo Bulldogs, the college varsity squad is rapidly reaching its early season form.

The game will be played on the Ram's home court, starting at 8:15 p.m. with the junior varsity opening the double-bill at 6:30 against the junior varsity Gators from San Francisco State.

In the ten games the varsity has played so far this season, these being all practice games, they have won four, and lost six, losing to the University of California freshman squad 35 to 31 in a tight game, which saw the college squad leading at half time, 19 to 17.

Improvement Shown

In the practice contests played so far this season, the varsity has molded itself into a solid, compact unit, with each member on the squad an important cog in the effectiveness of its winning power.

The Red and White has thirteen conference games scheduled this season. Six of these will be played at home, while the remaining seven tilts to be played on the opponent's court.

During the schedule, the junior varsity will open the program on four of the varsity's games, each game beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Eight Men Alternate

Pending future playing, eight men will alternate in the starting first string on the varsity squad, these being Mel Dropo, center; Dave Cunningham, forward; Jack Terry, forward; Alex Adorador, forward, and Frank Isola, the remaining forward. Filling out the guard positions will be Norman Scheu, Roy Sulprizio, and Gus Stromgren. Thus, Coach Tom Wilson is able to substitute two forwards, and one guard in the lineup. This, however, doesn't mean that this will be the only players to play, but these are the boys that have shown outstanding ability thus far this season.

Two Veterans Return

With only two returning veterans from last year's quintet, these being Mel Dropo, and John Cunningham, Coach Wilson has the job of building up an almost entirely new first string varsity group. Last year Dropo played at the forward position, but this season he has been moved to the center spot where he may use all of his 6 ft. 2 in. of height to better advantage, especially on rebound shots, and tip-in shots. Cunningham, playing in his forward position, has had plenty of experience at this spot, having held down the position as a regular on the varsity last year.

On Tuesday night, the varsity will play a double-header with the Olympic Club, with the junior varsity opening the program at 6:30, and the varsity playing the final game at 8:15.

Rams Play Y.M.I.

This will be one of the last practice games of the season, the last coming in the middle of the conference schedule. This game will be against the strong Y.M.I. club, who, in past years, has turned out some of the strongest teams in San Francisco.

The following is a list of the Ram's conference schedule games, and also lists the time, and place of each contest.

Conlan Busily Coaches Gaels

As duties on the West Coast made it impossible for him to referee the Rose Bowl game at Durham, North Carolina, last New Year's Day, Dutch Conlan, Coordinator of Education of the college has been busily coaching his St. Mary's Gael cagers.

The former Ram casaba coach, succeeded by Tom Wilson, present Ram mentor, until last year, has been working vigorously in the Moraga Valley, attempting to mold a team of sophomores into a well organized quintet.

Success Shown

Conlan has had appreciable success, thus far, in the 1942 campaign, with victories over Nibs Price's California Blue and Gold cagers, and the Olympic Club, terrors of Post Street.

Defeats marring the record were suffered from the University of San Francisco, and the Italian Athletic Club.

Conlan has two former Ram players under his realm, namely, Eddie Cerf, stocky forward, and Verne Genessy, reserve guard.

Both Star

Cerf and Genessy both campaigned during the 1939 season, and have played important parts in the offensive and defensive style of attack planned by their former mentor here.

While facing the Italian Athletic Club, the two former Rams met another ex-Ram in the person of George Mossler, stellar guard of the 1939 season also, and second leading scorer in the conference last year.

Football Jerseys Missing; No Block Letters Awarded

Members of the Ram football team, which finished second to last in the conference race, in the season just concluded, who have earned their letters by playing the required number of minutes, may not receive the said letters, according to head Coach Lee Eisan.

Reason for this was given by Eisan as only seven of the 24 jerseys that were issued out at the beginning of the semester were returned. There are still 17 jerseys missing, their whereabouts unknown.

Whatever may have happened to them is a complete secret to Eisan and until they are returned, no letters will be given.

Certificates, however, will be given to those who earned their letter whether the jerseys are returned or not.

P.E. Students Register According To Periods

Registration for physical education classes will be comparatively easy next semester, as students will sign up in a free period rather than by the activity they wish, according to Bertha Keller, chairman of the women's physical education department.

The system will be introduced, Miss Keller stated, in hopes that physical education requirements and registration difficulties will be cleared up.

Students Specify Activities

Registration students will sign up according to their free periods, specifying several activities in which they are interested, Miss Keller explained. When the students meet at this hour, classes in their desired sports will be formed.

Classes will be divided into on and off campus activities, off campus classes meeting on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons only.

New courses to be given will include camp direction and a course designed for playground officials.

WAA activities may be restricted this next semester, according to officials in charge, because of the added hygiene and first aid classes the physical education instructors will be required to give.

Provision will be made for physically handicapped students, similar to the restricted courses held this semester.

Fitness Stressed

"Physical fitness in accordance with the plans laid out by Alice Marble and Gene Tunney will be stressed," Miss Keller explained, "as the need to keep physically fit is greater now than ever."

The new system will do away with freshman activities, which were designed to introduce the students to the various courses offered, Miss Keller explained, however, because high school physical education classes have been improved, the need for this class has been eliminated.

First aid classes will be required next semester and will be given with hygiene classes for three units instead of two. Hygiene will remain a two unit course, but first aid will add an additional unit. Miss Keller pointed out. Students who have already fulfilled their hygiene requirement may take the first aid courses offered each semester by Jim Jensen for two units.

Civil Service

3 Jobs Open To Students Of College

Applications are now being received for three civil service positions that students of the college can fill, Lloyd Luckmann, college civil service instructor, announced recently.

Positions available are those of elevator operator, paying a salary of $1,080 a year; junior stenographer, paying $1,440 a year, and junior typist, paying $1,260 a year.

To qualify for the position of elevator operator, a person must be between the ages of 20 and 55 and must have had at least three months experience in the operation of electric or hydraulic elevators.

There is no written examination for this job, applicants being rated only on the quality and quantity of their experience and their fitness. The Federal Works Agency wishes only men for this position at this time.

The positions of junior typist and stenographer are also open only to men at the present time. Both of these jobs require that the applicant take an hour and forty-five minute examination.

Students who are interested in obtaining one of these or any other civil service position should see Luckmann in his office, Room 222 immediately.

As an undergraduate, Gary Cooper was denied membership in the dramatic society at Grinnell College, Iowa, on grounds he couldn't act.

Hello Plaque Priority Victim

By Gale Ellis

National Defense has finally killed the long-suffering step child of our college. The senemic life of the student's pet peeve has finally been mercifully extinguished. Rumor has it that the hello plaque has been murdered by the priorities board.

Nursed through three semesters of malnutrition by the members of three consecutive Welfare Committees, the hello plaque was fast becoming a college myth. Brought to light only to be scoffed at by most of the college organizations, the plaque was fast becoming a matter of pride to the welfare committees and their cohorts.

At a time when it had almost sunk into obscurity again after recent blast at the uselessness of the whole idea by the student body, word came that the school board had approved its purchase.

Rejoicing was short-lived among the members of the welfare committee when priorities snatched its apparent victory from the grasp of the college's whims.

Future reference to the hello plaque will be accompanied by remarks about the OPM, for in its hands lay the fate of the oft-forgotten plaqu.

college career scholarships ranging in value from $800 to $1200 for a four year course as described below.

1. Two full-tuition scholarships, each having a value of $1200 or $800 per year.

2. Four scholarships, each having a value of $1000, or $250 per year.

3. Four scholarships, each having a value of $800, or $200 per year.

The scholarships are awarded to those candidates having the highest high school or junior college record, an examination, and an interview to determine the potential promise of the individual applying.

Redlands also offers twenty-five competitive scholarships, ranging in value from $800 to $700 for a four year course.

Interview Period Set

Examinations and interviews for Career and Competitive Scholarships will be held in Redlands, Saturday January 24, 1942.

Talent Bureau

Satisfactory Fall Semester-Cohen; More Plans Soon

Already furnishing requests for outside entertainment, the talent bureau has completed a very satisfactory semester, according to Irwin Cohen, bureau student manager. Many students at the college have been auditioned and featured at some of the rallies and special programs.

The group is progressing rapidly for big plans next semester and expects to provide more entertainment for all necessary purposes. As yet, Cohen maintains that talent is lacking, and any interested student with talent for specialty numbers and singers of popular music are urged to contact him immediately.

Since the purpose of the bureau is to provide opportunities for college students, anyone is welcome to try out and arrange for an audition with Cohen, who will be available at the student office.

Dr. Sadler Succeeds Waits As President Of T.C.U.

FORT WORTH, TEXAS—(ACP)—Formal inauguration ceremonies for Dr. M. E. Sadler as president of Texas Christian University have been set for April 8 and 9.

Colleges and universities throughout the nation will be invited to send representatives.

Dr. Sadler succeeds President E. M. Waits, who retired after serving 25 years as head of the school.

Hi Ho Silver . . . Unusual Facts About Precious Metal

By Ada Garfinkel

Silver in its various forms is decidedly an integral part of modern daily requirements. Since its discovery and early usage as a medium of exchange, ways of utilizing this metal have greatly multiplied. So extensively is it employed now, that unless a person were an expert in a variety of fields, he would have but a vague idea as to what does and what does not contain silver. With much of the information supplied by George Green, college geology instructor, some interesting facts were uncovered.

Right here at the college, students are grateful for the large mirrors in the rest rooms—glass backed with a silver derivative. Credit goes to Praxiteles, a Greek sculptor who first taught this usage of silver in 328 B.C.

Students of photography appreciate that 25 per cent of all the silver produced is used in the manufacture of photofilm.

College radio fans have long been aware that silver is the best known conductor of electricity.

Future chemists and doctors are learning the importance of silver as a medicinal agent in the treatment of certain diseases and infections.

Perhaps most welcome of all to college students, is the jingle of silver—whether it be in their pockets, or from utensils on cafeteria trays.

As for the coins, the term sterling itself originated in relation to coins. According to a United States law, for instance, all silver coins must be minted from silver that is 925 fine. Because pure silver is too soft when used alone, an alloy of 92½ per cent silver and 7½ per cent copper has proved to be a malleable medium for practical purposes. 925 fine silver is spoken of to indicate the highest attainable silver that is serviceable.

The superiority of English silver, maintained by law, became generally acknowledged in Europe. Hence the term sterling came to mean pure or genuine.

Paul Revere of Revolutionary War fame, library records disclose, was one of the early American engravers of silver.

At the present time, Mexico leads in the production of silver manufacturing. "Since the coming of the Spaniards to Mexico," Green revealed, "she has produced one-half of all the silver on the globe."

That silver is preferred to gold in certain inland areas in Mexico and South America, Green discovered on his trip to the Latin American countries in the summer of 1935.

"They certainly cherish silver," Green commented. "Even the poorest washerwomen possess many beautiful filigreed necklaces, which have been handed down from one generation to the next—and which they wear constantly!"

A similarly deserving pride is the one with which the college regards some of its silver possessions, namely, the handsome trophy cups on display in the cases of the main corridors.

Final Exams Scheduled From January 19 To 28

Instruction for the fall semester officially ends next Friday, January 16, and final examinations will be conducted from Monday, January 19 till Wednesday, January 28, the registrar's office reported last week.

Examinations will be held in the rooms where classes regularly meet, according to the schedule issued by J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

Slants on the Headlines

By Francis Chrisman

Do you know who is going to beat Hitler before the United States has a chance to get at him? Well, it's the old boy himself. He's going to start the job that the United Nations are going to finish.

Herr Hitler is the symbol of an entire philosophy of life: much the same as the King of England is a symbol of royal rule. But there the resemblance ends—for Hitler is both the symbol and the executor of this philosophy, while the King is only a symbol.

Having been a symbol for so long the now-worried house painter has come to believe in the ability of his philosophy, his nation, his army, his people, his generals—and his self. No doubt to him they are all invincible. No doubt he knows they are cruel, evil, and downright stupid—but they are, they must be, right—because they are his.

IT'S DESTINY?

Destiny has noticed him, and he is going to see that destiny does not overlook him. To insure this he has made himself a destiny to millions of helpless people. In his future their future lies.

Now that he has become a god and a law unto himself, an invincible fighter in the interests of his own cause, Hitler cannot back down. He has made his bed.

As the months, and perhaps years, of this war drag on; as this god is pushed farther and farther back; as the invincible fighter is beaten on front after front; as he sees the legends of his power and ability fade as his soldiers in Russia are seeing them fade—then a sliver of doubt is going to creep into the mind of the great one.

As he sees his nation bombed, as he sees his army lose, as he sees his philosophy crumble—that sliver is going to widen into a great breach.

Desperately he will attempt to stem the tide. And if by that time he has not been murdered by his own disillusioned men, then he will begin to feel the doubt of his own lack of sufficient ability.

HIS CAUSE IS LOST

For it is his army and it is losing; it is his nation and it is being beaten. His cause is a lost cause, his power no power. It will not be the deaths of millions of Germans; it will not be their starving, their suffering, that causes him to fear. It will be the realization that he is not what he believed he was.

Then Herr Hitler in his mountain retreat will know that there are some things that a man may not successfully fight. Men may face destiny but they cannot grapple with destiny and win. Because destiny is a thing to be determined by the entire race, not by one man. And no man has or ever will control all men.

And the minute Hitler begins to lose a grip on himself and on his own confidence he will have begun to have lost everything. His men fight now because they have been made to believe in their leader. Knowing no other light, he is to them the only light.

OUT WITH THE OLD

But when a new light begins to appear from the other side of the world—when the old light, the trusted light, fades into darkness—his men will be lost and bewildered. They will find themselves deceived, and their trust will turn to suspicion, and their suspicion to mistrust.

Yes, Hitler will be the cause of his own defeat more than any other single factor except the law of humanity which says that he is wrong. He is waging a war of nerves as well as a war of philosophies. He is the bulwark behind which his people seek shelter, when that bulwark begins to slowly disintegrate Nazism is lost. The nerves of one man cannot withstand the nerves of united people.

Hitler may kid himself along for a while longer. But sooner or later he is going to crack. When Hitler goes all those things for which he stood will slowly begin to follow him. His way of life, his philosophy, his legend of power and invincibility will all follow their creator into oblivion.

FOUR DAY ORIENTATION WEEK PROGRAM

Band—Orchestras

New Credit Courses Promise College Three Musical Groups

Following several attempts by the college administration to establish a band, an announcement was made early this week by Madison Devlin, former Lowell High School music instructor, revealing definite plans and preparations not only for a band but also for an orchestra and a studio orchestra.

Devlin had previously unsuccessfully attempted to form a non-credit college band, but it was found that interest in non-credit courses was lacking. Since that time, however, he has become an instructor at the college and will conduct his first courses this semester.

New Credit Courses

Under the new set-up credit will be given for various musical classes to be taught here for the first time by Devlin and Flouiu Badger. Because of this it is expected that many students who had previously failed to join or take active parts in a college band or orchestra will now join up.

These new courses are not listed in the catalogue. They are, however, listed in the schedule of classes. Information concerning them may be secured from either Miss Badger in Room 200, from Devlin or from Dean Edwin C. Browne.

Three Musical Groups

According to Devlin three separate and distinct functions will be supplied by the three musical groups to be formed. The band will be available for rallies, games, and student functions.

The orchestra will have a repertoire of both popular and classical pieces and presumably will be available for both class and mixer dances. The studio orchestra, it is planned, will be a workshop organization for the class in orchestration, but will also play at certain social affairs.

Devlin pointed out that this latter group will be subjected to the same conditions as exist among the studio orchestras of broadcasting companies so that the students may better fit themselves for this type of work upon graduating.

Attempting to do away with any undue optimism, Devlin said, "we have virtually nothing with which to make a beginning. The whole thing must start from scratch. Therefore it is not wise to hope for too much too soon."

Good Showing Expected

The new instructor did say that he expects the band to make a creditable showing before the present semester has been completed.

"Students must not expect a huge band after a few weeks," he added, "such things are hardly possible. But with a little work and cooperation we should be able to accomplish much."

The former Lowell instructor spoke at the first unofficial meeting of the Executive Council last week stressing the aforementioned points and requesting patience and cooperation. A request was also made for funds with which to purchase music for the three musical groups. This matter is to be considered by the finance committee
